President calls for cooperation between Congress, White House

WASHINGTON (AP) — Avoiding partisan rhetoric, President Nixon called Sunday for cooperation between Congress and the White House in "turning the blessings of peace into a better life for all."

In a taped radio address, Nixon said more than 50 major bills backed by the administration still await final congressional action.

While avoiding a repetition of his

Wednesday news conference statement that this represented "A very disappointing record" for the Democratic-controlled Congress, Nixon did say:

"It means that Congress should join the executive in making up for the precious time lost this year in failing to act on those measures which vitally affect every American by going into extra session, if necessary, to complete the people's business before the year ends."

Nixon will send the Senate and House a lengthy special State of the Union message today expanding on his call for legislative action.

In his radio talk, Nixon said the questions at issue "are not ones of partisanship...in some cases, there are real philosophical differences over how best to meet the needs that we face."

In ticking off what he termed the most urgent pending bills, Nixon emphasized energy legislation, maintenance of a defense "sufficient to safeguard us from attack and to provide an incentive" for mutual arms cuts, and a hold-down on spending so new programs do not mean higher prices and higher taxes.

Nixon also said Congress, the executive branch and the voters share an interest in building better communities, making full use of human resources and "combatting the scourge of crime and drugs."

At no point did Nixon voice the veto threats that often have accompanied his exhortations to Congress to hold down appropriations.

However, he made what appeared to be a reference to legislation that would limit a president's war-making powers — a measure he would be expected to veto. He said:

"We must recognize that the American system requires both a strong Congress and a strong executive; and we therefore must not place limits on presidential powers that would jeopardize the capacity of the President, in this and in future administrations, to carry out his responsibilities to the American people."

A new measure of the temperature of executive-legislative relations will be taken Wednesday when the House votes on overriding Nixon's veto of an emergency medical services bill that would have blocked administration plans to close eight public service hospitals.

The Senate voted Aug. 2 to override, but it appeared doubtful the necessary two-thirds vote could be mustered in the House.

Both chambers will debate during the week their versions of legislation to help urban mass transit systems.

The Senate Foreign Relations Committee resumes today its hearings on the confirmation of Henry A. Kissinger to be secretary of state.

The House begins the week by considering whether to cite G. Gordon Liddy, convicted Watergate figure, for contempt because of his refusal to testify before an Armed Forces investigation subcommittee.

'Ya mean I don't get change back from my dollar anymore?'

Court to begin selection of Stans-Mitchell jury

NEW YORK (AP) — A panel of 1,500 prospective jurors, the largest in the memory of officials at the U.S. District Court here, has been summoned for the scheduled opening Tuesday of the conspiracy trial of John N. Mitchell and Maurice H. Stans.

Judge Lee P. Gagliardi requested the large panel because, he said, publicity stemming from the former cabinet officers' indictment here and their subsequent testimony before the Senate Watergate committee in Washington may have prejudiced potential jurors.

The search for 12 jurors is expected to take anywhere from three days to a week, perhaps even longer. Usually a federal court jury is chosen in a matter of hours.

In ordinary cases, the number of potential jurors called to serve varies from 40 in an unpublicized case to perhaps 100 or 150 in a publicized case, court officials say.

Mitchell, former U.S. attorney general and chairman of the Committee to Reelect the President, and Stans, former commerce secretary and finance director of the campaign, were indicted by a federal grand jury last May.

They were accused of obstructing a major fraud investigation of Robert L. Vesco, a financier and now a fugitive in the case, in exchange for his secret $200,000 cash contributions to the Nixon campaign in 1972.

In four months of pretrial motions and hearings, defense attorneys unsuccessfully sought dismissal of the 16-count indictment on grounds publicity accompanying the Vesco case and Senate Watergate hearings precluded a fair trial.

Despite the preparations, some uncertainty still remains as to when selection of the jury will actually begin. It is scheduled for Tuesday, but Tuesday morning attorneys for Mitchell and Stans may be able to secure a delay of the trial with a special plea they are scheduled to present to the U.S. Court of Appeals. They say they need more time to prepare the defense.

CAP to undergo re-organization

By GWEN BUSHART
Staff Writer

Tech's College Allowance Program (CAP) is undergoing a process of re-organization, said Robert Grinsfelder, Student Association vice president of external affairs.

"The CAP list hasn't been updated since December of 1971 and many participants had gone out of business or weren't even aware they were on the program due to management changes," Grinsfelder said.

Several Lubbock restaurants had to resign from the program because of rising food costs, according to Carole Graham, CAP summer director. She said some merchants didn't want to be on the program any longer because they felt students didn't know how to use the program correctly.

Graham has been revising a list of about 55 Lubbock merchants to be published in a booklet for distribution to students.

McDonald's owner Arthur Boldt said, "Principally the reason we had to go off the program was because of the beef shortage. I hope withdrawal from the program isn't permanent but I can't tell when we can afford to go back on it."

Tony Mosely, Bonanza manager, said he would like to participate in the CAP program but he only makes a 10 per cent profit and can't afford to give Tech students a discount.

"The CAP program has not been as successful as it could have been because students weren't aware of the program and how it works," said Grinsfelder. "More emphasis will be put on publicizing the program this fall so the student will use it more."

Graham said the only advertising

Lubbock merchants are guaranteed by the SA is the listing in the booklet.

Grinsfelder said he is now looking for a new director and staff for the program this fall.

The CAP pocket-sized booklet will contain information on how the program works and will list participating merchant's addresses, hours, phones and the amounts of the discount available.

The purpose of the CAP program is to increase participating merchants' volume of business by giving the student a worthwhile allowance (usually 10 per cent or more) on his purchase.

The SA also hopes to help the student fight inflation in the future by publishing a consumer guide with tips on how to shop for bargains and quality in food, clothing and other necessary items and providing consumer workshops for the student.

Alexander involves more students in SA by creating three cabinets

By GAIL ROBERTSON
UD Reporter

Student Association President Rickey Alexander campaigned for his office last spring with the promise of involving more students in student government.

In keeping with that promise, Alexander has created and organized three groups of students to work with him on the cabinet level in planning, evaluating and enacting student-oriented programs.

The Vice President for External Affairs' Cabinet consists of the director of consumer affairs, director of housing, director of the College Allowance Program and director of community involvement.

This cabinet will function primarily as an evaluative body responsible for critical analysis of the administration of programs under the Office of the Vice President for External Affairs.

The second group operates under the designation of the President's Cabinet and includes the president, vice president for external affairs, general counsel to the president, counsel for legislative relations, attorney general, executive directors of the five executive departments and the president of the Freshman Council.

This cabinet is responsible for coordinating the actions implementing the constitutional duties of the president. Several of the persons in the President's Cabinet are working in newly-created positions.

The general counsel to the president and counsel for legislative relations are new offices under Alexander's administration. The former is responsible for the effective coordination of the executive branch and the latter is charged with maintaining close coordination between those responsible for legislating and those responsible for executing such legislation.

Also involved with new offices are the executive directors of the five executive departments. The five departments cover the areas of student affairs, academic affairs, student services, governmental affairs and business affairs. They were created last year in a bill passed by the Student Senate.

Each executive department has other departments dealing with specific areas under its jurisdiction. The executive department of student affairs includes black affairs, Chicano affairs, international affairs, student organizations and student life.

Included under academic affairs are academic planning and evaluation, recruitment, undergraduate school, graduate school, Law School, School of Medicine, admission, registration, financial aid and career placement.

The areas of cultural events, health, athletics, University Center, recreation and transportation are specific departments under student services.

The governmental affairs department concerns decision-making investigation, student rights and responsibilities, public information and administration and faculty relations.

Those working with business affairs are generally responsible for SA business transactions and keeping a reliable bookkeeping system.

The job of the Attorney General is to act as a legal adviser to the president regarding the interpretation of the constitution and statutes governing the SA.

All appointments to the executive departments and other departments must receive Senate confirmation. The executive directors are held accountable for the actions of their department members and are responsible to the SA president.

The main function of the departments is implementation of the Senate's legislative acts. Researching, evaluating, recommending and giving information about programs are also major parts of the job of these department officials.

Each executive department is also required to prepare a monthly report which includes an itemized list of expenditures of student services funds in its areas of concern. The reports are available to the public in the SA office.

A third cabinet group is Executive Cabinet which consists of the president, vice president for external affairs, vice president for internal affairs, all members of the President's Cabinet and all members of the Vice President for External Affairs Cabinet. This also is an evaluative group, charged with the job of analyzing the administration of SA programs.

Alexander sent almost 50 names to the Senate nomination committee Thursday night to fill these various positions. He said these people have already begun working in their respective areas and will continue in that capacity unless Senate confirmation does not come through.

Besides those office holders who require Senate approval, other students are working as volunteers in student government and student programs.

University Center Week ends

UNIVERSITY CENTER WEEK, a project to inform students about the UC, ended Friday with a mixer and street dance. Students drank beer at the All University Mixer at the Fair Park Coliseum Friday afternoon. Later Techsans danced to the tune of Uncle Tom at the UC Ballroom after the street dance was moved indoors.

by Jack Anderson

WASHINGTON — The federal government's $2.17 million program to help black businessmen is being administered by political proteges of the Senate's diehard segregationist, Strom Thurmond, R-S.C.

The cantankerous Thurmond has been able to place two cronies and one in-law over the Small Business Administration's minority business development office, causing outraged howls from blacks and other minorities who seek help from the SBA.

The Thurmond Three are:

—John Patrick, the acting director of the program. He is a retired Air Force colonel from South Carolina and is a longtime family friend of Thurmond.

—Marshall Parker, a former state senator in South Carolina, who jumped to the GOP with Thurmond in 1964. Twice he has run against South Carolina's Democratic Sen. Ernest Hollings, with Thurmond's backing. Parker is overall boss of the SBA's minority programs.

—Horace Crouch, an in-law of Thurmond. His late sister was Thurmond's first wife. Crouch is Parker's top aide.

SINCE THE FIRST OF THE YEAR, the Thurmond Three have tried to reduce federal food service contracts which had been going to minority businessmen and have otherwise undermined the minority programs, according to SBA insiders and black businessmen.

So restrictive were some of the new guidelines that SBA Administrator Tom Kleppe had to step in and ease them. Despite Kleppe's intervention, however, Parker and Patrick have cut back the increase in funding of black and other minority enterprises to a mere $33 million this year, compared with an increase of $195 million between 1970 and 1973.

The Thurmond mystique has even extended into the SBA minority division's offices. There is only one professional black employed in the section supposed to assist blacks and he was hired before Parker took command three years ago.

BOTH KLEPPE AND PARKER insist that the Thurmond Three's tenure has not hurt the program. Kleppe, however, confided that having Thurmond's men in charge of a minority division does not look good and said a black soon will be appointed to take over Patrick's job.

FOOTNOTE: Although Parker has cut back program in increases for minorities, he spares no expense when it comes time to fund conferences on other SBA programs. He vetoed a less expensive conference site recently in favor of the lush, plush Greenbriar in White Sulphur Springs, West Virginia.

President Nixon is determined to emulate the crowned heads of Europe by providing himself with resplendent palace guards attired in uniforms of days gone by.

Some time ago, awed by the pomp and circumstance of police he saw on a European trip, he tried to bedeck the White House police in costumes out of a turn-of-the-century operetta company.

The public laughed him out of the idea. But now the Army is reviving the Nixon dream by spending $70,000 to festoon the 72 men of a nearby military unit in Revolutionary war garb. They will be the President's official escort for galas at the White House.

THE IDEA FOR REINCARNATING George Washington's "Lifeguard Company" was hatched by Maj. Gen. James Adamson, commander of the Washington, D.C., Military District. The "Lifeguards" were formed in 1776 and Army historians have carefully researched the old unit to make sure President Nixon sees exactly what President Washington saw.

When we first asked the Army about the $70,000 costuming, we were told it probably had some connection with the bicentennial celebration. Later, however, the Army conceded that while the bicentennial "may have some use" for the regalia, this was not the major factor in its retention.

The Justice Department, after first declaring they had "a legal basis for bringing (criminal) actions" against outdoor motor makers for polluting lakes, rivers and seashores, has now backed out of the case.

After months of grand jury proceedings, Justice has privately written conservationist Livingston Parmele, who pressed the antipollution case, that the evidence "does reflect technical violations of the law." But Justice decided "not to proceed" against the politically powerful outdoor motor makers whose products still spew millions of gallons of gunk a year into the waterways.

The battle by Parmele and other clean water advocates was not entirely lost, however. The outdoor motor makers have put antipollution devices on new models.

to the editor

To the Editor:

"Hi there! I'm a new student at Texas Tech."

"Oh really?"

Yes and I'm glad to be here. Such a big school. There are 20,000 students. Lots of people—should be a real experience living here."

"Yea. It is different."

"Yessir. I'm a sports fan, you know. Gonna go to all the games. Football, basketball..."

"Hey, uh, did you get a basketball ticket book?"

"Well, uh, no, not yet."

"Tough stuff. They sold em all. No more student tickets."

"Whadyamean?"

"They sold 'em all. All 3,500."

"3,500? Is that all?"

"Yep"

"Kinda small number for such a big school."

"Yep."

"Hmmm. Well, no matter. I'll just get a regular ticket. That will cost me though."

"Yeah"

"Kinda short on money, you see. After all those fees. Should be worth it though. I understand they are fixing to build a bunch of new tennis courts and stuff like that over by the BA building. It was in our fees."

"Yeah, but don't hold your breath."

"Huh?"

"Everybody is kind of wondering when they will build 'em."

"Well real soon isn't it?"

"Dunno. Neither does the administration."

"But it was in my fees!"

"Yeah. Atsa way it goes."

"Hooboy! I wanted to see some construction for those tennis courts over there. Those tennis courts and all that other stuff you know."

"Oh you might see some construction."

"What?"

"They will probably pave a six lane expressway through Tech."

"I read about that, but surely not. I mean aren't...didn't"

'But it was in our fees!'

a poll show that the vast majority of students are against it?"

"Yep"

"Even the president of the college is against it!"

"Odd ain't it?"

"You mean they are going to do it anyway?"

"Yep."

"Even though nobody on Tech wants it?"

"Tsk. Tsk."

"That's pretty strange. I mean it doesn't make sense."

What was all that I heard about Tech being the student's campus?"

"Well, you know how it goes."

"Don't students ever do anything about it. Don't they work against these things? There's 20,000 of 'em."

"No, not really. You'd be surprised how apathetic 20,000 students can be."

"They are towing my car away!"

"Aw, too bad."

Bike rules to be enforced

Chief B. G. Daniels of Tech's University Police wants to set the record straight for bike riders at Tech.

Daniels recently commented about the school's growing problem of bicycle theft and the strict enforcement of bike regulations at Tech this year.

Daniels said approximately 6 bikes have already been reported stolen this semester. To prevent this he advises students to register their bicycles with the University Police and to invest in a good lock and chain. Because of a state law passed last year, bicycle riders are now subject to the same rules and regulations as motorists. He observed that the regulations most frequently broken by Tech bikers are failing to stop at red lights or stop signs and illegally locking their bicycles to trees or shrubs on campus.

Tech supplies bike racks at every dorm and near most classroom buildings, Daniels commented, and bicycles found shackled illegally will be impounded at the owner's expense. In cases where no racks are available Daniels stated, bikes should be locked to something out of pedestrians way.

Daniels firmly stated that enforcement of bike laws will be strict at Tech this year and concluded by advising anyone not sure of bike rules and regulations to pick up a bicycle regulations pamphlet at the University Police Building on campus.

Researchers trying to find uses for manure

Two Tech professors are researching one of the biggest headaches suffered by Texas' billion-dollar cattle feeding industry — how to get rid of mountainous unwanted accumulations of manure.

The research into chemical methods of cattle feedlot manure disposal could lead to establishment of a new High Plains industry.

Dr. James Halligan, professor of chemical engineering, and Dr. Robert Sweazy of Tech's Water Resources Center, have proposed a method for converting manure into synthesis gas which may be used as a fuel or a raw material for ammonia.

The ammonia product could be used in increasing quantities by farmers as a nitrogen fertilizer.

"This study will greatly assist in our overall analysis of chemical disposal methods," Halligan said.

Halligan said Pioneer Natural Gas Co., will fund a bench-scale study of the proposal to test the validity of the project. He said others funding the initial research of the project are Southwestern Public Service Company, the Texas Cattle Feeders Association and Tech.

According to Halligan and Sweazy, area cattle feeders have to contend with accumulations of manure which stack up at the approximate rate of a ton per steer per year.

The two Tech professors first aimed the thrust of their research at recycling rather than outright disposal. They said they were simply looking "for something useful to do with all that manure."

Aside from useful methods, the researchers want to come up with something that would be consistent with the local economy. Ammonia fills the bill in both cases.

According to the Texas Feed and Fertilizer Control Service, consumption of ammonia increased from 150,000 tons in 1961 to 375,500 tons last year. Much of it is exported to other parts of the country, and a pipeline supplying the Midwest originates in Borger, Texas.

Halligan said current research could confirm feasibility of extending this line to a possible plant in Hereford.

He estimates that from manure gathered within a 15-mile radius of Hereford, a conversion plant can produce enough gas to supply a 1,000-ton per day ammonia plant with each day's gas production worth about $12,000.

The Tech researchers pointed out that earlier studies by the U.S. Bureau of Mines which resulted in a process for converting animal wastes into fuel oil and natural gas also resulted in well-founded arguments that the process would be far too costly to be practical.

Halligan and Sweazy have eliminated the most costly operational limitation of the Bureau of Mines process by developing a method for operating their conversion reaction at close to atmospheric pressure.

Another important plus factor working in favor of the Tech research project is the widespread availability of manure on the High Plains.

"This is especially significant," Halligan said, "because we consider the size of operations very important." He said there are 500,000 cattle being fed within 15 miles of Hereford and that a profitable ammonia operation could never work for the small feeders.

Ammonia is now produced by partial oxidation of natural gas. The Tech researchers propose to partially oxidize the manure to produce the synthesis gas and ammonia.

"Until the natural gas shortage becomes acute enough to force prices up," Halligan said, "ammonia is the most economical product of the gas to be synthesized, whereas conversion to methane (natural gas) is not presently economically feasible."

Raiders struggle through practice

By BROOKS TINSLEY
Sports Editor

It wasn't one of your better pre-season scrimmages. As a matter of fact, it was downright poor. But nonetheless, the Tech Red Raiders held a two-hour scrimmage Saturday and Head Coach Jim Carlen found few bright spots on the afternoon.

"It was a poor scrimmage from every angle," Carlen said. "The offense, defense, kicking game, everything was bad. We didn't play well at all."

Carlen's statements were not just idle chatter. The scrimmage pitted the Raider varsity first and second teams against the third team and redshirts who were supposed to be representing the Utah (Tech's first pre-season opponent) offense and defense.

The varsity managed only two touchdowns against the third-liners, who scored once themselves. The 14-7 score was indicative of the way the game was played. Dropped passes, a leaky defense and a sluggishness on offense characterized the varsity performance.

"Our players were tired out there today," Carlen said. "We have been having two-a-day practices since Aug. 23 and I think it is beginning to tell on them. But we have a week before our first game to get back in shape."

Quarterback Joe Barnes capped the first varsity scoring drive with a one-yard run and Jimmy Carmichael led the other march which ended in a 10-yard scoring scamper by Rufus Myers. The third team's TD came on a pass from Jerry Reynolds to Leland Casey.

On a day of poor performances, Carlen did find some bright spots. "Jimmy Carmichael played well for the varsity," Carlen said, "and Leland Casey was outstanding for the third team. Also, I was pleased with the punting of David Kuykendall."

Carmichael completed four of five passes for 58 yards, compared with Barnes' four of 10 for 34 yards and Tommy Duniven's one of two for 11. Tailback George Smith was the leading rusher with 62 yards on 10 carries and Ronnie Samford was the leading receiver, catching two passes for 45 yards.

Carlen plans on the Raiders taking it easy this week in preparation for the Saturday night opener in Jones Stadium. "We are going to try to get the players back in good shape for Saturday," he said. "Special emphasis this week will be on goal line situations, both offensively and defensively."

Writers pick Texas

DALLAS (AP) — The University of Texas collected 27 of 29 first-place votes from members of the 1973 Southwest Conference press tour as the favorite to take the league crown for the sixth consecutive time.

Texas Tech edged Southern Methodist for second place, 184 points to 179½, based on eight points for a first-place vote, seven for second, and so forth.

The final consensus with point totals: 1, Texas 229½; 2, Texas

Tech, 184; 3, SMU 179½; 4, Baylor 134½; 5, Texas A&M 84½; 6, Arkansas 84; 7, Rice 74; 8, TCU 73½.

The consensus pick of the touring writers and broadcasters has been correct only three times in 12 tries.

Fullback Roosevelt Leaks of Texas was named the top pre-season pick as the most valuable offensive player while SMU's giant defensive tackle, Louis Kelcher, got the MVP nod on the other side of the line.

QUARTERBACK JERRY REYNOLDS prepares to release a pass during Tech scrimmage. Reynolds quarterbacked the third team to one touchdown on the afternoon, that coming on a short pass to Leland Casey, but it was not enough as the first teamers won, 14-7.

May's shot gives Astros win

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Lee May's 17th homer, a three-run shot in the eighth inning, lifted the Houston Astros to a 5-4 victory over San Francisco Sunday.

The Astros were trailing 3-1 going into the eighth. Singles by Gary Sutherland, Cesar Cedeno and Doug Rader scored one run and then May connected for three more.

The Giants had gone ahead with two runs in the sixth inning, breaking a 1-1 tie.

Gary Matthews opened the sixth with a single and stole second. Chris Speier singled and Matthews scored on second baseman Sutherland's error. Dave Kingman walked and Dave Rader's single capped the rally.

Bobby Bonds opened the scoring with a first-inning homer. Kingman homered for the Giants in the eighth.

Houston moved into a tie in the fifth when pitcher Jerry Reuss walked with two out and Jim Wynn followed with a triple.

IM football officials test to be administered today

All male students interested in officiating intramural football are reminded that the written rules test will be given today at 5 p.m. in room 207 of the Men's Gym, according to Ronnie Smith, interim assistant intramurals director.

This test must be passed before a person can qualify as an intramural official. Officials are paid $3 a game and the number of games they work a week will be determined by the number of hours they are available and by officiating ability.

Starting Tuesday, a daily clinic will be held in room 207 of the Men's Gym to familiarize the officials with intramural procedures and policy. The clinic will run for a week and a half.

Golf team due tryouts

Prospects interested in trying out for the Tech golf team should meet with Head Coach Danny Mason at 9:30 p.m. Monday in the Men's Gym.

Mason will outline the qualifying procedures necessary to make the team and will also set the dates and places for the tryouts to be held.

Evans sees depth as big plus for Raider defensive secondary

By MIKE HALLMARK
Asst. Sports Editor

Depth. Winning teams have it. The also-rans only wish they had it and scheme for ways to get depth in the future. Depth becomes vital in the latter stages of the season when injuries pile up and second teamers' readiness to play can be the difference between a championship and a near miss.

For many seasons Tech was one of the also-rans as far as depth was concerned. Late season injuries would spoil Raider title hopes just as sure as the Texas Longhorns were going to the Cotton Bowl.

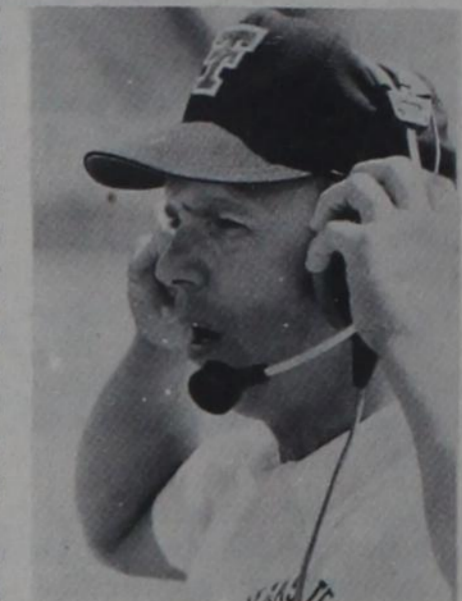

Not so this season. The Raiders stepped up into the fat cat depth bracket along with the Bevo Boys. For the first time, the Raiders have the quality players on the second team who can replace an injured star and cause little loss in efficiency.

Nowhere is this depth more apparent than in the critical defensive secondary where Tech is two, and in some places, three deep. Last season the Raiders were left without a returning starter from 1971's secondary which led the nation in pass defense. However, last year's young secondary came along fast and returns intact this season.

"It's just a real good situation to be in," said Dale Evans, Tech defensive secondary coach. "Our starters have a year of playing together and the poise and confidence to stay cool in tough situations. We return Kenneth Wallace and Randy Olsen at cornerbacks with Gary Bartel and Selso Ramirez to back them up. All are experienced players. Danny Willis returns at strong safety with Steve Van Loozen backing him up. Both players have experience in important games."

The only change from last year is at free safety where Curtis Jordan is playing ahead of last year's starter, Greg Waters.

Waters will get to play a lot, but Jordan has outstanding speed, jumping ability and has the knack for making the big play, Evans said.

Evans

As to how this year's unit compares with his 1971 unit Evans said, "This year's group is not as big physically but they are much quicker. They play well together and have confidence in each other's abilities. They enjoy playing the secondary and have a lot of pride."

Tech's defense does not have any glaring weaknesses in the light of pre-season. Only the season will tell if the Techsans have weaknesses in the aerial prevention department. Evans does feel that his team has one area that needs more work.

"Our man-to-man is not as strong as it could be," said Evans. "We are primarily a zone team and we just don't play enough man-to-man. We also need to break on the ball in the air more and pick off more interceptions."

Evans feels that Tech's pass defense will get a severe examination from Utah Sept. 15. "We'll be checked out early by Utah in the first game," he said. "They have as good a passing attack as any team we'll see until the Rice game. Their quarterback, Don Van Galder is a top pro prospect and he has fine receivers in Steve Odom, Willie Armstead and Lance Robbins. Utah will be a good test."

Norton, Ali fight set

It will be the battle of the broken jaw tonight as Ken Norton and Muhammed Ali square off in a 12-round fight from the Forum in Inglewood, Calif.

The fight can be seen live in Lubbock beginning at 8:30 p.m. at the Municipal Auditorium. Tickets are on sale at the auditorium box office and are priced at $5.50 for students and $6.50 and $7.50 for others. A 20 by 20-foot screen will be used for the showing.

Norton, ranked as the number one contender for the heavyweight boxing title held by George Foreman, and Ali, ranked number three, have met once before and Ali not only lost the 12-round decision but came away with a broken jaw in the process.

During their careers, Norton has won 18, straight fights following two defeats. Ali has a career record of 35-2, losing only to Norton and former champ Joe Frazier. The winner of tonight's fight has been assured of a chance to meet Foreman for the heavyweight title.
