

Nixon gets full pardon from President Ford

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Ford granted Richard M. Nixon "a free, full and absolute pardon" Sunday for any criminal conduct during his presidency, and Nixon responded with a statement of remorse at "my mistakes over Watergate."

Ford made a surprise appearance before newsmen and photographers in his Oval Office to announce the pardon, saying, "I feel that Richard Nixon and his loved ones have suffered enough."

The former President responded from his home in San Clemente, Calif., with a statement in which he admitted no criminal wrongdoing but said that "one thing I can see clearly now is that I was wrong in not acting more decisively and more forthrightly in dealing with Watergate."

Within two hours of Ford's announcement, presidential aides made public the terms of an agreement reached Saturday under which the federal government will be given custody of Nixon's public papers and controversial tape recordings.

However, the agreement specified that all the tapes will be destroyed within five to 10 years — sooner should Nixon die within five years.

Philip Buchen, White House counsel, told reporters that Ford granted Nixon a sweeping pardon without any strings attached. However, he acknowledged that Ford might have taken a different course, or delayed a decision, had he not been informed in advance of the gist of Nixon's planned statement of response and the agreement covering the documents of the Nixon presidency.

In announcing the pardon, Ford said any move to try the former President might have taken months or years during which "ugly passions would again be aroused, our people would again be polarized in their opinions, and the credibility of our free institutions of government would again be challenged at home and abroad."

He said "My conscience tells me clearly and certainly that I cannot prolong the bad dreams that continue to reopen a chapter that is closed. My conscience tells me that only I, as President, have the constitutional power to firmly shut and seal this book."

pardon effectively immunizes Nixon for anything except perjury.

By terms of an agreement between Nixon and the General Services Administration, the former President is depositing all tapes and most records of his presidency to the national archives for storage in a federal facility at Laguna Miguel, Calif., near his oceanside home.

To safeguard the records, which could be sought as evidence in criminal or civil proceedings, the agreement specifies that papers and tapes will be guarded by special locks which can only be opened by using two different keys, one of them to be in Nixon's possession and the second to be used by the archives staff.

In a response to a question, Buchen said this meant Nixon could not get at the records and destroy any of them.

Another proviso said Nixon's controversial tapes will be formally donated to the American people on Sept. 1, 1979.

After that date and for a five-year period, the administrator of GSA would be required to destroy any tapes which Nixon directed him to destroy.

Moreover, the agreement said all tapes "shall be destroyed at the time of my death or on Sept. 1, 1984, whichever event shall first occur."

Under the terms of the accord, Nixon said in a letter to GSA Administrator Arthur F. Sampson, "I reserve to myself such literary use of the information on the tapes."

Should any be subpoenaed, Nixon would decide on the response and, "if appropriate, assert any privilege or defense I may have" in an effort to withhold them.

However, Buchen said Ford's pardon would not absolve Nixon from contempt of court findings should he ever fail to honor a valid subpoena.

Nixon's statement, which Buchen said Ford knew about "in a general way" before it was issued, said that since returning to California on Aug. 9, "my perspective on Watergate is quite different than it was while I was embattled in the midst of the controversy..."

He said, "Looking back on what is still in my mind a complex and confusing maze of events, decisions, pressure, and personalities, one thing I can see clearly now is that I was wrong in not acting more decisively and more forthrightly in dealing with Watergate, particularly when it reached the stage of judicial proceedings and grew from a political scandal into a national tragedy.

"No words can describe the depth of my regret and pain at the anguish my mistakes over Watergate have caused the nation and the presidency — a nation I so deeply love, and an institution I so greatly respect."

Nixon acknowledged that "many fair-minded people believe that my motivations and actions in the Watergate affair were intentionally self-serving and illegal." He added, "I now understand how my own mistakes and misjudgments have contributed to that belief and seemed to support it. This burden is the heaviest one of all to bear."

...I was wrong in not acting more... forthrightly...

Buchen said Ford on Aug. 30 initiated a series of discussions within government and informal contacts with Nixon aimed at deciding whether to grant a pardon.

As part of that process, Buchen said he contacted Watergate special prosecutor Leon Jaworski to get his opinion, at Ford's request, on how much time might be required to bring about any trial of the former President.

Buchen told reporters he was authorized to quote Jaworski as saying that the widespread publicity given Nixon's resignation and impeachment hearings before the House Judiciary Committee would "require a delay before the selection of a jury is begun of a period from nine months to a year and perhaps longer."

A spokesman for Jaworski said the special prosecutor's office played no direct role in the decision to pardon Nixon but said, "obviously we accept it."

Speaking slowly in a dramatic appearance at his desk in the White House Oval Office, Ford said, "It is common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations hang like a sword over our former President's head and threaten his health as he tries to reshape his life..."

The reference to Nixon's health was not in Ford's prepared text for the occasion and Buchen, when asked if the President had some private knowledge about Nixon's physical and mental condition, replied, "I think it's generally known this man has suffered a great deal."

The pardon prohibits any criminal prosecution of Nixon "for all offenses against the United States" during his term of office.

"However, Nixon still would be subject to any civil court proceedings and is still subject to being subpoenaed as a witness — as has already happened — at the trials of Watergate defendants.

Because of the pardon legal sources said, the former president will not be able to claim his 5th Amendment rights against self-incrimination if he appears as a witness at the Watergate cover-up trial scheduled for Sept. 30. The

...Richard Nixon and his loved ones have suffered enough.

Cox regrets pardon comes before trial

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Here is the text of the statement by former Watergate Special Prosecutor Archibald Cox on Sunday in response to President Ford's decision to pardon former President Richard M. Nixon. "I regret that former President Nixon was pardoned in advance of the action of a grand jury and the trial of any indictment according to law, unless necessitated by his health. An advance pardon defeats three principles important to a free society.

"1. The guilt or innocence of a high official charged with crime, especially a president, should be determined once and for all by the established processes of justice in order to lay to rest claims of political vendetta. To short-circuit the process invites endless uncertainty and division.

"2. It is through the legal proceedings of grand juries and criminal courts that a free and self-governing people declares and validates the moral and legal standards applicable to their chosen officials. To defeat the process risks the integrity of government.

"3. Confidence in our system of justice depends upon the assurance that the law does in truth apply to all men equally, the highest executive official as well as the lowliest citizen. The Watergate affair was critical because of the need to reassert this principle. I fear that the advance pardon, following the Agnew settlement, will seem to too many to carry the lesson that the law does not apply equally to those who achieve our highest offices.

"There is room for mercy and no room for vindictiveness in American justice. Once these three principles had been served by submitting the case to the grand jury and trial of any indictment, I, like most other Americans, would have welcomed some form of executive clemency directed to the form or degree of punishment."

Electronic book check being installed in library to slow theft of materials

By JOANNA VERNETTI
UD Reporter

An electronic surveillance system at the Tech library will soon eliminate the inconvenience of having purses and briefcases opened and examined for stolen books by a library worker.

"We expect full implementation of a computer automatic charging system by fall 1975," Ray C. Janeway, Tech dean of library sciences, said.

Presently, students leaving the library must open purses, backpacks and other parcels to allow the library attendant to check the contents.

With the new surveillance system, no personal items would have to be opened, because before leaving the library, everyone would have to pass through an optical scanner, which would automatically set off an alarm if the individual was carrying a book which had not been properly checked out. Then a library worker would be on duty nearby to investigate the reason why the alarm was sounded.

UNDER THE NEW system, a student would choose his book, then go to a nearby self-service station and insert his ID and the book into a machine, Janeway said.

A magnetic strip of tape on the book would be demagnetized by the machine. Then when the person left the library, the alarm would ring only if a book he was carrying had not been properly demagnetized, he said.

These automatic check-out terminals would be located on each floor of the library. The computer circulation system would save time for student because he would not need to wait in line at a centralized desk to check out the book.

It would work better, and it would save time and money," Janeway said.

Once the book is placed in the machine and demagnetized, the person could carry that particular book in and out of the library without any delay.

THE FINING PROCESS would also be computerized. After the book is demagnetized, the student will receive a slip of paper verifying that the book was checked out and showing the due date, he said.

This summer the library staff plans to place the metallic tape in the 20,000 books most frequently used by undergraduates, Janeway said. Later, other circulating books will be labeled.

The current book examination procedure will continue until the new system is installed. A surveillance system is necessary because of the number of books stolen every year, he said.

Although the check point is a deterrent for some would-be thieves, Janeway admitted that simply having an attendant checking for books will probably not deter the hardened book criminal.

"We don't like to look in anyone's pocket. We have a high regard for the integrity of our students. At Tech we have a very good situation," he said.

LESS THAN HALF of one per cent of the 300,000 circulating books are stolen each year, he said. Thus, about 1,500 books, each worth an average of $10, are lost yearly.

The Tech library is used by about 1,200 people daily. Most of the people who have been caught carrying out concealed books have not been Tech students, Janeway said.

Since Tech operates an open library, anyone is allowed to use the facility without any questions asked unless he tries to borrow a book.

The surveillance system was actually established to benefit students, he said.

One of the saddest things the library staff frequently has to tell students is that the particular book they need is not on the shelf and has not been checked out, he said. The student who needs the book is the one who suffers when someone else steals a book, he added.

Focal point of campus designed for students

By TISH CORLEY
UD Reporter

The University Center wants you. So what, you may reply. Yes, it is a good gathering place for having a coke with a friend between classes or maybe even for grabbing an occasional Friday night movie. But what more does it have to offer?

Plenty more. Literally brimming over with facilities, activities and services, the UC is a focal point of campus life, designed with the students in mind.

Open 7:30 a.m.-11:30 p.m. Monday through Saturday, and 2 p.m.-10:30 p.m. Sunday, the center attracts thousands of students per week to enjoy the atmosphere, be with friends and utilize the services it offers.

The snack bar and cafeteria, with catering services, are available for the students' unique culinary tastes, and the newsstand provides a check cashing service ($10 limit) for the money-minded.

Meeting rooms, TV lounges, and a games room containing such popular sports as billiards, ping-pong, foosball, air hockey, shuffleboard and the like are more facilities open to all. A mechanized post office, lost and found center and mimeographing, line-oscuring and dittoing services are also available for the asking.

For the more activity-minded individuals, the UC has its own ticket booth, a cultural events office and Dial-an-Event, a telephone service with recorded events of each week's happenings at the UC and on campus.

The Student Association offers activities in student government and issues directly concerning students in academics, curriculum, external campus affairs, dorm rules and a variety of other things.

Student Association President Bill Allen commented on the need for students, both undergraduate and graduate, merely to come into the first floor office and ask to help on any SA committee.

Listing University Complex Committees, the Committee on Academic Affairs, Student Services and transportation as some of the areas needing people, Allen invited anyone desiring to help to talk with him for information. Allen also said interviews for people to work on the Recreational Facilities Committee will take place today through Wednesday of this week.

One of the major programs of the UC concerns the UC Program Committees, which plan UC activities, as well as many on campus.

Applications for membership on any of the eight committees will begin today, and interviews will take place Sept. 16-19, according to Program Council Chairman Mike Murphy. The eight committees are Entertainment, Films, Fine Arts, Free University, Ideas and Issues, International Interests, Leadership Board and Recreation. Applications are available in the Program Office on the second floor of the UC.

Beyond the limits of tolerance

Robert Montemayor

"No words can describe the depth of my regret and pain at the anguish my mistakes over Watergate have caused the nation and the presidency — a nation I so deeply love, and an institution I so greatly support."

—Richard M. Nixon.

And no words can describe the depth of my regrets and pains for having President Gerald Ford's sweeping pardon granted to the former president. We are indeed an excessively tolerant nation with much hope and more than amply prepared to give every benefit of a doubt. But, I have seen my own tolerance slapped in the face and my doubts are all but erased forever.

I mean you can take me and bend me, fake me and trick me and even rape me. But, don't make me accept the warrants and manifestations of an episode which has sorely ridiculed all and any bounds of truth.

Maybe President Ford has truly seen something more than just the legal ramifications of Nixon's circumstantial case. In his Sunday press conference he indicated it was "...common knowledge that serious allegations and accusations hang like a sword over our former president's head and threaten his health as he tries to reshape his life..." Whatever the case, Nixon's health is now an added twist to the overly stuffed story of Watergate.

GRANTED, THE WHOLE Watergate story is twisted, and I, like so many others, am fed up with the numerous hide and seek tactics which the tragedy has borne out. But, a pardon... a pardon that has done nothing more than given Nixon his shield to go free? And I don't think I am even exaggerating when I say free.

According to legal people, even if Nixon has to appear as a witness for the other Watergate defendants he will not be able to claim his 5th Amendment protection against self incrimination. As I understand it, he can admit all his wrongdoings, but because of his pardon he will not be prosecuted.

His reputation may again be stained, but that's as far as it will go. If his conscience can allow him, he will be able to speak freely and without the threat of going to jail hanging over his head.

You can go ahead and take Ford's stand and say that "...Nixon and his loved ones have suffered enough." But why go through with all the judicial motions and play like nothing has happened?

I REALIZE THERE IS an overflowing sentiment that no one really cares what happens to Nixon so long as the truth comes out. Even though it's history now, I just don't think you should have separated the disclosure of truth from what would have ultimately happened to Nixon if he hadn't been bestowed his pardon.

I hope his day as a witness in court does come and I hope the prosecuting attorney will grill him. I have no mercy or pity for a man who undermined a government which he claimed to be his to do what he so desired.

The integrity of this nation was dragged in the mud by a man so blind with power he chose to prolong a war in Vietnam for the sake of his further endowment to the Presidency.

He chose to cheat the American public through petty and degrading maneuvers just to secure a presidential election which he most obviously would have won anyway. Ford can live with the pardon. I will not.

THE PRESIDENT CLAIMS the trial of Richard Nixon would take months, maybe years, and "...ugly passions would again be aroused, our people would again be polarized in their opinions, and the credibility of our free institutions of government would again be challenged at home and abroad."

Nixon is no longer our president. He is a common individual in every sense of the word. Why should we turn our cheeks and make believe we don't hear the screaming in the background. We SHOULD be aroused. Otherwise we'll turn out polarized anyway if the truth is stifled.

The credibility of our free institution has already been proven and reinforced as well. The democratic system of government has already shown the nation and world that we can wash our own laundry.

Richard Nixon has been granted his amnesty. He will go unprosecuted. But, the nation will still have to grant itself its own amnesty for ever allowing the likes of Richard Nixon to persecute this nation and its principles for the sake of power.

Washington merry-go-round

by Jack Anderson

McGovern writes to Ford

WASHINGTON — All but forgotten in the Watergate aftermath has been its chief victim, Sen. George McGovern, who was badly defeated after the dirtiest presidential campaign in American history.

Yet the South Dakota senator, betraying no bitterness, has written a stirring, private letter to the man who has now wound up in the White House in his place, without ever running for President.

The letter, intended for President Ford's eyes only, thanks him for his "constructive leadership" at this critical hour and declares eloquently: "No one can now fail to see what is right with America, even as we strive to repair what is wrong."

Although McGovern was the Democratic presidential candidate in 1972 and will oppose Ford's election in 1976, he wrote the new President on August 30 to wish him well.

"No one who loves America has taken satisfaction from the crisis that put you in the nation's hardest job..." the letter allows. "But we can draw satisfaction from the underlying strength of our constitutional structure and the rule of law. For we have demonstrated that we take those principles seriously and that they can be made to work...."

"For despite the serious challenges we have to face, despite the honest differences we are bound to have, we have taken the first and greatest step toward recovery. Our confidence is returning."

Citing what is right with America, McGovern tells Ford warmly: "One thing that is right is your approach to the presidency. Above all else the country needed healing. You have understood that need and met it."

"The spirit of excessive partisanship is gone from the White House. Instead you have summoned a spirit of cooperation from Democrats and Republicans alike. Instead of 'enemies lists,' there is a list of domestic and foreign priorities we share together."

"And with the sense of common purpose you have inspired, we face them with renewed strength and resolution — as one united people once again. We can hammer out the answers on the basis of mutual respect, and with a common vision of America as a great and decent land."

McGovern goes on to praise his political adversary. "You have the opportunity and the capacity to be a great President," writes the senator. "You bring to the White House the same qualities of fundamental honesty and fairness those of us who served with you saw in Gerry Ford, our colleague in the House."

"As President Ford, you have called upon civility among politicians. That alone would be an historic achievement. Knowing you as I have, I see every chance for equal achievements in meeting the challenge of inflation and other challenges still unforeseen."

"For my part, you can be assured that I will give all the help I can to a President doing all he can to find the best course for the country."

ILLEGAL LETTER: Feisty, fiery Rep. Charles Sandman, R-N.J., who kept the House impeachment hearing in turmoil with his outspoken defense of ex-President Nixon, apparently hasn't learned his Watergate lesson.

It is against the law for congressmen to use federal office space to solicit or receive "any contribution of money or other thing of value for any political purpose."

Yet Sandman utilized federal premises to print a two-page letter begging friends "to send $100, $75, $50, $25, $10, $5 or whatever you can afford" for his re-election campaign.

A spokesman for Sandman conceded that the letter was printed in the congressional storage room assigned to the congressman. The spokesman stressed that the printing press belonged to Sandman personally and that the paper was purchased with campaign funds.

However, the printing was done on federal property and the paper was purchased at reduced rates through the federally run House stationery store.

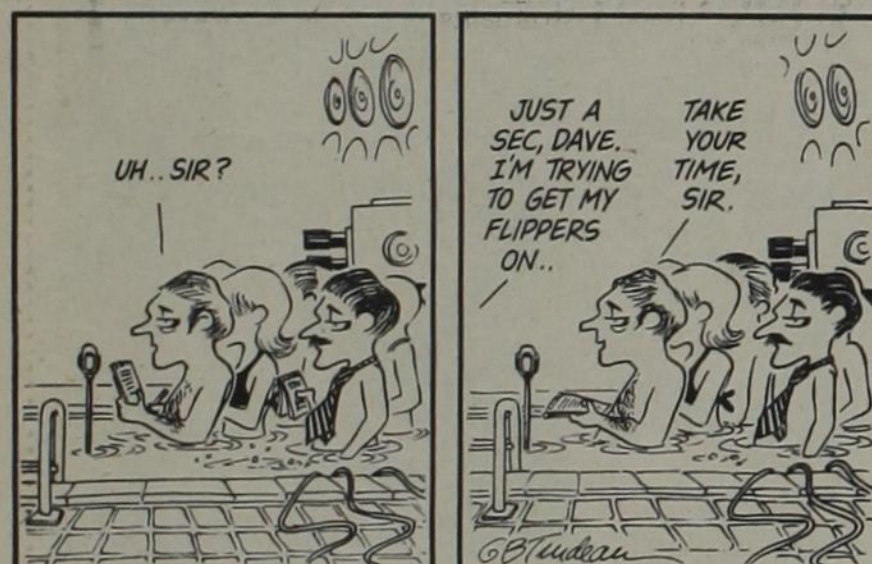

Footnote: A spot check determined that other congressmen carefully kept their fund-raising activities away from Capitol Hill to avoid violating the law.

HEADLINES AND FOOTNOTES: Atty. Gen. William Saxbe has called for a crackdown on hardened criminals who have learned how to cope with the courts and prisons to delay trials and land quick paroles. This gives them a maximum time on the streets where they terrorize law-abiding Americans. Saxbe wants the courts and parole boards to give first priority to keeping the "repeaters" off the streets... Ironically, the Republicans gerrymandered out of his seat Rep. James Scheuer, D-N.Y., the man whose legislation established an institute which helped develop many of the weapons to be used in Saxbe's crackdown on crime. These include cheap burglar alarms for mom-and-pop stores, tiny radio warning sets for bus drivers and nonlethal-rubber bullets and darts that police can use to stop criminals without killing them...

Pregnant women's pre-birth diet affects child's body defenses

CAMBRIDGE, Mass. (AP) — Small deficiencies of certain common nutrients in pregnant women can stunt their children's defenses against disease — possibly including cancer — researchers say.

A balanced diet of meat and vegetables is seen as the best remedy.

Massachusetts Institute of Technology nutritionists say such shortages are invisible because affected mothers and their children appear normal and healthy in all other respects.

The nutrients involved are called lipotropes. Dr. Paul M. Newberne, professor of nutritional pathology and head of the research team, said animals with lipotrope-deficient mothers are more susceptible to certain cancer-causing agents.

"Combating cancer appears to be in part a function of the thymic-dependent immune system," which is impaired by a lack of the lipotrope nutrients, Newberne said. "So it is logical to us that lipotrope deficiencies may make it easier for cancers to overcome the body's defenses and proliferate."

"I would be very surprised if these kinds of deficiencies are not significant in making people more susceptible to cancer," he added.

The researchers say pregnant women who do not have enough of the lipotrope nutrients should have them added to their diets, or millions of children may later have a harder time warding off infections and diseases.

Newberne said most of his group's conclusions come from animal research. But he said other recent research involving humans supports many of his group's conclusions.

Some studies have indicated, he said, that two-thirds of the pregnant women in the United States have below-normal levels of folic acid, a lipotrope and one of the B vitamins.

He said that because of unknown hormonal effects, women taking birth control pills and those taking certain anticonvulsant drugs such as those for treatment of epilepsy also often lack folic acid.

Small town exception to rising crime rate

WASHINGTON (AP) — The FBI once again has told the nation crime is going up almost everywhere. But there are exceptions and Coal Township, Pa., is one.

The small central Pennsylvania town emerged as one of the safest communities in America while most other places, small and large, city, suburban and rural, were plagued with rising crime rates.

Nationally, crime increased 6 per cent in 1973, according to the full-year figures released last week by the FBI. More than eight million serious crimes were committed, one every 16 minutes.

Murders were up 5 per cent, assaults 7 per cent, rape 10 per cent, and on and on.

But the picture was considerably brighter in Coal Township, population 11,789, where there were no murders, no manslaughters, no rapes, no assaults and no robberies.

"Why, we haven't had a murder in Coal Township in 15 years," boasted Police Chief Jesse Weaver in a telephone interview.

In the FBI list of hundreds of cities of 10,000 and larger, Coal Township was one of only nine that reported no violent crimes in 1973. Of those nine, the Pennsylvania town reported the fewest total offenses.

The village, spreading over 42 square miles, encircles the town of Shamokin in a valley 120 miles northwest of Philadelphia. As described by Weaver, who has lived there all his 48 years, Coal Township is home for many who work in factories in nearby cities and for a high proportion of retired people.

Why is crime so rare in Coal Township?

"Well, we do have police patrols out all night. Our churches have extra activities to keep the young people off the streets. We don't have much marijuana and much heroin, none of that stuff," Weaver theorized.

But Coal Township was not entirely crime-free last year. There were a few burglaries, about one every two weeks, and a half-dozen cars were stolen. The town had a regular rash of sneak thievery; something was stolen at least once a week.

The predominant picture was considerably more troublesome for law enforcement authorities who breathed relief when the 1972 figures showed a national crime decrease of 4 per cent, the first decline in 17 years.

But the drop now seems to have been a fluke. The new full-year figures show that total reported crime was 6 per cent higher in 1973 than in 1972. The first quarter figures for 1974, released several weeks ago, reflected a 15 per cent increase over the comparable months last year.

The volume of crime in the seven Crime Index categories jumped 30 per cent during the past five years, 120 per cent since 1960.

In 1973, the violent crimes of murder, assault, rape and robbery were up by 5 per cent, the property crimes of burglary, larceny and auto theft by 6 per cent.

Several price boosts foreseen by Chrysler

DETROIT (AP) — Chrysler Corp. says it will have little choice but to raise prices several times during the 1975 model year on top of an expected $400 to $500 introductory price boost this fall. Company Chairman Lynn Townsend said there would be "repricing, probably several times, during the model year" as long as costs continue to rise. Unlike General Motors and Ford Motor Co., Chrysler hasn't said exactly how much it plans to hike prices this fall, but Townsend said the boost would be "right in the ballpark" with the firm's two chief competitors. GM has said its new prices would be going up a record $446 or 9 per cent on new models. Ford has set a tentative $418 or 8 per cent increase on its 1975 models.

LONGVIEW, Tex. (AP) — "Jack be nimble, Jack be quick. Snap the blade and give it a flick. Grab the purse, it's easily done. Just for kicks, just for fun, plunge the knife and cut and run."

Verse from a not too funny comic book. Right? Wrong.

This verse, contained in a school library book, page 26, The Inner City Mother Goose, is the kind of school material that has prompted formation of a small but vocal textbook review company headed by a Longview man and his wife.

Educational Research Analysts is, according to founders Mr. and Mrs. Mel Gabler, a non-profit, tax-exempt company aimed at cleaning up America's schoolroom texts. "We'd like to see a return to traditional American values and concepts of morality," says Gabler.

Gabler said he and his wife reviewed about 100 of the 500 texts being offered this year by textbooks publishers.

"We got to those we could. We review them differently than teachers would. They look for student interest, readability, format and what have you. We read the books closely and take the time to find really objectionable material. We've had inquiries from across the nation and abroad from teachers and schools wanting us to provide our analysis of texts," he said.

Gabler said only about half of the states have state textbook adoption agencies. Texas is one of them. The other states leave choice of textbooks to the local school districts.

Gabler has taken issue with textbooks which place no value on English grammar through a standard of speech. "Some of these texts tell the student there is no such thing as correct grammar. But if a child is permitted to speak in dialects and colloquialisms at school what's going to happen to him when he gets out in the world and tries to converse with someone who doesn't understand anything but proper, correct grammar?" asked Gabler.

The Texas Education Agency begins public hearings Tuesday on adoption of proposed textbooks for the 1975-76 school year. Gabler will be there to protest what he says are some texts that condone homosexuality, encourage bribery and theft, condone lying and cheating and give no guidance to pupils in ethics and morality.

textbooks 14 years ago when their son complained "there seemed to be something wrong with his history book."

"I told him I would take a look at it," Gabler said. The book, he said, represented America as being controlled by a dictatorial form of government.

"On top of that, the book left out the phrase "under God" from the Gettysburg Address," he said.

Poll reveals public opposed to wiretaps

NEW YORK (AP) — Americans surveyed in a Harris poll are 81 to 13 per cent against having their phones tapped without a court order.

By 68 to 27 per cent, the respondents opposed letting the government wiretap citizens suspected of crimes without a court order.

"The Watergate disclosure left an indelible impression on American public opinion that extreme care must be taken in the future against invasion of privacy," Harris said.

The poll also showed these results on Thursday on a survey of 1,495 households:

—Americans are 77 to 14 per cent against letting the government open their mail without court orders.

—They are 80 to 12 per cent against being spied on by any kind of electronic device, except with a court order.

—By 80 to 12 per cent they oppose allowing the telephone company to give out records of long distance phone calls, except by court order.

On each of the questions, a few of those questioned had no responses.

Reverse discrimination: is it really practiced?

Editor's Note: This is the final portion of a three-part series.

By ROSEMARY VAVRIN
UD Staff

"I've been cussed out and called a 'nigger-lover.' I've received hate calls at home. They think I'm a red-neck liberal!" exclaimed Joe Minkley, personnel director for the City of Lubbock.

He says there is some truth to the talk of reverse discrimination.

"For example," he said, "the local Texas Employment Commission was trying to devise a test that would be fair to all racial groups. They asked us for 10 of our minority secretaries to take the test. I had an uprising of white secretaries on my hands. They wanted to know: 'Why can't I take the test?'"

Complaints have come from white men and women who have applied for a job that eventually did go a minority. The white person calls in to complain, "I understand that job was held open for a minority," Minkley said.

Although Minkley denies he has to fill a specific quota, he admits he is very aware of the pressures to hire minorities.

"On one side there's the pressure to hire more and more minorities," he said, "and on the other side is the accusation that the city doesn't use reasonable care to hire good persons."

Most of his reverse discrimination complaints come from white men, he said.

The assistant personnel director, Larry Dyer, said, "Because of the federal pressure, if two equal people apply for a job, the minority person will get the job. We do our best to hire as many minorities as possible."

The only woman on the Lubbock City Council, Carolyn Jordan, said, "I've heard no real complaints against the city regarding reverse discrimination, but I have been hearing grumblings.

"I would still like to see more questions raised about the hiring of women especially in executive positions. Every time I raise the issue, I'm reminded of one gal at Lubbock Power and Light. But that's only one!

"And the assistant librarian is a woman, but so are most of those under her. And the same for the gal who's the head of nursing at the City-County Health Department," Jordan said.

Gabler says there is no one publishing company guilty of preparing what he considers objectionable material. "Some companies come out with excellent books and then turn around and turn out a really bad one."

Why? "I think it's a selling point. They come out with something flashy, dramatic, something that appears revolutionary in teaching. I think it's just a selling point." Gabler and his wife took a positive interest in school

Mark Spitz may swim again

LOS ANGELES (AP) — Two years after his amazing win of seven gold medals in the Olympic Games, Mark Spitz says he might swim again, but for money this time.

His hair has grown long since he electrified the world with his seven gold medals and seven world records at Munich in 1972. He is richer, having cashed into product endorsements and show business offers.

But at 24 he remains the same as before — outspoken, competitive, self-assured, and cocky, say his detractors.

He claims he is stronger than he was during the Olympics, and that has made him think about swimming again.

"I think a man reaches his physical maturity between 28 and 32," he observed in the apartment he shares with his wife, Susan, in Marina del Rey yacht basin. "The only reason swimmers stop competition at 22 is they get out of school and have to go work. Otherwise they could go on and even swim better."

"I've been talking to a friend about my getting back in training. I would have to start now and train for two years before I would be back in peak condition I think I could break one of my records. In peak O think I could break one of my records."

"But it would have to be for money this time. How? I don't know. Something could be worked out."

The 1976 Olympics are apparently out of the question for Spitz, not merely because of his yen to make his swimming pay. He said the Amateur Athletic Union considers him a professional because he has endorsed swimming products.

"They're discriminating against my profession," he complained. "A doctor or lawyer could continue their jobs and swim as amateurs. But because I'm in entertainment, I'm a professional. Did you know that swimmers can't even take jobs as lifeguards and remain amateurs. It's ridiculous."

He continued with a blast at AAU officials as "a bunch of phonies. They don't stand up for our country at all; they bend backwards to please the Iron Curtain countries."

"Because of the gold medals I won, they thought there were too many swimming events in the Olympics. But every one of the races I swam were bonafide world events.

"Now they've cut three swimming events, including the men's sprint relay. A swimmer would have to win five individual events and two relays to match my record of four individual, three relays.

"Nobody complained when Valery Borzov won the 100 — and the 300-meter dashes. Or when Olga Korbut won the floor exercises and the balance beam. It's so hypocritical."

In the two years since the Olympics, Mark Spitz has rarely gone near the water, except for his favorite hobby of sailing his 30-foot boat.

"I had such a regimented life of practicing at 6 a.m. and again at 4 p.m. that I delight in doing nothing."

Trying something new

You're always trying something new. This year you began ballet lessons. And today, you finally mastered that new position. You feel wonderful.

Trying Tampax tampons

for the first time can be a wonderful new experience, too. They're worn internally so you can always be your most active. No one will know you have your period, even in a leotard, a bikini, or a tennis skirt. They're easy to use, too. The silken-smooth container-applicator makes insertion safe, easy and comfortable. And the exclusive Junior absorbency-size is just right for a beginner.

Try Tampax tampons and every day of the month can be a good day to try something new.

Rooster produces life-saving antibody

ST. LOUIS (AP) — A unique rooster named El Macho has given researchers at Washington University here a way to combat a bone condition that often accompanies kidney failure.

El Macho's body produces an extremely sensitive antibody doctors can use to monitor and control a bone disease that often develops in patients who depend on dialysis of their blood to stay alive.

Dialysis machines are used to cleanse the blood of patients whose kidneys have stopped functioning. But they often leave a deficiency of calcium in the patient's blood, and soon bones become brittle and are easily broken.

El Macho — the name translated from Spanish means "much man" — is "one tough bird," says Dr. Eduardo Slatopolsky, director of the dialysis unit at Barnes Hospital here.

"Of all the roosters we tested, only one, El Macho, produced an antibody so sensitive it could be used effectively."

Slatopolsky explained how researchers discovered El Macho's usefulness:

"Without the kidney, the blood does not get the calcium it needs and the content of phosphorus in the bloodstream begins to rise.

"This buildup in turn triggers the parathyroid glands in the neck and parathyroid hormones are emitted to tell the body that more calcium is needed in the blood.

"Unfortunately, the blood picks up the calcium from the most available source, the bones. Over a period of time the stripping of calcium from the bones makes them brittle."

He said researchers found roosters injected with parathyroid hormones from cows sometimes develop antibodies which react to human hormones. The result was a method of measuring hormone content in the blood of patients.

An increase in the amount of parathyroid hormone in the blood indicates a deficiency of calcium, he said.

"Doctors can then regulate the patient's diet or infuse calcium directly into the blood during dialysis to restore the phosphorous-calcium balance in the bloodstream and arrest the bone disease," Slatopolsky said.

"Not only was the El Macho antibody at least 100 times more sensitive to the parathyroid hormone than the other animals' antibodies — but it turned out that this rooster produces it in such quantities that there is enough to go around for every patient on dialysis in the world," the doctor said. "Enough, in fact, to supply our laboratory's needs for the next 800 years if it were needed."

A good shot

Evel Kniefel has always seemed more of an unreal legend than a man. Reports of his motorcycle feats and his numerous injuries seemed too much to believe and the name Kniefel conjured the mental image of a guy on a cycle who had let ego confuse the words courage and foolhardiness. But through the medium of closed circuit television, myself and a Lubbock audience met the cycle-jumping legend and discovered underneath a simple man who was acquainted with his own mortal status Sunday.

Kniefel's try at jumping the Snake River Canyon smacked of the ultimate publicity hype. It was a publicity man's dream come true and netted Kniefel a cool six million dollars and even with inflation that's not a bad payday. But for the 35-year-old Kniefel the publicity man's dream almost became a nightmare.

I WENT TO THE SCREENING of the Snake River jump with rationalizations that I just wanted to see if he'd make it. But, I guess like most of the other people there, I was voyeur peeping at the little screen fascinated by the possibility of death which hung pregnant in the air. People ask by what values should a man get six million dollars for a stunt like Kniefel's? My only answer is by the sick values which enable a person to shell out seven dollars a ticket to possibly witness a man die.

A friend of mine said after Kniefel came out alive that he could not have stood watching a man die on the screen yet for a tense five minutes it seemed he had done that very thing. A cubbyholed, unspoken side of the human nature is this fascination with watching a man dance with extinction and it will suffice to say it is a pitiable and ugly side.

The highlight of the showing was getting past the legend and the preconceived notions and finding that this person with the bizarre name of Evel Kniefel was really just a man doing the simple task of fulfilling his dream. It was nice that attempting to fulfill his dream also brought him a bundle of cash but the feeling here is Kniefel would probably give up the entire six million to have made it across that canyon.

KNIEVEL CAME ACROSS through the interviews as a man doing just what he had to do. His philosophy of life came out just before he climbed in the sky cycle. "A man was put on this earth to live — not merely exist," said Kniefel.

Kniefel's philosophy is fairly simple and not original by any means but it came as a bit of a surprise, dissipating all my preconceived notions of what the man would be like. Evel Kniefel is just a man who wants to live life and be happy. He does what he must to fulfill his philosophy.

Life for Evel Kniefel has been a continual brush with death. He was wiped out countless times on motorcycle jumps and has broken over 60 bones in the last eight years. But the attempted jump over the Snake River may have been too close even for Kniefel. He came very close to falling into the Snake River and said himself he would not have been able to eject soon enough to avoid drowning as the craft went down.

The Snake River jump was Kniefel's dream. To be true to that dream may make him try it again but here's one that hopes he won't. He has nothing left to prove as far as courage goes and retirement would be well deserved in my opinion. An elderly lady with a sweet voice said at the Lubbock showing, "Poor Evel just didn't have any luck today." I'm afraid I'll have to disagree. Luck has always ridden with Kniefel and it did Sunday. He came out of the aborted jump alive and safe. Kniefel is very lucky indeed but the question arises: Will the luck be there if next time comes?

Kniefel's rocket runs out of steam

By JIM WILLSE
Associated Press Writer

TWIN FALLS, Idaho (AP) — Stuntman Evel Kniefel failed in his attempt to ride a steam-driven missile over the 600-foot-deep Snake River Canyon on Sunday, but was quickly rescued from the bottom and waved to onlookers crowding the edge of the chasm.

Before the jump — probably the most publicized stunt in history — Kniefel had called the attempt "the proudest day in my life." Moments later, he was headed nose first into the canyon, his descent slowed by the parachutes that were to have carried him to the rugged ground on the north side and instead deployed prematurely.

Rescuers reached the downed Sky-Cycle within moments, transferred Kniefel to a rescue boat and later transferred him again to a helicopter for the ride back up to the canyon rim.

The helicopter touched down briefly on a ledge in front of the sharply angled launch ramp, then swung around in the direction of the trailer where Kniefel had spent the hour before the jump with his wife and three children.

Linda Kniefel, who had appeared calm in the moments preceding the jump, cried "Oh my God, no" as she watched the vehicle head downward. Running to the edge of the canyon, she looked at the scene below and exclaimed, "What's taking those guys so long to get to him?"

The jump which had been in preparation for more than two years lasted only a small portion of the two minutes it was expected to take to clear the 1,600-foot-wide canyon. Instead, the crucial parachutes deployed prematurely, halting the missile before it reached the far lip of the canyon.

Once back on the canyon shelf, Kniefel, walking without apparent injury, climbed to the top of the hill from which he had been launched and waved to the thousands of spectators below. "I hit two or three shelves near the rocks, then bounced down," he said as he walked through a mob of admirers and newsmen. "But I was strapped in so tight it didn't matter."

Kniefel said that seconds after the launch, the craft began to swerve to the right. "If I'd gone into the river, I'd have never gotten out of it," he said.

Kniefel had appeared confident as he lowered himself into the cockpit of the Sky-Cycle.

Flashing a thumbs-up sign at the crowd of onlookers pressing against the fence surrounding the launch area, Kniefel, holding his ever-present cane, walked to the chair lift that deposited him in the red, white and blue missile pointed upward on a sharply angled launch rail.

Minutes before maneuvering himself into the cramped open cockpit, Kniefel, clad in a red, white and blue jumpsuit, rated his chances at "90 per cent to go."

"I think we'll do it. I wish the wind wasn't blowing so hard, but I have to do it," he told an interviewer on the closed-circuit telecast of the carnival-like event.

The launch of the missile was running 10 minutes behind schedule and until Kniefel appeared on the scene a group of youthful spectators pressed continually against the fence. The sight of Kniefel apparently calmed them, however, and they applauded loudly as he worked his way into the Sky-Cycle.

A successful Evel

Although he didn't make it across the Snake River Canyon, Evel Kniefel is still the greatest motorcycle jumper in the world. Here Evel soars across the Caesars Palace fountains in Las Vegas.

SWC favored in openers

By The Associated Press
Southwest Conference football teams will be favored in five of seven games against inter-sectional opponents when the 60th season opens Sept. 14.

Arkansas, which entertains Southern California, and Baylor, which has the awesome task of playing No. 1 rated Oklahoma in Norman, Okla., are the only underdogs.

Houston and Rice tangle in their cross-town feud. The Cougars join the SWC in 1976.

Defending SWC champion Texas travels to New England for the first time under Coach Darrell Royal's reign to meet Boston College which stunned Texas A&M in 1973. It's the second season for the Longhorns under an 11-game schedule. Texas was upset last by Miami in an opener on the road.

The Longhorns will be favored over the Eagles, who graduated seven players to the professionals. Southern Methodist will be a slight favorite over North Texas State in an interesting matchup at Texas Stadium. Former SMU Coach Hayden Fry has worked his NTSU team behind closed gates in preparation for the game.

"It would be ridiculous for me to say the game doesn't mean an awful lot to me," said Fry, who was fired at SMU. Dave Smith, a former assistant under Fry, is the Mustang mentor.

The young and strong Texas Aggies will host Clemson in an unusual 4 p.m. game at College Station. The Aggies whipped Clemson last year on the road and are even stronger this season. A&M is favored because of its experienced offense and a rugged defense led by All-American linebacker Ed Simonini.

Texas Christian under new Coach Jim Shofner is a runaway pick over Texas-

Arlington which has yet to win a game in this series of Tarrant County rivals. Running back Mike Luttrell heads the Horned Frog offense.

Tech, with large hopes riding on redshirt quarterback Tommy Duniven, will host Iowa State of the Big Eight. Tech Coach Jim Carlen calls it "The roughest opener we've had since I've been here." Nevertheless, the Raiders will be favored.

Arkansas could be ripe and ready to ambush USC. Coach Frank Broyles' crew has speed and size and the Razorbacks are always dangerous at home.

Baylor has the task of jousting probation-stained Oklahoma. The Sooners have vowed to run up the score in every game they play this season because they can't go bowling and Oklahoma has the tools to do it.

Six million flop

Evel Kniefel reportedly grossed six million dollars for his jump over the Snake River Canyon even though the X-2 Sky Cycle failed to make it across the chasm.
