"A Light of Hope" has been selected as the theme of this year's traditional Carol of Lights, according to program chairperson Tory Olejer. Ceremonies for the annual event, sponsored by the Residence Halls Association (RHA), are scheduled for 7 p.m. tonight in the Science Quadrangle.

As a special tribute to the past, the RHA is trying to revive many traditions previously associated with past Carols of Lights. Cindy Hall, graduate student, accompanied by six trumpets will play several Christmas selections as the Saddle Tramps lead a torch light procession from the fountain to the steps of the Science Building.

There the master of ceremonies, Tech President Grover Murray, will present a special tribute to the previous Carol of Lights before the Oakwood Baptist and Tech choirs perform. Dr. Gene Hemmle, former chairman of the Music Department, will lead the public in singing Christmas carols.

Following the singing, a trumpet fanfare will signal the arrival of the Christmas season as the traditional 10 buildings in the Science Quadrangle and surrounding area are outlined in 28,000 red, yellow and white Christmas lights.

After the lights are turned on and the singing is finished, the Victory Bells in the East Tower of the Administration Building will ring for five minutes. Dividing the cost with the Lubbock community, the RHA is currently raising half of the $6,000 needed to sponsor the program by selling red and black pom-poms. Several campus organizations have also contributed to the goal. These groups include the Ex-Students Association, Alpha Phi Omega, Chi Rho and the RHA officers, who donated their November salaries to the cause. Contributions have also been received from local merchants.

According to Olejer, the buildings will be lighted from dusk until midnight through Jan. 2, 1975. The lights in the past have been on from sundown until sunrise but this year in an effort to conserve energy, automatic timers will extinguish the lights at midnight.

The Carol of Lights originated in 1959 when Harold Hinn, former Tech regent, paid for the purchase and operation of lights on the Social Science, Chemistry and West Engineering Buildings. Student participation began in 1960, and four more buildings were lighted in 1961.

The Carol of Lights ceremonies were curtailed in 1972 because of a controversy concerning campus grounds use. This stemmed from a war protest on Memorial Circle in the spring of 1972. Campus and Lubbock organizations and individuals have attempted to rebuild the program during the past two years.

Watergate trial to end without Nixon testimony

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Watergate cover-up trial will end without the testimony of former President Richard M. Nixon, U.S. District Judge John J. Sirica ruled Thursday.

Thursday.
Sirica declared that Nixon's testimony "is not indispensable or necessary" because much of what he knows has been — or can be — obtained from from other witnesses.

The judge also questioned the former

President's credibility.

NOTING THAT THE former

President was named an unindicted coconspirator in the cover-up case, Sirica said Nixon "has been accused, in effect, of being an accomplice of the defen-

"Certainly ... his testimony would be subjected to the instruction to the jury that it should be received with caution and scrutinized with care."

Nixon, recovering at his San Clemente, Calif., home from complications of a chronic phlebitis condition, had been subpoenaed last September by cover-up defendant John D. Ehrlichman.

EHRLICHMAN OPENED his case Thursday and among the first witnesses called was former special White House counsel Charles W. Colson.

Colson, also an unindicted coconspirator in the cover-up case, is currently serving a prison term for a related Watergate offense.

Initially, in his six-page order, Sirica granted a request from Nixon's lawyer, Herbert J. Miller, that subpoenas for his client's testimony be dismissed.

The order also ruled out the possibility that Nixon might answer written questions about his party in the cover-up.

THREE COURT-APPOINTED cardiovascular specialists recommended on Nov. 29 that Nixon not be required to provide even limited testimony before Jan. 6 — about two weeks after the trial now is expected to end.

The doctors said the former President might be able to testify twice daily under oath at his California estate with a doctor present.

Sirica said the limitations within the medical opinion alone should answer attempts by defendants to get Nixon's testimony.

"THE WITNESS IS simply unavailable to be deposed," Sirica said.
"The court will not issue an order to take the deposition of Mr. Nixon while it appears he is so ill that the taking of such a deposition could seriously jeopardize his health."

Shortly before Sirica's opinion was made public, Nixon's lawyer said not until Jan. 6 would his client be able to even prepare to give testimony.

The lawyer said it would be "highly

Sirica agreed with that in his own order and added that complications in Nixon's recovery could also push back the date he might begin testifying.

unfair" to require the former

President's testimony until long after

EHRLICHMAN'S LAWYER, William S. Frates, has said Nixon's testimony is indispensable to his case because the former President kept Ehrlichman in the dark about the real reason for the Watergate cover-up. Defendants John N. Mitchell and H. R. Haldeman also sought testimony from Nixon.

Frates had asked Sirica to recess the trial over the Christmas holidays and send the jury home until Nixon could testify. Other defense lawyers suggested the jury might remain sequestered during a trial recess.

It would be unwarranted and wholly inappropriate to interrupt, adjourn or continue this trial with the jury sequestered until an uncertain date in the somewhat distant future," the judge said.

THE OBJECTIONS FROM defendants Robert C. Mardian and Kenneth W. Parkinson to sending the jury home ruled out that possibility, Sirica said.

Although disposing of the time problems brought on by Nixon's possible testimony, Sirica is still pressed to close out the trial by

The attorney for Andy Lowe ex-football player su

The attorney for Andy Lowe, ex-football player suing the University for $955,625, said today he will ask for a trial date soon.

Attorney Bob Garner said the request would be made after replies from the Attorney General's office to written legal questions mailed Tuesday.

He said his probable strategy will be to ask the court to summarily overrule his position so he can appeal the case and at that time challenge the doctrine of sovereign immunity which requires that the state must grant permission to be sued.

Garner hopes the court will overrule the doctrine. But, should the court fail to do so, he will attempt to prove that athletics and other facets of university affairs, are proprietary, not governmental, functions.

ATTORNEYS FILED SUIT for Lowe on Sept. 13 in the 99th District Court.

The petition charges that Lowe "is entitled to bring this action for personal injuries caused by neglect of such defendant, its agents, servants, or employees, while engaged in a proprietary non-governmental function..."

The coaching staff, management, and trainers of the University were negligent in four instances, according to the petition: the plaintiff was not supplied with the proper equipment, braces and-or supporting devices; Lowe was not permitted the wear the devices; Lowe was permitted and required to play; and the re-injured condition was not properly treated and cared for immediately.

THE PETITION ALLEGES Lowe was injured in his left knee while playing for Tech and while convalescing from that original injury, "the coaching staff at such University caused your plaintiff to be injected into the lineup to participate in athletic combat. That on the 16th day of September, 1972, while involved in play on behalf of Defendant University, he received an additional injury to his left knee which was totally and permanently disabling."

Lowe's left leg is now 75 per cent disabled, Garner said, adding that if medical help is not provided, within 10 to 12 years the disability will reach 100 per cent. Lowe could have the leg medically restored, Garner said, if he had enough money.

OF THE $955,625 sought in damages, $30,000 would be for pain and suffering to date; $100,000 for pain and suffering in the future; $625 for medical care to date; $25,000 for medical care in the future; $50,000 for loss of earnings to date; and $750,000 for loss of earnings in the future by diminished capacity.

The Attorney General's office answered the original petition and said governmental immunity applies. "The law is against me now," Garner said.

Garner said if Lowe had been wearing a brace while he was injured, the law would have allowed for recovery from injuries caused by some condition or use of GOVERNMENTAL IMMUNITY will not apply if Garner can prove the athletic program is a proprietary function. Garner said the University is engaged in many businesslike functions — the campus media, the student union cafeteria, the book store.

Learning theories core of education

Editor's note: The following is the second in a series of seven articles examining changes in education. Today's article is about theories of learning.

By CHARLEY BANKHEAD UD News Editor

"Our thinking tends to be single-track rather than pluralistic. Single answers, single models, and single strategies are much more attractive to us than multiple answers, multiple models and the like. Once having performed an interpretation or having reached a conclusion, we show great reluctance to formulate or to consider other possibilities and virtually never have the intellectual adroitness to conceptualize opposite conclusions."

Robert Goldhammer

"Our Scholastic Legacy"

At the center of education is learning theory.

There have been numerous theories put forth by different researchers, including perhaps the most famous — classical and operant conditioning.

CLASSICAL CONDITIONING is best known through the work of Pavlov, whose dogs learned by associating responses with stimuli. Operant conditioning is probably best known from the work of Skinner. This kind of learning process involves reinforcement of responses.

Floyd Ruch and Philip Zimbardo, authors of "Psychology and Life," a psychology textbook, sum up the work of learning theorists by stating "...the learning theorists see consistency in human behavior as resulting from the learning of habit-patterns."

Dr. Myron Trang, assistant professor of education, thinks some of the assumptions taken from theories of learning are incorrect.

TRANG, WHOSE BACKGROUND is in counseling, said, "I think the assumptions of the learning process are backward. People forget that reading and listening are not the best ways to learn. We need to try to move every level of activity (in education) to an exchange of words."

Ruch and Zimbardo added these words of criticism in their text: "The major criticism of their (learning theorists') work has been that it remains too elementaristic and environmentalistic: they propose little in the way of mechanisms to tie their bundles of habits together and give them coherent direction, and the organism is pictured as essentially a puppet whose strings are pulled by environmental forces."

Trang's major contention is that learning should move to what he calls an "enactive" level. This involves actually experiencing what is being taught rather than merely being told about it.

"THERE ARE THREE means of processing information," said Trang. "These are symbolic, iconic and enactive." We deal too much with the symbolic state. Teachers try to convey concepts and ideas through words. I feel too much is lost in words.

"Think of a football game. How many volumes would it take to describe that game — every minute detail, including how the crowd feels, what's going on on the sidelines, and things like that? There is no telling.

"So when sportswriters describe the game, they have to abstract. The same thing is true in teaching, but many times we forget that we are abstracting. But if a student can experience something, actually see it and feel it — that's enactive learning. It's a more accurate process and the conclusions one reaches are more like things really are."

Trang said drama is a good way to train teachers for Trang said drama is a good way to train teachers enactive learning.

"WHY CAN'T WE ROLE play?" Trang asked. "Why can't we act out a scene? This would be much better than just reading about something. Why do doctors have internships? Why do teachers have student teaching? So they know what it's like when they begin their jobs.

"A business major could be given a job as a manager with assets, liabilities, stock. There could be employes and employe and resource problems. The student's only limitation would be imagination. In government and history, students could act out scenes rather than just talking about them."

Dr. Tom Murphy, assistant professor of education, added another aspect to the learning process when he said education should place more emphasis on students' affective domain — the psychological, social, emotional and mental components.

"THE PARENT IS THE ultimate authority of the child," said Murphy, "and if given a choice between cognitive development (achievement) and affective understanding (interest) in their children, they will probably choose cognition as most important. I personally think we can do both.

"An emphasis on the affective domain is not a deemphasis on the cognitive. The affective domain is a tool to aid cognition."

Trang also touched on the area of affective domain when he said there is an appropriate level of awareness in students that facilitates learning. The major problem is finding the level.

Christmas.

"THIS LEVEL WILL be different for different subjects and learning experiences," said Trang. "The trouble is, teachers will find one level that works in one situation and will try to make it work for everybody all the time."

Trang said another problem results from educators' not realizing that there are numerous stimuli competing for students' attention at all times.

"The human brain can process a number of things at one time. A student gets different kinds of stimuli from a fluctuating environment. And, although two people reach different conclusions and expectations about something, both are valid for the individual because of what is processed.

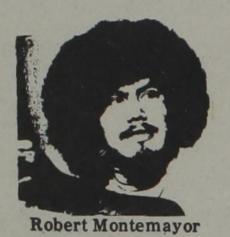

"MANY SCHOOLS BLOCK off the environment from students. Teachers make students focus straight ahead, sit still and not look off to the side. It may be good to focus straight ahead for awhile, but not the whole damn year!

"Students definitely have competing stimuli — the hardness of the chairs they are in, an activity going on outside the classroom, the hum of a radiator — it might be good to look off to the side for awhile."

Dr. Robert Anderson, dean of the College of Education, agreed education should place more emphasis on individual students and their needs. However, he said there is a place in education for the reward and punishment assumptions of operant conditioning

"The important thing to remember is that students are different," said Anderson. "They are not all alike. That means that different theories should be applied to different people with different problems."

Guarantees to be seen, heard

If it will make any of you feel any better, we may have got stuck for 6,000 tickets in the Peach Bowl game, but a very reliable source has told me our opponent for that game, Vanderbilt University, had to guarantee 10,000 tickets to play Tech.

At $7.50 a ticket it will cost Vanderbilt University and - or their fans a nice $75,000 to play for the peaches. However, Vanderbilt, which is located at Nashville, Tenn., is only about 250 miles from Atlanta, the site of the Peach Bowl. Chances are they can certainly provide many more fans, being that

The reliable source, who chose not to be identified, told me Vanderbilt was not overly playing up their deal either. "Evidently, they have not wanted anyone to know and feel it's no one's damn business how many tickets they had to guarantee," the source said.

At first, when Tech officials were catching fire for their 6,000-ticket deal, it was believed Vanderbilt had not had to guarantee any tickets to play. However, no official from the Tennessee school was ever actually quoted as saying one way

I've been told the NCAA, which governs practically all collegiate athletics, frowns on bowl games which virtually force schools to sign their contracts with a guarantee included. I can see why. The Peach Bowl seats approximately 60,000 people. With Tech guaranteeing 6,000 tickets and Vanderbilt providing 10,000, it's a cinch that more than one fourth of the stadium will be filled.

"Any bowl game operation is out to make money," said Tech Executive Vice President Glenn E. Barnett. "The bowl people want to make money and they also want to have people in the stands when the game is played." I guess it can be embarrassing when the TV cameras scan around the stadium during the game and the stands are half empty.

It's too bad that guarantees are included though. It only shows that the bowl game must not be that prestigious, otherwise the stadium would be filled regardless. "The exposure is what really counts," one individual told me. Just like the politicians ... dropping your coins just to be seen and

The Michigan State News printed something in their newspaper which may rock students and professors alike back in their chairs. "The fear that college students are unable to understand twelfth grade-level language has driven many publishing houses to lower the reading levels of their textbooks from twelfth to ninth grade level.

"Most college texts were previously printed for a twelfth grade and higher reading level." Low-grade reading for a high-grade education. Just so long as it doesn't get vice versa.

Tech is on the verge of losing Head Football Coach Jim Carlen to South Carolina. At least that's what the bush birds are saying. It was reported Thursday that South Carolina had supposedly offered Carlen a whopping salary in the $60,000 to $70,000 range.

Presently, Carlen receives $32,500 annually. This doesn't include what he reaps from his weekly TV show during the regular football season. So Carolina must really be wanting Big Jim if they're offering that kind of cash.

Indications we've gotten are that Carlen has mixed feelings about leaving. Working conditions are better here and he certainly likes the facilities. And too, Carlen is supposedly, if he does leave, trying to set up an arrangement to have his coaching assistants included in his deal as well.

Carlen has denied that former line coach John Conley's being named to the assistant Tech athletic directorship has had anything to do with his looking for another job. But, even if he does deny it, it's common knowledge that Carlen did want the athletic directorship for himself.

With present Athletic Director J T King having only two more years on his contract before retiring, it's almost a cinch, according to speculators, that Conley will move up after King's departure.

President Grover E. Murray said, "Whenever King leaves anyone will have a shot at the position, including Conley." That may be so, but it seems funny that they'd create a position like assistant athletic director when there never had been a position like that before.

Evidently Carlen must not think he has much of a chance of getting the athletic directorship here or quite possibly he's showing off his worth by being entertained with such alleged offers as the one from South Carolina. He may be wanting more money from Tech.

Then again it would be hard for anyone to turn down an offer which doubled his present salary. No matter how miserable the working conditions were at South Carolina, the coins sure would seem to lessen the hassles. I hope some of you professors are not jealous or insulted at a coach getting that much cash.

Have a good day.

Gay misconceptions

I'd like to comment on the recent article about the Gay Church in Lubbock (Nov. 21). The arguments of the Gay minister seemed to rest on some misconceptions that cloud the issue.

Firstly, he implied that "Fundamentalists" believe that sex is for procreation only. The logical conclusion of that is a condemnation of homosexual union because such a union cannot produce children. But the Biblical teaching is that God created sexuality for pleasure as well as procreation; that it was intended for the spiritual and physical union of two people, one man with one woman, forever. Deviation from the original design is rebellion against the Designer. This rebellion is called sin. Scripture declares homosexuality sin because it deviates from the plan of God, but it is important to note that homosexual activity is never seen as some kind of superior evil. It is seen in Romans 1 and Leviticus 20 as one of a number of sins, condemned by God, all deserving the same penalty: death.

The second misconception was that "Fundamentalists" pick and choose Scripture according to personal taste. But do two wrongs make a right? Can the Gay minister be morally justified in rejecting Romans 1 and Leviticus 20 because others overlook I Corinthians 11? No. But more important is the fact that a great many "Fundamentalists" do not see I Corinthians 11 as "cultural". And if it is true that this passage is not universally disregarded, the minister's argument fails. All of this is irrelevant unless one presumes the authority of Scripture. I presume the Gays do since they desire to "study Scripture". And if part of Scripture is not truly from God, how do we know any of it is? Finally, the article failed to put forth any option other than condemnation or indulgence of homosexuals. A distinction must be made between homosexual condition and homosexual activity. The Bible condemns sin, not temptation. It never condemns an individual who, knowing that he's attracted to members of his own sex, depends on the grace of God to help him resist the temptation. I know such people, dealing creatively with the homosexual condition, accepting the restriction Scripture places on their actions and living with the assurance that God's power can transform any life.

I challenge the Gay person who tells me that homosexual activity is consistent with Christianity; I also challenge the "kill them queers" mentality so widespread on our campus. Ian Rogers

To the Editor:

I would like to inform the Tech students that there is a women's intercollegiate program at Texas Tech. They compete against other colleges and universities around the state just like the men's teams. There are intercollegiate teams for women in these sports: basketball, volleyball, swimming, tennis, track, and golf. Why not take time one night and support one of the women's intercollegiate sports like you support the men's? You might be surprised and see that it's as exciting or more exciting than the men's sports.

HEW probes thwarted

WASHINGTON - An investigation by the Health, Education and Welfare Department of more than $30 million in frauds and other ripoffs has been thwarted by the pinchpenny Senate Appropriations Committee.

At present, 81 major criminal cases involving at least $17.5 million are blacklogged in the files of HEW gumshoes while the ingenious fast-buck artists who perpetrated the frauds are living like kings on the taxpayers' money.

Another 100 cases have not even been opened although HEW has respectable leads they could follow if they had the manpower. The theft from the taxpayers in these cases cannot accurately be estimated, but it may total another $10 million to $20 million.

The locales of the frauds and thefts range from small towns in Texas to the biggest metropolises. The pitifully small HEW investigations staff has found hints of $3 million in Medicaid chiseling by as many as 100 New York doctors.

In Los Angeles, Cleveland and Boston, probable student loan fraud by "schools" and lenders reaches close to $5 million. In Chicago, across-the-board frauds are believed to exist in health aid programs and embezzlement has been discovered in HEW grants.

In Atlanta, frauds and embezzlements in grants, student loan frauds, cheating on health and rehabilitation programs and other crimes by supposedly respectable businessmen, social workers and health program directors may total $5 million.

A confidential report provided to the Senate Appropriations Committee by HEW complains that "inadequate investigative capability has dictated that investigative action (on Medicaid) be taken by state agencies although the predominant source of funding comes from federal funds."

On the student loan programs, where fraud may total $15 million and defaulted loans may soon run to $400 million a year, the HEW document is even more blunt on the need to supplement the tiny 10-man staff of trained investigators.

"The lack of OIS (HEW's Office of Investigations and Security) investigative personnel," the document reads, "precludes development of a complete study and adequate

by Jack Anderson

administrative inquiry to locate all matters of fraud." Yet, the Senate committee knocked off 12 sleuths for HEW's investigations unit and specified that "no funds shall be used to expand the HEW 'internal security' unit." Actually, the Senate report is a cheap shot in more ways than one. The "internal security" unit also has been called a "plumbers unit" by suspicious Senate staffers. In fact, it is neither. Our investigation shows it is staffed by veteran government investigators, some of whom were hired during the Truman era.

Shorthanded as it is, the HEW investigations unit has obtained three indictments and has recovered $1.3 million in federal funds from fraud artists. Most of the unit's cases are investigated in cooperation with the FBI.

As a result of the Senate stinginess, more than 200 HEW contractors, grantees and lending institutions are believed to be robbing the taxpayers blind. In the case of social rehabilitation frauds, the thieves have even been robbing the blind blind. Footnote: Harley Dirks, staff chief for the Senate Appropriations subcommittee on HEW, stoutly defended his recommendation to deny HEW more investigators. His cuts have nothing to do, he insisted, with the fact that his wife, Ruth, works for one of the HEW offices now under investigation by the HEW sleuths. MASKED IDENTITY: A mysterious federal intelligence unit is buying thousand of dollars worth of masks and face molds from a California make-up firm.

The purchases so far include $1,500 worth of "custom sculptured" nose molds, $4,000 in "latex appliances" for four facial types and $4,200 in artificial face molds. The detailed masks include scars, bald heads and other lifelike details. When the order was first placed, the firm was told the odd Halloween assortment was for the FBI. But a spokesman there earnestly insisted the bureau knew nothing about the purchases. At the postal boxes in Washington, D.C., to which masks and bills were delivered, a clerk let slip that "those are all CIA boxes."

The payments were made to the firm, however, by checks drawn on the U.S. Treasury from a Pentagon account,

Common Market frauds costly

By DONALD FORBES

BRUSSELS, Belgium (AP) - Frauds by small farmers and businessmen alike have cost the European Common Market hundreds of millions of dollars over the last 15 years, officials here say.

The money - paid out in crooked food deals - has come from the Common Market's Farm Fund, a complicated subsidy system designed to regulate food production and trade in the nine-nation economic community.

No one knows the exact cost, but officials at Common Market headquarters in Brussels and parliamentary sources elsewhere in Europe estimate the figure at $200 million.

"But that is just the tip of the iceberg - the cases we found out about," one Common Market official said.

The fund comes from taxes paid into the Common Market by its member states. The Farm Fund, intended as an agricultural master-plan which would ensure that the community's 280 million population would always have enough to eat at prices fair to both farmers and housewives, is regarded as a soft target for

Evidence of the big money involved is the fact that agriculture swallowed up two-thirds of the Common Market's $6-billion budget in 1974.

Despite the extent of what is said at headquarters here to be a scandal, the Common Market's fraud control department is tiny and receives little cooperation from Common Market countries.

"A fraud against the community is regarded much more tolerantly than a swindle uncovered inside one of the members states and infringing its own law," an official said. Frauds range from petty diddling by farmers working a few acres to massive, carefully planned operations by shadowy syndicates. Take the case of "The Steers With The Amputated

Farmers in Britain get a slaughter subsidy of $44 for each mature steer they take to market.

To prove the subsidy has been paid, an Agriculture Ministry official punches a hole in the animal's ear. Farmers then are able to withdraw the steer from the auction ring, drive it home, back off the holed ear and sew another on with twine. The animal's hair is smoothed over the wound and back it goes to market the next day for a repeat performance.

"The fraud is only discovered at the slaughterhouse and there is no system for tracing which farm the steer came from," a close observer of the British auctions said.

Often, frauds are not even reported to headquarters by the member states. Brussels frequently finds out about them from news reports.

The courts are not regarded as much of a deterrent by officials who say most offenders escape only with a fine.

At the other end of the scale are the big operators who usually deal in butter, grain and beef.

In one case last year, a French court ordered four businessmen to pay several million dollars back to customs authorities after they were convicted of cheating on corn shipments to England. Such exports attracted special subsidies before Britain joined the Common Market in 1973.

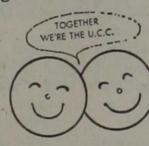

The four were accused of claiming the subsidies although the grain never left the Common Market.

Subsidies exist because prices paid to farmers are supposed to be uniform throughout the community. The member countries' national currencies are not, however.

Most injuries occur as the said Dr. Scholz. The most common injury is a sprained knee caused by twisting of the leg and knee joint.

"The most common fracture is the boot-top fracture," said Dr. Scholz. The boot-top fracture causes a spiral crack of the tibia, the lower leg bone.

This fracture occurs because the boot is rigid and does not bend when the skier falls forward. The binding of the ski does not separate in time, and the bone breaks. Fractures of the thigh bone also occur.

The doctors suggested that kiers use proper equipment to avoid accidents. Dr. Eguro said, "Select a good boot. Fit the safety binding just right. I think that is the most important thing."

The correct size of skis is also an important consideration.

Dr. Scholz said that the skier should have adequate rest and proper instruction before skiing. He advised skiers not to attempt

Two possible solutions are open to Tech students to meet the rising costs facing skilers.

One way is through membership in the Student Ski co Association (SSA) which has added over 100,000 students to see its ranks in the past five years.

For $6 membership dues, the skiler is eligible for following discounts that include half-price ski lift tickets, lessons and vs equipment rentals on weekdays, and $1 or more discounts on weekends and holiday periods.

In addition, SSA also arranges week-long and weekend ski trips to major ski resorts in the East, Midwest, and Rockies at low costs.

The Ruidoso Ski Pack is another answer to help combat high skiing prices. The Sierra Blanca Ski Resort and Ruidoso Lodging facilities offers this Pack which discounts 25 per cent from the weekend cost of skiing, according to Richard Cothrun, Chamber of Commerce manager.

The mid-week package, available to skiiers now through the end of the season for $23 to $28 per person, offers motel, cabin or condominium lodging; breakfast and supper (a $6 cash value which can also be used at a Ruidoso grocery market); skis, boots and poles plus an all-day lift ticket.

The price range may vary according to lodging facilities, said Cothrun. On every Saturday and Sunday and Dec. 20 through Jan. 5 the offer is void since those dates are during the vacation periods.

Validity of cancer studies questioned By JOHN LONG

UD Staff Can smoking 2,000 cigarettes a day give you cancer? Can a charcoal-broiled steak contain the same amount of tars found in smoking 600 cigarettes? Can the oral contraceptive be a contributing factor in some cancers among women, as some claim, or can it, as others claim, help prevent some cancers among women who take it regularly?

Scientists at various institutions around the country are trying to find answers to these questions. But there has been some question of the validity of some of these studies. One of the areas where the greatest confusion lies is in the study of the oral contraceptive.

In one study made in 1972 in Great Britain, rodents were given estrogen-progestin products in dosages 200 to 400 times what a woman would take. Estrogen and progestin are substances found in oral contraceptives in Great Britain. When given in massive dosages, researchers found that these estrogen-progestin products could produce cancerous tumors in rodents.

There is no proof however, that oral contraceptives produce cancers in women. The British Committee on Safety in Medicenes reached the conclusion that oral contraceptives probably do not present a danger at the dosage levels women take them. However, the British committee cautioned that women on the pill should be watched for breast cancer.

At a meeting of the Internal Confederation of Midwives. R. T. Ravenbolt of the Agency for Internal Development claimed that oral contraceptives might actually help prevent cancer of the uterus.

Who is right? Can oral contraceptives produce cancer? Can oral contraceptives help prevent cancer? Quite frankly, no one knows.

Some drugs are biphasic, said Dr. Maysie Hughes, Associate Professor of Physiology. Some drugs, if administered at one concentration will produce one effect and if administered at another concentration will produce an entirely different effect. Hughes also said that human variation could make the same drug react differently among different

One doctor, who wished to remain anonymous, said that completed its hearings on overwhelmingly next much depended upon the research techniques used. He said that different substances found in the oral contraceptive could, if taken separately, produce different reactions. Much depends, he said, upon which substances are studied. Two research teams might not employ the same techniques. Other variables to be taken into account are different test animals and different methods of administering the substances to the animals.

One long entrenched American custom being assalted by some cancer researchers is the practice of charcoal-broiling meats. Drs. William Lijinsky and Phillipe Shubick of the Chicago Medical School claim that a charcoal broiled steak can contain the carcinogenic benzopyrene equivalent of smoking 600 cigarettes. Lijinsky and Shubick found that in charcoal-broiling meats, animal fats melt and fall onto hot coals producing a hydrocarbon smoke that permeates the meat with tars.

Dr. M. T. Kopetzky, an Associate Professor of the Department of Physiology pointed out, however, that there is a difference between inhaling tars from cigarettes and eating tar-laden foods. In the former situation, the tars are going into the lungs, and in the latter, the tars are going into the stomach. Still, he felt the comparison was probably valid.

In one controversial study at the University of Michigan, scientists, seeking to study the effects of nicotine, gave monkeys the human equivalent of 2,000 cigarettes a day.

One doctor, when questioned about the validity of the preceding University of Michigan study, referred to it as established procedure. He said it was unfortunate that such information had been made public. He said such information should be kept within the scientific community.

While not speaking for all scientific researchers, Dr. Hughes said that most researchers do try to keep their experiments objective and within reasonable bounds. The search for cancer causing agents continues. Cyclamates had been in use for 30 years before it was determined they might cause cancer. The customs of centuries are now being studied.

DEAR AKADAMA MAMA, RECIPES FOR A DEEP THIRS

Dear Akadama Mama, I was caught in your can't-hurt-me-andsorry-if-you-scared-me mouse trap. And you'll be pleased to know I wasn't hurt or anymore scared than someone being trapped in an elevator overnight. Barbara Joy, the lady who caught me and a mouse's best friend, has been making me the drinks on the recipe card you sent along. They sure are good and I like them but getting along in a people world gives me a deep thirst so please send me a whole bunch more.

Rover Dear Rov.

Sorry for the delay. But Vern, my friend and goldfish, got his tank water all over your return address. So the only way to send you more recipes was through this ad.

ZONKADAMA Equal parts of Akadama Red Wine and rum. Add 2 parts club soda and ice. 1 part Akadama Plum, the grape wine with the natural plum flavor, to 3 parts tonic water. Serve with ice and a twist of lemon.

Half Akadama Red to half champagne. Serve in chilled champagne glasses.

PLUM 'N COLA 1 part Akadama Plum to 2 parts cola. The colder the better. Introduce it to your neighborhood bartender.

AKAHLUA Equal parts Akadama Red and Kahlua. On the rocks.

Tech's All-Southwest Conference first team players dwindled from the banner eight of last year to only three for 1974 but I guess part of the reason is in polls like that the rule is when in doubt go with the guy from the winning team. Still, in the selection of Lawrence Williams at flanker, Tommy Cones at defensive end, and Curtis Jordan at safety, three deserving athletes were singled out who gave the young Raiders some needed leadership this year.

Williams was the shoo-in among the group because of his outstanding exploits early in the season. His three touchdowns against Texas showed his talent and its a pity that he was not utilized more late in the season due to Tommy Duniven's injury. Williams was probably Tech's best allaround threat and when Tech quit passing it left a potent weapon unused on the flanks.

The selection I was most pleased about was the one of Cones. Cones, along with Williams and fullback John Garner were the three players I'd single out as the true leaders of the Peach Bowl-bound Raiders. Part of Tech's problem this season was having a lot of young players without the maturity to pull off the big play under adverse circumstances. But, in Cones, Tech definitely had one guy they could count on for the big play in the big situation.

Curtis Jordan was the third Raider selected and is the only one who will be around next year. The junior free safety is head and shoulders above his competition as he is a hitter and has a great nose for the ball.

Two Raiders who were tabbed first team All-SWC last year but were unable to repeat were noseguard David Knaus and defensive tackle Ecomet Burley. Knaus was felled by a knee injury and spoiled his chances as a repeater. Big Dave would still have had to go some to beat out SMU's one man front, Louie Kelcher, who had a super year. Burley was edged off the first team by Texas' Doug English and A&M's Warren Trahan. There really is little difference in the three as far as ability is concerned so Ecomet was hampered by being both a junior and on one of the teams other than the Aggies and the Longhorns. Of course, Ecomet was named second team All-America by the Newspaper Enterprises of America (NEA) which should ease the pain some.

'Rotten Peaches' attitude prevalent

By KIRK DOOLEY Sports Writer

For the fourth year in a row the Tech football team will represent the school in a post season bowl game. However, there is a different attitude this year (to the Peach bowl), according to a random sampling of students on campus. "Rotten Peaches" is a commonplace topic for discussion, as students express their feelings towards the Peach Bowl

Students who support the football team said they thought Tech's record isn't bowl material. Richard Lewis, a junior from San Antonio, said the bowl system as a whole was the problem this year. "They gave out the bids too early and there are too many good teams not going to a bowl this year."

Jett Taylor, an agriculture major from Coleman, said, "I am dissatisfied with Tech's record. I don't think we should go. We looked good early but finished bad enough not to go." Tony Tovar, a freshman from Dallas emphasized that he is actually a Texas Ranger fan but that he is glad to see Tech in a bowl. "I think we should go," said Tovar, "It's good for the school and the team deserves the reward."

Brian McCoy, a junior from San Marcos, brought up another point which many students felt strongly about. "I can't believe that we are paying $45,000 to go ... that's crummy. And to think that our band isn't even going because we can't afford it. It's so stupid."

Donna Delp, a freshman from Fort Worth, said, "I have no opinion ... I like basketball." After overhearing McCoy she added, "Oh! I won't go to any bowl that doesn't have the

Dr. Ron Russell, a professor with Child Development and Family Relations, had no specific opinion concerning Tech's invitation to the Peach Bowl but regretted that Tech didn't. finish with a better record than they had. "It should be a good game though, with two evenly matched teams."

Delp added another opinion, "Atlanta is too far to go for a bowl game. Why don't we play in the Sun Bowl?" Many coeds agreed with the feeling that Georgia is too far, yet nobody pointed out that the Gator Bowl where Tech played last year is farther away. And it appeared that last year the Gator Bowl game was very popular with students.

FNTC's Neater Gonzalez and Murdough's Paul Tibbetts both said Tech doesn't really deserve to be in a bowl game. Gonazlez calmly said that A&M should go instead of Tech, while Tibbits said he was disgusted that the bids came out so early. Dan Womack, a junior from Muleshoe, added his own opinion to the Peach Bowl controversy by saving "Well. I think it's just peachy."

Sophomore Mark Fuller of Midland summarized the feelings of many Tech students: "They gave out the bids too early and so the Peach Bowl got what turned out to be two mediocre teams. Hell, we were good back when we got the bid. I'm glad we're going but I think the Peach Bowl got the bad end of the deal."

Ray Wylie Hubbard headlines weekend at club

By WILLIAM D. KERNS Fine Arts Editor

"Now my woman don't do no bitchin' Cause she spends her time out in the kitchen Only one other room in the house that she's better in. That's because of her sweet love

It's even better than her grub But I love to grub

With my southern-fried black eyed tease."

The above passage is the final verse to a tune, popular among the country set, called "Blackeyed Peas." It was written by a man named Ray Wylie Hubbard - and I don't mind telling you that four years ago his name could have been Old Mother Hubbard and I still would have probably punched another station on the car radio when a DJ mouthed an intro for one of his songs. But credit the new country and country rock traditions with the partial elimination of stereotypes. More and more people are discovering that, once they sit down and give the Texas sound a chance, they're hooked for good.

People who still use those derogatory terms like "youknow-what kickers" and "hicks" find themselves listening to KLLL for a change of pace. A common question on blind dates is not whether the other person can boogie, but "do ya know how to country-western dance?" Santa's probably been getting a lot of request for "cowboy boots" this Christmas. The craze is a complete one. People no longer even mutter obscenities when some drunk puts a quarter in the pizza joint's juke box and plays such country-laced patriotism as "Red Necks, White Socks and Blue Ribbon Beer." Gad!

AND SURE, CREDIT THE RISING popularity of Willie Nelson, Waylon Jennings, Michael Murphey and Jerry Jeff Walker. That is give them part of the credit, for they've been the link which has reacquainted people with Johnny Rodriguez and Charley Pride and others. But go a little deeper than that and you'll realize that special thanks must go to the bars and cafes that gave them jobs and let them be heard. For nowadays, people can go see good country and raise hell on a nightly basis. Dallas has its Western Place; WASHINGTON (AP) — A averages about 23 per cent. Austin, of course, has its Armadillo World Headquarters.

But Lubbock? Well, we've had some good concerts. Steve study recommends ending food stamp recipients Farmholtz played terrific backup to Waylon and Willie, but welfare presently pay about $2.5 few gave a damn (as they'd obviously come to only hear the billion for approximately $6.5 headliners.). Local boy Joe Ely has gotten himself quite a following in clubs and bars here, so much so that he got the The welfare report, job of kicking off (and even playing with) Jerry Jeff Walker's prepared by the sub- show last month. But for the most part, these have been welfare programs in favor of a person to replace the current "concert" dates: one night stands at a $5 or $6 jolt to the fans.

THERE HAVE BEEN CLUBS which have featured live person on federal income entertainment ... but most of them are, admittedly, places taxes, and a subsistence where a person can go to eat or dance. Walker introduces government at least $645 estimated $142 billion being one song with "This was written by Ray Wylie Hubbard" and million a year, the department spent in the current 1974-75 then barges into the first recorded rendition of probably the fiscal year on social service most currently popular beer guzzling tune around: namely Under the plan, families programs such as welfare, "Up Against The Wall, Redneck Mother." And though many health, education and Social artists have recorded his work, Hubbard himself has gar-Security. The current federal nered fine review all across Texas.

Those of you from the Dallas area might want to take in Hubbard's act, if only to see a hometown boy. The well respected picker attended Adamson High and was an English major at UTA before he decided to concentrate on music. According to Hubbard though, he didn't want to alarm his folks with this new found interest so he just told them he was "selling drugs up in Chicago."

NEEDLESS TO SAY, HUBBARD is another Texan with a particular brand of humor. Shifting topics, he explained how he wrote "Redneck Mother" with "Well, I got beat up by a woman up in Red River, New Mexico one night. I was sittin' there in a bar and there was this woman who'd had a little bit to drink in there with her husband.

"So she got to hassling me about my hair. We was just sittin' there talkin' and she said 'How come you wear your hair like that?' and 'why do you look like that'...and we just kinda got in an argument about it. I said 'Hair don't make no difference', ya know...and all of a sudden she just hauled off and hit me! She didn't beat me up...she just hit me.

"It kinda took me by surprise ... and it caused a big scene. I guess ya might say she was a little bit typical redneck ... and I just walked outside and wrote the song about "Redneck Mothers."

Hubbard's is a down home, talk to the audience, everyone have a good time type of music. And Fat Dawg's Rear will probably be wall-to-wall people while he's playing A spokesman at the near campus drinking establishment said that it would be a sitting and listening atmosphere ... at least at the beginning. He made no guarantees. He's had people playing in there before that have had the not-soslightly inebriated dancing in the aisles. But I doubt he's had anyone play in there on the lines of Hubbard.

WHEN ASKED ABOUT THE CURRENT surge in country music and rising popularity of fun loving boys like Willie and Waylon and himself, Hubbard acknowledged the interviewer with "Yea. It's weird isn't it? It's amazing what people will buy ... Actually, it's really strange to me to come here tonight and see this place packed ... just to hear us play. It's pretty much the same thing we've always been doing."

That in a nutshell is the whole craze. Country music (and yes, even country rock) has been around for quite some time. but its only recently been discovered. Ray Wylie Hubbard is only 26 or so, but he's been playing his music for an awful long time ... and he's only now getting the kind of recognition he deserves. But perhaps the most encouraging thing about Hubbard is that his newfound popularity has not seemed to mar his ability to simply be himself. He'll keep playing his type of music, knowing the spotlight could very well shift at any moment. He'll take the future as it comes. Asked once what he wanted to do in the future, the perpetual grin came back and he replied only with "Well, I wanta finish off this pitcher of beer ... and then go get laid."

But so what if the ole boy's long range plans don't involve much more than making it through the night. His music's good. And that's something that anyone with the initiative to buy tickets early can check out very easily ... between the hours of 9 p.m. and 2 a.m. tonight and Saturday night to be absolutely specific. Make it a point to see him.

(Tickets for Hubbard's performances are selling at the rate of $2.50 apiece. Fat Dawg's spokesman says that ticket sales are brisk, and buying tickets in advance is highly ad-
