

Lubbock mayor hopes to open city hall-campus communications

By LINDA GARRETT
Special Reporter

After receiving a polite, but cool reception from the Tech Student Senate at its last meeting, Lubbock Mayor Morris Turner said he is waiting to see what action, if any, the senate will take concerning his proposal for student representation on the city council.

Turner appeared at the last senate meeting to give a brief explanation of the need for student liaison to city government and answer questions from the senators. He requested the senate formulate a plan for the implementation of this program. He said, at the meeting, he believed the student representative should be someone in student government.

Turner said he had two reasons for going to the senators with his proposal — to fulfill a campaign promise made during the mayoral race last spring and to open the lines of communication between city hall and the campus. "City council needs the value of Tech input. I would hope that we could have an unrestricted, unfettered personality who would freely express his views, especially if the subject dealt with students directly."

Student Association President Greg Wimmer said he thought the mayor's initiative was very important. "We have an opportunity that has never existed here."

"Students are transients who have no representation in city government. We need a voice for these 22,000 on the council, especially when the issue directly affects us," Wimmer said.

The student chosen to represent campus interests will serve only in an advisory capacity. Wimmer said he felt the councilmen would listen to the student even though he did not have a vote. Citing the controversial pool hall-arcade ordinance as an example, Wimmer said, "the councilmen don't patronize arcades. They would listen to a student who knew something about the problem."

In agreement with Wimmer, the mayor said, "This program would put the city council and the student representative on an even level to discuss matters of mutual importance."

Turner said the proposal would benefit Lubbock citizens in a practical way. He said the city needs 14 feet of right-of-way on the west side of University to widen the street. In exchange for that land, he said the city has offered to construct the entrance facilities at Tech which the Saddle Tramps have planned for years. "We have been unable to get an official reply from Tech administrators. We could use the students' help here."

Wimmer said he knew of no senate plans to make a recommendation to Turner at this time. He said he felt the mayor should pick the student liaison from among those in student government. Wimmer added, "Of course, we do have a vice president for external affairs who could handle this kind of program."

Larry Adams, an aide to the mayor and recent Tech graduate, said he felt the mayor should wake up and take advantage of the opportunity. "We realize the senate had other things on its mind last week. But not many mayors would have gone to the senate to present this kind of proposal."

Jury selection completed in Carver murder trial

By MIKE WARDEN
Special Reporter

Jury selection was completed Monday and the stage is set for the trial of Jeff Earl Carver, accused slayer of a classmate in a Lubbock high school more than a year ago.

Carver, 16, pleaded not guilty to charges of murder with malice in the gunshot killing of Willie Ray Collier in a crowded hallway of Dunbar High School Sept. 9, 1971. Six men and six women, all-white, were sworn in after all-day examination of 60 potential jurors by prosecution and defense attorneys.

The age span of the 12 jurors is from 22 to 59 years of age. "It's a very young jury," commented Blair Cherry, district attorney.

Testimony will begin in Judge Howard Davison's 99th District Court at 9 a.m. today. The trial is expected to last a week, according to attorneys. The prosecution alone anticipates calling more than 20 witnesses.

All sound recording devices, motion pictures, still and television cameras have been banned from the courtroom by Judge Davison in a court order filed Monday morning.

Artists' sketches of any participants in the trial have also been prohibited for the duration of the court's proceedings.

Chemist corrects fire marshal claims

By ROGER FEHR
Staff Writer

Tech organic chemist Dr. John Marx has refuted statements by the Tech and Lubbock fire marshals last week regarding the explosiveness of the chemical solvent petroleum ether.

In a statement last week Tech Fire Marshal Arnold Miranda said about 30 gallons of "highly flammable" petroleum ether had been stored in the Meats Laboratory and needed disposal. Miranda said heat or any kind of jostling could cause the solvent to explode.

Lubbock Fire Marshal A.C. Black last week said five gallons of petroleum ether if correctly placed could "level" the main (north) wing of the Student Union Building.

Black also advised Miranda to "handle it (petroleum ether) like nitroglycerine" while transporting the liquid to a disposal area.

Dr. Marx said petroleum ether is flammable as gasoline, but that it cannot be compared to nitroglycerine. He emphasized that an explosion could not be caused by jostling or transporting of containers of petroleum ether.

Only 10 gallons of petroleum ether and five gallons of ethyl ether, along with some other chemicals were found in the Meats Lab by D.O. Love, laboratory stores supervisor in the chemistry department, and Lt. Richard Hamilton of the University Police.

Marx said ethyl ether can become "highly explosive" when peroxides form in it, but that peroxide formation requires years to take place.

It was very unlikely that the ethyl ether removed from the Meats Lab was in an explosive condition, he said.

Chances fade for peace signing today

WASHINGTON (AP) — The chance of signing a Vietnam peace by the deadline today set by Hanoi apparently has passed, but American officials still say an accord will be reached, and soon.

The optimism was expressed even as presidential adviser Henry A. Kissinger sat in his White House office, far from the final meeting he says is necessary to wrap up details blocking the signing of the agreement.

Tuesday, Paris time, was set by the North Vietnamese as the date to sign a peace pact, but White House press secretary Ronald L. Ziegler said Monday "we would not sign such an agreement until the conditions are right."

Hanoi and its Viet Cong allies continued Monday to insist Kissinger agreed to sign by Tuesday and said the American refusal was bad faith, even though the United States has indicated more consultations are needed with South Vietnam as well as North Vietnam.

Officials said there was as yet no word from Hanoi when it would be ready for the next round of talks. Kissinger said last week the time and place for such a session was up to North Vietnam.

Criticism of the tentative settlement, which would end the fighting within one day of a signing and bring home all American forces in conjunction with the release of U.S. prisoners in the following 60 days, continued as well from Saigon.

In an often sarcastic broadcast, the official Saigon radio said North Vietnam was trying to get a quick agreement from President Nixon "in return for a few ballots."

Speaking for President Nguyen Van Thieu, the broadcast said any U.S.-Hanoi settlement "will be worthless" if he does not sign it, and he has no intention of approving the current, tentative agreement.

The State Department said it does not share Saigon's assessment of the situation nor of Hanoi motives.

Anyway, other American officials said they still consider Thieu's position, including the broadcast, as aimed more at his internal political situation, rather than Washington.

McGovern has economic plan when the Vietnam War ends

HARTFORD, Conn. (AP) — Sen. George McGovern said Monday he has a plan to keep people working after the Vietnam war ends but President Nixon doesn't.

The Democratic presidential candidate said his plan for peacetime employment is to rebuild America by providing a decent transit system for every city, by ending pollution in this decade and by spending more for housing, schools, child care centers, recreation and aid to old people.

"If we will set about the kind of a program of construction and rebuilding America, we will need the services of every engineer, every aerospace worker, every college graduate, every machinist and every electronics worker. We will require the labor of every man and woman in this country who is physically able to work," McGovern said.

McGovern elaborated on his domestic plans after proposing the title "Mr. Veto" for Nixon. At breakfast session in New Haven with union and Democratic political leaders, he hit at Nixon's vetoes of a number of domestic bills.

He said in Hartford that Nixon employs only 13 people in the entire federal government, and none on the White House staff itself, to plan conversion of military production to peace-time.

Students holding coupons will exchange them for reserved seats at one of two specified ticket booths before each game. Tech opens the basketball home season Nov. 24.

Student evaluations of teachers playing bigger role in promotions, raises, tenure

By ROBERT MONTEMAYOR
Special Reporter

Teacher evaluations by students, a definite trend on campus, are figuring more and more in faculty promotions, salary increases, and tenure.

After studying other institution's programs, several departments on the Tech campus are planning both informal and formal methods for evaluation results. Old programs are being investigated and revised.

The mathematics department is working on a "fairly sophisticated" statistical analysis method using computers.

Henry L. Gray, department chairman, said, "The program was carried out last year and I thought the results very interesting. The predicting methods need to be improved considerably, but we feel they can be handled."

Through computer services, the department will try to predict what the student will do presently, Gray said. "We not only will take their performances in mathematics into consideration, but we will take past performances in other classes as well."

The problem, Gray said, was to isolate the factor for what the student will do in certain courses.

"We have to allow for student random effects (family problems, love affairs, etc.) which are beyond the reach of teachers and the computer," he said. "We also have to take teaching effect factors, or what effects the teacher will have on the student, into consideration."

He said more investigation was being done on the student questionnaires, the method for information sources.

"If you're going to build a good teacher evaluation program," he said, "you've got to build a good prediction model. To build a good prediction model you need to put together a good questionnaire."

He said the questionnaires had to be worded so they could be analyzed with accuracy and allow for the numbers involved. The mathematics department handles approximately 5,500 students.

"The questions have to be designed carefully to obtain information you're after, Gray said. "We don't run a popularity contest, and we don't want to exhibit extremes as facts."

He said there was much variability in the data gathered, but said any method of evaluation is going to isolate the best and worst teachers.

Referring to last year's program he said, "We did do some changing around with faculty. Some say you can't evaluate teachers. I don't agree with that. The reason not much has been done is that the urgency has never been there."

The department of mass communications is working on a percentage system whereby teacher evaluations by students will count 17 per cent in teacher promotion, salary increases, and tenure.

The department has divided the percentages among three categories: teaching, 55 per cent; research and production 35 per cent, and administrative duties 10 per cent.

The teaching percentage has been subdivided into students (17 per cent), faculty (17 per cent), department chairman (17 per cent), and ex students (four per cent). All of these people will be evaluating teaching.

Teachers are also judged on research and production contributions. This includes researching the professional field and, if possible, turning in a product for publication.

Administrative duties include serving on university committees, councils and so on.

Bob Rooker, associate professor for mass communications, said, "Teacher evaluations are supposed to show what the teacher is supposed to do academically. It shows what the faculty member is doing in class, whether he's keeping up with the latest developments in his field and if he's delivering the information over to the student."

The department has a questionnaire with eight or nine questions dealing basically with the course materials, presentation, and values.

"Evaluations will become a part or factor in salary increases, promotions, and tenure," said Rooker. "In this system the students have equal say so with the department chairman. Essentially, it's always been the student not being involved. Now he is and has his chance to involve himself."

He said the questions asked about professional competence and tried to cover the major elements in teaching.

"We're trying to recognize merit," he said, "trying to make a broad evaluation and judging on all faculty on their professional ability."

He added that there should not be too many problems and said the program would start in December.

David M. Vigness, history department chairman, said they were to start an informal program of their own, using questionnaire forms.

"This program is a departmental experiment. Several in the department have used evaluations before, but they used them for their own purpose," Vigness said. "Teacher evaluations by students will enter into decisions for teacher promotion, salary increases, and tenure."

He wouldn't say how much influence the student evaluations would have because "it is too early to say and I really don't know."

Vigness said the evaluations would be gathered at the end of the semester and teachers won't be able to see the results until students are given their course grade.

Asked what the biggest problem would be, he said, "Simply looking at the evaluation of the evaluations. It's hard to look at so many report forms." The history department handles approximately 5,000 students.

"We'll use this program," he said, "for internal purposes. We don't plan to make these evaluation forms public at this time, both the forms and the results. We, at present, have to go a step at a time."

He said student evaluation input was not just for teacher promotion, but to provide the teacher with a formal check on his own performance.

"I really think the greatest benefit will come to the individual instructor."

Cites Nixon lie

I can't understand the lack of interest of the people of our country in preserving the honesty and integrity of the office of the President.

Last month Nixon, our leader, sent a letter to all persons receiving social security checks saying in effect that he, in their interest, got them a raise in benefits. This is a downright lie. Nixon vetoed the raise and it was later passed over his objection by a two-thirds majority. Also, Associated Press ran a story recently which turned up on a secluded page of the A-J, telling of a price commission decision to give Stokely Van Camp and other food processors a 17 per cent increase in wholesale prices of their foods. I thought Nixon said he would control prices! Did Stokely Van Camp give 400,000 dollars to the Republicans?

On Oct. 25 the UD printed a letter from David Whitescarver, my friend and office-mate, in which he attacked an earlier letter of mine to the editor. My original letter was an expression of my dismay at the corruption of the Nixon administration (ITT pay-off, Watergate burglary, wheat swindle, et. al.). In his reply David stressed that he was "writing to alleviate the fears" expressed by myself and other supporters of George McGovern that Nixon's unethical activities might be accepted by the public as less than the corrupt violations of the public trust that they are.

Now I agree with David that all unreasonable fears need to be alleviated forthwith. Indeed, I've tried to alleviate many such fears myself — the fear of change, the fear that the Communists are on the east coast and approaching fast, the fear that white children will be exposed to immorality and danger if they attend an integrated school.

But some things do terrify me, and the thing that frightens me most is the Nixon administration's political espionage, wire-tapping, and clandestine surveillance of citizens. It seems reasonable to me that a volunteer at the McGovern - Shriver headquarters should be able to converse on the telephone without the fear that a former FBI or CIA agent is listening in, taking notes. It also seems reasonable to me that a political candidate should be able to travel the country, speaking on the issues, without being tailed by a Republican - financed FBI agent. It also frightens me that a Nixon White House aide is authorized to write a slanderous, untrue letter to the Manchester Union Guardian stating that Ed Muskie calls French Canadians derogatory names, thereby damaging Muskie's New Hampshire primary campaign.

Maybe such espionage, wire-tapping, and secret surveillance doesn't bother many of us. Several years ago it didn't bother me. I assumed that only foreign spies and mobsters had their phones bugged. But such is no longer the case. Before

Nixon and John Mitchell came to power, wire-taps were illegal without a court order (the law making court orders unnecessary was passed near the end of the Johnson Administration, but Ramsey Clark refused to use it). Since Nixon came to power almost 600,000 phone conversations have been monitored. Fortunately the U.S. Supreme Court has recently ruled unanimously that wire-taps without court orders are illegal (United States v. United States District Court). Even Nixon's conservative appointees, Berger and Powell, voted against Nixon's oppressive wire-tap procedures.

It is my hope that the American public realizes before Nov. 7 that Richard Nixon will stop at nothing, not even violations of the Constitution or the Bill of Rights, to stifle dissent in this country. Such action is in my opinion a direct threat to our most basic freedoms. I don't believe that George McGovern would do that, and that's why I'm voting McGovern-Shriver on Nov. 7.

Hopes Techsans can see propaganda

Very touching.

My point is short and simple. I sincerely hope my fellow students here at Tech can see through the propaganda of McGovern's campaign. It seems as though whenever confronted by young people good old George throws his "end the war promises" at us as though Viet Nam was the only issue at hand. Must we be so immature and really assigne to cast a vote for McGovern just because we may agree on one issue with him?

And let me say this, it has been seen in the recent past (An Loc, Hue, Quang Tri) what the North Vietnamese intended to do to the South Vietnamese who stand firm in their allegiance to President Thieu; they've beat them, tortured them, robbed, raped, and massacred them in one helluva bloodbath whenever they could not make the people change their principles. So, if we as Americans are really ones who care about humanity, then who is the more important a few hundred American POW's or a few million South Vietnamese? People, when the leaders of North Vietnam publicly declare that they hope McGovern wins, then I think it is time you better start reading between the lines and realigning your values.

Finds Nixon's record good

Bill Allen has given us a tremendous choice in his letter to the UD — either vote for McGovern, thus stopping the slaughter of innocent helpless Vietnamese; and using the money instead for constructive purposes in our own country...or vote for Nixon.

I am annoyed at this rather narrow look at the people in-involved. Surely there is more to a presidential election than this. There must be some reason that Nixon is consistently ahead in the polls. There must be some reason that he is one of the most popular of recent presidents. As an ex-debate man from high school, Allen knows how to use facts to his advantage and how to avoid certain facts. Some of his points, such as the spectacle made of bombing the North Vietnamese, probably brought anger to many people who are normally just passive about politics and issues. But is that bombing the single, most significant event of the Nixon administration, for which he is solely responsible? Now really. Someone who does not keep track of issues and candidates might very likely vote for McGovern after reading Allen's letter.

Someone like me — I don't really understand the complete platform of either candidate. But I do know that I like Nixon's ideas for economy. I like his attitudes on drug laws and price indexes. His feelings about bussing also coincide with mine. So if Sen. McGovern wants to re-establish America's priorities, I must ask if that means tampering with things I am rather satisfied with. I find the record of Richard Nixon very appealing. Is that being blinded by conservative fears?

Trick or Treat bags will be given with refreshments and will cost 50 cents.

Free kisses go to voters

MIAMI (AP) Pupils at Shenandoah Junior High School think one way of getting voters to the polls Nov. 7 is to give out free kisses at the ballot box.
The students have other ideas for getting out the vote:
No tax refunds unless a person votes, church bells ringing every hour on election day, voting machines made to look like slot machines and entertainment at the polls and block parties with bingo and crap games.

The suggestions were part of a brainstorm session held by science teacher Morton Raisen.

The Tech Museum has on indefinite loan a bronze bust of U.S. Rep. George H. Mahon, given the congressman by Texas Farm Bureaus in his 19th District at an Appreciation Day banquet Oct. 24.
The bust is on display in an area which eventually will feature also other material associated with the congressman. He is chairman of the House Appropriations Committee.
Mahon visited The Museum to make the presentation to Texas Tech President Grover E. Murray and to Black.

District winners will be eligible to compete in the state competition Dec. 16 at Texas A&M University. National finals are to be in Washington, D.C., in January, 1973.

Ex-cop doing well in movies

NEW YORK (AP) — The best amateur actor in the history of the New York City Police Department is doing well as a professional television and movie performer.

"I had to go into the movies to get promoted," said former detective Eddie Egan, who plays a police lieutenant in Paramount's new crime thriller, "Badge 373."

Eddie, whose real-life exploits were the basis for the award-winning film, "The French Connection," is the legendary detective who made 8,741 arrests during a 19-year career as a crime-solver.

This amazing total is a record for the Police Department here.

Eddie, a maverick detective sometimes in trouble with his superiors because of his unorthodox methods, retired last year because he was "tired of paper work" and because he had always yearned for an acting career.

He feels he has smoothed out his quarrels with the Police Department. He has his badge and is still permitted to wear, strapped to his right ankle, the gun he wore while in service. And, beginning in 1975, he will start receiving annual retirement pay of $11,000, which is 42 per cent of his final salary as a detective.

Defending the brusque tactics he employed while on duty — he wasn't noted for following departmental rules to the letter — Egan remarked:

"An old cop once told me, 'The only trouble you can get into on this job is by doing the job.' I found out myself that when you're arresting 8 to 10 people a day, you become maybe too experienced. You cut the corners too close sometimes to please everybody."

Anyway, Eddie feels his future is pretty bright. He has a contract with Paramount tying him to the production of 13 films for which he has submitted plot outlines. Also in prospect is a television series, tentatively entitled "My Partner and I."

"Hopefully, I'll play myself," said Egan, "but that's being negotiated."

There are sound reasons for Eddie's optimism. He has already played six professional

Free University control to shift

A motion to place the Free University program under the authority and direction of the University Center (UC) was unanimously approved by the UC Program Council Wednesday.

The action was presented to the council by Sharon Warford, chairman of the Free University program. "We lack the manpower to sufficiently run the program," she said. "It could end up in anyone's hands and flop."

The Free University program has been under the control of the Student Association (SA).

Warford indicated this was a problem area also. "Students have a bad connotation of the SA at the present time," she said. "Anything connected with them carries the same connotation." According to Free University records, there are about 1100 students attending classes.

Warford said one class of particular interest is the bartending course. "To avoid any legal question that might arise, we just have to get some non-university organization to sponsor it."

For the transfer of authority to be made official, legislation must be passed by the student senate. Warford said she felt that there would be no problems involved in this area.

Will 'change our lives'

Polaroid presents new camera

MIAMI BEACH, Fla. (AP) — After four years and $250 million, the Polaroid Corp. has introduced a new self-developing color camera it says will "change our lives."

About the size of a paperback book and weighing only 24 ounces, the SX 70 will retail for $180 and be available nationally soon after the first of next year, Polaroid said. It will go on sale in Florida Nov. 10.

The camera, brainchild of Polaroid founder Dr. Edwin Land, requires the photographer essentially to do only three things—focus, push the shutter button and wait.

One second after the photographer pushes the shutter, the camera ejects a developing picture unit within an invisible stiff protective plastic structure. The unit represents 17 layers of compounds, some only 10-thousandths of an inch thick.

The picture area at first appears uniformly turquoise, but within six minutes becomes a brilliantly-colored finished print immune to rain, sun and fingerprints. It is almost impossible to bend or break with a human hand.

Operation is controlled by 250 transistors contained in the film packs. The packs cost $6.90 for a pack of 10 exposures. A special flash for indoor pictures was developed for the camera by General Electric.

STOP AND THINK!...

...just five years from now

...you probably will have graduated from this University and will have left Tech: for good-for bad, willingly-reluctantly, gladly-hesitantly, forever, finally...no matter how you leave, you were part of it. You were part of Tech. No matter how you think then you will be glad to have something (besides your diploma) that will remind you of those years at Tech. A copy of LA VENTANA - the official TTU yearbook - can do this for you. LA VENTANA covers all aspects of campus life - your photo, and those of your best friends are probably in there. Since there is only a limited number of LA VENTANAS available this year the LA VENTANA staff suggests that you reserve your 1973 copy immediately for your own library. What to do? Just clip the coupon on the right, fill it out, add your check and mail to the LA VENTANA.
