Special Study Probes Tech Now, In Future

By CAROLYN JENKINS
Toreador News Editor

Texas Tech today and what Tech will be in 20 years is the object of a two-year self evaluation program now in progress, Dr. Robert L. Rouse told the Board of Student Organizations Wednesday.

Rouse is chairman of the study steering committee of the self evaluation to be completed in 1962 under the auspices of the Southern Association of Colleges and Secondary Schools.

The program is designed to improve the educational effectiveness of the college. Its scope includes all schools, departments and areas and will be participated in by the governing board, faculty and staff, alumni and students, Rouse explained to some 50 student organization representatives.

All institutions of the Southern Association will complete an evaluation of this type in the near future, he said. Tech's evaluation is one of the first. Texas Christian University just completed the first self evaluation.

Through this study, 11 area committees will attempt "to determine where the college is and where it should go in order to serve more effectively the people who have a stake in it," W. M. Pearce, academic vice president, said.

Dr. Henry C. Thomas, physics, and Dr. John Guilds, English, head the committee on the purpose of the institution. One question to be answered by this committee is "Will Tech be a specialized school in the future or grow to an overall university concept?"

Of most immediate interest to the students is a committee on student personnel, with Burl Abel, finance, chairman. Its continuing objective is to determine how student personnel program adds to or detracts from the overall college program.

Increased enrollment, service to older students, personal counseling, student health, the need for additional student organizations and intercollegiate sports are some of the facts to be studied by the student personnel committee.

Committee members will evaluate student government, its powers and effectiveness, and the alumni program.

Rouse said this committee also will review the employment and placement office, its cost, organization and effectiveness.

A financial resources committee will study the financial operation from budget allocations of the Legislature to use of the money. Work of Haskell G. Taylor, accounting, and his committee also will include a study of the procedures of the business office.

Dr. F. L. Mize, management, is chairman of the organization committee. Improvements will be recommended for departments and schools, on up to the president's office.

Use of Library facilities and need for additional ones will be investigated by a group led by Dr. Berlie J. Fallon, education.

A committee on the problems and desires of the faculty, including faculty government, will be headed by Dr. Sterling Fuller, government. This committee will include study of academic freedom.

A careful appraisal, building by building, will be made on the physical plant. Dr. Milton L. Peoples, dairy industry, is chairman of the committee.

Possible improvements in the field of research will come under Donald J. Helmers, mechanical engineering, and his committee.

"Graduate school is becoming more and more important as we grow in size," Rouse said. Provisions for graduate degrees will be discussed by a committee under the leadership of Dr. Ernest Wallace, history.

Other committees include special activities with Dr. Jessie A. Bateman, home economics education, chairman, and the educational program headed by Dr. W. G. Stiglich, sociology. Curriculum study will be made by the educational program group.

Seminar Focuses On U.S. Security

An unusual opportunity to hear military experts discuss various aspects of the nation's security—military and otherwise—will be given Texas Tech students and faculty beginning Monday.

The first day of the two-week National Security Seminar will begin Monday in the Lubbock Municipal Auditorium, with Texans admitted with no admission charge.

The Tech Band will open the seminar with a musical presentation at 8:30 a.m. Newly-appointed Secretary of the Navy John Connally will open the series of talks shortly after the concert.

Included in Monday's program are an orientation period from 10:10-55; outer space, 11:05-12; and technological progress, 1:30-2:25 p.m.

A film presentation will begin Tuesday's activities at 9 a.m., followed by Soviet Communism, 10-10:55; organization for national security, 11:05-12; U.S. Foreign Policy, 1:30-2:25 p.m.; and agriculture, 3:30 p.m.

The seminar is the only one of its kind to be presented in Texas this year. Officers from the U.S. Army, Navy, Marine Corps and Air Force will provide the lectures.

Dr. R. C. Goodwin announced earlier this week that Tech faculty members could assemble classes at the Auditorium for the lectures, which coincide with class times.

Its purpose is to give civilian leaders background knowledge on national policies, international affairs and world economics to aid in planning and guidance of business and guidance of business and community affairs.

A range of topics from civil defense to Africa to world military forces is included. The seminar is planned for Feb. 6-17.

Texas Tech and the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce are co-sponsors.

The military officers are from the Industrial College of the Armed Forces. About 250 reserve officers will also attend the seminar.

EMPHASIS ON PICTURES

L-V Nears Deadlines

With an unusual cover design and increased emphasis on picture features, the 1961 La Ventana is moving toward its deadlines and completion.

Going into its third publication with the magazine style, the 1961 yearbook will also have a paper stock named "La Ventana" which was especially designed for the yearbook.

The new type paper will be heavier than that used in the past two annuals, but will not be as thick as most yearbook pages. It was designed by the La Ventana's printers to eliminate the problem of pages showing through the paper. A new blue-black ink will also be used for the first time which provides greater detail for pictures.

"We are trying something new with the cover design," says Ellen Venable, co-editor of the yearbook, "with copper as a spot color, one that has rarely been used before on a yearbook."

"What we are having trouble with mostly now is getting copy from organizations," Miss Venable, a senior from Houston, pointed out. About a dozen students are working on the annual this year.

The annual will sport six more covers in four color than last year.

Two magazine sections are facing deadlines this month, with two each month thereafter. Final deadline is May 29.

About half of the pictures for the annual have already been taken. Formal pictures of the La Ventana beauties are now being taken at Koen's.

The playboy section will include two fiction articles by campus authors and Progressive Farmer will contain two picture features on the School of Agriculture.

Included for the first time will be a combined index on students and faculty. A separate organizational index is also planned.

"We are still in need of interested students to work with the annual this year," Miss Pat Porter, co-editor, says. "The La Ventana is an excellent opportunity to learn about magazine journalism."

Emily Stone, editor of the Mademoiselle section, says that "this year's Mademoiselle will be an attempt to make the section more closely resemble the professional magazine."

Students interested in working with the yearbook should contact Miss Venable or Miss Porter in the La Ventana office, Journalism 211. No previous experience is necessary.

College integration, while still not affecting Texas Tech, has moved into the state of Texas with a bang.

Demonstrations in the form of sit-in strikes and stand-in movements are making news in both college towns of Dallas and Austin.

At the University of Texas, demonstrations have been staged almost continually for the last two months in front of movie houses which practice segregation.

Theater managers in Austin have reported that the demonstrations have become a matter of routine and are being carried on in a sensible manner.

The Daily Texan has reported that two purposes of the demonstration are to integrate the movies and "to show University committees as well as the theaters that the demonstrators believe in a principal and are willing to stand up for it."

Students favoring integration have had some faculty support, especially in the argument that class assignments cannot be carried out by Negro students.

Demonstrators at the University voted to set Feb. 12 as the day they would ask students all over the nation to join with them in protest against segregated movie chains.

Southern Methodist University's campus newspaper has reported two Negro theology students seeking service at a bus station lunch counter. When they were refused, about 25 white students, including theology students and undergraduates, staged a sit-in.

The day before, the Negro students had bought bus tickets there, then were refused lunch counter service, then had their tickets refunded.

The students taking part in the demonstration agreed to "retreat" if any semblance of violence became evident.

Although no violence ensued, the restaurant company vice president said, "They did not act like college students."

Student government at St. Edward's University in Austin passed a resolution earlier this year expressing "extreme distaste" for discrimination and requesting students to avoid places which practice discrimination "whenever possible." Sit-in stories have followed in their college newspaper.

Jackie Bramley (L) signs for the talent show auditions while Martha Mackey, Raider Rambles chairman, looks on. The show will be Feb. 24 with the top two acts performing at the half-time of the Tech-TCU basketball game the same night.

Show Looks For Talents

Thursday is the deadline for signing up for Raider Rambles, Tech's annual talent show.

Students interested in auditioning for the Feb. 24 show may apply in the Union Program Office.

Top performers picked from the auditions will comprise Raider Rambles. A representative for the Texas A&M Talent Show will be chosen from the preliminaries set for Feb. 7, 9 and 14.

Best act and runner-up will be featured at the half-time of the Tech-TCU game which will follow the 6:30 p.m. Rambles.

Techsans Vie ACC In Debate Contest

Two months of research and thought will prove its effectiveness when Darlene Collins, Harry Newhardt, Wynette Johnson and Kip Glasscock represent Tech against Abilene Christian College in the Sinclair Intercollegiate Television Tournament in Dallas Feb. 12.

The topic which has been studied by the four is "Communist China Should Be Admitted To The U.N." Miss Collins and Newhardt are prepared to give three minute opening speeches.

Following speeches made by two members of each team will be a period of cross-fire where each side will ask the other side questions for five minutes. The debaters will then be asked questions by the audience.

The debaters have met with members of the history and government departments in addition to participating in practice speaking sessions where they discussed various techniques in asking and answering questions.

Theater Tour Includes Credit And Sightseeing

Travel, the theater, Europe and college credit will be offered Tech students this summer in a European Theater tour sponsored by the college.

The tour, which may be taken for six hours credit in Speech 3313-14, costs $1200.

The tour will leave New York June 1 on the SS Maasdam for Southampton, England. From there the students will go on to London, Stratford-on-Avon, Edinburgh, Amsterdam, Heidelberg, Vienna, Venice, Florence, Rome, Monte Carlo, Paris and several smaller cities.

The group will attend a music festival in a Roman amphitheater in Verona, an evening performance at the Shakespeare Theatre in London, the International Theatre Festival in Vienna, and evening performances of Paris theaters.

Meals will be scheduled at selected restaurants except in Rome, London and Paris, where students may select their own eating places for special meals.

Those taking the tour for credit will read English translations of plays attended and enter into daily discussion sessions.

Upon completion of the tour, these students will prepare an evaluative report on the plays as well as other theatrical aspects of the tour. Those taking the course for graduate credit will also complete a research paper.

Openings are still available and those interested should contact Ronald Schulz, Tech associate professor of speech, or Dr. P. Merville Larson, speech department head.

Raiders Defend Lead In Match With Bears

By CHARLES RICHARDS
Toreador Sports Editor

The Texas Tech Red Raiders, once more at the top of the Southwest Conference basketball race, will try to stretch their victory string to four games tonight when the Baylor Bears move into Lubbock Coliseum at 8 p.m. for a league match.

Although Coach Polk Robison's cagers boast a 4-1 record in conference action this season to share the No. 1 position with the Texas Longhorns, Tech has only been able to claim the honor for the past two days. The Raiders defeated Texas Christian University Wednesday in Fort Worth to move into the tie.

Tech earlier this year had been in first place after beating Southern Methodist and Rice, but a defeat by Texas cost the Raiders the lead.

The Bears are at the bottom of the SWC tussle, winless in five outings, but most of the clubs, Texas in particular, had to play superior ball to come out ahead. The Longhorns barely hung on to win from Baylor in the last minute of play, 59-58.

Outside the conference, the Bears have another poor record, 2 wins against 8 losses, but again, most of the contests have been close decisions.

Both Baylor wins were in the All-College Tournament in Oklahoma City where the Bears defeated the tournament favorite, Oklahoma City, 73-63 in its first game and gained the finals with a 58-50 win over New York University. In the championship game of the tournament, Wichita squeezed by the Bears 76-74 although Baylor led much of the game.

Comparative scores favor the Raiders in the Baylor game. The only common foes are Rice, A&M, SMU and Texas.

Rice beat the Bears 70-59 in Houston, and Tech beat the Owls 78-45 in Lubbock, giving the Raiders a 38 point edge on that comparison.

In the SMU and A&M games Tech also has the point advantage, but by lesser margins. In the Aggie match, Baylor bowed by 14 points, 75-61, in Waco, and in Lubbock, the Raiders beat A&M by 6, 74-68. Southern Methodist beat the Bears by 11, 75-64, also at Waco, and Tech won against SMU at Dallas by 2, 70-68.

Baylor has a slight advantage in the scores involving the Longhorns. Texas beat both clubs, the Bears by only one point in Waco, and the Raiders by 8, 63-55, at Austin.

Texas Tech carries a respectable 42.6 per cent field goal average into the tilt, and the Bears have been hitting for 37.8 per cent in their 15 games.

Del Ray Mounts, leading scorer for the Raiders, will be shooting for the 300-point total for the season and 100-point figure for conference play as the Raiders entertain the Bears.

Totals before the game had Mounts at 294 points for a 21 point average for 14 games and 92 points in the five conference games for an 18.2 average.

Harold Hudgens has played only 9 games for Tech, but he has an average of 18.9 and 17.2 for the season and conference action respectively.

Mounts has been high scorer for the Raiders in 9 of the 14 contests, with his 31 point spurge against Vanderbilt being his top performance.

In the other five games, the scoring honors were spread among four other Red Raiders.

Bobby Gindorf made 21 in Tech's game with Florida, Percival led with 19 against Oklahoma, Hennig's 20 was tops in the Rice contest, Hudgens had 31 in the season's opener against Hamline, and Hennig and Hudgens had 19 each to lead Tech against the Texas Aggies.

Besides the Texas Tech-Baylor game in Lubbock, the other six conference teams will be in action also.

Texas will journey to Houston to meet the Rice Owls, Texas A&M will host Southern Methodist at College Station, and Texas Christian will play Arkansas at Fayetteville.

The Texas Tech Picadors, 4-4 for the season, will play the Ince Oilers in a preliminary contest at 6.

More State Athletes Visit Tech Campus

Tech is playing host this weekend to a large gathering of athletes from nineteen Texas and New Mexico cities.

The visitors include Robert Bateman from Hubbard, Texas; Sammy Dobbs and David Carlock, Honey Grove; Chester Howard, Greggton; Gwinn Corley, Gilmer; Gail Stafford and Guy Campbell, Matador; C. C. Willis, Bay City; Ronnie Moore, Brownwood; Mike Milligan, Dumas; and Randy Howard, Dawson.
