Ticket coupons on sale

Student coupons for Tech football games will continue to be on sale until noon Wednesday or until they sell out, according to Student Association President Chuck Campbell.

The coupons are available in the Athletic Ticket Office during regular office hours from 9 a.m. to 6 p.m. Students will have to show certification of enrollment at Tech games to be admitted on a student ticket, Campbell said. This will be strictly enforced, he said.

Spouse-guest tickets are also available in the ticket office from 9 a.m. through 5:50 p.m. through Thursday.

Gavrel testifies

AMARILLO (AP) — Gus Gavrel Jr. stuck by his story Monday that it was Cullen Davis who shot him last summer but admitted he was aware of inconsistencies in his accounts of the shooting.

"I could see his face when he turned around," the young prosecution witness insisted on cross-examination in Davis' capital murder trial.

Gavrel said he was "looking right at him" when the assailant stepped into a lighted entranceway at Davis' Fort Worth mansion, turned and sent a bullet smashing through his lower chest.

Defense lawyer Phil Burleson asked if he ever told a physical therapist at a Fort Worth hospital, "I hope that some day I find out who shot me so I can get even."

"I never, never said that," Gavrel declared.

Earlier, with Burleson ripping into inconsistencies in his prior stories and testimony, Gavrel said, "I wasn't lying — I just didn't remember."

"I didn't know all this was going to happen. I didn't have any reason to think about it," he said.

Gavrel, 22, was partially paralyzed and is now on crutches as a result of the August 1976 shootings that left two dead and another gravely wounded.

Davis, 43, is on trial for his life in the slaying of his stepdaughter, Andrea Wilborn, 12. The defendant's estranged wife, Priscilla, 36, was wounded and her lover Stan Farr, 30, was killed in the midnight carnage.

Gavrel identified Davis on Saturday as the "man in black" who without word or warning shot him down as he and a date approached the mansion that night.

Ford to speak

Former President Gerald R. Ford will speak at the annual Chamber of Commerce banquet at the Civic Center Nov. 18.

Congressman George Mahon arranged the speech, which will be open to chamber members and the public. A ticket sales date will be announced in about two weeks.

Lance report silenced

WASHINGTON (AP) — Three top White House aides read an FBI report in early January detailing the $450,000 in bank overdrafts by Bert Lance and his family but decided not to bring the report to President Carter's attention, Press Secretary Jody Powell said Monday.

Meanwhile, a leading bank regulator told a Senate panel that he kept quiet about federal restrictions on one of Lance's Georgia banks because they were confidential and he was afraid of losing his job.

Powell told reporters that he, presidential aide Hamilton Jordan and Counsel Robert Lipschutz saw the FBI report, dated Jan. 6, and made the decision not to show it to Carter.

Powell acknowledged that their judgment is "open to some comment at least." He added, "A lot of us have spent a lot of time thinking about what could have been done to avoid this."

On Capitol Hill, Deputy Comptroller of the Currency Robert A. Bloom said he assumed Carter and the Senate knew about the restrictions when Lance was nominated to run the Office of Management and Budget.

Bloom, who was acting comptroller at that time, described for the Senate Governmental Affairs Committee the phone conversations he had with Lance's attorney and Carter's transition team about what should be made public.

Sen. Charles H. Percy, R-Ill., described the sequence as "a cover-up by the comptroller's office."

Officials question commitment

WASHINGTON (AP) - Mayors and federal officials who run urban programs are questioning the level of President Carter's commitment to the nation's big cities.

Leaders of the U.S. Conference of Mayors were meeting with the high command of Carter's urban task force Monday. While the mayors were to offer recommendations on improving urban America, their main hope was to gain a clear indication of Carter's intentions.

Stuart Elzenstat, Carter's chief domestic adviser; Cabinet Secretary Jack Watson, and Secretary Patricia Harris of housing and urban development were to discuss urban strategy with the mayors.

Mayors scheduled to attend the meeting were Kenneth Gibson of Newark, Maynard Jackson of Atlanta, Janet Hayes of San Diego, Henry Maier of Milwaukee, Richard Carver of Peoria, Ill., Moon Landrieu of New Orleans, Richard Hatcher of Gary, Ind., John Buckley of Lawrence, Mass., Ralph Perk of Cleveland and Lee Alexander of Syracuse, N.Y., the conference president.

First and foremost was the matter of money.

"There is no point to having a new urban policy if there is no new money," said John Gunther, director of the Conference of Mayors.

"We're looking to the '79 budget," he added. "It will include legislative proposals that will indicate just where Carter is going."

In the Cabinet agencies, the skepticism about Carter's commitment to the cities is expressed almost entirely in dollar terms.

"There is no question where his loyalties lie," said one assistant secretary, who asked that he not be quoted by name. "The man was elected with a lot of city votes, and a lot of black votes, and he's not going to forget they're out there and that they have problems. But it isn't clear that he knows it'll take money to solve them."

One subcabinet official, wary of the inevitable upcoming spending battles with Carter's Office of Management and Budget, put it this way: "Carter's talking a good game, but you've got to keep your eye on the ball," referring to the 1979 budget.

The budget, due in January, will be Carter's first spending document and will signal his priorities.

Commissioners reaffirm county jail approval

BY KAY BELL
UD Reporter

Members of the Lubbock County Commissioners' Court reaffirmed their approval of the new county jail plan Monday morning, but they modified the basic design somewhat in an effort "to get the best facility possible for our money."

Commissioners approved a plan to accept alternate bids on a possible second floor to the proposed structure and evaluate what long-term savings could be gained from a two-story jail structure.

Cost of adding a second floor to the proposed one-story jail would be about $50,000, according to Arnold Maeker, county architectural consultant.

If the roof of the new jail were reinforced so that it could accommodate a second story, Maeker said, the structure could be expanded more easily. Without provision for a second story, he said, the county may one day be forced to buy additional land to enlarge the jail building or spend even more money to reinforce the first floor roof.

"A second floor could make a difference in the future of about half a million dollars," Maeker said. "If the county can afford it (now) it will be a good thing."

However, Commissioner Coy Biggs was not as optimistic about the proposed second floor as were other members of the court. Biggs said he would rather try to utilize the old jail building instead of building a larger new jail. He suggested the court seek a variance of building standards on the old county jail so the structure could be used in conjunction with the new building.

However, Maeker said he doubted the Texas Jail Standards Commission (TJSC) would go along with any variance plans. And even with such variances, he said, the cost of repairing the old structure so prisoners could continue to be confined there would be prohibitive.

Biggs said he brought up the question of using the old jail facility in an effort to cover every aspect of the jail problem the county is now facing.

"Before we let bids," Biggs said, "I wanted to rule out the old jail 100 per cent. I'm convinced now (after talking to Maeker) it would be too expensive to use the old jail."

"I hate to give it up, but if we can't get the variances now we won't ever get them," he said.

Biggs also said he is not enthusiastic about acting on a second story for the new building at the moment because of the cost of the project and the problems future officials may encounter with the new jail.

"Maybe we should give a future commissioners' court the right to decide on what should be done (to the jail) when the need arises," he said.

"To build the kind of structure we're talking about now would cost about $4 million dollars and I doubt such a bond would pass in Lubbock county."

"I don't want the bond," he said. "I want to do as much as we can with what we've got (in the budget)."

Criminal District Attorney Alton Griffin and Maeker presented plans for Lubbock's new jail to the TJSC in Austin two weeks ago. Though no official statement on the county's plans has been made yet, both men said they are confident the commission will approve the new structure, probably sometime this week.

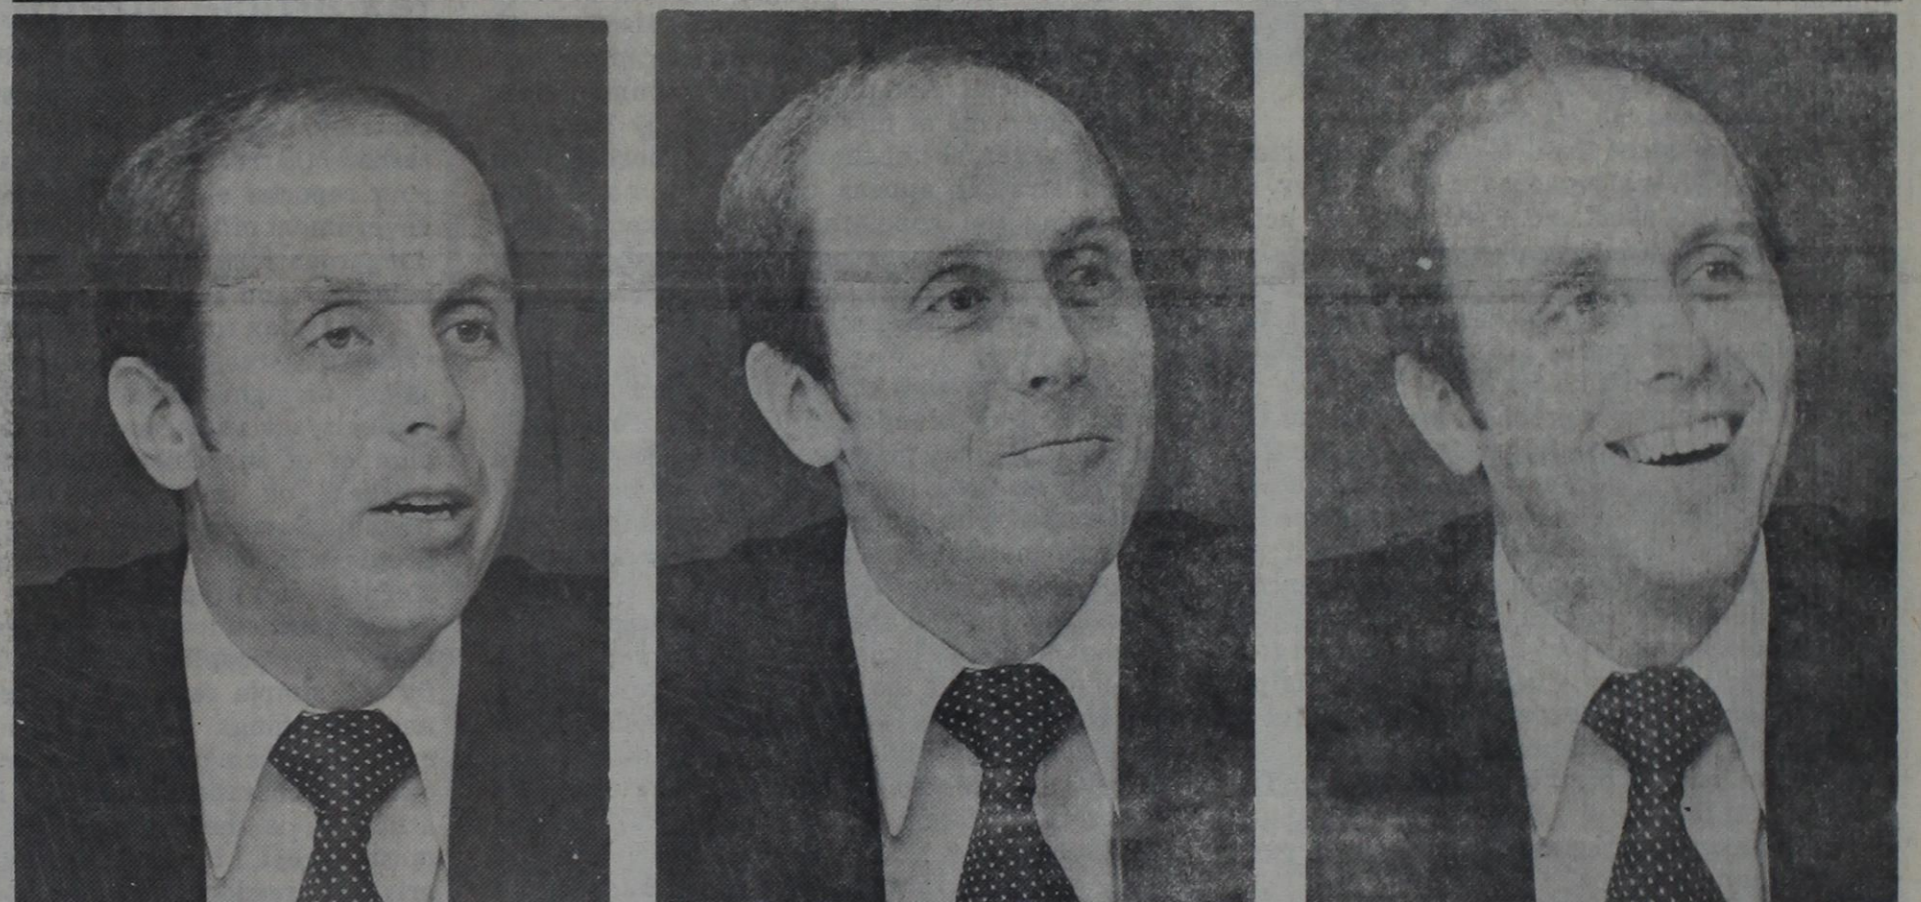

In other action, commissioners accepted a bid from Modern Chevrolet for the purchase of a fire truck for Roosevelt Volunteer Fire Department.

Commissioners also approved a motion to lower the amount per call for fire calls from $275 to $200 for all area fire departments.

Approval was given for the rental of an ice machine for Lubbock County Jail. Currently, ice is bought by jail administrators and stored in a refrigerator there, taking up space allocated for the storage of food.

Marathon Paving and Utility Constructors of Houston, developer of Lake Ransom Canyon Subdivision. Installation of an intercom system in the old jail was approved. The system was requested by the sheriff's office in an attempt to improve security in the facility. The intercom will be supplemented by the reassignment of 20 existing hand-held radios to officers patrolling jail corridors.

Commissioners also approved a motion to exempt part-time workers from social security payments and to use contract labor where applicable. The motion was in concurrence with a 1953 agreement with Employees Retirement Systems of Texas.

Hance smiles

State Senator Kent Hance, often tagged the "fair-haired boy" in the upcoming congressional race, formally announced his intention to run for the 19th Congressional District position in a Monday press conference. "We must all understand that no one can replace George Mahon," Hance said of the present 19th district representative. (Photo by Dennis Copeland)

Hance announces intent to run

By KANDIS GATEWOOD
UD Reporter

Sen. Kent Hance formally announced Monday his intentions of running for the 19th Congressional District seat being vacated by the retiring George Mahon, and Delwin Jones, officially announced his intent to seek Hance's position with the state senate.

Morris Sheats, Trinity Church pastor, reportedly told his congregation Sunday of his intentions to seek the 19th Congressional District seat vacated by George Mahon.

Sheats said he will not make a formal announcement until the end of next week.

Mayor Roy Bass, who attended the Hance conference said Hance is the "sensible man for the job."

"What I offer the voters of this district is the same determination and hard work that I achieved as your state senator," Hance said.

Jones, Texas House representative from 1964-1972, said he will oppose bureaucracy and any new taxes if elected.

In other political happenings, former governor Preston Smith, said he will announce Wednesday his intentions concerning a possible campaign for the governorship.

Carolyn Jordan, city council member, has called a press conference for 10:30 a.m. today to announce her plans for the coming campaign.

Other announced candidates for the congressional position are Jesse George of Brownfield and George Bush Jr. of Midland.

At the press conference, Hance said his age, 34, would help him to grow in Congress and be more capable in future years.

Hance said he will not begin a worldwide campaign for office. He will retain his state senator position and feels capable in managing the office.

"I did not miss a day or a vote (in office) and I can certainly handle that responsibility," Hance said.

Hance said he likes to avoid labels, but as far as his voting record shows, he has voted as a conservative or moderate.

Hance would not name a replacement for his present position.

"The voters made a wise choice in '74, and I feel they will do it again," he said.

Bell ordered to pay damages in slander suit

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Southwestern Bell Telephone Co., The largest component of the nationwide Bell System, was ordered Monday to pay damages totaling $3 million for slandering two of its former top executives during an internal investigation.

The plaintiffs had sued for $29 million in damages.

A state court jury, in a complicated, 35-part verdict, ordered the telephone company to pay Bell $1,771 as fired Bell executive James H. Ashley and the widow of T. O. Gravitt.

At the same time, however, Gravitt's widow was ordered to pay Bell $1,771 as reimbursement for false expense vouchers Gravitt filed with the company.

Gravitt was the top Bell executive in Texas, earning $80,000 annually, when he committed suicide at his posh Dallas home Oct. 17, 1974, in the midst of the internal company investigation.

The jury found that slander resulted from the internal probe and was also a "proximate cause" for insanity which led Gravitt to kill himself.

The suit alleged the slander occurred when Bell investigators quizzed employees about the two executives' sexual conduct with female subordinates and their outside financial dealings.

The jury cleared Southwestern Bell's corporate parent, American Telephone and Telegraph Corp., of the same charges. And Bell was cleared of allegations it invaded the executives' privacy by wiretapping.

Bell lawyers said they would begin steps immediately to overturn the verdict and throw out the damages set by the jury of 10 men and two women.

The panel reached its verdict after two and one-half days of deliberation in the trial which entered its sixth week Monday in 166th District Court.

Ashley, who sat with his lawyers throughout the long trial, strode victoriously from the courtroom following the verdict and announced he was "proud to be the Ralph Nader of the telephone company."

Standing with his wife and flanked by his four children, the former $55,000-a-year Bell official in San Antonio said the verdict "renews my faith in the judicial system."

Lance, Panama Canal give Carter plenty of worries

It is understating to say that the U.S. Congress has a lot of power. They have power over all U.S. citizens and, the way the game is being played this month, they have a big say in whether President Jimmy Carter's popularity with the American people takes a large drop or just a small one.

Carter's budget director, Bert Lance, who is already drawing fire from the media, will be facing scrutiny from Congress this week in a series of congressional hearings. Lance is scheduled to appear in person. If he tells all he knows, it appears he will be on his way out. If he doesn't tell all, chances appear strong he is on his way out anyway.

JAY ROSSER

Individuals are continuing to question Carter on why he has continued to pledge his full support to Lance in the face of mounting criticism. That is in direct conflict with his campaign promises to carefully screen all his cabinet members before he submitted them for congressional approval. Recent news reports indicate that not all of the facts were submitted before the nomination.

The next crucial Carter action is presently being considered by the Senate and is already causing quite a stir. To Carter, it must appear as another one of those situations where "you are damned if you do and damned if you don't."

It has always struck me as peculiar that the United States has always felt it necessary to have a treaty signed before it is ratified. Perhaps diplomacy is the key here. If so, by continuing the trend and bowing to diplomacy at its finest (something he appeared to be against in his campaign), Carter is coming near to cutting his own throat.

Texas Senator John Tower was in Lubbock Saturday and turned his thoughts to the Panama Canal. He said he doubted if Carter had the necessary two-thirds majority in the Senate for ratification of the treaty.

According to a poll in U.S. News and World Report, Carter may or may not have the treaty ratified. Senators for or leaning towards approval of the treaty numbered 38, while 31 were against or leaning against approval of the treaty. An indication of how strong Carter must lobby comes from the statistic which shows a total of 31 senators were undecided on the matter.

The treaty is now being considered by the Senate Foreign Relations Committee. Chances are that it will not be reported out of that committee anytime soon.

And look for Carter not to push for its emergence anytime soon either. He knows he will be able to use the time to lobby against what appears to be mounting opposition to the treaty.

Panamanians are obviously overjoyed with the new treaty. I think it is a good treaty and one that has been long in coming, but I think we committed ourselves a little too soon. It is not good practice to sign a treaty before it is ratified.

If it fails to win Senate approval, those Americans living in Panama are going to find life a little more difficult, thanks to good old American diplomacy.

Have a good day. JR

Legal counsel important, but we don't have one yet

Any corporation president knows a lawyer is essential to the welfare of his operation. The company needs a private legal adviser to review contracts and to point out potentially dangerous situations certain transactions could present.

But as of Sept. 1, the largest "corporation" on Lubbock has been without legal counsel. Its board, administrators and almost 22,000 "stockholders" have been operating without the benefit of in-house legal advise.

The corporation of which I'm speaking is Tech. General counsel for the university, Carlton Dodson, left more than a week ago to take his seat on the 7th Court of Civil Appeals in Amarillo. And to date, no replacement has been named.

KAY BELL

Tech President Cecil Mackey is reportedly considering several persons for the vacancy. But time is growing short and more definitive action than mere "consideration" needs to be taken. A university the size of Tech is virtually "open game" when it comes to lawsuits and a permanent resident counsel is an absolute necessity to all connected with Tech.

Most students are probably unaware that the university has a resident lawyer. And even those who know of the position tend to take the importance of the job lightly. Students assume that Tech's lawyer is far removed from their personal lives; that his job is of no significance to them.

True, the position of the legal counsel for a university is not one where the lawyer is personally connected with the student body. But the role he plays does affect each student.

As students, everything that goes on at Tech touches our lives in some way. Perhaps the most obvious example is the use of the money to pay to attend the university.

That check we send to the cashier at the beginning of each semester is funneled back to Tech for various projects. And here is where one place where the resident legal counsel comes in.

A university's lawyer reviews the spending practices of the university to insure that all funds are disbursed properly. He also reviews all of the contracts, such as those for construction on campus, that Tech officials sign.

Therefore, the legal counsel actually determines whether Tech, in effect, gets the short end of the deal in various transactions. And he points out the limitations and pitfalls of certain university dealings — dealings that ultimately result in the spending of our money.

But my main concern with the present situation of no legal counsel is how my personal lifestyle might be affected. Tech's lawyer in an indirect way, determines what rights I, as a student here, have on this campus.

For the benefit of all you who took the Code of Student Affairs insert out of the back to school issue of The University Daily and immediately threw it away, I would like to quote a line which prefaced the code: "Approved by Carlton Dodson, Resident Legal Counsel and Charles Hardwick, Vice President of Academic Affairs."

The code is a list of the regulations and procedures that govern all Tech students. It deals with such things as alcohol on campus, student organizations, the use of campus facilities and the disciplinary process used on students who violate the code.

And the legal counsel has the power to review the means by which these regulations are devised. Admittedly, he cannot determine the actual policies, but he studies the code to insure that the proper procedures and guidelines are followed by the university before instituting such rules.

Given the ridiculously restrictive policies that were written into the code with advice of counsel, I would hate to see the restrictions that might be put into it without any legal advice.

But the students don't have as much stake in the position of resident legal counsel as does Tech's faculty. The general counsel also reviews the university's hiring and firing procedures and tenure policies. And these areas do immediately affect the lives of those employed by Tech.

However, as unbelievable as it seems, Tech administrators appear content to mark time regarding the appointment. Not even a temporary legal counsel has been named. Instead, two local attorneys have been retained to represent the university.

While I'm sure the local lawyers are competent, they cannot effectively replace a university's own private counsel. They are not located on the campus and cannot be as well acquainted with the intricacies of the university as a permanent counselor. And they also have other clients to serve.

One excuse for the delay in the appointment is that Mackey, himself a lawyer, can handle legal problems in the interim. However, running a legal aid society is not included in a university president's job. Undoubtedly, if any legal crises develop while Mackey is juggling the two positions, his foremost duties as Tech's president will suffer.

I am aware that Dodson's appointment to the bench came at an inopportune time for Tech. Administrators had less than two weeks to prepare for his resignation after he was named to the court on Aug. 12. And I agree with administrators that careful consideration must be given to his replacement.

But Dodson's appointment was not a total surprise. Anyone who kept up with the appointment proceeding in the local media must have known that Dodson was one of the men considered a likely choice for the post as early as July.

Why Tech officials made no preparation for his possible departure at that time is incomprehensible. I find this lack of planning and concern frightening and depressing. Though it is usually Tech students who catch the brunt of the apathy charge, it is now the administrators who are nonchalantly avoiding issues.

Last semester when Tech, operating without three regents, was going through the throes of severe Briscoeitis — that is, procrastination on official appointments — I had hoped the illness would be shortlived.

But, unfortunately, like the unexplained Legionnaires' disease, this mysterious, delayed-reaction malady has been transmitted from the governor to Tech administrators. I only hope it's not fatal this time.

Letters

On tax story, cat, editorial

'tax article bizarre...'

To the Editor:

Your article on tax resistance was in its contents and implications both incorrect and rather bizarre. Perhaps this is attributable to your reporter's having listened to lawyers and government officials, a practice which is always dangerous folly and has been known to cause blindness and poor complexion.

First, tax resisters are not all reactionaries, racists, or religious fanatics. While there are plenty of right-wingers, there are also many radicals, socialists, and other left-wingers; and a number of anarchists and libertarians who fit nowhere on the conventional left-right continuum. Some resisters are even non-political people who feel a quaint attachment to their freedom and property.

In addition to the active resisters, there are many other people who oppose the IRS principle for the simple reason that they abhor fascism and all things fascistic. The IRS, with its exemption from due process and power to run its own star-chambers, and with its storm-trooper attitudes, is the organization that makes the most direct, fascistic assaults on people's privacy, freedom, and livelihoods. It is clearly time for reform.

It is also time for opposition. To be robbed, threatened, and spied upon is bad enough. To meekly accept, or worse, to prattle about supporting it, is absurd—rather as if the fellow in Roots had asked the master for a few more whacks because he knew it was all for his own good.

Sincerely,
Lee Howell

more homo bureacratus...

To the Editor:

I am a senior zoology student here at Tech who has, to date, successfully avoided involvement in any Tech issue. All that is changed; layers of apathy have been stripped from my body and I stand naked in the light of truth. This miracle was wrought by the "Controversy" over the death of the ring-tailed cat.

At first, I admit I supported Dr. Baker's position. After all, he is a professor of zoology and mammalogy at that. But then I read the letter by the "undersigned law students."

Now let me digress a moment longer to say my original support of Dr. Baker's position was based on the erroneous belief that he might even know what he is doing. He pointed out that the animal could have been rabid or otherwise diseased. Also, wild animals out of their natural range can sometimes have dangerous ecological effects (witness the carp and English sparrow. But then, what can one little "cat" hurt). And, if the animal was an escaped pet, it probably would not have survived long in the wild even if it were to be released by some Tech student on his way home for the Labor Day weekend (said Tech student being armed to the teeth with all the necessary papers to possess, transport, and release a wild animal.)

The letter by "undersigned law students" changed my outlook. I was swayed as much by their logic (getting the Vietnam war into this was a nice touch) as by the fact that the undersigned were law students. Now for those uneducated among you, a law degree is the most desirable piece of paper imaginable. It confers on its recipient instant expertise in all fields of human endeavor. Lawyers (people with this fabulous piece of paper) know more about nuclear energy and power than any physicist, more about medicine and malpractice than any physician, more about wildlife than any biologist, and in fact more about life and what is good for everyone else than you can possibly imagine. In short, lawyers (and "undersigned law students") know more about anything than anybody. But don't take my word for it. Just ask one.

P.S. If anyone would be an expert on homo bureacratus dumbassis, it would be an "undersigned law student."

'get off your.....'

To the Editor:

Mr. Rosser, why don't you get off of your soap box? In your editorial that appeared in the September 7th edition of the U.D. you called for the University Police to receive "a slap on the hand" for their apparent apathy in investigating the Mystery of the Memorial Circle Hog Head. The fact of the matter is that you showed an equal amount of apathy towards the incident by not calling the police immediately after you received the early morning phone call. As it turned out, though, it really wouldn't have made much difference anyway. . .but, did you know that at the time? Now, I shall climb down from my soap box.

Randall Wagner

Editors note: UD Photographer Dennis Copeland also received a phone call from the individuals responsible for the act the same night I did. He did notify the Tech police right after the call. Also, the soap box I use is used primarily for height purposes, not necessarily to demonstrate my oratorical prowess. JR

Watching signs avoids tickets

EDITOR'S NOTE: This is the fourth in a series of five crime prevention articles. The first articles covered crimes in magazine soliciting, bicycle safety, thefts and car burglaries. Today's article is about traffic violations.
 BY KANDIS GATEWOOD
 UD Reporter

A student could wind up paying $18 for a few minutes of careless parking.

Parking in a reserved parking place, that is. Last year, 33,656 parking tickets were issued on the Tech campus. That averages about one and a half tickets for every student.

Tickets are issued to students and non-students alike, according to Matt Matthews, director of training and investigation for the University Police.

The police have the authority to issue city tickets to those without campus permits on their cars, and campus tickets to those who have the permits.

Each parking ticket costs $6, for those with permits from Tech. The city parking tickets are $5. Matthews said the tickets are reinstatement fees, because the permit is revoked for misuse of privileges.

Tickets are paid at the Traffic and Parking Building or at Municipal Court.

Sometimes the police will tow cars parked illegally.

Matthews said the police will only tow at the request of the person whose space is taken.

This entails a $12 towing fee.

The police use two tow-trucks. The police own one truck, and the other truck is contracted from Lubbock Wrecker Company. The company truck is used for foreign cars and newer car models to prevent damage to the car. The company charges for the use of the wrecker.

"It costs us more to operate the tow-trucks than we get in money from the towing fee," Matthews said.

Visitors are allowed on campus and can park in special areas. Entry station personnel will let visitors on campus for various reasons. If there is any doubt, the driver can ask the entry station worker.

The entry station workers can give parking tickets when they are on patrol in the lots. They cannot give any other tickets, Matthews said.

Last year, 286 accidents occurred on campus. More than 150 were in the parking lots.

Several cars were involved in an accident in the commuter parking lot. The accident involved about $400 worth of repairs, Matthews said.

Matthews said drivers overlook the ten and 20 mile-per-hour signs.

Most accidents occur in the dormitory parking lots. Problem areas also include the bookstore parking lot and Indiana and Flint Avenues.

Prevention involves reading the signs and being aware of the parking situation, Matthews said.

Commissioner sets gin dedication speech

Reagan V. Brown, Texas commissioner of agriculture, will be the speaker at the dedication of the Ennis E. Moss Sr. Memorial — Samuel A. Goodman Gin at 2 p.m. Friday on the Tech Museum grounds in front of the gin.

The public is invited to the dedication of this 102-year-old cotton gin. The gin, which once stood near Tyler in Smith County, has been restored at the museum. The gin serves as a memorial to Ennis Moss, inventor of the Moss - Gordin Lint-Cleaner, which cleans twigs, leaves and other debris out of cotton.

Tech Regent Charles G. Scruggs will be master of ceremonies for the dedication. The gin will be presented to the museum by W. C. Thompson, a Shallowater ginner who will represent both the South Plains Ginners Association (SPGA) and the Texas Cotton Ginners Association (TCGA) whose members contributed the major portion of funds for the restoration. Thompson has served as president of both organizations. Tech President Cecil Mackey will accept the gin on behalf of the museum.

Denim opens artist series

With a large number of Austin bands getting recording contracts these days, it is only natural for some of these fortunate ensembles to go largely unnoticed by the public.

Such is the case of Denim, a band which will start the University Center's New Artist Series at 8:15 tonight in the UC Theatre. Tickets for Denim's show are $2.50 for Tech students with ID and $3.50 for the public.

The four - man group has released an album, simply titled "Denim", on Epic records. The disc was largely composed by lead guitarist Bill Browder, who also sings lead vocals with drummer David Moerbe.

Though the band's album hasn't had much success, the group's stage show has accrued a faithful following for the group in areas where Denim has established a name for itself.

With the release of the album earlier this year, Denim has had the opportunity to take its act out of the state and expose itself to new techniques and audiences.

This experience is what Lubbockites should expect from a band that has been together since its high school days.

The show promises to be good. Last year's New Artist presentations included St.

Elmo's Fire and Balcones Fault. The latter has since left its Austin home and relocated in California, where the group landed a recording contract with new label Cream Records, and released its first album "It's All Balcones Fault."

The remaining members of Denim are bassist Jerry Crow and 23-year-old utility man Richard Mullen, who plays mandolin, pedal steel guitar, guitar and vocals.

If Denim's show is as good as those who have seen them promised, perhaps the group will have no problems with name identification in the future.

—DOUG PULLEN

IFC, Tramps begin rush

BY ERIN ERSKINE
UD Staff
Interfraternity Council (IFC) and Saddle Tramps begin fall rush this week with their individual smokers.

The IFC smoker is Wednesday at 7:30 p.m. in the University Center Ballroom. Attendance at the smoker is required of all students participating in fraternity rush. Students may sign up for specific fraternities' rush programs at the IFC smoker, according to Gary Galbraith, IFC president. Any student with 12 semester hours and a 1.5 grade point average is eligible to participate in fraternity rush. However, all men are encouraged to attend the smoker in order to gain a better insight of fraternity life.

State Sen. Kent Hance will be the guest speaker. A slide show on Greek life will be presented to those attending. Those attending must wear a coat and tie and must bring a pencil.

Saddle Tramps will begin their rush program at 7 p.m. Thursday with the first of a series of smokers open to any interested Tech student. The smoker is in the University Center Coronado Room. Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers will speak at the smoker, according to Tramps' Rush Chairman Ed Merrett.

The group's second smoker is scheduled for Sept. 21, 7:30-9 p.m. in the El Centro Room of the Home Economics Building. Tech football mentor Jess Stiles will speak at the smoker.

The Tramp's final smoker is Sept. 29, 7:30-9 p.m. in the Delta Gamma Lodge, 5 Greek Circle. State Sen. Kent Hance is scheduled as guest speaker. The dress for all three smokers is informal.

Saddle Tramps' projects include conducting the Student Association-sponsored ticket draw each week, sponsoring Tech pep rallies and conducting academic and athletic recruiting programs.

For more information call the Saddle Tramp office at 742-3895.

Football coupons will be exchanged for tickets to the Tech - New Mexico game Wednesday, from 1 p.m. to 6 p.m. and Thursday in the Well, on the lower level of the University Center.

Students must have at least one student identification card for each student ticket to be picked up at the ticket draw, according to Student Association (SA) President Chuck Campbell. Students may pick up guest - spouse tickets with one student identification card. Students may draw a maximum of six consecutively numbered tickets.

Any student who should draw seats in the south end zone may redraw for other tickets 6:30 to 7:30 p.m. Thursday, if tickets are available.

Students who miss the draw or who do not draw tickets before 6 p.m. Thursday can draw for south end zone seats 10 a.m. - 2 p.m. Friday in the SA office if tickets are still available.

Ticket draw scheduled

Job interviews set

Interview schedules will be available for signing on the following dates starting at 7:30 a.m. today in room 152, Administration Building for December 1977 graduates, graduate students and alumni. May and August 1978 candidates will sign up on Wednesdays at 8 a.m. in 152 Administration Building. Students must have a file established in the placement office before they can sign up for an interview time. This service is available to seniors and graduate students, alumni, and faculty only.

Hello Tres

Raider guard Larry Martin (62) attempts to block an unidentified Baylor Bear reaching for backup quarterback Tres Adams during the third quarter of Saturday's game. Adams was face-masked on the play and the ensuing

Red Raider defense more physical

Last season's Tech defense was known chiefly for its big plays. Speed was its major asset.

This year, with the one game against Baylor as criterion, it seems that the Raider defensive corps has not only retained the ability to come up with the big play, but has also added a new dimension to its repertoire.

Last Saturday, the defense appeared to be more physical (especially on the front line) against the Bears that he had been the entire year before. Defensive coordinator Bill Parcels would not go that far out on a limb, but did say,

"We were more physical and we played with more intensity than we did a year ago against the Bears."

Using statistics as a measuring stick to back up this claim, take for example the performance by Baylor runningback Gary Blair.

Last year the Bear tailback garnered a staggering 199 yards and scored two touchdowns against the Tech defense, with most of his yardage coming on tough up-the-middle runs. This year however, Blair was contained for 35 yards and no tallies.

"We had more people on the front line," Parcels explained. "And we put a little bit tougher defense in there technique wise, with our tackles shutting off the inside. We wanted them to try to beat us outside."

When the Bears ran inside Saturday, tackles Curtis Reed and Jim Krahl were there to stop the ball carrier. (Reed and Krahl were in on a combined total of 16 tackles.)

And when the Bears tried to go outside, linebackers Mike Mock and Don Kelly were usually there, along with strong safety Alan Emerson, who together combined for 37 tackles.

All in all, the Bears could manage only nine first downs (as compared with 21 of last year) for a total of 224 yards (192 yards rushing and 32 yards passing). That compares very favorably to last year's figures of 251 Baylor yards rushing and 160 yards passing for 411 total offensive yards.

Last season, it was the big showing from the secondary (with five interceptions) against Colorado in the opening game of 1976, that set the stage for a record performance from the backfield.

This year, the big performance from the trench corps (linebacker play included) may be setting the stage for an outstanding year in an area that had been the coaches' concern in the past.

PRACTICE NOTE: Monday, Coach Sloan announced that safety Emerson is "doubtful" for this Saturday's New Mexico game.

'New faces' improve Oilers

HOUSTON (AP) — Despite a 2-4 preseason record and five starters on the injury list, Houston Oilers Coach O. A. "Bum" Phillips said Monday he labels the exhibition season a success.

"The scoreboard wasn't always like we wanted it but we feel we've established something that you have to have in the NFL to win — a running game," Phillips said. "We'll have 14 or 15 new faces this season and when you have changes that usually means the new players are better."

"That's one-third of our team so you'd have to say we're about one-third better than last year."

Houston's injury list will have to improve however for Phillips' figures to prove correct.

Five starters, including quarterback Dan Pastorini, were hobbled following Saturday's 20-16 loss to New Orleans in the final preseason game.

Pastorini suffered a sprained ankle but Phillips said he thinks the quarterback will be ready for Sunday's regular season opener in the AstroDome against the New York Jets.

"He's walking today and he will play and practice," Phillips said. "He won't let it affect him. He's worked too hard in the off season to be affected."

If Pastorini can't go all the way against the Jets, Phillips has only veteran John Hadl to substitute. Hadl had a poor preseason, completing only 16 of 37 passes and throwing six interceptions.

"Yes, we've thought about getting another quarterback but we can't find any better than John," Phillips said. "I think everybody has jumped to conclusions about John. The supporting cast has been different when he was in there. He does all right with our first team."

"We've probably had more injuries this preseason than in the past two years," Phillips said.

Nicholas new volleyball assistant

Tech's volleyball team has several returning players this fall, but there will be a new face in the crowd as Ginger Nicholas begins her first year as assistant to Coach Janice Hudson.

Nicholas come to Tech from Richardson where she coached volleyball for four years at Richardson High School. She began the volleyball program there and coached the girls to district championships three years. They were state runners-up one year.

Nicholas attended Abilene Christian University as a scholarship recipient, and was named in Who's Who of American Colleges and Universities. She is now working on her masters in education. She also serves as assistant to Jeannine McHaney, director of women's athletics. Her special interest lies in volleyball, but she hopes to concentrate on administration as much as athletics.

Nicholas has a great deal of respect for Coach Hudson, and feels privileged to be able to learn coaching from her. Nicholas assists with practice drills at workouts and helps coordinate meets.

The 15 team members are all very talented, she said, and it's difficult to say who the key players will be this year. The four returning seniors will provide leadership for the team, and after the first meet this weekend the girls will be able to polish their performance. A key factor in having a good team, she said, is to put the six girls on the court who play best together. "Those six that play as a team may not be the six most skilled players," Nicholas said.

Nicholas feels the team's level of talent permits her to think of competition at the national level as a realistic goal. "When you compete at the level we compete," she said, "you always play to that goal."
