P.E. revamping due to department merger

By DIANE WEMPLE UD Staff

"The best thing since apple pie" was the phrase used by Dr. Martin McIntyre to describe the current merging of the men's and women's Health, Physical Education and Recreation Departments. McIntyre is the department chairman.

Because of the merger, an extensive revamping program is currently in development stages and under review by the department's faculty members. The merger, in direct compliance with Title IX of the Equal Rights Amendment to the U.S. Constitution, will evolve through several phases, McIntyre said. The first phase is a curriculum review - expansion program which will be implemented probably next fall, McIntyre said.

The proposed extension is only one of several major projects under consideration to "capitalize on the expertise of our faculty and to provide the best instruction available to students majoring in any of the three fields," McIntyre said.

The department is planning marked improvements in health curriculum and degree requirements to comply with changes in state certification laws which apply to public education.

"As of Sept. 1, 1978, health instructors in Texas will be required to have a minimum of 24 hours worth of credit in order to teach in the state's public school system," McIntyre said.

In accordance with the new regulations, 12 new courses will be introduced next fall. Eight courses will be deleted from the health curriculum, McIntyre said.

The development of a community health major, under the direction of Dr. Thomas Timmreck, is one of the fundamental changes under consideration.

"Community health differs from socalled 'school health' in application," McIntyre said. "The former term deals with problems associated with society and the environment: sewage, air quality, venereal disease, diabetes and obesity to name a few."

Opportunities for intern experiences for community health majors will also be added.

"We're also planning to develop an already existing pre-physical therapy program," he said.

At present, Tech does not offer a degree in physical therapy.

Also under review is the recreation undergraduate field, with a planned emphasis on camping and outdoor observational skills.

Two courses to be implemented next fall include a wilderness survival course and outdoor skills instruction. which will be offered as electives.

McIntyre said he expects the two courses to be popular ones, as young people in particular are becoming increasingly interested in learning advanced survival skills and techniques needed to maintain life outdoors.

"Our main concern at this point is to expand the recreation major into an interdisciplinary program," he said, "in order that recreation graduates may be tailored for a specific job market as administrators, with a solid background in computer science, accounting, communications and public administration."

One of the main problems in physical education is that the field is so heavily skill - oriented, McIntyre said.

"We're facing a big problem when our current graduates are not as prepared as they should be for teaching," he said.

"Our faculty is presently discussing the feasibility of exposing P.E. majors to student teaching at an earlier level, perhaps during their sophomore year," McIntyre said. "There needs to be a much greater emphasis on coaching also, especially in the area of women's athletics."

The dance department is also in line for some remodeling.

According to McIntyre, faculty members hope to incorporate a bachelor of fine arts degree for dance majors, in order that the main thrust of dance study will be geared generally to performance aspects rather than teaching only.

Additional expansion is planned for the department's graduate program, under the direction of Dr. Ed Burkhardt, McIntyre said.

Other major projects will include the development of what McIntyre referred to as "organizational structure" or faculty standing committees to oversee and regulate the various programs after expansion.

The planning of a faculty policy manual, which will describe the criteria for tenure, promotion and departmental procedure is another interest.

"We also hope to establish some type of determination process for faculty merit and increased salaries, but we don't know as yet how this will work," McIntyre said.

The department is plagued by an amazing lack of facilities both in academic and activity space, McIntyre said.

"Some high schools have better facilities than we do," McIntyre said. "This has got to change if we are to develop an outstanding program."

Management firm to begin work

BY NAN BURK UD Reporter

Officials of Hyatt Medical Management Services will begin work this week to evaluate the county hospital district's status and to get things on schedule for the proposed February 1978 opening of the county teaching hospital.

Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers approved the hiring of Hyatt at the LCHD board meeting Monday afternoon. The board unanimously approved a two-year contract with the firm. Board member Ben Robinson and C. B. Carter, newly appointed board member, abstained. Hyatt will charge a fee of $305,000 for its two-year contract. The contract is expected to be finalized within the next four weeks.

The contract is contingent on the appropriation of state funds for teaching hospitals, Robinson said. A bill enabling the state to provide aid to state teaching hospitals has been passed by the state senate and currently is being discussed by members of a house subcommittee.

The Health Sciences Centers Hospital is the first teaching hospital to be operated by Hyatt, a firm based in Encino, Calif. The firm operates 28 hospitals, but only two are in Texas, according to Joe Brutto, Hyatt representative. Hyatt Medical Management Services is associated with the Hyatt hotel chain.

The firm will provide a full-time administrator for the hospital, but no changes in the hospital district staff are foreseen, Brutto said.

"Tech has been involved through the Centers. "The hospital district has been fully cooperative with us."

In other business, County Judge Rod Shaw swore in C. B. Carter as new LCHD board member. Carter was appointed by the county commissioners court to succeed Marshall Pennington, whose term expired in January. Pennington had agreed to remain on the board until a successor was appointed.

The board approved a resolution praising Pennington for his service to the board.

Board member J. C. Rickman was elected chairman of the board. Rickman is business manager of the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal.

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, warning the nation of the peril posed by the growing energy crisis, sought to win widespread support for his energy program Monday night by going to the people with a nationwide address.

The President, who sought to define the dimensions of the energy crisis, described his message as "unpleasant."

White House Press Secretary Jody Powell said the speech outlined principles for solving the energy problem and avoiding the consequences of failing to act or "continuing to do what we have been doing before."

A draft of White House proposals obtained by news media showed that Carter was seriously considering a "standby" gasoline tax reaching as high as 50 cents a gallon, taxes ranging from $412 to $2,500 on gas-guzzling automobiles and price hikes on oil and natural gas. The energy draft also pointed to mandatory standards for building insulation and appliance efficiency and measures to make power plants and industries that burn oil or gas switch to coal.

Such measures, Carter has said, would increase the cost of living, adding perhaps one-half of one percent to the nation's rate of inflation.

Late Monday afternoon, the President, energy adviser James Schlesinger, and policy chief Stuart Eizenstat sat in the Cabinet Room going over the program.

Schlesinger, his collar open and tie loosened, told the President: "The basic thrust is that this is a complete package ... and deals with the longrange problem of rising energy prices...'

whole thing in considerable detail, said Dr. Richard Lockwood, vice president of the Health Sciences said. "It's kind of like taking a shower. If we (the board) make one wrong turn, we end up in hot water."

Lufkin newspaper wins Pulitzer service award

LUFKIN (AP) - A small Texas daily newspaper, refusing to accept an official explanation for the death of a hometown boy, did a series of stories that changed the training methods of the U.S. Marine Corps and won the Pulitzer Prize for reporting Monday. The coveted public service journalism award was won by the Lufkin News for its probing stories on the death of Marine Pvt. Engineering department plans third solar-energy home

By BILL BALDWIN UD Reporter

Tech will have yet another solar home next fall as the departments of Civil and Mechanical Engineering continue to explore the economic feasibilities of sun power.

In addition to water and space heating, sun energy will provide space in the new home (Solar III), said Dr. Ernst W. Kiesling, project head and chairman of civil engineering.

The new house, which is expected to cost around $80,000 will incorporate essentially the same features of Solar II. It will have special insulation in walls, attic and windows, he said.

With minor changes, the floor plan and size of the new home will be the same. The home will also feature an above-ground, in-residence storm shelter.

The new project was made possible through a $21,000 grant from Housing and Urban Development and is being contracted locally through the Deer Building Corporation, which also built Solar II. It will be built near Solar II on 80th Street in Quaker Heights.

"The combination of special insulation and solar heating and cooling should result in 80-90 per cent energy savings compared to the same size conventionally built homes," Kiesling said. But the amount of savings depends largely on how people use it, he added.

Kiesling said the public can expect something unconventional in the interior of the new house. His fireplace idea seemed to be well received in Solar II. It was free hung in the center of the living room. He feels the Spanish styling of Solar III will lend itself to further innovations.

He's hoping for equally pleasing results for the exterior of Solar III. win some instances, the eesthetic use of solar panels has been less than appealing, he said.

"Many people have made solar panels very prominent just to show off their use of solar energy," he said. In many cases the results haven't been very pleasing to the eye. He feels this is due to panels being added to existing structures or the work of architects not vet adept at solar aesthetics.

The solar cooling principle operates much like gas fired cooling. Heat drawn from the collector panels or stored in a rock bed will drive a pump which circulates coolant. Like space and water heating units, the cooling in Solar III will have a conventional backup system.

"Don't look for solar cooling to come in for a long time," he said.

The cooling energy efficiencies are lower than solar water and space heating. Furthermore, the costs of conventional energy compared to the initial investments for solar equipemtn still can't be justified. But conventional to solar cost ratios can change rapidly, he added.

The space and water heating system in Solar II cost $9,000. The addition of cooling in the same size house costs $19,000.

Dr. Jerry Dunn, assistant professor at mechanical engineering has designed the enlarged solar panels and system. Dr. C.E.Teske, a lecturer in civil engineering, coordinated the structural and mechanical design features and James Osborne, a graduate student in civil engineerig, acted as the principal architect for the project.

Kiesling hopes to break ground for building in mid-May and have the home finished well before the end of summer. Solar II has been on the market for about two weeks and only one buyer has made a serious purchase offer. Solar II is priced at $74,900.

written by editor Joe Murray and reporter Ken Herman.

"We did what any small town newspaper would do," Murray said Monday after learning of the award. "We try to serve the community. This was a case where a member of the community had a problem. We tried to help."

The stories by the Lufkin News, carried on national wires by The Associated Press, focused public attention on irregularities in the tactics used by some Marine recruiters and the Corps' training programs and special "motivation" platoons for difficult recruits. Other Texas papers did stories on the Marine recruiting system and training.

The articles resulted in a presidential inquiry and a congressional investigation. Later a House subcommittee issued a report recommending reforms in recruiting and training practices.

The Marine Corps reprimanded some of the officers involved and courtmartialed the non-commissioned officers.

Stories by the Lufkin News revealed that McClure was not mentally qualified to join the Marines, had volunteered to enter a state hospital, recruiters had failed to check with police officers in Lufkin and McClure was coached so he could pass his second Marine exam.

The newspaper also uncovered testimony by other recruits who testified they were forced to attack McClure two and three at a time during pugil stick exercises.

"The story came to us," Murray said explaining that McClure's uncle came to his office one day and said the family was not satisfied with the official explanation of the young man's death.

'We just had to ask the questions. The information was all there," Murray added, saying that at times the paper was criticized as anti-military. "But we are proud of what we did,"

he said. "The outcome was that the Marine Corps was improved, some changes were made. I an sure any person who cares about any branch of the service would not want this sort of "It's a good buy, I hope someone thing the circumstances and causes of

Transit Advisory Board to discuss Citibus

BY SUSAN HAMPTON UD Reporter

A special meeting of the Lubbock Transit Advisory Board will meet today to discuss possible remedies for the ailing Citibus system, now operating under a deficit budget.

According to Brenda Kendrick, transit planner for Lubbock, the system is running about $150,000 over this year's planned budget.

At the Lubbock City Council meeting last Thursday, James L. Moreley, of Henningson, Durham and Richardson, discussed a study made on the new transit system. The study pointed out to the city's mistakes in choosing the type of bus now being used for regular city routes.

Because of the type of bus now used, the study indicated, the cost of fuel consumptin is not what was expected initially.

At the council meeting, council members decided the time has come to make a decision to either increase the current budget for the transit system or to cut back services to the community.

Kendrick said some routes will probably be cut since most council members expressed disapproval at the idea to increase the budget.

She indicated routes seven and 16, in northeast and east Lubbock respectively, are not bringing expected revenue, so they will probably be the first to go.

The Transit Advisory Board meeting will meet in the Emergency Operations Center in City Hall at noon.

Cheerleader plan reeks of tokenism

Remember going to Tech home football games and seeing eight varsity cheerleaders tumbling down the field during breaks? Well, in all likelihood, from now on you will be seeing at least 14.

This action will probably be taken as a result of complaints from one campus organization that the selection process was not open to all students, especially blacks. Student The Organization for Black

Unity (SOBU) has been known to fight pretty strongly discrimination at Tech.

against This became evident last Spring when they fought to halt the members of Phi Gamma Delta social fraternity (FIJI'S) from continuing to "black up" during their annual Fiji Islander weekend.

In that case, SOBU showed commendable restraint while letting Tech's administration know. in no uncertain terms, that such blatant racial barbs were a direct affront to black dignity.

In the present cheerleader controversy, however, it seems SOBU is asking for special treatment which no group, minority or otherwise, has the right to ask.

SOBU IS complaining that blacks have not been included in the cheerleading selection process because their cheerleading background does not include the acrobatic proficiency necessary in making the team.

So far, I have heard no complaints that the selection process itself showed any signs of racial prejudice in choosing the eight white varsity cheerleaders or the four white alternates.

But the Spirit Coordinating Committee seems to be leaning heavily towards choosing additional members at this time. This selection process, which members of the committee claim would be completely open to all students, would obviously be a closed process with the sole intent of finding two, perhaps four additional black cheerleaders.

THE ARGUMENT that SOBU puts forth seems somewhat comical to me. Sure, black representation on the cheerleading squad is somewhat lacking, but blacks were given full access to the selection process. Three blacks did attempt, unsuccessfully, to make the squad.

Saying the staff should be enlarged and the process revamped to give the black cheerleaders a better chance of making the squad is asinine.

Charles Gullley, SOBU president, said he is making a major issue of the matter to "create an atmosphere where people (SOBU officials and administrative groups at Tech) can talk and believe in one another."

"The issue is not so much cheerleading as it is getting people to trust each other."

ONE OF MY many delights in football games and basketball games has been watching the intricate moves and acrobatics often performed by the cheerleaders. That, my friends, is part of the cheerleading game. If you cannot make the moves, you obviously should not be able to make the squad.

Perhaps blacks' experiences in high school cheerleading do not furnish them with adequate background to be varsity cheerleaders. If they are serious in becoming varsity cheerleaders, they should take the extra time to learn the stunts.

My high school background did not give me a full working knowledge sufficient to get me into law school. Yet, I have no inclination and do not think it would be fair to demand to be admitted to Law School.

Letters More on marijuana

Good laugh

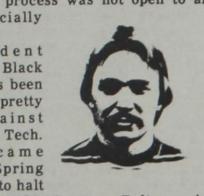

To the Editor:

In regards to 'America's' letter in the April 15th U.D. I would like to express my thanks to them. Since I have not had such a good laugh in a long time. It was an excellent piece of satire. Everybody who listens to the radio carefully, knows Blue Oyster Cult's song is 'Don't Fear the Reaper' not Reefer. Another funny part was 'people who smoke marijuana...have long hair which is usually filthy, beards, wear stupid looking beads, and need a bath! It sounds like the authors are describing somebody from the late '60s. Who wears beads these days anyway? This is besides my mother, and I do not think she turns on. I do have some friends who smoke, but they all take baths and some even have short, yes short hair. If it sounds like I am in favor of the the legalization of marijuana I am. It is no worse than tobacco or liquor, but are they

The first question you posed, is smoking marijuana normal, is quite absurd. Every society in the history of man has had its share of vices. In our society we have alcohol, tobacco, coffee, heroin, and a number of other vices. Granted, marijuana is a vice, but one of many. Marijuana, therefore, is as normal as any other social vice.

Would you want your children smoking marijuana? My answer to that is; why not? I would much rather have my children try marijuana than to run the risk of addiction to alcohol or tobacco. It is a fact that the number adolescent alcholics is increasing every year. One of the reasons for this is our value system here in America. Many parents are much more willing to have their children use alcohol than marijuana. Many people also begin the tobacco habit as adolescents. We know that alcoholism can destroy a person's health as well as his family. We are equally aware of the health dangers associated with tobacco addiction such as a number of lung diseases and heart disorders. On the other hand, nothing, I repeat, Nothing has been proven conclusively as to the health dangers associated with the use of marijuana. Your arguments against marijuana on the grounds of health dangers is completely infactual and is obviously based primarily on your bias beliefs and hearsay. You are right that pot is wrong legally; however, across the nation tremendous progress has been made to reduce the criminal sanctions associated with the use of marijuana. Efforts are continuously being made to reduce these sanctions even more. The injustices of our present marijuana laws cannot and will not last forever in a free and democratic society. Just look what happened to the prohibition amendment, and other injustices such as slavery, the separate but equal doctrine, and the teaching of evolution. Injustices in America have never lasted long and never will as long as we continue to hold sacred the American ideal of freedom and justice for all. So, like it or lump it, marijuana will be legalized: it is only a matter of time.

IN ESSENCE, if the squad is enlarged (and the Spirit Coordinating Committee will meet tonight to make a final decision), I can only construe the move as a token gesture, with no real meaning to the school. It will result, however, in a lowering of the current cheerleading standards and increased costs all around.

Gulley said he is not sure that two blacks would be chosen from the open selection. He did say however, that he hoped the acrobatic emphasis on the selection process would be reduced and more emphasis put on relating better to the crowds.

"You can flip and flip all day, but if you have no enthusiasm, no one is going to watch you," Gulley said.

Gulley makes a good point. But members of the Spirit Committee should ask themselves whether the proposed changes are meant to bring in that kind of enthusiasm, or merely to smooth over a possible incident.

Gulley's aim of creating an atmosphere of trust is also praiseworthy. The question is, will the proposed solution, which reeks of tokenism, enhance anyone's trust of the selection process? I think not.

IT TAKEN IN LARGE LOSES, THEREFUKE

Anthony Lewis Power of the word

(c) 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

BOSTON - There is a school of gloom among democratic political thinkers, typified by some comments of Daniel Patrick Moynihan. "Democracy on the American model," he wrote two years ago, is on the way to becoming "a holdover form of government, one which persists in isolated or peculiar places...but which has simply no relevance to the future. It is where the world was, not where it is going."

For those who hold that gloomy view, it is more than a political-science abstraction. It may affect, for example, their view of Soviet power and intentions. Senator Moynihan, in opposing Paul Warnke as arms control negotiator, said he based his vote on the belief that the "balance of world power is changing" toward the Soviets.

AGAIN, MOYNIHAN, a former ambassador to India, was ready to have the U.S. write that country off as soon as Indira Gandhi took dictatorial power. In an interview published in Playboy magazine this month he said:

"When India ceased to be a democracy, our actual interest there just plummeted. I mean, what does it export but communicable disease?"

The election returns in India swung Moynihan from gloom to euphoria. "Political democracy," he said, "has reasserted its claim on the future of the world."

BUT TRUE historical trends are not so changeable, and the world's future is not so instantly transformed. The gloom was overdone in the first place. Democracy is not so weak not in relation to the Soviet Union any more than it turned out to be inside India. And the strength of democracy is not to be measured in weapons alone.

The great point about the Indian election is that it was a victory of ideas. Freedom was in a contest with the claims of order and a full stomach, and freedom won. Millions of desperately poor people preferred the risks of freedom to Mrs. Gandhi's achievement in making the trains run on time.

It is important to take a steady and realistic view of democracy's strength in the world, not claiming too much or too little. India is not a pattern for different societies. In her history, freedom had taken root. Americans should have learned by now how futile it is to expect Western democracy to flourish in cultures where it has no roots: in Vietnam, say, or Angola.

BUT THERE is no reason for believers in democracy to lack self-confidence. That is surely the lesson, for Americans, of the Indian election. And I think the same point is to be seen in President Carter's bold words on behalf of human rights in the world, and in the Soviet Union's reaction to them.

Secretary Brezhnev's speech this week, denouncing "Washington's claims to teach others how to live," made some Americans who have doubted the wisdom of the Carter policy even more dubious. And of course there is reason for wise caution in pressing for human rights. This country cannot transform the Soviet system. As the President has repeatedly said, we do not want to sacrifice such vital objectives as arms limitation.

But the Brezhnev speech, on its face, did not seem to threaten other mutual interests of the superpowers because of the human rights issue. The linkage was soft - or so respected students of Soviet affairs thought. Brezhnev took a constructive position on arms limitation and the Middle East. He appeared to be inviting serious negotiations.

MOREOVER, THE speech has to be seen as having had an internal purpose as well as the external one of warning Carter not to push too far. That was to reassure those elements in the Soviet hierarchy who are worried about the effects of Helsinki and the Carter initiative and dissent in the U.S.S.R. and Eastern Europe - who worry about being able to keep the lid on. In this sense it was hardly a self-confident speech.

In short, the President's words and the reaction they have evoked demonstrate how powerful the idea of freedom can be.

illegal? No, and marijuana should not be either. At least it is not addictive.

Outdated values

To the Editor:

I would like to say that the letter in Friday's U.D. from "AMERICA" was a classic example of someone with a zero intellect mouthing off his outdated moral values. This isn't 1968 anymore! If marijuana is as dangerous as stated in that letter, then why would eight states in the U.S. decriminalize it? Another point that I should raise is; of all the government studies done concerning marijuana none have proven the existance of any harmful effects caused by marijuana usage. Even a study done about marijuana by the U.S. Army declared that no harmful effects could be found. I used to think that people had finally "grown-up" about marijuana. Well, evidently some people haven't. I couldn't believe my eyes when I read that letter's description of the "typical" marijuana user. The same description sounds like it came out of the Nixon Commission report on drug abuse. The fact is, nine years ago that description was true, but now it isn't. So why does this person stick to outdated ideas?

In conclusion I would like to say the ignorance of that author about marijuana is only surpassed by his ignorance about today's music. For his information Blue Oyster Cult performs a song called "Don't Fear the Reaper". That's reaper not reefer, you skoal - breath.

Extremely asinine To the Editor:

After reading the letter to the editor concerning the arguments against the use of marijuana in the April 15 edition of the U.D., I felt it necessary to submit a rebuttal to that letter.

Whomever you may be, I feel that your arguments are ineffective, unfactual, very bias, and extremely asinine.

DOONESBURY

Stereotyping the marijuana user was the most useless tactic of your letter. Stereotyping shows nothing but your crass ignorance, and makes your entire argument totally ineffective, particularly to the intellectual populace.

I could go on for several pages listing the intelligent, factual arguments for the use of marijuana, but due to space limitations, I will stop at the most important one. Marijuana is a victimless crime. No one is forced to buy or use marijuana. No one is a slave to the drug (as opposed to alcohol and tobacco) because there is no physical addiction. This is a free society and everyone should be able to decide if he or she wants to use marijuana. Bias attitudes, pious beliefs, and ignorance should never have the upper hand on any government policy. Intelligence, an open mind, and justice should always prevail.

Briscoe to present viewpoint

AUSTIN (AP) - Gov. Dolph Briscoe said Monday he plans to spend the next two days in Washington, trying to inject the "Texas viewpoint" into President Carter's forthcoming energy program.

Carter has said he expects to make his final decisions on an energy message to Congress on Wednesday.

Briscoe left no doubt at a news conference that despite a hectic period in the legislative session, his mind was almost entirely on energy matters. He called Carter's message "the most pressing and important matter at this time."

He also reiterated his dissatisfaction with portions of the plan reportedly advanced by Carter's energy czar, James Schlesinger, particularly ceilings on intrastate natural gas prices and allocation of gas among the states.

Plane crash claims two more

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - History's worst aviation disaster claimed two more victims Monday, a man and a woman who survived the jumbo jet airliners collision on the Canary Islands but died from severe burns suffered in the tragedy.

A spokesman at Brooke Army Medical Center's special burn treatment unit identified the latest victims as Mrs. Dorthea Kershaw, 58, of Borrego Springs, Calif., and Charles Miller, 73, of Escondido, Calif.

Their deaths brought the toll in the collision to at least 579.

Mrs. Kershaw and Miller were among 14 crash survivors, 12 of them badly burned, who were airlifted here March 31, four days after a Dutch KLM jumbo jet collided with a Pan American jumbo jet on the runway at Santa Cruz de Tenerife in the Canary Islands.

Kirk Dooley Take a letter...please

What's the latest in the Double T at least a dozen football players on campus newer group, the Varsity Letter people, are They're programed to do that. now the official letter honorary at Tech since Life.

the way they are and stay off campus. They will take only boys and continue their "harsh" initiations. Nobody's gonna bother them about the Title IX trash but their initiation practices have caught the eye of some of the big wigs on campus. Why?

Let's say some 250-pound football player is allergic to being mumified in athletic tape and passes out in Weymouth while they carry him out. Or how about some proud athlete who suddenly wants to keep his body hair, puts up a fight and accidentally gets hurt. If the Dean of Students gets a report on something like that, he has no choice but to fully investigate the incident and try to bring charges against ... the Double T? No, the school can't file charges against an organization which is not recognized on campus. But...

If a letterman is injured in a situation like that, every person involved is individually liable since his is a registered student at this school. Hazing applies to invididuals as well as organizations.

So this athlete files charges because he can't have kids anymore or his leg gets broken or something, and the media gets hold of it.

In New York they'll be saying things like "All the athletes at Texas Tech have to get beat up before they can play and one football player got hurt and filed charges." Recruiting would be damaged, lawsuits could get pretty hairy and millionaire sugar daddies would support Tech with less financial enthusiasm.

Could this happen? Hell yes it could.

When Tommy Duniven and Harmon Morgan had a little conflict earlier this school year papers and magazines all across the nation jumped on it. When I worked for the Cotton Bowl Association over the Christmas holidays, the Atlantic coast press corps grilled me on it when they found out I was from Tech. ("Oh, you're from Tech? That's where the quarterbacks don't go to class, ha, ha, ha...".) I told them things weren't like they thought and that I could personally relate with Tommy on his situation. All agreed that things were blown out of proportion by the press. But if a Double T man gets injured, the press would have a field day.

Association-Varsity Letter Association who have their goals set at lettering then situation? Here's the way it stands: The sweating it out again to join an honorary.

On the other hand, there should be an they are registered with the Dean of Student honorary open to all lettered athletes from all sports who don't have to lose their pubic The Double T men decided to keep things hair, etc., to gain entry to an honorary.

> So there we have it. Everybody should be happy. The Double T will still exist but will remain an non-entity as far as the school goes. The Varsity Letter Association, with a base representation of four men's sports and three women's sports, will be the official Tech letter honorary and will receive the rights thereof. Everybody understand? Good.

Why don't we change the subject ...

IN WASHINGTON, D.C. last Tuesday the University of Maryland - Georgetown University baseball game was called over because the Maryland coach pulled his team when he couldn't find a free parking place on the Georgetown campus.

"If you're going to charge me a dollar to get in, then I'm not going in," said coach Jack Jackson. "It's the principle." (Yea, Jack!) Jackson and three players then tried another lot and security guards called a tow truck to haul Jackson's car away.

"The only way to do it is to run over me," said Jackson as he stood between the tow truck and his car. He then took his team and drove back to Maryland, but the Georgetown coach refused to accept a forfeit win.

LAST TUESDAY AT the University of Illinois they had a "If You Are Gay, Wear Blue Jeans Day," and reports said that literally hundreds of students swarmed home during the day to change out of denim jeans and into whatever they could find. The theme was intended to "raise the consciousness of the university about gayness, to see if people will be afraid to wear blue jeans and to see what happens."

As it turned out, Gay day ironically sent most students to their closets.

IN DALLAS THEY call Kyle Rote Jr. The Rookie, but a quick glance at the Tornado starting lineup makes Rote look like an old man. Five of the starters include Glenn Myernick (22), Neil Cohen (21), Tony Bellinger (19), Steve Pecher (21) and Kevin Kewley (22).

Golfers struggle

Led by junior Joe Moss, Tech's golf team struggled its way to a 21st place finish at the All-American Intercollegiate Tournament at Houston, April 16.

Moss put in a four-round total of 295. His tally was none strokes off the pace of medalist David Ishii of Houston. Ishii edged Buddy Gardner of Auburn on the first hole of sudden death. After 72 holes the duo were tied at 286.

Other Tech individual totals were as follows: Rex Robertson, 313; Dennis Northington, 315; Mel Calendar, 315; and Kent Wood, 320. The Red Raider five combined for a team total of 1,238.

The winning team, Oklahoma State, turned in a total of 1,162, 10 over par. Led by Ishii, Houston took the runner-up slot with a 1,166 total.

Rockets open playoff action

HOUSTON (AP) - Central Division champion Houston, among the new rich in the National Basketball Association (NBA), hosts playoff-wise Washington Tuesday night in the first game of their best-of-seven NBA quarterfinals playoff series.

The Bullets, who lost three of four regular season games to the Rockets, advanced to the second round of the playoffs Sunday when guard Tom Henderson scored a season high 31 points in a 104-98 victory over Cleveland.

As divisional champions, the Rockets received a first round bye.

Despite Houston's regular season edge over the Bullets, Washington leads the overall series with Houston 17-44. Only two other teams, Boston and Los Angeles, have dominated the Rockets as completely.

The Rockets, under new ownership and coaching, are making their second start in the NBA PLAYOFFS IN THEIR 10-YEAR HISTORY. Washington center Wes Unseld alone has more minutes in playoff time than the entire Rocket team.

Because of Houston's youthfulness, Rocket Coach Tom Nissalke is glad to have a seven-game series.

"Anything can happen in a three-game series," Nissalke said. "You could go against a team like, say Denver, and they could blow you out on any given night on your own court and then go back home and do the same thing and it's all over.

"But in a seven-game series, I think the best team usually wins."

Rockets forward Rudy Tomjanovich is a veteran who played on Houston's only other playoff team two years ago but is as excited as a rookie.

"I'm a happy man today," said Tomjanovich, the Rockets' leading scorer. "Every year since I've been here it's always been 'What's the problem now? Who's going to be the coach this year?' But Coach Nissalke has turned it all around.

"Until this year, every month we'd have our team meetings where we cussed each other out and blamed all our problems on someone else. That's not the case any more. For once I can say I'm proud to be a Rocket."

Houston's improvement can be traced to the acquisition of 6-10 Moses Malone from Buffalo and blending his skills with incumbent center Kevin Kunnert.

Malone finished the regular season in third place among NBA rebounders with a 13.1 average and he was second in total rebounds with 1.072.

Former University of Houston All-American Elvin Hayes leads the Bullets in both scoring and rebounding. Hayes, who formerly played for the Rockets, averaged 23.7 points, eighth best in the NBA, and 12.5 rebounds.
