Carter pushes canal treaty

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter, rallying allies Monday in his fight for ratification of the Panama Canal treaty, told a new committee laden with veterans from past diplomatic battles that the American people don't know the facts about the pact.

"This is one of the most important and most difficult and perhaps most controversial international steps our country has taken," Carter told members of the Committee of Americans for the Canal Treaties, who met with him at the

"I know you are convinced what we do this year and next year about the treaty will have far reaching impact not only on ourselves as we relate to Panama but to the entire Western Hemisphere, indeed perhaps to the world.

"It's crucial to me that the American people understand the facts about the treaty, which so far have not been successfully promulgated," the President said. He thanked the committee for its bipartisan effort to mount what it calls "a national program of education" about the need to ratify the pact.

The committee is headed by Averell Harriman, former ambassador to Moscow and a onetime ambassador at large who has served past administrations on missions around the world. It includes business and labor leaders, former military officers and senior officials in several past

They will become part of Carter's fight to win ratification of the canal treaty in the Senate, where it is opposed by conservatives. Carter, who has said much of his future clout in Congress on foreign policy matters is riding on approval of the pact, also has acknowledged that ratification is in doubt.

The President spoke to the panel during a busy day at the White House.

LCHD continues study

Lubbock County Hospital District board of managers decided Monday to continue studying information regarding the controversy over restricting victims of violent acts as indigent care patients.

Managers said they needed more time to study the idea.

Also at the regular meeting of the district, the members found that the cost of finishing the hospital-medical school complex parking lot would require dipping into the district's reserve fund.

The parking lot will cost $200,000 more than expected because of inflationary factors such as fill, drainage and demolition problems.

The parking lot may not be finished until late spring, after the Feb. 1 opening of the hospital.

Rec Sports receives grant

The Tech Recreational Sports Department will receive a $348 grant

Wednesday from the Student Foundation.

"The recreational department would like to use the money for improvements in facilities and programs," Joe MacLean director of recreational sports, said. Immediate plans for the money include using a portion of the money to help pay for a scoreboard in the Women's Gym,

The foundation raised this money through Senior Challenge in 1976-77 year. Senior Challenge was a fund-raising drive that attempted to establish good alumni relations with individuals before they graduate, George Fielden, assistant to the vice president for development said.

Student Foundation members will distribute Senior Challenge funds as follows: 35 per cent for academic recruiting; 20 per cent for scholarships; 20 per cent for freshmen orientation; 20 per cent for recreational sports; and five per cent for the Student Foundation administration.

Job seminar slated

Tips on getting a job will be the topic of a job seminar slated for 7:30 p.m. today in 126 Holden Hall. The event, which is sponsored by Women in Communications, Inc. (WICI), is open to everyone, Kim Palmer, WICI vice president, said.

Harmon Morgan, assistant professor of mass communications, will lead the seminar. He will offer information on filling out vita sheets and applications, and preparing for interviews.

Morgan will also offer tips on what employers look for in possible employes, and what questions job-seekers are required to answer.

Literature on the job market will also be distributed.

"The whole student body is invited," Palmer said. The program will be "very informative." There is no charge for the seminar.

Micro-computers gain 'everyday' prominence

UD Reporter Computers traditionally have been viewed as the way for large companies to save time and money. The closest an individual was supposed to come to a computer was the handy pocket calculator.

But what Bill Brewer, director of technical writing at Tech, describes as an "explosion" in personal computers has hit the Lubbock area. The computers, or more accurately microcomputers, are now available to individuals and can help a person do almost anything, Brewer said, from editing texts to formulating grocery

"Micro-computers are less structured than calculators," Brewer said. "They essentially do for the individual what the larger machines have been doing for businesses for Marketing of the machines began in the Lubbock area about three months ago, Brewer said. Average cost of a personal computer is approximately $1,500, he said.

'They are very small, about the size portable," Brewer said. "One company markets one that roughly resembles a television screen with a cassette tape to plug in."

Most of the computers come unassembled but are relatively easy to build he said.

"Most manufacturers market microcomputers without any sort of reservation for a novice building one," Brewer said. "Any citizen with the good sense not to burn himself with a soldering iron can put one together."

And once the machine is assembled it can be programmed to do a multitude of jobs. To help persons learn about the applications of these machines, the West Texas Computer Club was formed in June, Brewer said.

The club met throughout the summer and was formalized in September with Brewer named as president of the organization. Currently 40 persons from Lubbock and a 50-mile radius of the city belong to the group.

"About half the members are facultystaff or students at Tech," Brewer said. "The others are just local businessmen, farmers and some Texas Instruments employes who are not involved in electronics but think of it as a good

The primary purpose of the club, Brewer said, is to get more information on micro-computers and their applications to the club membewrs. But one of the club's more important functions, he said, is the trading of various computer programs.

"If someone has worked out a way that the computer can serve as a burglar alarm system, they may trade that program with someone who has developed a program to keep a tally of a car's mileage," Brewer said.

While working out the various programs is indeed fun, Brewer said, most of the club members are interested in the serious applications of the micro-computers.

"It's a good hobby but it's hard to determine just where hobby leaves off and job picks up ," Brewer said. "Most of the club members view (microcomputers) as a way to help out both personally and on the job."

Brewer uses his micro-computer for editing texts used in technical writing. "We practically have to turn around pages of copy and it would be too much to retype," he said. "The computer can do it easily and can also keep the changes in its memory bank."

Brewer said micro-computers also help in test grading.

"They can cut the grading time of a true-false test by about three-fourths,"

And Brewer sees micro-computers being used for computer-assisted instruction within the next few years. With this type of instruction, he said, a student could sit down in front of his personal computer with a program from the teacher and virtually learn by himself and at his own rate of speed.

"The computer could respond to student questions, prompt him and present material selectively by learning what the student already knows about a subject and then presenting only material that he doesn't know," he said, with the large computers this system just isn't feasible, but it can work with microcomputers," Brewer said. "So they save time and efficiency all the way

United Way campaign reaches half way mark

The Texas Tech United Way Campaign has now reached slightly more than half its $46,500 goal, chairman Cecil Mackey announced Monday.

'With this morning's report meeting we have amassed $28,165.29. I am confident that we will receive the balance during the next 7-10 days," Dr. Mackey commented.

NASULGC releases minority survey

UD Reporter

Minority enrollment is increasing faster than total student enrollment at state and land-grant universities, according to a recent survey of over 100 American institutions.

The survey shows total enrollment at 131 of 136 member institutions of the National Association of State Universities and Land-Grant Colleges (NASULGC) up by 4.2 per cent during a four-year period ending in 1976.

Full-time minority enrollment grew by 16.8 per cent between 1974 and 1976 at 121 surveyed colleges, while total full-time enrollment increased by only 6.3 per cent over the same period. The survey shows some progress in affirmative action recruiting over the past decade, much of which has focused on increasing the number of blacks in American colleges. A measure of the progress of such programs is the degree to which blacks are being assimilated into predominantly white institutions.

The NASULGC survey shows about 60 per cent of all black students enrolled at state and land-grant universities within the continental United States were attending 17 traditionally black colleges and universities.

Similar figures for 1976 show the situation reversed, with over 68 per cent of the total black student population at state and land-grant universities which can be classed as predominantly white.

The number of predominantly white campuses with black enrollments of more than 1,000 has also increased from four in 1968 to 37 in 1976.

One of the campuses with more than 1,000 black students is in Texas. The central campus of the University of Houston shows a black enrollment of 3,400 students.

Traditionally, black colleges among the 131 surveyed campuses have also increased enrollment of whites. During the nine-year survey period, non-white students at these schools has grown from 4.4 per cent to about 15 per cent. Tech enrollment figures for 1977 show minority and foreign student enrollment of slightly over 12 per cent, with blacks comprising only 1.6 per cent of total enrollment. This is below the 15.2 per cent minority and foreign student enrollment figures for the surveyed institutions.

If the school complies with the law at present, it may be violating terms in the accredidation agreement with the Association of American Medical Colleges, according to John W. Pelley, assistant dean of admissions. According to a recent Time magazine article, medical schools will lose aid amounting to $1,400 per student a year if they do not comply with the law. The law would increase the number of third-year students in the schools. Paul Donelan, deputy director of the American Medical Association, speaking at a press conference recently, said the total number of transfer students involved is about 900.

Tech Medical School has applied for a waiver of the law, Pelley said. If the waiver is accepted, Tech will be exempt from the law, he said.

Tech will probably be exempt Pelley said, because the Liaison Committee on Medical Education, the committee which recommended the medical school be removed from probation, will not accept a larger class size. "Compliance by expansion of our junior class would violate our accredidation agreement," Pelley said. Schools such as Yale, Harvard, Cornell and Stanford are resisting the law. Time reported the schools may reject the federal funding rather than comply with the law.

Objections to the law include a concern that the foreign schools do not train the students as well as American schools. Schools also say they will be forced to fit even more students into already too-full facilities and the medical schools will have no voice in the transfer process.

Russell C. Baskett, associate dean for academic and student affairs, said the school will probably be exempt from

Carter: fists up

WASHINGTON-At some point it was clear that President Carter, with his noble yearnings, gentle manners, and political ambitions, would have to decide where to yield to his opponents or fight them on energy control, arms control, and the Middle East.

His latest press conference indicates that he has decided to fight, or at least to get his dukes up. He accused the big oil companies of taking advantage of the oil crisis, of "grabbing" and of "profiteering," and insisting on a policy that "could develop with the passing months as the biggest rip-off in history."

This is an interesting switch for the President. More than any other chief executive since the last World War, Carter respects and uses the English language carefully and accurately, so his attack on the oil companies is probably no accident. "In 1973, for instance, just before the OPEC price rise and the oil embargo," he said, "the oil and gas industries had an annual income of $18 billion. Under our proposal by 1985. . .their annual income would be about $100 billion. . .

"But the oil companies and gas companies," he said, "are now demanding and making some progress—on their demands. It is $150 billion. The difference will not encourage increased production of oil. But that difference will come out of the pockets of the American consumers and go into the pockets of the oil companies themselves."

Every president since the last World War has started out promising to cooperate with everybody-even Franklin Roosevelt, who began by promising to balance the budget and then blew it-but all of them had ultimately come to the point of confrontation.

Roosevelt took on the bankers. Kennedy took on big steel. Eisenhower defied the isolationists in his own party. Nixon, who had villified the Chinese, finally compromised with Peking, And Carter is now fighting, not only the oil companies and big steel, but also the blacks, and the labor unions who helped elect him and even the Congressional leaders of his own party.

There has been a serious debate within the

Carter administration among his friends and his cabinet members for weeks now about what is called "high-risk" politics—whether to face up to the oil, gas, welfare, tax, and other special interest lobbies at home, and also take on the pro-Israeli lobby abroad.

This debate has not yet been resolved, but Carter has clearly decided to take some risks. He is now concentrating on energy policy at home and arms control abroad, and risking the opposition of the Israelis, to get a Geneva conference on the Middle East.

Carter's energy policy, which he emphasized in his press conference this week and will take to the nation in the next few days, is central to both his domestic and foreign policy. If he loses on this, he will clearly be in deep trouble.

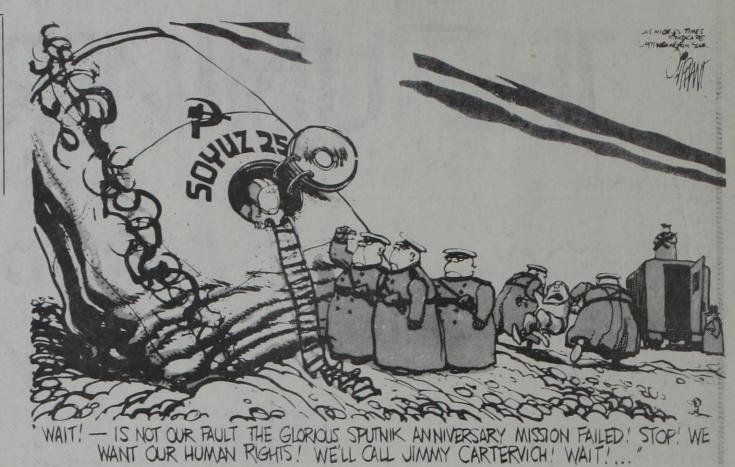

Likewise, having agreed with the Soviet Union on a process for going to a Geneva Middle East conference, he has committed the authority of his government and risked his prestige.

He is also playing high-risk politics with his Panama Canal treaties. And if he is rejected by the Congress on Panama, arms control, and on a Geneva Middle East conference, then he will clearly have the first major crisis of his administration.

Accordingly, he has finally decided to face up to all this and appeal to the American people over the head of the Congress. If the information here is correct, he has done so with the greatest reluctance, but the authority and respect of his administration is now at stake.

In his press conference, he has said, in effect, that the security of the nation is at stake in his energy program. Abroad, he has bet on a compromise with the Soviet Union on arms control and a Middle East peace conference, both of which are being challenged, not only by the Republican opposition but by his own party.

Finally, Carter has apparently recognized, after the diversions of Bert Lance and many other secondary issues, that if he cannot get consent of his own party on energy, arms control, Panama and the Middle East, there will be no way that he can negotiate effectively with Moscow, Peking, or any of the other major capitals of the world.

A Tip and Leon show

WASHINGTON — When House Speaker Tip O'Neill was faced by a revolt of young Congressmen embarrassed by the foot-dragging on the Koreagate investigation, he turned to a Certified Media Sacred Cow, Texas Democrat Leon Jaworski, to put on a big show of prober's probity.

The Speaker's strategy has worked. Nobody criticizes the House Ethics Committee's halfhearted poking around; Republicans on the committee are regularly denied access to information gathered by the Jaworski staff; and as one top Democrat reports, "no sitting member is in trouble."

Former Special Prosecutor Jaworski is not a man who tolerates criticism. At the risk of eliciting another Queeg-like letter from him threatening a libel suit, let me suggest that his misunderstanding of his assignment—as well as his attempt to cut off minority member participation in a scandal affecting mainly the Democratic majority-plays directly into Tip's

The containment strategy became apparent when Sue Park Thomson revealed, at Republican urging, what she had said in testimony: that when people called former Speaker Carl Albert's office, looking for lobbyist Tongsun Park, she would often refer them to Tip O'Neill's office, where Park could often be found.

Mrs. Thomson had every right to reveal her own testimony. But this caused Jaworski to demand House Resolution 752, permitting a Congressional staff to take testimony without any Congressman present. This unheard-of "zero member quorum" has passed the O'Neilldominated Rules Committee, and-if passed by the full House-would make it impossible for Congressmen to know how narrowly Jaworski interprets his charge.

While this arrogation of power to contain the investigation was going on, a curious charade took place that seems intended to show that Jaworski is following all leads, and that O'Neill is an aggrieved innocent. A story was leaked last week that the Speaker's rent records were being subpoenaed; the Speaker gleefully confirmed the story, adding that he was volunteering his cancelled rent checks to show Tongsun Park never paid the O'Neill rent.

Something fishy about that byplay: If Jaworski were serious about following a lead, he would have subpoenaed the O'Neill checks and bank deposit records, which he had not done.

Next week, to give the illusion of relentless progress, Jaworski will treat the committee to open hearings. As of today, the plan is to limit the hearings to a showing of how Tongsun Park operated on behalf of the Korean C.I.A., mentioning only Congressmen previously (No sitting members need be named. concerned.)

The staff will show what its subpoenas have turned up. The American Express Company and Hilton Hotels have produced travel records; Diplomat National Bank and Equitable Trust Company of Baltimore records will show some of the banking maneuvers of Tongsun Park and former Congressman Richard Hanna; we will examine stock dealings in a company named Spectrostrip.

The related New Jersey firms of the Connell Rice & Sugar Company and the St. John's Maritime Company—represented by former San Francisco Mayor Joseph Alioto-will reveal some of their operations, and may explain contributions by their owners to various former Congressmen.

To liven up the hearings, Gen. Kim Hung Wook will repeat his story of K.C.I.A. chicanery, but the star witness is supposed to be K.C.I.A. defector Kim Sang Kuen, appearing courtesy of the Justice Department, which holds him in protective custody. They will explain what the Koreans did.

But we are not now scheduled to learn how many present members of Congress were on the take. We will never uncover the cover-up until the following heat is applied to Congress by press

Every member of Congress should be required to come before the Ethics Committee-UNDER OATH-to testify about what, if anything, the Congressman took from foreign agents. Until now, Jaworski has been satisfied by an unsworn questionnaire that clears no innocent officeholders and worries no guilty ones.

Every member of the Ethics Committee, even Republicans, should be given lawful access to all the information gathered by its staff and forwarded to the committee by Justice and the C.E.A. This would make certain no areas are being overlooked and no Speakers, past or present, are being treated gingerly.

Moreover, the House should pass a resolution now, this week, cutting off all aid to South Korea until such time as that Government produces Tongsun Park and other witnessesprepared to cooperate and subject to U.S. penalties for perjury-for examination both before a grand jury in secrecy and the House committee in open session.

Theorist challenges classic concept of Greek democracy

By PAUL ANASTASSIADES

ATHENS, Greece (AP) - A French Marxist philosopher has touched off a controversy by attacking the classic conception of ancient Greece as the cradle of democracy.

Roger Garaudy, who contends the historical accounts of ancient Greece's triumphs were a "European imperialist invention," first made his comments while in Greece to attend a socialist symposium. His views were then serialized in an Athens newspaper and critically taken up in a new interview by another paper.

"The democracy of Pericles, which was based on the raw exploitation of 400,000 slaves. to me does not differ greatly from today's South Africa," Garaudy said in the interview with Apogevmatini.

The newspaper angrily concluded: "So the history of ancient Greece is being turned into a myth. We are lucky they still allow us Sophocles and Euripides. Our progressive friends...seem to prefer Greece without any history. Just sunshine, sea, wine and bouzouki music."

Garaudy described Herodotus, the ancient Greek historian, as a bought-off writer. "Herodotus is someone whose testimony I don't pay too much attention to. He loved money and wrote much when paid well," Garaudy said.

Garaudy, a former member of the French Communist party, did accept, however, that apart from the alleged slaves there was genuine democracy among the rest of the population in the 5th--century B.C. "Golden Age of Pericles."

Greek historians, however, refuse to describe as slaves those who, for example, pulled the enormous marble pillars that built the Acropolis monuments and which stand today as a symbol of the roots of Western civilization. They are described as workers who ate and lived with their superiors.

Greek President Constantine Tsatsos. considered one of the country's most prominent men of letters, in a recent article indirectly replying to Garaudy, attacked such criticism of ancient Greece. He described Marxism-Leninism as "the latest stage of romanticism" and appealed for an international "return to the spirt of Acropolis."

He said that era witnessed the most successful balance of all political and cultural trends, peaceably reflected in its art.

Tsatsos has written the prologue to French President Valery Giscard d'Estaing's book on democracy.

Garaudy also doubted historic accounts of the 490 B.C. Battle of Marathon and 480 B.C. naval battle of Salamis. In both cases history has it that the far-out-numbered Greeks managed to heavily defeat the invading Persians.

Such events have been held sacred in Western teaching as symbolic of the spirit of democracy and civilization against force and barbarism. Garaudy said the example had been inversely taken to justify Western European imperialism and "protective intervention" in other areas.

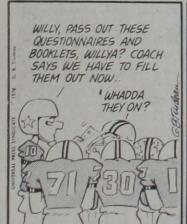

Garaudy added that only a minority of ancient Greeks could claim the virtues credited to the era.

At the Battle of Marathon, 30,000 Persians were routed by 10,000 Greeks when their expected support from the sympathizers of a local Greek dictator did not materialize.

Garaudy finally found it acceptable to describe the ancient king and military campaigner Alexander the Great 356-323 B.C. only as "Mr. Alexander" and said the Chinese civilization of that same time was far worthier of glorification.

The second reason I went with the "men in blue" was their team unity and lack of griping. New York is very similar to the Oakland teams of a few years ago. Centroversy seems to make the squad play better on the field.

After the Dodgers' 10-4 win over New York on Sunday, the Yanks hold a three game to two advantage.

TONIGHT COULD be the night that the Dodgers fall. For one thing, the series has moved back to Yankee Stadium. This is a definite advantage for the Yanks, because their fans are the loudest, rowdiest and most enthusiastic in the league. Not to mention the fact that they run onto the field during the game more than any other fans.

I'm going to stick with my pick to the last out of (Although I wished I had picked New York.) Like coaches and broadcasters always seem to mention, "the game is not over until the last out is made." At least this reporter hopes the Dodgers can rally!

This year's World Series has lacked one thing-good television commentators. Normally, the NBC team of Tony Kubek and Joe Garagiola would be giving the blow by blow description of the Series. But this season ABC managed to gain the coverage of the season finals.

HOWARD COSELL and Keith Jackson are good football commentators, and that's stretching it in Cosell's case. But, they can't do baseball coverage worth a hill of beans or a stack of baseballs.

Cosell hasn't said anything worth listening to in all the games thus far. I might be eating a column but I wish Cosell would bite a baseball!
