City Council run-off today

M.J. "Bud" Aderton and Bob Schmidt will face each other once again in today's run-off election for place three on the City Council.

In the April 1 election, Aderton polled 946 more votes than Schmidt. All regular polling places across the city will be open from 7 a.m. until 7 p.m. Tech students living on campus can cast their ballots at the Municipal Auditorium, 4th Street and Boston Avenue.

Jury deliberations delayed

SANTA ANA, Calif. (AP) — The start of jury deliberations in the murder trial of a doctor accused of strangling a fetus that survived an abortion was delayed Monday when the defendant was involved in a traffic accident.

Dr. William B. Waddill Jr., whose obstetrics practice was the largest in Orange County when the abortion was performed on a 17-year-old girl in March 1977, was not injured in Monday's collision. He was on his way to court at the time. A person in the other car was hospitalized, said defense attorney Charles Weedman.

Orange County Superior Court Judge James K. Turner said the defendant would have to be present before he could give jurors legal instructions and submit the case for their judgment.

The instructions were drafted during lengthy meetings with attorneys.

If convicted, Waddill faces a maximum sentence of 20 years in prison on the murder charges or as little as six months if convicted of attempted second-degree murder.

Personnel from Westminster Community Hospital were the main witnesses at Waddill's three-month trial. They told varying versions of what happened after the 42-year-old doctor rushed to the hospital upon hearing of the live birth.

Although Waddill is charged with first-degree murder in the alleged strangling, the prosecution has given jurors options to find him guilty even if they decide he did not strangle the baby.

Deputy District Attorney Robert Chatterton told jurors in his final argument they could convict Waddill if they find that he allowed the baby's death by failing to use extraordinary medical measures to save her life.

The jury has five possible verdicts to deliberate — first-degree or second-degree murder, attempted first-degree or second-degree murder or acquittal.

Weedman urged the panel to find Waddill innocent, stressing that the baby would have been severely brain-damaged had it survived.

Court refuses to rule on issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Supreme Court refused Monday to decide whether broadcasters are legally responsible when fictional violence is imitated in real life, clearing the way for a trial that could be crucial to the future of television.

The issue someday may return to the high court, but Monday's action opened the way for an unprecedented trial in San Francisco.

In the trial, NBC and television station KRON-TV must defend themselves against a lawsuit seeking $11 million for a 9-year-old girl sexually assaulted four days after a network movie dramatically portrayed a similar crime.

Lawyers for the girl charge that NBC and the San Francisco station were "negligent" and "reckless" in allowing the movie to be broadcast in the early evening when young persons were sure to be in the viewing audience.

On Sept. 10, 1974, NBC televised a fictional drama, "Born Innocent," depicting the life of an unwanted child, a teen-aged girl. In one scene, the girl is attacked by other females at a reformatory school and is sexually assaulted with a wooden handle.

Four days later, a 9-year-old San Francisco girl was attacked by four older girls on a local beach and "raped" with a beer or soft drink bottle.

A state trial judge dismissed the ensuing civil suit against NBC and KRON but a state appeals court ordered that a jury trial be held on charges raised by the girl's lawyers.

After the California Supreme Court refused to review the case, NBC and KRON came to the nation's highest court—arguing that the trial would set a dangerous precedent.

The court's vote Monday to deny the appeal was 8-1. Justice William J. Brennan Jr. wanted to hear arguments in the case.

Berkowitz declared competent

NEW YORK (AP) — Declaring that David R. Berkowitz displays an "understanding of his predicament," a judge ruled Monday that the 24-year-old postal clerk is mentally competent to stand trial for the last of the six "Son of Sam" murders.

State Supreme Court Justice Joseph R. Corso set a May 8 trial date after making his finding that the defendant is able to understand the charges against him and assist in his own defense.

But the competency finding makes it possible for Berkowitz to plead guilty, a desire he has expressed several times. Should the judge be willing to accept such a plea, it would enable Berkowitz to avoid a trial altogether.

Berkowitz' lawyers want him to plead innocent by reason of insanity—a plea that is still possible despite the finding that he understands the charges against him.

Even should he be ordered to stand trial, it probably would not start before June because the defense has filed several pre-trial motions.

Berkowitz has been charged with killing six persons with a .44 caliber revolver over a 12-month period in the Bronx, Queens and Brooklyn. The case before Corso involves only the last shooting, in which Stacy Moskowitz was killed and her date wounded in Brooklyn.

In tapes played at a first competency hearing last year, Berkowitz admitted the slayings but said he acted at the command of blood-thirsty demons. He said he wanted to plead guilty and warn the world of the demons. He rejected the idea of an insanity defense on grounds that it would destroy the credibility of his warning.

After Monday's ruling defense lawyers reiterated that they wanted to pursue an insanity defense, but acknowledged that "the one thing we can't do" is decide how the defendant will plead.

Judge Corso kept the 349-page transcript of the four-day competency hearing sealed, pending selection and sequestering of a jury. The testimony was taken in closed hearings earlier this month in a make-shift courtroom at Kings County Hospital, where Berkowitz is held and where another judge had found Berkowitz competent in a similar hearing last October.

WEATHER

Weather for Lubbock and vicinity calls for generally fair skies with a warming trend. Highs today will be in the upper 70s with lows tonight in the upper 40s. Winds will be southeasterly.

Briscoe promises support for school of nursing

By LARRY ELLIOTT
UD Reporter

After a tour of the Tech Medical School Monday, Gov. Dolph Briscoe told Tech President Cecil Mackey he will work for the addition of a college of nursing to the facility.

"I was impressed that Tech has moved along rapidly in their Med School program and by the fact that 120 entering freshmen will be in the school next fall," Briscoe said. "I would like to see the figure increased to 200 as soon as possible."

Briscoe said he lists medical and health care needs in Texas as one of his priorities, and hopes to increase the number of trained health care personnel in state professional schools.

"I can and would support such a proposal before the legislature. I realize there is a need for more doctors and nurses within the state," Briscoe said.

During the Med School tour, Briscoe and wife Janey saw an experiment to study heart stress using four live, pumping rat hearts, a brain wave experiment monitoring electrodes implanted in a cat's brain that may solve the riddle of certain sleep disorders and visited with hospital personnel.

Briscoe called for expansion of the Tech Medical School freshman class enrollment to 200 students "as rapidly as possible" at a press conference after his tour of the research facilities.

He told Mackey the shortage of nurses in the Panhandle area and all over Texas could be eased by a school of nursing at Tech.

During discussions with Briscoe, Mackey told the governor there is a long waiting list for admission to the Tech Med School and the school is having to send nursing candidates elsewhere, which hurts Tech and the medical profession.

Briscoe seemed impressed with the progress of the Med School and said he feels a facility that "would train young people in areas where jobs exist" should be added.

Briscoe, who faces a tough challenge in the Democratic gubernatorial primary from Atty. Gen. John Hill, said his record of "no new taxes" and "fiscal responsibility" will gain him a victory over Hill without a run-off election.

"Texas has the strongest economy of any major state," Briscoe said. "It has the best business climate and can attract industries that create more jobs for Texans."

He said the prosperity of the state is causing voters to turn to his campaign and "think about it seriously."

"Shall we continue what we have going for us in this state, which makes Texas, and the economy of this state, and the economy of the Lubbock area the envy of people in other states ... or shall we follow the path that has been disastrous for other states?" he asked.

Briscoe had earlier demanded that the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA) make public their tape recordings of interviews with him and Hill. He restated that demand Monday, saying that Hill overpromised during the interview to get the TSTA endorsement.

"When public money is being pledged, the public has the right to know what is being pledged," he said. "How much more he (Hill) promised than the amount admitted to no one knows until those tapes are made public."

Briscoe said he was "certainly not told" his interview with the TSTA group would be kept confidential, and hopes "the public can have the benefit of the doubt" as to what went on at the meeting.

And will Briscoe be re-elected to make good his promise to Mackey to increase Tech Med School facilities?

"I'm very optimistic at this point," Briscoe said. "A race is not won at this point, but the potential of winning it and winning without a run-off is there."

Committee requests subpoenas for tapes

AUSTIN (AP) — A House subcommittee asked its parent committee and another panel Monday to consider issuing subpoenas for tapes of the teacher lobby's interviews with gubernatorial candidates.

Rep. Jim Nugent, D-Kerrville, subcommittee chairman, said he would immediately send the request to the House Public Education Committee and the House Administration Committee.

It would be five days before the committees could meet because of House rules on posting of notice.

Nugent claims Attorney General John Hill made a "back room deal" to win the endorsement of the Texas Educators Political Action Committee—an arm of the Texas State Teachers Association (TSTA).

Nugent is a supporter of Gov. Dolph Briscoe for re-election, as is Rep. Tom Massey, D-San Angelo, chairman of the full education committee.

Rep. Pete Laney, D-Hale Center, administration committee chairman, said if his committee takes up the request, it would be later than Saturday — a week from primary election day.

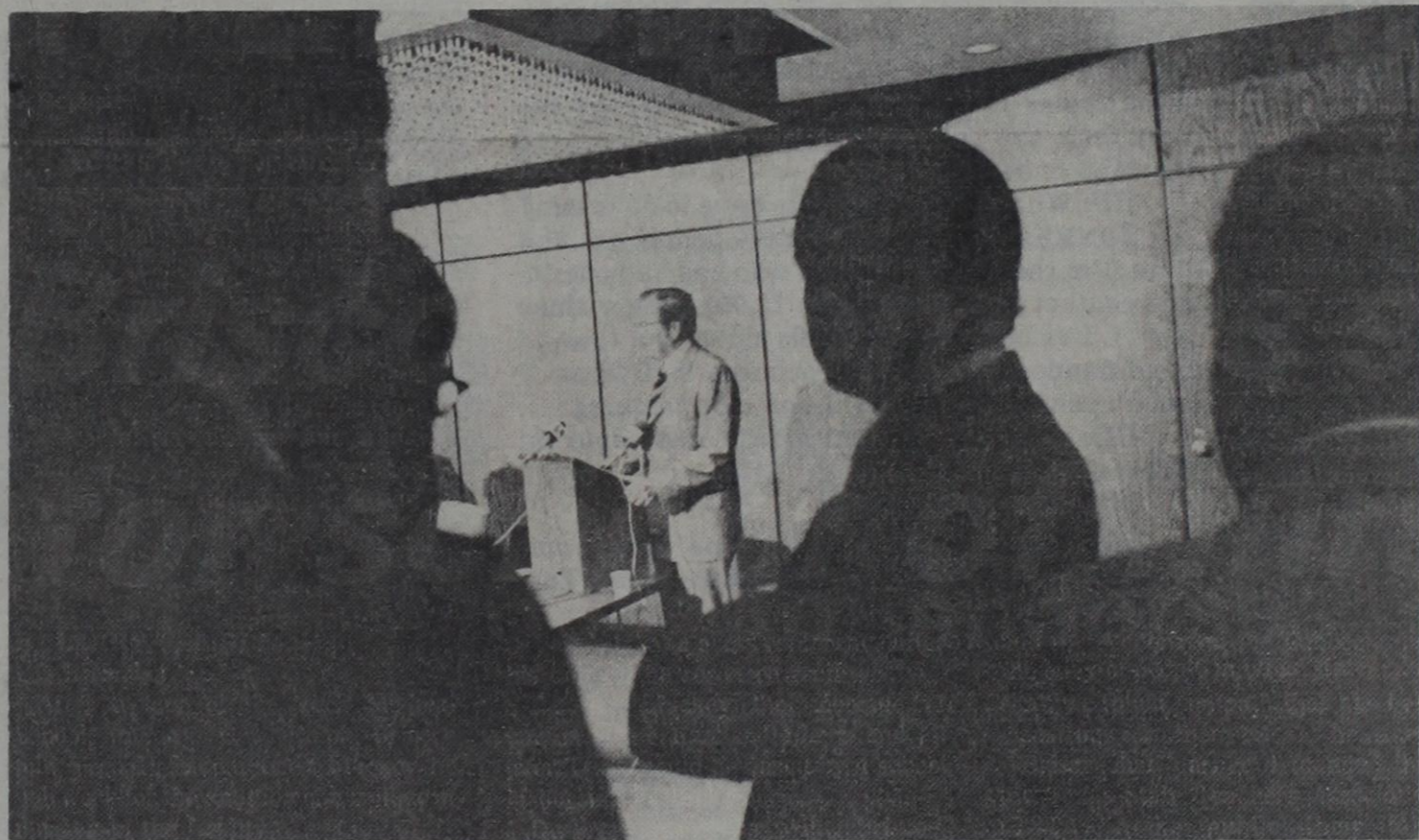

"I guess Massey and I will have to visit to see what our authority is," Laney said in a telephone interview from his farm near Plainview.

Laney said he is a Briscoe supporter but was not conversant with the dispute over the TSTA tape.

"I have not been keeping up with it. I've got my district to represent ... I don't know enough about it to comment," Laney said.

Nugent and Rep. Hamp Atkinson, D-Texarkana, voted to send the subpoena question to a full committee. Rep. Lee Jackson, R-Dallas, missed the roll call because of a late plane. He said he would have voted "no."

Atkinson's motion not only asked for committee action on the subpoena question but also called on the teachers association to make tapes of its interviews public if "there is nothing to hide."

HEW begins Tech review

By KAY BELL
UD Reporter

Six Health, Education and Welfare investigators Monday reviewed Tech's student recruitment program as part of a weeklong investigation of how well Tech is meeting guidelines outlined by the Title 6 Civil Rights Act of 1964.

HEW officials also revealed Monday that the Medical School will be included in this week's review. Originally, Tech administrators were told that the team would look at recruitment, admissions procedures, financial aid programs, counseling and tutoring, and employment for the university only.

However, the team will now review these five areas in regard to the Medical School, Barnett said. Additionally, the HEW team also will investigate athletics at Tech.

Tech is one of 18 universities across the state under review by the Civil Rights Division of HEW in what Glenn E. Barnett, executive vice president for development at Tech, termed the "first real effort to go at the states' plans for higher education."

Traditionally, HEW reviews of universities have been limited to individual institutions and usually are sparked by specific problems within a college. Despite recent charges by a committee within the American Association of University Professors of discrepancies in wages and positions of male and female Tech faculty, the allegations had no bearing on the HEW review of Tech, according to Tech administrators and HEW officials.

Monday, the HEW team, headed by Richard Gonzalez, an equal opportunity specialist with the Dallas HEW office of Civil Rights, looked at how Tech recruits students, the people who apply to Tech, in which areas Tech recruitment efforts are concentrated, and the persons involved such as the total number of students recruited compared to the number of minorities, Barnett said.

Reagan endorses Reese

Republican congressional candidate Jim Reese told friends at his Lubbock headquarters Monday he has the endorsement of conservative hero Ronald Reagan in his race with Joe Hickox and George Bush Jr.

Reese said the Reagan endorsement is more important to his campaign than an Avalanche-Journal endorsement of Bush, because Reagan is "the most outstanding conservative spokesman in the country today."

He said the Reagan endorsement does not represent outside interference in what is essentially a local race, and

In addition to reviewing records Monday, the team also met with Tech President Cecil Mackey, vice president for student affairs Robert Ewalt and dean of students Moses Turner, Barnett said.

Today, the team will concentrate on admissions, financial aid programs and counseling and tutoring for Tech. The investigators conclude their study of the university Wednesday by looking into employment and athletics at Tech.

Thursday, the HEW crew will begin its study of the five cited areas in the Medical School, Barnett said Tech officials also will file some additional information such as the number of applicants, withdrawals and enrollment figures with HEW later.

Tech officials are unsure as to when the findings of the team will be made available to the university, Barnett said, because the team's initial report will go to state officials.

He said the HEW also sent a list of questions to the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, to find out how that state board regulates higher education across Texas.

indicates conservative support of the Reese campaign.

"I think the people of West Texas respect adherence to principle, wherever they find it..." Reese said.

He said "in a few years" Bush might "develop into one of the new leaders of the party," but claimed he is leading Bush in the primary.

"It appears we will win the primary without a runoff," Reese said, but he told the group he has no professional surveys to back up the claim.

The Reagan letter, which Reese said he received Saturday, said the former California governor and Republican spokesman wanted to "wish you luck in one of the most important congressional races this year."

Reese defended the strength of Reagan's endorsement, saying that "when he says 'I wish you success in one of the most important congressional races this year,' that's pretty plain."

"I have talked to Gov. Reagan about that; he considers it an endorsement," Reese said. "I can't tell you how good it is to have the governor on our team."

Q & A: An interview with--- Senate hopeful Delwin Jones

EDITOR'S NOTE: Delwin Jones, 53, is one of five Democrats seeking the 28th Senatorial District nomination May 6. He served four two-year terms as a state representative before being defeated by Democrat Froy Salinas in the 1976 primary. His challengers are former state representatives E. L. Short, and Jesse George, former Lubbock mayor Morris Turner, and Tech regent Don Workman. He was interviewed recently by UD Reporter Larry Elliott.

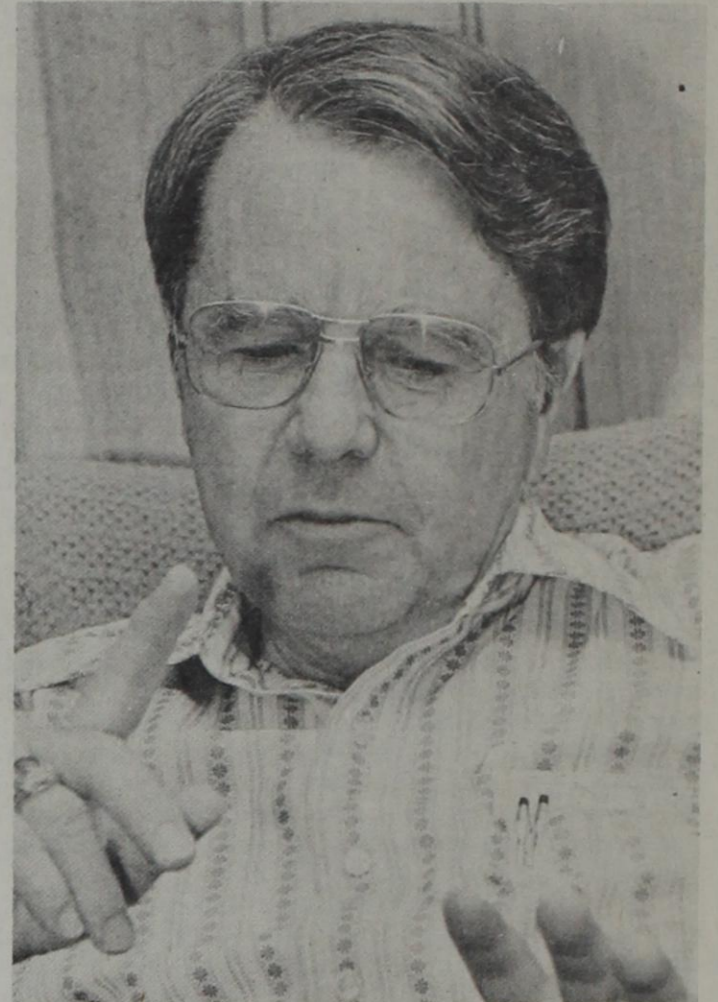

'I supported the rights of people..there shouldn't be any distinctions in pay or rights of property.'

UD: You introduced 78 bills as a state representative. Which are you proudest of?
JONES: I really think the Texas Tech Med School is number one because there have been so many side benefits to all of West Texas and New Mexico from that. One example is heart surgery in Lubbock. The heart surgery program came to Lubbock after we passed the Med School bill. I was told at the time by Tech people that the people involved who were thinking about coming to Lubbock to do heart surgery did not want to come unless we were going to be a focal point for medical education, because they wanted to locate in a medical education area.
 So if you think of how many lives have benefited just from heart surgery in Lubbock, even though it's not in the Tech Med School, that has been a fabulously important benefit that is not costing the state a dollar. Yet our community and all of New Mexico benefits from it. We are the medical center now, there's no doubt about that.

UD: What about the Tech regents' decision to locate the Tech Medical School extension in Odessa? You were involved in that. You helped Odessa get the facility.
JONES: We were committed to it earlier. When I authorized the Tech Med School bill we sought support everywhere we could get it and those people down there supported Tech for the Med School. All the general discussions were that the Permian Basin teaching facility would be in Odessa. I was as surprised as anyone when they even sent out proposals to all these other people because legally Big Spring could not have qualified for it.
 San Angelo could not have qualified for it because the act itself said, quote, "You can have off-campus teaching facilities in Lubbock, Texas." That was in the event the teaching hospital had to be built somewhere off-campus.
 The other provision was that Amarillo could have an off-campus facility and that El Paso could have one. The other was Odessa-Midland. So the off-campus facilities are limited to those four areas, I believe.
UD: Did you ever receive any money for representing Odessa in their bid?
JONES: No.
UD: Do you think Regent Don Workman did anything improper as far as a conflict of interest in deciding where to locate that facility?
JONES: I'd have to say no because he abstained from voting. I don't think it would have been wrong if he had voted on it. The merits were there.
UD: Why do you think you're a better representative than Don Workman? Does he know the problems of Tech better than you do?
JONES: Well, of course this senate race does not relegate itself totally to Texas Tech, but I think my background and experience serving on the appropriations committee and getting authorization to build the Texas Tech Law School, even when the chairman of the committee was opposing it, would certainly indicate that I have an ability to go down there and secure those things that we need and those things the area feels are needed. I also, of course, passed the Med School bill.
UD: What are you going to have to do to win?
JONES: I've seen over 22,000 people one at a time. I'm the only candidate who has had one-to-one contact with more than 22,000 people since Nov. 1. I've been in 113 schools since Jan. 1, and I have handed out 12,000 brochures in Odessa. I have been to Odessa 20 times campaigning.
UD: Who is the strongest candidate in Odessa?
JONES: Delwin Jones.
UD: A lot of people may not know about your votes on the ERA or your sentiments there. Tell us about it.
JONES: I voted for ERA and I think the major problem is not rights, I think it's the terminology used. Where the amendment says "rights shall not be abridged because of race ... and sex," we should have used the word gender. That would have meant rights would not be abridged because one is a male and the other is a female. It was not intended, nor did anyone dream that any lifestyle was included in the word sex.

UD: Was there a separate Texas ERA amendment? How did you vote on it?
JONES: There are two issues involving the ERA. One was an amendment to the Texas Constitution, an ERA amendment. The other issue was approval of the national amendment, which in essence said the same thing.
 I voted for both of them. I supported the rights of people my first term down there. I supported the position that there shouldn't be a distinction between people as far as pay or rights of property. If I have separate, inherited property that I had before I was married, I shouldn't be able to dispose of that without any consideration by my wife because in the same situation, she would not be able to transfer her property unless I joined her.
UD: Would you work with women's groups in your district, in Lubbock for example, to establish shelters for battered women?
JONES: Yes. Anytime there is abuse of an individual, a woman, child, or minority group, there has to be intervention by someone bigger than a small church group. Our churches might be able to take care of their own membership, but what if the person is not a member of any church? Who's going to intervene? I think you have to have public facilities.
 I think you also have to have some day care centers for the working mother who has to provide for her family, I think there's a need for that sort of thing. If you don't provide it we're going to have a tremendously increased welfare roll.
 If a mother can't work because she has to stay home and take care of her children, and she is the provider for those children, then she may have to go on welfare. I admire people trying to work and take care of their own, I think it's an American characteristic.
UD: Do we need more money from the state to finance basic foundation programs in public schools?
JONES: It would appear that way, if we're going to continue to extend areas of education. What we've done is move educational responsibility down. People in high schools now are getting the equivalent of what college graduates had 15 years ago. As you get into the technological era that we're in now, you get a lot more sophisticated education than we ever had when I was in school. Its really not a simple feat anymore to get a college degree. I think this is where the big cost has been. We've shifted a lot more responsibility to public education without shifting enough resources there to fund it.

'What we've done is move educational responsibility down..'

UD: Why do you think we will never need a state income tax?
JONES: I think you have to look long range. We are the fastest-growing industrial state in the nation for two reasons. One of those reasons is we have a good weather climate, and a tremendous emphasis on solar energy. I think a lot of industries are looking at us because it doesn't take as much fuel to heat places. We're also an ideal place for solar energy development because we have a tremendous amount of sunshine. If we bring these industries in, we're going to have growth. If you have growth, then your sales tax generates a lot more money every year.
 There is an area that needs to be changed. We're collecting a sales tax on natural gas on the value paid to the company that is selling it. You and I are paying at a higher rate in Texas. We're paying more tax per thousand cubic feet than people in Illinois who are getting a cheaper price to begin with. My theory is that we need to change that tax rate from a sales tax dollar value. We're using an expendable resource here, so we definitely need to set that tax based on volume, so many cents per cubic foot, and not get into the dollars and cents thing.
UD: Will that bring in more money?
JONES: Yes. The immediate effect would be that those people outside the state would be paying us twice as much as they're presently paying. I think it would be more than that because more than half of our fuel is going into export. We're are only using about 40 percent. If you doubled the tax it would bring in a lot more money.
UD: How would deregulation of oil and gas change the tax structure?
JONES: If you deregulate right now, and the price went up on export gas, that would give us a higher income, I think we're going to have deregulation. That will give us more income, and help forestall a state income tax.

'Anytime there is an abuse... there has to be intervention by someone.'

Tech sailors brave cold to learn 'seagoing' art

By KANDIS GATEWOOD
UD Reporter

About this time, getting physical education credit for spending a weekend sailing sounds like a pretty good deal.

But think back, if you will, to January 10, when registration began for the spring semester. The forecast that day called for highs in the low 40s with lows in the 20s.

Despite the weather and the promise of frostbite, 70 brave hearted Tech students took the plunge, enrolling in Dr. Richard Quade's sailing course through the extension division.

Of course, the students were given a reprieve with a couple of lecture sections until the weather warmed up—say to 60 or so degrees. Then it was out to the recently completed but still icy Canyon Lake west of University Avenue.

"First time I went out, it was so cold. The air was 60 degrees, and the water was 20 degrees, I soon found out," said Vikki Caffey, one of the class members.

Caffey had never sailed before, but she now says she is getting pretty good. After that first cold capsizing, she was a little hesitant to get back in the boat, but that fear soon left.

Rose Dickson is taking the class "for the fun of it." Dickson is not enrolled at Tech, but heard about the class through the newspaper.

"I like it better than motor boats," Dickson said. "I was afraid of getting hurt, at first I had bruises on my leg, but you really get addicted to this." Carrie King is another of the addicted.

"I think whoever invented sailing didn't live in Lubbock," she said. "You know, lack of water and excess of wind."

King is looking forward to her final in sailing.

"The only thing I worry about is that Dr. Quade will probably push me over," she said with a laugh.

Quade is a physics teacher who has been interested in sailing since he lived in Delaware. He taught sailing in a Free University course, was adviser for the Sailing Club and has been sailing for 15 years.

"The support for this class was really unanticipated," Quade said. "I know some would like to have it, but now they want to see if we can make it a two semesters-worth of courses."

Quade said 70 students enrolled at the first of the semester and that 50 to 55 are regular in attendance. The students are required to sail 12 hours, but most of them have put in 25 or 30 hours, he said. Quade uses five Starfish sailboats and his own Snipe. The $10 maintenance fee helped keep the boats together during the rough winds.

Winds cause the most problems for the sailors.

According to Don Parker, from Midland, Canyon Lake has some dead spots that he has to avoid when he sails.

When he looks around and sees everyone else sitting when the wind has died down, he knows he "ain't doing anything wrong."

The sailing started in February, on perhaps one of the coldest days of the year.

"Yeah, Dr. Quade had me take him out," Parker said. "Well, we were out here and there I was just learning, and well, I overturned the boat. He still remembers my name."

The class sails with winds up to 25 miles an hour and temperatures in the 50s.

"After that, forget it," Quade said.

It's the heavy winds that cause all the boats to capsize, according to Quade. In the initial requirements, the students would only sail when winds were 18 mph and under and temperatures had to be in the 60s.

"But they call me to go sail even when the winds are up," Quade said. "I just forgot how hardy college students are."

Quade will be offering the course during the second summer session. His biggest piece of advice for the beginning sailors? Don't ram another boat.

Hearst lawyers continue fight to keep heiress out of prison

SAN FRANCISCO (AP) — Patricia Hearst's lawyers, disappointed over the U.S. Supreme Court's refusal Monday to review her bank robbery conviction, promised a last-ditch fight to keep the 24-year-old newspaper heiress from returning to prison.

If prosecutors so request, and U.S. District Court Judge William H. Orrick agrees, Miss Hearst could be returned to jail immediately.

On the other hand, if Orrick says Miss Hearst should remain free during what could be lengthy legal maneuvering, her imprisonment could be delayed for weeks or months.

U.S. Attorney G. William Hunter said Monday he had not made up his mind whether he would seek Miss Hearst's immediate return to jail.

Randolph A. Hearst, Miss Hearst's father and president of the San Francisco Examiner, declined immediate comment on the Monday ruling.

Miss Hearst, currently free on $1 million bail, is living with her parents under constant guard. If she returns to prison, it would be 14 months before she would be eligible for parole.

Defense attorney Al Johnson of Boston, interviewed by telephone after the high court's refusal to review the case was announced, said he was "gravely disappointed." He said the court had refused to review "grave constitutional issues."

"We currently are considering an appeal to the court for a rehearing and also are preparing a motion for U.S. District Court in San Francisco ... to revise and revoke the sentence," he said.

The defense has 25 days to ask the Supreme Court to reconsider — something the court almost never does in such cases. Johnson said he would also ask Orrick to allow the 14 months Miss Hearst has already spent behind bars to satisfy the prison sentence, and to grant probation. The judge would have 120 days in which to rule.

Miss Hearst was convicted March 20, 1976, and sentenced to seven years in prison for her part in a $10,960 armed bank robbery of a Hibernia Bank branch that took place April 15, 1974.

At the time, she was with members of the Symbionese Liberation Army, a tiny, now-defunct band of radical terrorists who had kidnapped her from her Berkeley apartment two months and 10 days earlier.

Initially, her captors described her as a "prisoner of war," but later, in taped messages issued from the underground, Miss Hearst scorned her parents and promised "to stay and fight" with the SLA.

She remained in hiding until she was captured Sept. 18, 1975.

Stock Exchange remains chaotic

(C) 1978 N.Y. Times News Service
NEW YORK — Even on a day in which no records are set, the floor of the New York Stock Exchange looks chaotic to the uninitiated eye in the visitors gallery. On the floor itself, there is no question about it.
 "What did I do, buy or sell?"
 "Tell him he's guaranteed a thousand."
 "Stop me if you can."
 "Joe, what stock you talking about?"
 "He's busted 500 shares for me, so I'm O.K."
 Last Tuesday, as the exchange struggled to return to normal after two record-setting days, there was still motion everywhere, still thousands of slips of paper falling on floors polished to marble-smoothness by the soles of a thousand slippers. Young men fell slips aloft, looking for messengers. "Squad! Squad!" they yelled, as if hailing taxis.

 Patrick Marchese, a compact, dapper 42-year-old, thrives on such activity. "You should have seen me Monday," he said the next day. "I was moving rather quickly —

I don't use the term 'running' because it's against the rules — trying to get those orders in before that bell rang."
 As one of 1,366 members (all but four male) of the New York Stock Exchange, and the man in charge of E. F. Hutton's 33-person floor team, Marchese lives an adrenalin-fueled life on even the quietest days.
 "The amazing thing about this place," he says, "is that no matter what the volume is, you get used to it. At one time 25 million was a big day. Now it's nothing."

Last Monday, 63.5 million shares changed owners, breaking a record of 52 million set only last Friday, one trading day before. Although volume fell to just under 39 million shares on Tuesday, when a reporter joined Marchese on the floor, there was enough orders to fill and enough problems left over from the day before to keep him in high gear from the opening bell at 10 a.m. to the closing six hours later.
 In theory, slow day or fast, Marchese's function is to straighten out one: to execute the hundreds of orders to buy or sell stocks that come to him throughout the day. But in practice, his is a world of verbal shorthand, quick judgments and sturdy legs.

 "How's Ford?" he may ask one specialist broker assigned to trade Ford Motors Co. stock.
 "Bid one at 49 and an eight, offer a thousand at a quarter," the specialist might answer, saying in effect that he has someone willing to pay $49.125 for one hundred shares and that he has 1,000 shares for sale at $49.25 apiece.
 "Take one at a quarter,"

Marchese replies, filling out a slip. Within minutes, this simplest kind of transaction — the purchase of 100 shares at $49.25 a share — will flash around the world through the exchange's ticker-tape communications system.
 Most floor brokers, like Marchese, are salaried (the range is from about $20,000 to $100,000). They therefore do not profit directly from the number of trades they make. But because the brokerage houses they work for live off commissions, speed is paramount. Marchese figures he executed about 500 separate transactions on Monday.

Application deadline set for Doak grant

Applications for the Mary W. Doak grant-in-aid will be accepted through May 1 by the Alpha Sigma Chapter of Delta Kappa Gamma.
 The grant is $75 per semester for junior or senior women who plan to be secondary teachers. "The grant is awarded on the basis of scholarship and teaching potential," according to Dr. Ann Daghistany, assistant professor of English.
 "The purpose of the grant is to attract to the profession serious teachers of high quality," Daghistany said.
 Delta Kappa Gamma is an international organization of women educators who try to stimulate and promote good teaching on all academic levels Daghistany said.
 The grant is named for Mary W. Doak, Tech's first dean of women.
 For applications and further information contact: Dr. Ann Daghistany, English Building, room 313, 742-2525; or Dr. Dahlia Terrell, English Building, room 123, 742-2501.

The difference is George Bush.

A lot of people in Lubbock have been growing excited about the upcoming election, and the young man running for Congress—George Bush.
 The more you learn about George, the more enthusiastic you'll become. Because George Bush makes believers out of people. There's a growing spirit catching on in this campaign, a spirit that people just naturally want to become a part of.
 At a time when the resources of our district—energy and agriculture—are demanding strong representation, this energetic, far-sighted leader is helping to shape a new sense of purpose and enthusiasm for West Texas. George is committed to the idea that one person's voice can make a difference.
 People are saying that it feels good again to be involved. They know they can put their trust in George... now and in the future.
 And if you're afraid it's too late to volunteer your help... there's always something important that needs to be done. Drop by Bush campaign headquarters at 2414-B Broadway, down from Broadway Drugs, or call 765-8091.
 One person's interest can make a difference.

Local festival: if at first you don't succeed...

By BEV JONES
UD Staff

River Smith's First Semi-Annual Bluegrass Festival Saturday met with a "limited but enthusiastic" response, according to Bob Corcorran of River Smith's.

The attempt to provide Lubbock with a tradition probably didn't break even, Corcorran said. However, he added that River Smith's was not discouraged and they were planning for next year.

Corcorran attributed the smaller than expected crowd of 500 to the $8 ticket price which was charged. "Everyone that was there was having a great time," Corcorran said.

The tobacco-spitting contest was won by A. J. Alford who hit a Skoal can lid from 30 feet away. Horseshoe throwing was won by Skeet Bessent. A father-and-son team won the middle and younger age fiddling competition, Ricky and Weldon Turpin. Henry Lester won the 60 and older competition in fiddling.

Glenn Forster, co-owner of River Smith's referred to the small amount of contests for girls and not enough smaller scale contests as a problem with the festival this year.

The festival was held in a valley north of Slaton. "The valley doesn't look anything like West Texas and is very beautiful," Forster said.

Plans for the next festival is September on Labor Day are already in the making. "Ticket prices will be lowered to $4 in advance and $5 at the gate," Corcorran said. Bigger name bands will also be present next fall. "The bands we had this year were great, but a band with a name will draw more people," Corcorran said.

"Many people thought the price was too high but when they got inside and saw all the free food and 25-cent beer, they said it was too cheap," Corcorran said.

Both Corcorran and Forster said they were not discouraged at the turnout and hoped that after the scheduled Labor Day festival, it would become a tradition.

One big surprise was the unclaimed prize for the fraternity or sorority with the most people there. "No one even registered," Corcorran said.

People attending the festival included older people as well as younger people. "Families and individuals all showed up," Forster said.

Students who attended the festival said they had a good time and enjoyed the music very much. One Tech student referred to the food as being great and especially enjoyed the calf-fries.

CONTINENTAL'S CHICKENFEED FARES.

No restrictions and no lower fares anywhere we fly.

CHICKENFEED IS ALL YOU NEED

Continental's Chickenfeed Fares are the solution to the discount fares confusion. Pure and simple.

Chickenfeed Fares are simple. There are no lower fares anywhere we fly. You'll save up to 69% to cities in Texas. And at least 40% on weekdays, 30% on weekends to any of our other mainland cities.

They're this pure. There are no restrictions of any kind. No buying your ticket a month in advance. No minimum stays. No maximum stays. Fly one way or round trip. And get a full refund if you cancel.

The only limitation is the number of seats available. So don't wait.

Call your Campus Rep, Travel Agent or Continental at 763-8031. Ask for the Chickenfeed Fare. Then make tracks for somewhere nice.

Campbell to sign with Houston

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston Oilers owner K.S. Bud Adams Jr. announced Monday that the Oilers had come to an agreement with Tampa Bay to obtain Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell.

Adams said the Oilers will be giving up tight end Jimmy Giles, their first and second-round draft choices this year and third and fifth-round selections in 1979.

The draft is scheduled to start May 2 and 3.

Adams also said it wouldn't take "15 minutes for us to draft the former Texas Longhorn star. He said he was aware Campbell's price tag won't be cheap but added the club will do "whatever is necessary" to put the big fullback in an Oiler uniform.

He also pointed out that both Dallas and Buffalo faced big money deals when they bought the services of O.J. Simpson and Tony Dorsett and the superstars proved they were worth the expenditures.

Lamont tied for fourth

Tech's Debbie Lamont is tied for fourth place with Debbie Skelly of Houston Baptist at the end of the first round of the Texas State Women's TAIAW golf championship.

Both finished with scores of 80 at the meet which will continue today at 9 a.m. at Lubbock's Meadowbrook Golf Course.

Southern Methodist leads the team totals entering today's round with a 312. Texas and Lamar University hold second place with a score of 320. Texas A&M is third with 326. Team totals are computed by adding a squad's four lowest scores.

The individual best score after 18 holes came from UT's Cindy Lincoln. She fired a 76. Mary Beth Murphy of SMU, Pam Johns of Lamar and Tony Wiesner of TCU all tied for second with 77. In third place are SMU's Kyle O'Brien and Missie McGeorge, UT's Lori Huxhold and Lamar's Maureen Madill. All shot 78s.

Tech lacrosse team avenges A&M defeat

The Tech lacrosse team ended the 1978 season by avenging its previous loss to Texas A&M and winning a consolation trophy in the process. The Raiders whipped the Aggies 11-8 in the second round of the San Antonio Fiesta Lacrosse Tournament, Sunday.

The victory came after a 14-3 loss to the experienced San Antonio lacrosse club.

Because the loss was to an independent lacrosse club, it will not affect Tech's collegiate standings, which show the Raiders in third place behind Tulane and the University of Texas at Austin.

The Raiders' victory over the Aggies allowed Tech to finish the year with a 5-3 record in the collegiate division of the Southwest Lacrosse Association and 6-5 overall.

"Losing (to San Antonio) made us mad and we wanted to make up for it — and we wanted to win the sugar game from A&M," said Tech defenseman Ray Martin.

Raider player-coach John Wilkey said, "Everybody was relaxed and we had more heart than against S.A. We were beating them (A&M) to the ground balls and we controlled the ball more."

The result was a Raider-dominated game.

Bill Nottorno, Tech middle, won 16 of 21 face-offs, giving the Raiders the offensive edge over A&M. The outstanding play of attackmen Steve Gentry, John Wilkey, Greg Bjorndahl, and Reed Durant kept pressure on the Aggie defense, enabling Tech to score 11 of 38 shots.

Except for penalties, mistakes were uncommon for the Raiders. But the Aggies were generally successful in taking advantage of Tech mishaps. A&M seemingly could score only when Tech had a man-down situation (serving time in the penalty box.)

According to Bill Bilder-

back, Tech midfielder, the Aggies scored five of their eight goals when Tech was man-down.

Most of the Raiders' 12 infractions occurred in the first period when Raider spirit was highest, but Tech was still able to jump to a 4-1 lead by the end of the quarter.

The Raiders continued to outpace A&M in the second period scoring three goals to the Aggies' one, making the score, 7-2.

A&M then began to piece together an effective attack under the guidance of attackman Ted Sauer, who scored four goals. When the third quarter closed, A&M had sliced the Raiders' lead to 9-6.

The remainder of the contest consisted of the Aggies struggling to pierce a solid Raider defense, while the Raiders concentrated on maintaining possession of the ball. At the end of the fourth period, Tech had beaten A&M for the second time this year, 11-8.

"The defense was superb," said one Tech player. But sponsor Phil Marshall didn't stop there. "Everybody played well. Everybody — no exceptions," he said.

Steve Gentry lead the Raider scoring efforts with four goals, followed by Bill Nottorno with three. Reed Durant had two and Steve Ward and John Wilkey had one goal apiece. Gentry had one assist. Goalie Mark Goska had 11 saves.

But the San Antonio game was a little different.

Wilkey accurately summed up the game when he said, "We just couldn't get anything going."

Defenseman-coach Bob Witter was more specific:

"We couldn't play offense, we couldn't play defense. We just couldn't get any breaks."

S.A. midfielder George Moore was particularly devastating. Moore, a graduate of the United States Naval Academy, scored six goals.

"The midfield defense was breaking down and the defense couldn't pick him up in time," said Witter.

"Penalties are what killed us," said defenseman Tom Zolnerowich. "We had over 20 minutes in penalties."

Golfers last in SWC

The Tech golf team couldn't get a foothold on the Southwest Conference ladder in the league tourney in Tyler last weekend.

The Raiders shot a 926 team total for a bottom-rung ninth-place finish.

"It was just a case of us playing poorly," Coach Danny Mason said. "While we didn't have the strength to challenge Houston or Texas this year, we could have finished in third if we had played to our potential. We just didn't do it."

Houston won the tournament with a total of 866 followed by Texas with 878. Further back in the field were A&M with 891, Arkansas with 894, TCU with 897, Baylor with 901, SMU with 907 and Rice with 918.

While rain did prevent the last three teams from finishing Saturday's round until Sunday morning, the weather was excellent during most of the tournament and the course was in good shape, Mason said.

Mel Callender was the low scorer for Tech with rounds of 77-71-76 for a 224 total. Kent Wood shot 75-77-79—231; Jean St. Germain, 80-77-78—235; Greg Jones, 75-8x-80—236; Steve Skinner, 77-81-80—238 and Dennis Northington, 86-75-78—239.
