First-class now 18 cents

Rates raised

WASHINGTON (AP) - The cost of mailing a first-class letter will go from 15 cents to 18 cents on March 22, the Postal Service said Tuesday.

The Board of Governors of the service, who had requested a 20-cent rate, took sharp issue with the Postal Rate Commission, a separate agency that on Feb. 19 approved the

"To achieve a lower stamp today, the commission has chosen to ignore more than $1 billion in revenue needs that will have to be collected in the near future," the governors said in a statement released without elaboration.

The governors said they would ask the rate commission to reconsider its decision. If that decision stands, the statement said, the Postal Service will soon ask for another

"The 18-cent stamp is a recommendation for fiscal irresponsibility in postal matters. It is a recommendation for constant rate changing and it is a recommendation for higher than necessary postal rates in the future," the governors said.

Lubbock may sell coliseum

By PETE McNABB UD Staff Writer

The Lubbock City Manager Tuesday told the Civic Centers Board that the city may sell the Lubbock Memorial Coliseum-Auditorium complex to Tech next year.

City Manager Larry Cunningham also advised the board to limit capital improvement allocations in next year's city

If Tech agrees to buy the coliseumauditorium complex, the sale will not be for at least another year, Cunningham

However, Civic Centers Board Chairman Al Couch said the board still is considering allocating funds for some major capital improvements, possibly through a joint effort with the university. Covering the floor and steps in the seating area of the coliseum with a vinyl, wipe-away material is one project Couch said the 15-member board is considering.

Couch said the material would cover up the unattractive concrete floor and steps in the seating area. Easier removal of stains caused by spilled beverages is another advantage of the floor covering. Couch said the cost of the project is estimated at $29,000.

"The one thing we decided we would push before the City Council is to make the seating area floor improvements," Couch said.

Couch told The University Daily the board would study the possibility of working with Tech's Office of Planning to split the cost of the project between the university and the city.

He said the university and the city made a similar improvement last year when they split the cost of installing a women's locker room. Other capital improvements discussed

Tuesday by the board included: A $45,000 hardwood basketball floor to replace the tartan floor. · A new ceiling in the auditorium.

· An air conditioning system for the coliseum dressing rooms. The 1980-81 fiscal city budget provided for $20,400 in city funds for capital improvements to the coliseum-auditorium

City Budget Officer Bill White said the $20,400 was used to buy a stage and improve lighting for concerts.

Cunningham told the board that negotiations to sell the complex are still in the preliminary stages and that Tech is expected to assign someone to study the

The city budgeted $313,628 to the coliseum-auditorium complex for the current fiscal year. White said it is hard to tell if the coliseum-auditorium complex is operating at a profit or a loss.

He said the city probably will collect $155,000 this year in building rentals, about $57,000 this year in concession sales and $10,000 this year in revenues collected from Tech for the use of the parking lot. White said additional funds are generated for the coliseum-auditorium through city sales taxes collected from out-of-town patrons who attend complex

Congress receives Reagan budget

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Reagan Tuesday laid before Congress a $695-billion budget he claimed would return government to "economic sanity" through overall cuts of $48.6 billion despite a bolstered military.

Reagan's revised fiscal 1982 program would boost defense spending by $4.8 billion and slash 300 domestic programs from the projections left by Jimmy

"The thundering herd of sacred cows has now been reduced to a handful," declared Budget Director David A. Stockman.

Stockman told reporters that the administration's approach would save $409 billion in the next five years, about threequarters of the reductions necessary to meet the president's goal of balancing the

The fiscal 1982 package would leave a $45 billion deficit, partly stemming from Reagan's separate proposals to cut tax

In the Senate, Majority Leader Howard Baker Jr. of Tennessee urged his fellow Republicans to postpone until next year legislative proposals not connected to the tax and spending efforts. He asked them to make 1981 "Ronald Reagan's session of Congress."

The budget contained $13.8 billion worth of newly announced cuts, including deeper reductions than previously sought in welfare, water projects, job programs, public housing, food stamps and education. First-time reductions in veterans programs, loan subsidies and dozens of social services also were proposed.

Reagan said in his formal message accompanying the document that it "will stop runaway inflation and revitalize our economy if given a chance." He asked Congress to join him in a quest to "move America back toward economic sanity."

"There is nothing more important than putting America's economic house in order. The next steps are up to Congress," he said, adding that he was acting on a mandate handed him by the voters last fall.

The revised budget updated a preliminary spending cut plan the president announced last month. It was sent to Congress along with Reagan's proposal to trim personal income tax rates by nearly 30 percent over the next three years and cut business tax rates through accelerated depreciation schedules.

Top Republicans on Congress' taxwriting committees planned to introduce the administration's tax proposals Tues-

Reagan's spending plan, certain to stir a rousing fight in Congress, shows a startling shift in priority from social programs to a defense system beefed up by new weapons development.

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill, D-Mass., assailed the package as leaving too many questions unanswered and predicted the current surge of pro-Reagan sentiment will abate "when people truly appreciate" what the cuts will mean to the nation. "Then," he said, "the wind will blow.'

The Pentagon's share of the budget would rise from 24 cents of each federal dollar this year to 27 cents in 1982 and 37 cents by 1986 under Reagan's plan.

Benefit programs that provide aid to individuals, such as Social Security and unemployment compensation, would continue to account for about 48 cents of each federal dollar.

Reagan detailed most of his planned cutbacks Feb. 18. Newly announced cuts included:

• Dropping a Carter proposal that would provide an investment tax credit to companies that do not make enough money to pay income taxes. The savings would total $3.5 billion, the largest single new reduction contained in the revised budget.

•Increasing Carter's proposed cut in welfare by another $500 million to more than $1 billion and tying benefits to a work requirement, known as "workfare," which Reagan promoted while governor of California.

• Reducing planned construction of subsidized public housing for the poor by another 50,000 units. New construction would total 175,000, down from the

260,000 urged by Carter. •Chopping another $300 million from educational grants to states and localities in addition to the $1.1 billion reduction proposed earlier. • Reducing funds for food stamps by another $500 million for a total reduction of $2.3 billion. Some $200 million of the new cut would affect Puerto Rico.

•Eliminating $700 million from Veterans Administration programs by reducing planned VA hospital construction, closing Vietnam veteran counseling centers and trimming person-

· Abolishing legal assistance for poor people, saving $312 million.

Reagan also asked Congress to cut the 1981 budget by $6.4 billion, a move that would lower spending in the current year to $655 billion.

Despite the sharp program cuts for fiscal 1982, which begins Oct. 1, Reagan would only slow - not stop - the rise in federal spending. Under his plan, spending would increase 6 percent next year, compared with 13 percent this year.

Reagan said his budget recommendations would preserve the "social safety net" of income security programs - such as basic Social Security pensions and regular unemployment benefits - that grew out of the Great Depression of the

And he defended his call for increased military spending on the grounds that "a margin of safety must be created by rebuilding the nation's defense capabilities.'

Organized labor, civil rights groups and other organizations that oppose the social cuts already have mobilized coalitions to combat Reagan's proposals.

Hijackers scale down demands

DAMASCUS, Syria (AP) — Hijackers holding more than 100 hostages on a Pakistani airliner scaled down their demands Tuesday but set a Wednesday deadline for Pakistan to free political prisoners, Syrian and Pakistani officials said. If the hijackers demands are not met, they say they will blow up the plane and all aboard.

Negotiators sought a compromise settlement that would free hostages and political prisoners simultaneously. The Boeing 720, seized nine days ago over Pakistan and taken first to Kabul, Afghanistan, and then Damascus, rested on an auxiliary runway at the Damascus airport surrounded by Syrian police cars.

Three Americans and two alien U.S. residents were among the hostages, described as increasingly nervous as the ordeal continued.

The three heavily armed skyjackers set 2 p.m. Syrian time Wednesday (7 a.m. EST) for Paskistan's military government to release the prisoners, officials said.

But Syria's chief negotiator, Brig. Gen. Mohammed Kholi, said the young hijackers scaled down their demands, reducing the number of opposition activists they want freed in Pakistan from 92 to 45. The general told reporters at Damascus airport he was hopeful a compromise would be reached and the ordeal of the captives would "soon be over."

Kholi said the Pakistani government also made "new proposals" to keep the negotiations with the hijackers alive. He would not disclose these proposals but sources at the Damascus airport control tower said Islamabad authorities offered to release 22 political prisoners in Pakistan, seven more than President Mohammed Zia ulHaq's authoritarian military regime originally offered to free.

Pakistan's defense ministry secretary-general, M. Rahin Khan, also said the government was prepared to arrange with the hijackers a "simultaneous release" of political prisoners and hostages.

This appeared to be a new concession. During seven days of negotiations in Kabul, the Pakistanis insisted the hostages must be freed first.

Rahin Khan said Pakistan has agreed to free 15 of the original 92 prisoners demanded by the three hijackers - members of a Pakistan dissident group named after ex-President Zulfikar Ali Bhutto, who was hanged in 1979. But he said the number might rise should charges involving 31 others prove not serious.

Rahin Khan's statment in Rawalpindi and Kholi's disclosures at Damascus aiport indicated a compromise might be in the works to end history's second longest hijack drama. The longest was the 39-day ordeal of 12 Israeli passengers and crew members held by Palestinian guerrillas aboard a hijacked Israeli El Al airliner at Algiers airport

Syrian offcials at the Damascus control tower said the spokesman for the three air pirates, in making his "final demand for the release of the 45 prisoners," threatened to blow up the plane with all hostages and skyjackers on board unless their demand was met by the Wednesday deadline.

Farzana Sharif, 22, a stewardess on the Pakistan International Airline jet, said when she was released Monday night that the hijackers were armed with two time bombs, hand grenades, pistols, submachine guns and "plenty of ammunition." The hijackers shot and killed a Pakistani diplomat on the plane Friday.

Committee resignations to be discussed

The resignation of all five members of the Tech Tenure and Privilege Committee will be publicly discussed at today's Faculty Senate meeting, a secretary in the Faculty Senate office said. The members resigned Wednesday after an apparent disagreement with administrators about the role of the committee in a tenure denial case, according to a copyrighted story Saturday by the Lubbock Avalanche-Journal. The Faculty Senate meets at 3:30 p.m. today in the Senate Room of the University Center.

The issue deals with the Tenure and Privilege Committee's action to activate a special hearing panel to investigate a tenure denial case of a Home Economics faculty member, the A-J reported.

Policy for admission to tenure as outlined in the faculty handbook states if a nontenured faculty member "alleges that a decision not to reappoint him is caused by considerations violative of academic freedom, his allegations shall be given preliminary consideration by a faculty

Tech's legal counsel, Marilyn Phelan, in a Feb. 25 memorandum, advised Tech President Lauro Cavazos not to activate the special hearing panel because the Tenure and Privilege Committee is not the committee that is supposed to activate the panel, the article said. In a Feb. 26 memo to the Tenure and Privilege Committee, Cavazos wrote, "I shall follow the Counsel's advice."

The Faculty Senate and the university president each choose two persons to serve on the panel. Those four persons then select a fifth member, according to faculty handbook policy.

The Faculty Senate chose its two members Feb. 11; however, Cavazos has chosen none, the article said.

Reagan jeered in first trip abroad to Canada

OTTAWA (AP) - Jeered by Canadian demonstrators, President Reagan met Tuesday with Prime Minister Pierre Elliott Trudeau on problems that come between two historically friendly and interdependent neighbors.

Reagan took the protests in stride, but they annoyed his host. Trudeau professed to love hecklers but appealed for his countrymen to show better manners during Reagan's 28-hour visit, his first presidential trip outside the United States.

The two leaders, who had never met, sat down for a 15-minute introductory chat in Trudeau's oak-paneled office on Parliament Hill. Then they called in their aides for a discussion of El Salvador, East-West relations and the potential impact of Reagan's economic program on the United States' closest and largest trading

White House Press Secretary James S. Brady said Reagan and Trudeau did "95 percent of the talking." Said Brady: "It was a very warm meeting. I think the president enjoyed Trudeau, and it appeared to be mutual."

Soviet President Leonid Brezhnev's invitation to a summit meeting. "The president said we have not said yes, and we have not said no, but we would approach any summit in consultation with allies," Brady said. He said Reagan told Trudeau he would be "genuinely interested if we were able to negotiate a reduction in nuclear arms." After the meeting, Reagan, Trudeau and their aides left for lunch at the prime minister's residence. When the two leaders walked out to their car, protesters started chanting loudly, "Yankee go home!" About 1,500 demonstrators lined the street and waved signs as the motor-cade whisked by. "U.S. Arms Death Squads," read one sign. Others read "The Colony of Canada Supports the Colony of El Salvador against U.S. Imperialism" and "Drop Jelly Beans, Not Bombs."

Outside, protesters burned an American flag in front of Parliment. Minor scuffling broke out during the demonstration, and at least two persons were reported arrested.

In public, Reagan and Trudeau spoke mostly of the long friendship between their two countries, but they made no effort to ignore the several hundred demonstrators who carried multi-colored placards referring to the United States role in El Salvador, "acid rain" or air pollution emanating from the United States, and "U.S. economic imperialism in

The United States and Canada also have differences over a fisheries treaty, Canadian energy policy and other environmental issues.

"I love hecklers, I don't know about you, Mr. President," Trudeau said in welcoming Reagan to Parliment Hill. The American president replied that the seat of government here "is a monument to the right of self-government, to the value of human freedom, that even sometimes - as you yourself have pointed out makes raucous behavior permissible.

Both promised, as Trudeau said, "to seek solutions to the problems that often develop between two great nations and two neighbors."

Reagan's visit, the first to Canada by a U.S. president in nearly a decade, is seen by Washington officials as a largely symbolic display of the friendship that brought seven consecutive presidents to Canadian soil between 1936 and 1972. Reagan and Trudeau cautioned against expecting tangible progress on issues that have stirred strong national feelings

Secular humanists really secular humanitarians

ossum is a fifth-year architecture major from San An-

It seems that the recent debate at the University Center on Secular Humanism had a record attendance. Unfortunately there was no debate. The proponents of Secular Humanism did not support it at all; instead they were what would be better described as Secular Humanitarians. They supported the good of man and his great potentialities but they dodged the issue of the Humanist Manifestos I and II, the Bible of Secular Humanism.

The Humanist Manifesto I (1933) was the product of 34 men "representative of a large number who (were) forging a new philosophy out of the materials of the modern world" (Manifesto I). The Manifesto II (1973) is a corollary to the first document and upholds the same beliefs. The basic tenets of Secular Humanism as stated in these documents are as follows:

1) Nonexistence of a deity: "As nontheists, we begin with humans not God, nature not deity . . . No deity will save us; we must save ourselves." (Manifesto II; Doctrine 1)

2) Supremacy of "Human Reason": "Reason and intelligence are the most effective instruments that humankind possesses. There is no substitute: neither faith nor passion suffices in itself." (Man. II; Doc. 4)

3) Absolute belief in evolution: "Religious Humanists regard the universe as self existing and not created . . . the human species is an emergence from natural evolutionary forces." (Man. I; Doc. 1 and Man. II; Doc. 2)

4) Science is the basis of all: "Religion must formulate its hopes and plans in the light of the scientific spirit and method." (Man. I; Doc. 5)

5) Autonomy of Man: "We believe in maximum individual autonomy consonant with social responsibility." (Man. II; Doc. 5)

None of these tenets were addressed by the supporters of Secular Humanism in the UC debate. If they do in fact support Secular Humanism, they have confused the issue and have not presented a true picture of its beliefs. I postulate that they do not support Secular Humanisim, at least not in its entirety, but rather they support Secular Humanitarianism. A noble cause but not even similar to Secular Humanism. A Humanitarian is someone who helps humanity. Of course a Humanist may strive to help humanity, but Jesus Christ was a Humanitarian and by no means a Humanist.

Since the Secular Humanism debate did not cover its basic tenents, let me present my argument against it:

1) Belief in a deity is based upon faith, not concrete evidence. But then there is no concrete evidence disproving the existence of God. So I base my faith on phenomenal religious documents that have been accurately recorded for thousands of years.

2) "Human Reason" depends entirely upon the human who is reasoning. Adolf Hitler had, by his reasoning, a logical explanation for the extermination of the Jews. A Humanist might argue that that is not typical of the great virtues of "Human Reasoning." How then do we judge what is good or bad reasoning? Can not our own reasoning be swayed by a dynamic, powerful orator like Hitler?

3) Evolution is filled with flaws and is not, as the Manifesto II states, "affirmed." Many years after writing The Origin of the Species, Charles Darwin admitted that, "not one change of species into another is on record ... We cannot prove that a single species has changed (into another)." And as the respected evolutionist, Loren Eisley, says, "With the failure of these many efforts, science was left in the somewhat embarrassing position of having to postulate theories of living origins which it could not demonstrate. After having chided the theologian for his reliance on myth and miracle, science found itself in the unenviable position of having to create a mythology of its own: namely, the assumption that what, after long effort could not be proved to take place today had, in truth taken place in the primeval past."

4) The dependence upon science as an alternative to religion and morals is discredited by "scientific research" which often is no more than the product of a fertile imagination. A case in point is seen in the questions raised on the validity of evolution.

5) Humanists believe that since God is nonexistant, Man controls his own destiny. Since the Humanist does not define the absolutes of "social responsibility," he cannot criticize the monstrous actions of destiny seekers such as Hitler and Stalin.

I challenge the proponents of Secular Humanism to clear the cloud of confusion they have created. If they are Humanists, then I would like to read a rebuttal supporting the Manifestos I and II.

God designed humans to have a mind capable of great things. But, as Paul describes in I Corinthians 1:18-25, worldly wisdom is of no consequence when compared with the wisdom of God.

People must stop government now

Alton Teaque

Teague is a senior engineering major from Monahans

It has finally reached the point in history where we must put a stop to government before it puts a stop to us. The greatest threat to our personal freedom is not in Moscow, but Washington, D.C.

The threat comes through massive redistribution of wealth, coupled with a burgeoning bureaucracy, massive regulation and perpetuation of the same. This problem has been hidden through various means of deception by the government for years, but finally, it has grown so large that most of the brighter people can see the tip of the iceberg. It would take several large volumes to cover every aspect of this, but here are a few to make everybody out there think about it:

1) Social Security: This is, once it is examined closely, one of the biggest frauds perpetuated in modern history. The correct name for it is a Pyramid Club, which is very illegal, and an old rip-off. However, the government REQUIRES us to participate, coughing up an increasing amount of our paychecks, to pay for those near more the top. However, the increased benefits being paid out depend on getting more persons in at the bottom, to pay for it. The problem is, that to make it work requires a geometric progression of increased workers, or increased payments from a decreasing number of workers, to balance it out. This scheme is certain to topple, soon, and many beneficiaries will be the big losers.

2) Welfare: What would happen if ALL welfare were eliminated? This can be answered best by looking at what happens to the poor and disabled in a country that is TOTALLY controlled by their governments, governments whose purported purposes are to achieve quality for their people. In such countries throughout the world, everyone is poor, and everyone remains poor; that is, if they are lucky enough not to be imprisoned or executed.

There is the assumption that the government does, in fact, do a good job of aiding the "poor." Unfortunately, this is a false assumption. Most of the money earmarked for the "needy" ends up in the hands of government employees who administer the aid programs. If we disregard this, we still end up with a confrontation between needs and morality; while some people are unable to care for themselves, that does not justify a violation of the rights of those who CAN care for themselves. Regardless of circumstances, to try to solve the problems of some people by using force against others is always immoral. The moral objectives of any person does not justify theft, whether sanctioned by the IRS or a common criminal. Applying force only causes backlash Charity is a matter of personal morality, not force. Even though a person may have a moral duty to feed the hungry, shelter the homeless, and care for the sick, these are personal beliefs. If people are to be free, then EACH INDIVIDUAL must make his own moral judgments as to how far, if at all, he wishes to go in providing these things.

Voluntary charity is an admirable thing, if the giver is aware of the destination of his gifts, but I do not believe that any person has the right fo force anybody else to be charitable. I am not against charity, but I am against force or coercion.

The evidence is, that the more prosperous a country is, the more charitable the people are. In fact, the largest givers are the super-rich. Quoting from Robert J. Ringer's Restoring the American Dream, "Among the more prominent are the Ford Foundation, Rockefeller Foundation, Carnegie Corporation of

New York, and the Alfred P. Sloan Foundation. . . My personal belief is that men are basically humane and that, given the opportunity to act FREELY, they would, as in the past, respond charitably to those whom they deem to be in need. But I also believe that men place an even higher value on their liberty, and that the less free they are to improve their own well-being, the less charitable they will be. As government has increased its attempts to redistribute the wealth, it simultaneously has decreased man's desire to be charitable.'

3) Regulation:

This is one of the other serious threats to our very survival. Unelected bureaucrats have been given awesome power to decide, FOR YOU, what is good and what is bad for you. Those bureaucrats have never met you, and do not know abut your individual situation. The individual, in a free marketplace, can choose what he does or does not want. To make an informed decision, the government does not need to intervene. Subscribe to such publications as Consumer Reports, and look things over. Actually, most people DO NOT WANT to be protected by some bureaucrat whom they do not know, who decides what they need to be protected from. As in the situation of the poor, how can the government best protect the consumer? GET OUT OF THE

4) Inflation:

This is actually a SYMPTOM, not the disease. The disease is a growing, non-productive bureaucracy that is stifling the production in the private sector. It is caused by the fact that MONEY is not equal to WEALTH. Wealth is actually products and services . . . material goods, and such intangibles as knowledge, etc. Inflation is caused by the government's attempt to violate the basic law of the universe: you can't get something from nothing.

By redistributing wealth, there are massive losses in the system. Also, if one's income is taxed away, the incentive to earn is also killed. The result of this is LOSS OF PRODUCTIVI-TY. Loss of productivity is a cause of inflation, because one produces less goods and services, while the amount of money remains the same or greater. No amount of money can buy something if nobody has any incentive to make something to be bought. Thus, that line about handouts not causing inflation is simply not true: A given amount of money must be balanced by an equivalent amount of goods and services, or there is inflation. For the poor, this is the most devastating hardship of them all.

To conclude, here is a quote from the book, Restoring the American Dream, which is found on page 165:

"When it is no longer worth the producers' while to produce, when they are taxed so highly to keep the politicians and their friends on the public payroll that they, themselves, no longer have a reasonable chance of success at any economic enterprise, then, of course, production grinds to a halt...

"When this happens, when the producers can no longer sustain on their backs the increasing load of the parasites, then the activity of the parasites must stop also, but usually not before they have brought down the entire social structure which the producers' activities have created. When the organism dies, the parasite necessarily dies, too, but not until the organism hs paid for the presence of the parasite with its life. It is in just this way that the major civilizations of the world have collapsed."

Women should take stand not to stand at UC toilets

I would like to address the women of this university and enlist their aid in combating a major but unspoken problem in the Tech University Center. Although each female who has visited the UC at one time or another has confronted the difficulties this problem creates, because of its nature, it has received little or no publicity. There is a time in every woman's life when she feels she must stand for something. It is my desire,

UC toilet stall! I am, of course, referring to the objects which replace toilets in the restrooms of the older portions of the UC. I'm sure their purchase and installation was a source of pride and innovative genius years ago. Their existence, however, remains a source of anxiety and confusion to numerous women throughout the cam-

however, that I don't make my stand in a

The units are supposedly designed with sanitation in mind. I'm not quite sure whose sanitation is concerned - mine or the janitor's - because the facilties are never used, I'm sure they remain very sanitary indeed. Let me explain why the units aren't used.

First, the structure of the units

("feminine urinals") is so foreign, so masculine, and completely squared off, no one wants to attempt to use one. If mother nature will not permit waiting for a more normal device, and one does go into the stall, an adventure in awkwardness results. (You may not have time for this adventure if you're between classes.) The procedure ensues: if one chooses to sit, there is no seat; what occurs is a precarious perch on a very cold, damp, hard surface somewhat akin to the edge of the lavatory. It's uncomfortable to say the least, and dangerous if one slips easily. If you happen to be the pioneer type, and try to stand, it is best if you wear no lower apparel, because you will have to remove it or drag it along the floor as you try to straddle the contraption without tripping entirely. Another thing, little girls weren't meant to "shoot straight" - I certainly don't. The sign on the stall door reads: FOR YOUR HIGH STAN-DARDS OF CLEANLINESS. My high standards of cleanliness do not include splattering my feet with something I had intended to flush away.

It's my guess that the University Center's female patrons would not be disappointed if the devices were replaced, or destroyed completely and honeypots or old coffee cans put in their places. There is more to consider than student needs; community functions and programs which the public attend are held in the UC and older women must face agonizing puzzlement each time they confront one of the things.

If only all of us, from TTU students, faculty and staff members, Tech community patrons, to visitors from all over - director of the UC, the Tech president, the the world, would unite in an effort to oust the obnoxious creatures from their shiny

In his 75 years, Earnest Wallace has farmed, labored at a sawmill, coached sports, taught and administrated. Now, the Tech Horn Professor is considered to be one of the leading Texas

Wallace recently was awarded a $1,000 Leadership Award by the Texas State Historical Association. The award is "given to honor outstanding leadership in promoting understanding of the American way of life," a news release by the TSHA said. The award is not a writing or teaching award, but such activities might be the basis for nomination, the release said.

The Texas native has published approximately 15 books and 20 articles pertaining to Texas and the Southwest. Recently, Wallace co-wrote a second edition of Texas: The Lone Star State, a book that Wallace anticipates will become a standard text of secondary and college Texas history courses across the state.

Knowledge of Wallace's work is not restricted to Texas. His book The Comanches: Lords of the South Plains was selected in 1953 by the American Institute of Graphic Arts for display in the major libraries of England and the United States. Wallace said he knows of the book's use in Snain and Russia.

set a pattern for new history by combining ethnology with history," Wallace said.

Wallace has written articles for The Texas Outlook, West Texas Historical Association Year Book, Arizona and the West

Wallace served as editor-consultant of the Time-Life Books Old West Series, The Great Chiefs and The Texans. He also wrote three articles for Encyclopedia Britannica in 1959.

In his book, The Howling of the Coyotes, Wallace chronicled the most intense attempts of separatist Texans who demanded throughout history a division of the state into separate parts. The book details the activities of West Texas reconstructionists in 1868-1869 who lobbied for a separation of the plains region from the state of Texas and "for the region's speedy admission to the Union under Republican Rule.

Wallace, who is a former Texas State Historical Association president, became one of the first four Horn Professors of History in 1967. He has taught more than 30 different courses since he came to Tech in 1936.

Professor linked with Reserve

UD Staff Writer

To many the Federal Reserve System, the institution that sets monetary policy for the country, seems distant and far removed from everyday life in Lubbock, Texas.

The fact is, though, a Tech professor is closely involved with the Federal Reserve System and provides a link, so to speak, between West Texas economic concerns and the economic concerns of the country as a whole.

J. Wayland Bennett, Thompson Professor of agricultural finance and associate dean for industry relations in the College of Agriculture, is a member of the board of directors of the District Federal Reserve Bank in Dallas. Bennett is a Class B director elected by Group Two banks. That may sound complicated, but it really is not, as Bennett explains:

"The board of directors of each of the 12 district Federal Reserve banks consists of nine members, who fall into three categories: Class A directors, Class B directors and Class C directors. Class A directors are bankers; Class B directors are people involved in business, education, agriculture and the like (not bankers); and Class C directors are those who are appointed by the Board of Governors (of the Federal Reserve System in Washington)," he said.

"There is no difference in authority or responsibilities between A, B or C directors; it's just a matter of representation. A diversity of areas is represented, and I represent my area of expertise, which is agriculture. I try to keep up with agriculture and energy, not only in West Texas, but also throughout the district," he said.

In addition, the bank size comes into play in the selection of directors. Banks are broken into three groups according to

Each bank group nominates and elects members to the Dallas Federal Reserve Bank's Board of Directors for threeyear terms. The eleventh district, the Dallas bank's district, encompasses all of Texas, the northern part of Louisiana, the southwestern portion of Oklahoma and the southern and eastern parts of New Mexico, Bennett said.

Bennett attends a meeting once a month in Dallas, and a summary of that meeting is sent to the Board of Governors in Washington for its consideration. However, Bennett does more than attend a meeting once a month.

"We meet once a month in Dallas, and we have a telephone conference at least every two weeks - and that gets to be every day when the interest rate, the discount rate and the prime rate change a lot," he said.

The Board of Governors makes the monetary policy, he said, but "there is continual input from the grass root level - a flow of information up as well as down that is being considered as decisions are made.'

As President Reagan plans for a tight fiscal budget, the Federal Reserve System, which is an independent system, seems to be complementing Reagan's efforts by instituting a tight monetary policy, restricting the growth of the money

Bennett said the Federal Reserve is "at the present time in line with his (Reagan's) tight fiscal budget policies - this year there will be a smaller growth in the money supply than

Though he does not know exactly how Reagan's tax cuts will go through Congress, they probably will "be part for business and part for the individual. But the effect on the economy will have a lot to do with how the tax law is written," Bennett said.

"For example, it may be written in such a way to encourage capital investment, investment in plant and equipment, which would replace older equipment in industries. The newer equipment would result in more output per man hour, which would increase productivity," he said.

Declaration of federal role Budget: political document

WASHINGTON (AP) - Despite all the numbers, the dollar signs and fiscal jargon, President Reagan's revised budget is as much a political document as any party platform, providing the clearest declaration to date of his view of the federal role in American life.

In a sense, the figures attached to Reagan's plan "to alleviate the grievous economic plight of our people" are almost secondary. The primary goal of his budget is a permanent reduction in not only the size, but the powers of U.S.

As Reagan put it so often during his presidential campaign, he wants to "get the government off the backs of the people.

As opponents of the Reagan cuts are certain to point out, the flip side of that goal means throwing a lot of people off the back of the government, people who, though employed, live on the edge of poverty.

News Analysis

So, despite the fact that the nation's governors recently met with Reagan and told him they remain convinced the federal government should pick up all the costs of traditional welfare programs, the president's budget moves in the opposite direction.

For the Pentagon, the increases are almost as dramatic as the decreases elsewhere. Reagan proposed cutting $48.6 billion from a broad range of programs in the Fiscal 1982 budget submitted to Congress by Jimmy Carter. At the same time, Reagan proposes increasing defense spending by $4.8 billion.

The Pentagon's share of the budget rises from 24 percent this year to 27 percent during the fiscal year beginning next Oct. 1, and 38 percent by the fiscal year starting Oct. 1, 1985. To anyone who followed Reagan's campaign speeches, the tilt toward defense spending is no

But boosting defense and reducing the government's social role are political rather than economic goals, even though their attainment is made easier by economic conditions. The pure economics in the Reagan program to "move America back toward economic sanity" is the proposal for a three-year, 30 percent cut in tax rates. That plan is questioned by many in Congress, including Republicans, and is the portion of the Reagan program given the least chance for approval.

Cutting government spending is a goal with almost universal support in Washington.

But for most Democrats and some Republicans, budget-cutting is an interim necessity dictated by economic conditions. They look ahead to a time when economic conditions will permit a restoration of the federal government's role in helping individuals and communities deal with problems such as mass transit, housing or medical care.

It is a view in sharp contrast to the Reagan belief that the federal government is the pro-

Short shorts

The rating system for Lifestyles' Short Shorts is the same as Tech's GPA grading system with 4.0 being excellent and 0.0 deserving no credit. The movies are rated by members of The UD staff. Initials of the reviewer appear following the short. PB/Pat Barton; MC/M. W. Clark; MJ/Mindy Jackson; LM/Laurie Massingill; RM/Ronnie McKeown; SS/Sandy Stone; CW/Clay Wright.

ALTERED STATES (Fox 4) Don't go to see Ken Russell's film, Altered States . . . go to experience Altered States. Taken from the novel of the same name by Paddy Chayefaky, the incredible ideas on genetic memory, psychedelic drugs and sensory deprivation as set forth by Russell may be a little hard to swallow. Be warned. Altered States is not for everyone. The technical effects are superior. The performances, particularly that of William Hurt, are formidable. Altered States is a give and take relationship between the audience and director Russell . . . bring Russell an open mind and he'll fill it with new ideas and experiences, an amazing cinematic display. Lifestyles

THE COMPETITION (Showplace 6) Though Richard Dreyfuss' character is a little hard to believe at times, this romantic story hardly suffers. Amy Irving is great as Dreyfuss' competition in a prestigious piano contest. If you're a fan of either player, by all means, go see The Competition. If not, you may find the film a little slow. There is plenty of fantastic classical music, though. Lee Remick is the idolmaker of classical music as Irving's coach, but not at her acting best. Lifestyles GPA 3.1 LM

ELEPHANT MAN (Mann 4) David Lynch's Elephant Man is a moving cinematic experience. The subject of one man's fight to rise above bodily disfigurement is a stirring statement on exploitation. John Hurt is John (Joseph) Merrick, the Elephant Man. Hurt's portrayal is sensitive and seemingly heartfelt. At times Elephant Man is devasting. Lifestyles GPA 3.0 LM

EYEWITNESS (Cinema West) This film is sometimes as dull as a rerun of the 10 O'Clock News, but give it a chance. The title may be misleading since the film has little to do with actual reporting. A young veteran (William Hurt of Altered States) tries to attract a young reporter (Sigourney Weaver) by pretending to know more about a murder than he really does, involving the two lovers in a clever cat-and-mouse thriller...thriller, sometimes. The film isn't really boring just burdened...with unnecessary and confusing characters and subplots that have no place in the film. Writer Steve Tesich (Breaking Away) is responsible for the script and seems to have good intentions in mind. Performances by Hurt and Weaver are good. Lifestyles GPA 2.9 LM

FLASH GORDON (Showplace 6) Flash, an innocent New York Jets' quarterback, and Dale Arden, an innocent reporter, are reluctantly forced to accompany a scientist in his your typical modern science fiction. It rather follows the 1934-based comic strip. Its effects are less realistic than those of Star Wars and Alien, but not less fun. The provacative colors and backgrounds add a great dimension to the film. This dialogue is often silly, if not just plain dumb. This movie must not be taken seriously to be enjoyed. Flash Gordon is highly recommended for children and acid-heads. Lifestyles long-shot chance of saving the earth from the evil Emperor Ming. This movie is not

FORT APACHE, THE BRONX (UA Cinema 4) Fort Apache, the Bronx is a movie that starts off like a flaming arrow. It's swift, blazing and lethal. The film ends in the same way, but what happens in between these two bull's-eye arrows leaves Fort Apache whizzing by, far off-target. Problems lie with an inconsistent plotline. But still, director Daniel Petrie is able to show us the man inside the cop with a very good showing by Paul Newman as an aging New York cop. Ed Asner also turns in a fine supporting performance as the tough by-the-book captain in the film. Lifestyles GPA

THE JAZZ SINGER (UA Cinema 4) Neil Diamond tried; he really tried hard. But that's the problem. His anxious and intense concentration to do a good acting job showed on screen. He was calculating each word said, analyzing each movement made. But the moment he opens his mouth to sing, everything is forgiven. He relaxes in his natural environment of songs and gives one great stage performance after another. The soundtrack is the success of The Jazz Singer. Never before (and maybe never again) have pop, soft rock and jazz been so beautifully combined on screen. This credit belongs to Diamond who composed all the music. The lyrics of Diamond's songs tell half the story themselves without dialogue. "Hello Again," "America" and "Love on the Rocks" each deserve best song nominations from the Academy. As for the film's co-stars. Laurence Olivier, hailed the world's greatest actor, is not worth mentioning for his role as Diamond's father. Lucy Arnaz once again displays her acting and comedic talents by giving a very likeable and believable portrayal of Diamond's agent/lover. Lifestyles GPA 3.2 MJ

POPEYE (Showplace 6) This film joins the ranks of Flash Gordon and Superman as yet another comic book-turned-Hollywood. This one, however, doesn't translate quite as well as the others. It does provide some nice entertainment, though, if you can put up with a musical score that coops in at the most awkward and unwarranted times.

Why Robin Williams as Popeye was so severely chastised by the critics for his role, I'll never know. Probably no other actor in Hollywood could do such a perfect rendition. Shelly Duvall as Olive Oyl was almost perfect. Be forewarned that this film translates more from the comic books than from the old Saturday morning cartoons, in case you see some things you didn't expect, or expect some things you didn't see. Not a disappointing film. Lifestyles GPA 3.3 SS

RAGING BULL (UA Cinema 4) A queasy feeling accompanies a viewing of director Martin Scorsese's Raging Bull...a feeling that rises and falls in one's stomach like a sickness. It's not just the violence of the fight world or the language, but the unsettling feeling of being exposed to another human being's degradation, humiliation and pain. Raging Bull, adapted from fighter Jake La Motta's autobiography, seems to be more a general look at winning and losing, in the ring and in reality, than just the story of one fighter. The film is a study in cruelty, human indignity, failure, abuse, egos, jealousy, violence and male dominance. Robert De Niro has been nominated for Best Actor for his role as fighter Jake La Motta. De Niro may well deserve the award, though the film hardly ranks as a contender for Best Picture. Lifestyles GPA 3.4 I.M.

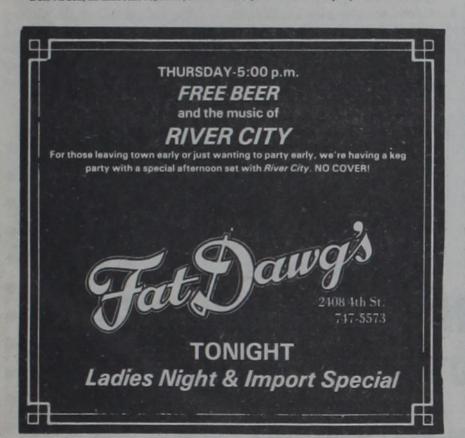

STIR CRAZY (Fox 4) Gene Wilder and Richard Pryor are back again, in good form. Wilder steals the show in this film as a gentle spirit, who along with Pryor, is accused of staging a bank heist. Writer Bruce Jay Freidman has some really clever dialogue between the two characters, and the film seems to have more plot than previous Wilder-Pryor films, though, at times, the character development is sketcy. Credit should be given also to actor-turned-director Sidney Poitier. Language might be offensive to some. Lifestyles GPA 3.0 LM

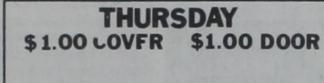

TESS (Mann 4) It's dangerous, very dangerous, to make absolute statements in the field of film reviews, but . . . Tess could well be the BEST film of the year. This film has the potential to be another Gone With the Wind, with theater patrons returning to see Tesa year after year as the film is revived periodically by popular demand. The cinematography is exquiste. The costumes are lavish. The acting is sensitive, perhaps brilliant: 19-year-old Natassia Kinski is perfect as the young Tess - beautiful, sensual, innocent. Peter Firth and Leigh Lawson are well-cast as her husband and master, respectively. Not enough can be said about the scenery and photography of Geoffrey Unsworth and Ghisland Cloquet. But the film belongs to director Roman Polanski.

Polanski proves that a riveting, lyrical motion picture can be produced without the sex and violence that typifies films of the recent past. In fact, the director almost goes overboard keeping his adaptations of Thomas Hardy's novel (far racier than the film) on an even keel. Polanski has made a masterpiece, one that will surely be recognized by the Academy members come Oscar time. (Tess has been nominated for six awards). OK, I said it was dangerous, but I'm going to climb out on a limb anyway and say Tess is the best film of the year. If anyone makes a better film than Tess, I'll just take a flying leap off that limb. Any film better than Tess would be showing in heaven anyway. Lifestyles GPA 3.99 LM

TRIBUTE (Winchester) Tribute is like an onion. Director Bob Clark peels layer after emotional layer from Bernard Slade's screenplay, eventually exposing the heart of the matter in the bitter separation between a father and son...and few dry eyes are left in the audience after the lights come up. Jack Lemmon has been nominated for Best Actor for his Tribute role as a Broadway press agent dying of cancer. Robby Benson is his son, Jud, who has to deal with and accept his father as well as his father's illness. The film is a fine tribute to Lemmon's immense talents showcased in this film. Lee Remick and Colleen Dewhurst also star in Tribute. Lifestyles GPA 3.75 LM

The Tech men's tennis team twinbill sweep at Chaparral scrambled to a 5-4 victory Monday over San Angelo State at the Tech courts.

The Raiders picked up singles victories from Mark Thompson, David Earhart and Jeff Bramlett. Zahid Maniya and Bramlett teamed up to defeat ASU's Chas Hostick and Rene pleted his third game of the Trevino in one doubles match and Fred Viancos and Lane Carroll defeated Mitch Nichols and Randy Gardner in the deciding more than the seven inning doubles match.

Teams capture tourney titles

By VINCE PARSONS Grad Assistant

The season-long pursuit of an All-University Basketball Championship was realized Sunday night for three teams. I ADA Pi captured the women's basketball title by dimming the luster of the Shooting Stars, 44-37. Sarice Price paced a balanced

A.D.A. attack with 14 points and Arinda Speer chipped in nine more. The Shooting Star's Julie Parrish led all scores with 23 The Pikes "A" team added a basketball championship to go with its football title as it blasted Off the Wall II, 80-66. The Pikes' quickness, which manifested itself in a devastating fastbreak, was simply too much for the Wall. Richard Gray and Kelly Newsom were the big guns for the Pikes, as they had 23 and 19 points respectively.

Off the Wall played superb basketball until its Sunday afternoon debacle. It defeated the top ranked team, The Aloha Brothers, in a tense overtime struggle. Then it defeated a tough Ain't Got A Name ballclub in a nail biter, 73-71. The Pikes breezed through the Greek playoffs with only Alpha Kappa Psi giving it a real scare. AKP forward, Curtis Clerkley, had a succinct rationale for the Pikes' success: coaching, tremendous poise and discipline, and supportive fans.

In the Campus Community Championship game, The Mail Service downed the Legal Eagles, 83-65.

Sophomore lifter loyal to sport

By VINCE PARSONS

Rec Sports Graduate Assistant Since I possess a physique that resembles the 90 pound weakling in the Charles Atlas Ads, I have never been enamored to the Adonis types who "pump the iron."

Jealousy and envy are more accurate descriptions of my feelings. However, I must admit a begrudging respect for the tremendous discipline and sacrifice that a dedicated weight lifter

Mickey Travis is one of Tech's weight lifting partisans and he definitely has the muscles to prove it. The sophomore business major has participated in a wide range of sports, but now sticks strictly to a body building routine.

Mickey works out an average of three hours a day, six days a week. He splits his workout into morning and evening sessions and claims it never gets old or boring. He credits his continued zest to his roommate, who works out with him and spurs him on through competition.

He has a rather interesting training regime in regards to diet. Mickey eats four meals a day and tries to strike a perfect balance between his protein and carbohydrate consumption. He believes that textbook diets are useless and that each person must find his own individualistic diet that best suits him or her. For snacks, he digests raw eggs and gelatin, a rather unappetizing duo, but then I'm the one with the toothpick arms.

When attempting to lift a particular heavy weight, Mickey psychs himself into believing that the weight is an enemy that must be conquered. Screams, grunts, groans, and indescribable animal-like noises are all parts of Mickey's weaponry that are used to defeat the dreaded bar. I asked Mickey if his tremendous muscular development ever caused women to view him as a sex object. He smiled and said, "I hope so."

Intramural Reminder

All dual sports participants are reminded that Friday is the next deadline date. Play your matches before leaving for spring break. No extensions wll be given by the Intramural office.
