Tension high as Colombian drug summit starts

By The Associated Press

CARTAGENA, Colombia — President Bush and three Latin American leaders, conducting a drug-fighting summit under an unusually heavy air, sea and land security cover, reached agreement Thursday on a coordinated attack against cocaine producers and murderous traffickers.

Bush and Colombian President Virgilio Barco agreed that the talks were "a significant step toward improved anti-drug coordination." They pledged that drug trafficking must be "confronted squarely and eliminated."

Responding to Colombian complaints that U.S. trade policy has harmed its major legal exports such as coffee, cut flowers and sugar, Bush promised to work to help open more U.S. markets.

Bush and Barco, who met separately before they joined Bolivian President Jaime Paz and Peru's Alan Garcia, also said in a joint statement that drug trafficking must be "confronted squarely and eliminated."

U.S. officials also reached agreement with Bolivia to help stem the movement of U.S. firearms into South American nations and signed tax accords with both Bolivia and Peru aimed at establishing a system to trace drug profits and money-laundering schemes.

"It's significant to note that this is the first time that the major producing and consuming nations have joined together in a coordinated strategy," Secretary of State James A. Baker III told reporters.

He called the agreements with Peru and Bolivia, "the first concrete step which these countries are taking."

Barco, greeting Bush and Presidents Alan Garcia of Peru and Jaime Paz of Bolivia at the outset of the meeting, vowed that "we will persevere in this struggle so that thousands of Colombians will not have died in vain."

Bush said it was important that he and the others "exchange views candidly" about how to attack the surging drug problem. He said earlier that peasant farmers should substitute other crops for their coca crops.

Said Barco: "We have come to make up for lost time. We are on the front lines. For us this is not a war of words."

Typifying the ultra-tight security accompanying the talks was the presence of gunboats, warships, about 5,000 armed guards, Navy frogmen and bomb-sniffing dogs.

In sweltering humidity, Bush met at a heavily fortified Navy base with the three Andean leaders to sign an agreement pledging increased U.S. military and economic aid in return for a strengthened commitment by South American nations to the war on drugs.

Asked by reporters at the start of his six-hour visit whether he was afraid, Bush, standing beside Barco, asked: "Afraid of what?"

Gunboats patrolled Cartagena Bay. The sparkling blue waterway was closed to harbor traffic. Frogmen checked the bay. Helicopters buzzed overhead. About 5,000 security guards roamed the almost empty streets. A squadron of fighter bombers and a fleet of warships stood by. Dogs sniffed for bombs.

Landing at Barranquilla airport after an early-morning flight from Washington, Bush flew 60 miles in a swarm of five helicopters. The helicopters rode fast and hugged the terrain in an evasive tactic.

Bush's helicopter landed fast, blowing hats and helmets off security guards spaced around the parade grounds. Under nearby palm trees, a U.S. counter-assault team looked on.

Student Senate passes resolution to investigate Tech condom machines

By CHRIS BOBBITT
The University Daily

The Student Senate passed a resolution Thursday night stating that the senate will investigate the placement of condom machines in lobby restrooms of all residence halls at Texas Tech.

The resolution was introduced by Sen. Todd Klein who, along with the other authors of the resolution, Senators Grady Whitaker and Tina Winslow, will form an ad-hoc committee to "investigate and pursue this issue with its members to include the authors of this legislation, representatives of the RHA (Residence Halls Association), and other interested person or party."

"The only thing I have against this piece of legislation is the fact that we are kind of telling students that 'Hey, we don't care what you do, just don't get a disease doing it.' I don't like that kind of morality and I don't think it is something the senate should be promoting," said law school Sen. Todd White.

"There isn't any sort of morality being dictated in this," Klein said. "We are not promoting sex, not even promoting safe sex, we are simply saying that if you choose to have sex, then condoms should be available. It is not an issue of morality."

"Are we really trying to help prevent AIDS, or are we hurting the image of Tech?" said Sen. Don Myers. "If I had seen those (condom machines) when I was here during freshman orientation, I would have gone to UT or Baylor."

"There is a social faux pas about buying condoms even with the threat of AIDS," said Sen. Grady Whitaker. "We have this AIDS crisis that is supposedly going to make sex safer, we have these sexually transmitted diseases and still there is this social faux pas about buying condoms."

Whitaker said the RHA will be conducting a survey through the residents to see if the residents feel the issue is important.

Other business included the voting down of Senate Concurrent Resolution 25:04, which addresses changes in the current senate grade requirements. The senate voted 19 for and 20 against the resolution. The resolution called for a change in the current cumulative grade point average of 2.00 to a semester grade point average of 2.00.

Petitions are being distributed to students to get the concurrent resolution on the ballot in March.

"This issue is up to the students to vote on," said Sen. Stuart Schmidt.

"It is not up to us to decide; that is the students' job and right to do so."

"Our constitution states that all students are members of the Student Association — by bringing this proposal forward and taking it to the voters — if they approve it, you have just disenfranchised part of this campus," said White. "I can't imagine this body wanting to do that. Even if the majority of the students approve this thing, they are taking rights away from over 2,000 students on this campus."

The senate passed a senate resolution endorsing a cooperative program at Texas Tech "in recognition of the need to develop closer relationships with recruiters and provide students with career-related experience." Co-op programs exist at other major universities such as the University of Texas, University of North Texas and Texas A&M University.

Another senate resolution, stating that students should have access to information regarding the dismissal of Mary Anne Mitchell, or students should be given an explanation as to why the information behind the dismissal is withheld, was sent to the University Life Committee chaired by Sen. Brett Hobbs.

A concurrent resolution updating the constitution on elections was passed for immediate adoption. The resolution states that senatorial elections will be completed by the fifth day of April each year.

The senate also approved immediate adoption of a concurrent resolution, introduced by graduate Sen. Doug Tate, stating that graduate senators and senators representing the law school be allowed to carry a course load of only six hours instead of the full-time load of nine hours.

Other business included the immediate adoption of another concurrent resolution stating that the newly elected senate will meet by the first day of May each year.

The senate passed a senate resolution commending the efforts of the Faculty Senate for improving teaching skills and encouraging students receiving surveys to complete and return them so the Faculty Senate can continue its improvements.

The senate also passed a resolution recommending that a change machine be placed on the first floor of the business administration building near the snack bar.

High-gusting winds scream across Lubbock area

It could have been a scene from the Wizard of Oz Thursday as Mother Nature huffed and puffed across Lubbock and the South Plains, leaving in her wake forceful winds for local residents to struggle against.

Early morning rain and fog that reduced visibility gave way to high winds Thursday morning as an upper-level low pressure system pushed its way through the South Plains.

West winds reached 40 mph with gusts climbing to 60 mph.

Farm houses didn't spin out of control, but they were replaced by loose papers and flying coattails as Tech students clad in warm clothes and toting backpacks pitted their skills against high winds as they fought their way across campus.

Following an overnight low in the lower teens, Tech students can look forward to sunny skies and a high temperature in the mid-40s today.

Politicians address Tech Republicans

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

Kevin Williams, a Republican candidate for Lubbock County Court-at-Law No. 2, said at a College Republicans meeting Thursday night that he guarantees objectivity.

"I'm guaranteeing my objectivity," Williams said. "As a lawyer, the only thing I ever guarantee to my client is that I'll work hard and do the very best I can. I never guarantee a result, because that's not something I can guarantee."

"But I can tell you that when the lawyers walk out of my court they may say, 'Kevin Williams is the dumbest judge I've seen in my life,'" he said. "What they won't be able to say fairly is, 'I saw Kevin talking to another lawyer, and he gave me a raw deal.'"

Williams' wife is a felony prosecutor for the Lubbock County criminal district attorney's office, but he said he does not foresee a conflict of interest if he is elected. He said he would try only misdemeanors and that his wife would not file or try cases or supervise lawyers involved in cases scheduled in his court.

He said he contacted the Texas State Bar Association and a local grievances committee before deciding to run. Both groups said no conflict of interest would occur.

"My wife will try no cases in that court," Williams said. "She will not supervise the lawyers who try cases in that court. If she does, either I'll transfer the case to another court, or I'll refuse the case."

Currently a Lubbock attorney, Williams said he deals only with commercial litigation.

"One of the past presidents of the defense lawyers association asked me if I have a problem defending somebody that I know is guilty," Williams said. "Yeah, I do. Somebody's got to defend him. I just don't want it to be me. I don't want somebody who's been accused of a crime coming into my office saying, 'I want to get off.'"

Morris Turner, a Republican candidate for Lubbock County judge, said at the meeting that he has the experience necessary for the office.

"I've had experience in government," he said. "I think I know what government is all about as far as representing the people. In my observations over the years, taxpayers only want a dollar's worth of government for a dollar's worth of taxes."

Turner said elected officials often cannot differentiate between the essential and the extravagant. He said he knows the difference.

Turner was elected Lubbock mayor in 1972. He said he was responsible for placing a voting box on the Tech campus when he was a city commissioner between 1968 and 1972.

"Prior to that time, you did not have a voting box," he said. "The first vote was such an overwhelming success. The first vote in the city elections, I think it was three for me and two against me. There wasn't a real big turnout."

"I would classify it as a bright young councilman who saw a need. I had a lot of activity involving the campus during my races for city council and mayor. The fact was that there was no convenient place on campus to vote."

Turner said politicians often criticize each other but that the United States has the best government in the world.

Jurors hear tanker spill conversation

By The Associated Press

ANCHORAGE, Alaska — Jurors in Joseph Hazelwood's trial heard a tape recording Thursday of the skipper's harried voice reporting the tanker Exxon Valdez had run aground and that he was "trying to steer off the reef."

The recording was of conversations between Hazelwood and the Coast Guard in the minutes after the nation's worst oil spill early last March 24.

"Exxon Valdez, over," began the first transmission of Hazelwood's voice. He said, "We should be on your radar. We've fetched up hard aground ... evidently we're leaking some oil and we're going to be here for quite a while."

The Coast Guard responded, "You're about a mile north of Bligh Reef?," to which Hazelwood said, "That's correct." He promised a status report.

Within minutes, the captain of the port, Coast Guard Cmdr. Steven McCall, was on the radio asking for more information.

"We're working our way off the reef," Hazelwood said. "Right now we're trying to steer off the reef."

McCall then urged Hazelwood to "take it slow and easy," promising that help was on the way. He warned against doing "anything drastic to try to get under way" and told Hazelwood, "I wouldn't do much wiggling."

Prosecutors allege Hazelwood tried a potentially hazardous maneuver after the grounding which could have capsized the crippled ship.

De Klerk revives hope of racially equal country

Guy Lawrence
Editor

The South African government released long-jailed African National Congress leader Nelson Mandela this week, yet he is not a free man.

The government now must begin to start serious negotiations to incorporate the majority of the country into the active political spectrum of the nation in order for all black South Africans to be free from the racist policy of apartheid.

Some critics of Mandela say that since he advocates the violent overthrow of the government, he deserves to be jailed. Others say that our policy against South Africa has been too harsh compared to our policy against the Soviet Union with its own share of human rights abuses. They say South Africa always has been supportive of our foreign policy.

Mandela and the ANC took the only means available to them, a guerrilla campaign, for promoting the cause of racial equality since political participation was denied black people. Mandela explains that he is prepared to die for the idea of a democratic South Africa — a conviction most Americans should understand.

The United States' record for racial equality is nothing to brag about, but having a close relation with a racist government only impairs our position on racism.

It was a bold move by South African President F.W. de Klerk to release Mandela, who spent 27 years in prison. De Klerk risks losing more support to the extreme right wing. Consequently, hundreds of neo-Nazis waving swastika-like symbols gathered in Pretoria to protest the release of Mandela and to call for the overthrow of the de Klerk government.

When P.W. Botha, de Klerk's predecessor, promised to free Mandela if he denounced violence, Mandela held steady and demanded that the government dismantle the system of apartheid before he would. Now he is a man released unconditionally under the de Klerk government.

De Klerk finds himself in an uncomfortable position. He has to balance the interests of the majority blacks against the wishes of the white minority. He says the state of emergency could be lifted soon and that the release of other political prisoners also could be arranged or negotiated; he seems to be moving in the right direction.

When de Klerk talks about democracy, he may not does not mean complete democracy for South Africa — which is unfair to expect since no one operates a complete democracy.

De Klerk is concerned with maintaining control of the economy and the political system. He refers to it as protecting the rights of the minority. De Klerk has said that some day there will be a one-man, one-vote policy with protections to ensure the rights of the minority.

On the other hand, the blacks are eager for racial equality in all aspects of national life — and they should be. Why should they settle for anything less than total equality?

The United States understandably is eager to lift sanctions against South Africa, but we should hold steady until more concrete negotiations are under way to show that the government is headed in the right direction.

Henicide leads to homicide

Joe Murray
Columnist

ANGELINA COUNTY — According to what the Egg Lady tells me, the chickens are coming home to roost at Rocky Hill.

Dead ones, at that.

That's the trouble with the Egg Lady. You ask her how things are going, and she proceeds to tell you.

"Oh, most everything is peaceful enough at the moment," she allowed. "But I imagine that won't last long. There's liable to be a killing any day now."

"Good grief!" I exclaimed. "Surely not."

"Sure 'nuff," she said. "Somebody's dogs have been killing chickens."

"Oh," I said, greatly relieved. "I thought you meant killing people."

"That's exactly what I mean," she said. "Dogs killing chickens is how it starts. People killing people is how it ends up."

Indeed, to her way of thinking, henicide is the next thing to homicide. Well, actually, it's the next to next thing.

"One fellow's dog kills another fellow's chickens," the Egg Lady explained.

"The owner of the dead chickens, in turn, shoots the dog. Then the owner of the dead dog feels obliged to shoot the owner of the dead chickens. One thing does tend to lead to another."

"Well, when I caught my dog killing chickens," she said, "I whipped him with the dead chicken's feet."

"Precisely! Chicken feet being..." I paused a moment to try to gather my thoughts. "... Being, er, poetic justice?"

"Chicken feet being the only thing I had handy when I caught him," she said. "But it did the trick."

"I suppose you have to be careful, though, not to over-do it."

"Then, again," she continued, "I suppose you could always do what my grandmother did — tie a dead chicken 'round the dog's neck."

"Precisely!" I said. "Tie a dead chicken..."

At this point my thoughts, not unlike chickens before the dogs, had hopelessly scattered.

"Er, why precisely would you tie a dead chicken around a dog's neck?" I inquired, as one civilized human being to another.

"That'll teach the dog not to kill chickens," she said.

"Oh, I see. It's a symbol of dishonor."

"No, it's a dead chicken," she said.

"Every dog that comes along will be jumping on him, trying to whip him and take away his chicken. After awhile, he'll have learned his lesson."

"That it's a dog-eat-dog world?" I said, weakly.

"Precisely," she said.

Weigh your options

To the editor:

This letter is in response to all the letters that have been written by pro-life and pro-choice advocates. You are all right. You have all stated your beliefs clearly and succinctly, but you must remember that your beliefs are your own, and no one else's.

Everyone lives and behaves and believes in a way that is uniquely appropriate for him or her, and no one can change that. Those of you who are pro-life will never change the minds of those who are pro-choice, and in fact you drive them farther away each time you tell them they are wrong. Those of you who are pro-choice, well, I think you frighten the pro-life advocates. Pro-lifers will never believe that abortion is an option, and pro-choicers will never believe that it is wrong. Don't you see? Each belief is different and each belief is right, as long as it holds true for the individual. You cannot try to make a person of the opposite persuasion believe as you do, because your beliefs are not right for that person.

To be honest, I believe that a woman has the right to control her body and her life, and in my opinion abortion should be an option for all women. I don't really believe in Christianity as such, so all these quotes from the Bible and statements that "Jesus is alive" don't hold much sway with me.

But if a 14-, 16- or even a 20-year-old woman were to ask me, "What should I do?" I would have to say, "Weigh your options carefully." Adoption is always an option, although it is an equally difficult choice to make. Yes, I believe that abortion should remain legal, because I don't believe a woman should be persecuted for the choices she makes.

That shouldn't hurt you pro-lifers, because it doesn't affect you. None of you will have to experience an abortion, because it truthfully is not an option for you. But remember that it is an option for other women because they believe it is, and you cannot change that.

Help Lady Raiders!

To the editor:

Last semester the Texas Tech football team asked for our support during the season. With the help of the students, and against many odds, the Tech football team accomplished well beyond what most people had expected. This semester, we have another outstanding team that needs our support, the Texas Tech women's basketball team.

The Tech women have just come off impressive back-to-back victories against TCU and the University of Houston. The Raiders are in third place in the Southwest Conference as their record now stands at 15-8 for the year and 8-4 in conference play. However, this Sunday the Raider women face their hardest opponent of the year as the sixth-ranked Lady Longhorns come to Lubbock. The Lady Longhorns have managed to make a mockery out of the Southwest Conference over the past years. In fact, the Lady Longhorns have yet to lose a Southwest Conference game!

Tip-off is set for 2 p.m. Sunday. However, we ask that you arrive at 1:30 p.m. for a "Tech Warm-Up" pep rally. The band, cheerleaders, Pompon Girls and High Riders will be among the many spirit groups on hand to help the Raiders defeat the Longhorns. The High Riders also will do a streamer drop before the game. In addition, the game is going to be covered live on television, another reason for Tech fans to come out in force.

Please come out early this Sunday to give coach Marsha Sharp and her team the support they have deserved. The match-up will be among the best that women's basketball has to offer.

To the editor:

This is in response to James Fielding's letter, "Love it or Leave it," concerning the city of Lubbock as a thriving metropolis. Give me a break! Either you were hit in the head with a blunt object as a young child or you are completely out of your gourd. To say Dallas plays second fiddle to a city like Lubbock is simply ludicrous. You are not the only one who has lived in small towns before, or are you sure you did not just drive through a small town like Alpine, Texas?

In regard to your comparison of the crime rate between Lubbock and the Metroplex, it is like comparing Mount Everest to a mole hill. The Metroplex has 3,000,000 to 4,000,000 people, where as Lubbock has 200,000 at best. Per capita, we have discovered through statistics that Lubbock has one of the highest crime rates in the United States.

Living in Dallas for many years, we have yet to see the same stupid commercials Mr. Fielding was referring to. The commercials in Dallas are not made from someone's home video equipment. As far as the air quality of Lubbock, apparently you have not been privileged enough to smell the fine aroma emanating from the livestock and its surrounding areas, commonly known as "the smell from hell." We cannot say in our many years in Dallas that we have been blessed with this pleasant experience.

Not to get us wrong, Lubbock is not that bad. It is a good college town. However, not many people are going to stay in Lubbock after they graduate. So get a grip on reality, Mr. Fielding, Lubbock is nothing compared to Dallas, and rest assured, as soon as we graduate, Lubbock is all yours!

Erin Griffin

Congress grants funding for research lab

By HEATHER SCHAIBLE
The University Daily

The U.S. Congress approved $500,000 for the first phase of construction of a plant stress and water conservation research laboratory at Texas Tech in summer 1989.

The plant stress research program was established 12 years ago with funding provided by the university. For the past 10 years, funding has come from the Agricultural Research Service of U.S. Department of Agriculture. The amount has moved up to $1.6 million annually for the program. Tech scientists, ARS scientists and Texas Agricultural Experiment Station scientists work cooperatively.

"We started out with everyone working on the Tech campus, but now it has grown to where we now have five laboratories involved on campus, we have agricultural research people working north of the airport and we have the Texas Agricultural Experiment Station at their laboratory facility," said Robert Albin, associate dean for research and agricultural operations at Tech. "The real thrust of the laboratory is to bring everyone back together to keep the coordination and to keep moving ahead."

Albin and Sam Curl, dean of the College of Agricultural Sciences, have gone up annually to speak before the House of Representatives, the Senate and their subcommittees on agriculture to request funding for the research program plus a laboratory.

The money now will be spent on a research greenhouse on which construction will begin in three months. Funding also will be sought for the main laboratory, which will be north of the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center on Fourth Street midway between Quaker and Indiana avenues. ARS representatives from Washington have been coming in for about three weeks looking at the site.

Lubbock is the hub of an intensive agricultural area where all major crops grown on the Great Plains are cultivated. Variable soil texture, water quality, temperature and other environmental factors of the area provide excellent conditions for research with a variety of crops. Significant gains have been made in the areas of wheat, corn, cotton and grain.

"The USDA appointed a blue-ribbon panel in 1976 to study plant stress problems and research needs associated with plant stress in the U.S.," Albin said. "Most of it occurs in the Great Plains area (from southern Texas through the states leading up to North Dakota). In those states, a panel of USDA scientists studied all though this area to determine what needed to be done and where it needed to be done.

"Lubbock was chosen mainly for two reasons: all the crops grown in the Great Plains area can be grown at Lubbock, and it is also a very stressful environment, so stress due to lack of moisture and cold and heat stress can be studied."

The government felt a connection between a university and the lab was important, so the program was chosen to be operated in connection with Tech.

"One of the things we are most excited about is the graduate student involvement," Albin said. "When the number of scientists involved increases, then the hope is that the number of graduate students involved will increase."

Campus Briefs

Honor society to award fellowship

The Texas Tech chapter of the Phi Kappa Phi national honor society is sending applications to outstanding senior students for a graduate fellowship of $7,000 to support first-year graduate or professional study. Fifty fellowships will be awarded nationwide. Thirty additional students will receive honorable mention awards of $500 each. Each Phi Kappa Phi chapter may nominate one student for the awards.

The general criteria considered in the selection process are scholastic achievement, high standardized test scores, transcript records, honors and enrichment programs, promise of success in graduate or professional study, leadership abilities, participation in university and community activities, experience, evaluation by instructors and expression of study plans and career goals.

Phi Kappa Phi is a national scholastic honor society that recognizes academic excellence in all disciplines. The fellowship program was established in 1932 and since has awarded more than 1,000 fellowships. More than 400 people have received honorable mention awards.

Students eligible to apply for the fellowship will receive invitations this week to join Phi Kappa Phi. Invitations are based upon superior academic achievement and will be issued to no more than 10 percent of the graduating senior class. Students who receive invitations and who are interested in applying for fellowships should contact B.L. Allen, the chapter scholarship chairman, at 742-632 or Terry Ervin at 742-1921.

Student surveys to evaluate teacher performance

By CONNIE SWINNEY
The University Daily

Studying aspects of student retention helps determine the state of teaching at Texas Tech, said John Howe, Faculty Senate teaching committee chairman.

Howe said more than 1,200 randomly selected students will receive a survey next week that will address such questions as teacher evaluations.

Howe said past arts and sciences seminars identified factors contributing to student retention. Tech loses most dropout students in the first six weeks of the semester.

"Important factors in encouraging students to identify themselves with a university may influence student retention," he said. "The survey will address factors such as the feeling of accessibility of the professors like whether the professors keep office hours or whether the professors can call the students by name."

Howe said the committee hopes to receive at least two-thirds of the surveys to establish the validity necessary for generalizations of individual colleges.

The survey, however, will not obtain a sufficient response from particular sub-groups on campus, he said. Ethnic minorities or students about to drop out may need subset data.

"While the 1,200 sample may not seem large enough, we should receive enough data back to make statistically significant conclusions," he said.

The committee will receive the necessary data to evaluate what teachers may be doing wrong or right to make it easier to raise admission and teaching standards, he said.

'Restless Heart' starts Pikefest

By KIRK PARKS
The University Daily

Tonight and Saturday night mark the 17th annual Pikefest. That's right, it's that time again when more than 10,000 men, women and children invade the civic center exhibition hall.

This year, the Pikes are excited about the groups scheduled to perform, which include Restless Heart, which will be headlining tonight's show, and Earl Thomas Conley, who'll be headlining Saturday's show. The Lloyds and Ronna Reeves, will be opening both shows.

Restless Heart, which has had six consecutive number one singles on the country music charts, is expected to put on an exciting show.

Restless Heart, already scoring big its current album, "Fast Moving Train," and its fastest charting single, which is the title track, hopes to continue to blaze forward behind such notable bands as the Eagles, whose vocal harmonies greatly resemble that of Restless Heart, and Alabama, which helped to prove that a great country band could make it big. With back-to-back No. 1 albums, "Wheels," and "Big Dreams in a Small Town," the group continues to display its versatility and successful compilation of jazz, big band, gospel, folk and rock.

The Country Music Association, Academy of Country Music and the Grammy's have recognized Restless Heart's talent by nominating the band for Vocal Group of the Year.

As far as live shows go, Restless Heart has been playing to sold-out audiences everywhere with such artists

Restless Heart

Country music hitmakers "Restless Heart" will perform tonight at the 17th annual Pikefest at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. The yearly bash attracts people from across the state. Profits from the two-night event go to MDA.

as Alabama, the Judds and Bruce Hornsby and the Range.

Restless Heart isn't the only attraction at the festival. Earl Thomas Conley, who headlines Saturday's show, is one of country music's most consistent hit-makers. He continually draws crowds of all ages with such hits as: "What She Is Is a Woman in Love," "Love Out Loud," "We Believe in Happy Endings" and his latest hit, "Bring Back Your Love."

The Lloyds, who will open both shows, tend to play hits ranging from the Eagles, Steve Miller and other rock groups. Ronna Reeves, who also is playing both nights, is strictly country.

In addition to music, there'll be lots of other activities, games, and of course, BEER. And lots of it.

Doors open at 7 p.m. for tonight's show and 6 p.m. for Saturday's show.

The Lloyds will open at 7 p.m. both nights. Tickets are available at Ralph's Record and Tapes, Dollar Western Wear and at the door. All tickets cost $8, with any profits going to the Muscular Dystrophy Association. All ages are admitted.

'Miss Daisy' leads Oscar nominations

By The Associated Press

BEVERLY HILLS, Calif. — The bittersweet "Driving Miss Daisy" carried off a leading nine Academy Award nominations Wednesday as Oscar voters passed over box-office blockbusters and maverick movies with equal abandon.

"Daisy," which traces the relationship over the decades between a testy Jewish widow and her tolerant black chauffeur in the South, drew nominations for best picture and actors Morgan Freeman, Jessica Tandy and Dan Aykroyd.

"Born on the Fourth of July," director Oliver Stone's account of Ron Kovic's painful passage from blind patriotism to unselfish protest by way of a Vietnam injury that left him a paraplegic, got eight nominations, including best picture.

Also nominated in the top picture category by the Academy of Motion Picture Arts and Sciences were "Dead Poets Society," "Field of Dreams" and "My Left Foot."

"This is truly one of the happiest and most triumphant moments of my life," said Kovic.

Among other multiple nominees, "Glory," a look at an all-black regiment in the Civil War, and "My Left Foot," the story of an indomitable Irish artist with cerebral palsy, each earned five nominations.

"The Abyss," "The Adventures of Baron Munchausen," "Dead Poets Society" and "The Fabulous Baker Boys" grabbed four nominations each.

Oscar voters largely ignored many of the year's highest-grossing titles, as "Batman," "Indiana Jones and the Last Crusade," "Lethal Weapon 2," "Honey, I Shrunk the Kids" and "Look Who's Talking" captured only five nominations combined.

A number of modestly budgeted, independently minded efforts also were given short shrift, including the critically embraced "Drugstore Cowboy," which was shut out.

"Do the Right Thing," while landing on numerous critics' Top 10 lists, snared just two nominations, and "sex, lies and videotape," one of the best-received independent films of the decade, generated just one.

For the second time in two years, Academy voters did not nominate the year's most acclaimed documentary. "Roger & Me," filmmaker Michael Moore's satirical perspective on General Motors and the people of Flint, Mich., was overlooked.

In 1989, the Academy did not nominate Errol Morris' "The Thin Blue Line," the movie which set convicted murderer Randall Dale Adams free.

"Born on the Fourth of July" was nominated for Tom Cruise's lead performance as Kovic, for adapted screenplay, for Stone's direction, cinematography, editing, original score and sound.

Joining Freeman and Cruise in the race for best actor were Kenneth Branagh, the star, director and adaptor of Shakespeare's "Henry V," Daniel Day-Lewis, who played artist Christy Brown in "My Left Foot," and comedian Robin Williams, as an unconventional teacher in a very conventional school in "Dead Poets Society."

Isabelle Adjani, featured in France's "Camille Claudel" as an impassioned sculptress,

Miss Adjani will compete against Miss Tandy, who played the widow Miss Daisy; Pauline Collins, who starred as a frustrated British housewife who finds happiness on a Greek isle in "Shirley Valentine"; Jessica Lange, who defends an alleged Nazi war criminal who also is her father in "Music Box," and Michelle Pfeiffer, the chanteuse of "The Fabulous Baker Boys."

British stage star Branagh joins a select list of Oscar nominees by being recognized for both starring in and directing "Henry V."

In addition to Branagh, the nominees for best director were Stone for "Born on the Fourth of July," Allen for "Crimes and Misdemeanors," Peter Weir for "Dead Poets Society" and Jim Sheridan for "My Left Foot."

Belying a tradition that films released late in the year are favored in the Oscars, "Field of Dreams" was released April 21 and "Dead Poets Society" June 2.

"Field of Dreams," writer and director Phil Alden Robinson's magical tale of a man who rediscovers the past on a Iowa baseball field, also was nominated for best adapted screenplay.

The awards will be presented on March 26. The show will be seen on ABC.

Austin's Killer Bees to bring cool reggae vibes to Depot's Warehouse tonight

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

About eight years ago, Michael Johnson read about the Killer Bees and decided to call his new reggae band by the same name.

The Killer Bees will be in Lubbock tonight at the Warehouse at 19th Street and Avenue G to present their reggae beat for West Texas audiences.

The Bees, as they are known to fans, currently are comprised of six new members. Johnson said the band members change often because when a machine isn't working you change the parts, but you don't throw away the whole thing.

All the band members call Austin home, including Johnson, who leads the band. The Bees are touring about 250 days a year and have visited about 42 states.

American audiences got tuned into reggae after the pioneers of the sound, Bob Marley and Peter Tosh, died. Reggae caught on in this country because the beat is easy to understand, Johnson said.

"This is heartbeat music — dance music," he said. "It is understandable to anyone, anyplace, because you don't have to understand the words to understand the music.

"Reggae music is deeply rooted in African beats. There is not one European thing about it. "For white audiences, the heartbeat rhythm is very new. It is an unconscious thing between the bass and the drums."

The lyrics also are an integral part of reggae. Born in Jamaica, reggae essentially is a political music, strictly serious business, Johnson said.

"The music is a way to express a political message," he said. "Through the music, you can express anger at the government without being thrown in jail."

For Johnson, who writes all the songs for the Bees, inspiration for his political message comes from newspapers, TV news and his travels.

"There are people hungry in the streets and a very weird distribution of money in this, the most prosperous country in the world," Johnson said. "There is no end to my inspiration. As long as there are humans on earth, I

Netters sweep UTA, host Horned Frogs

Playing without two of its top three players, the Texas Tech men's tennis team remained undefeated in dual match play with a 6-0 victory over Texas-Arlington Thursday at the Athletic Training Center.

Coach Ron Damron said he withheld No. 1 seed Matt Jackson and No. 3 seed Michael Slauson because they were on a pace to break the season's 30-match limit.

The Raiders (9-0) swept the six singles matches over the Mavericks anyway behind the play of Fabio Walker, Richard Dopson and Alan Christopher. Walker moved to 11-2 for the year with his 6-1, 7-5 victory over UTA's Wil Angus.

Tech will open conference play at 1 p.m. Saturday against TCU in the ATC. The Horned Frogs opened the season ranked No. 7 nationally and are the defending co-champions of the Southwest Conference.

SWC juggernaut UT heads Raiders' way

By JEFF PARKER
The University Daily

The Texas Tech women's basketball team, fresh off a stunning 73-72 last-second victory over Houston, will try to become the first Southwest Conference team ever to knock off Texas at 2 p.m. Sunday at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

The Red Raiders will need all the magic they used in their victory over the Lady Cougars in order to topple mighty Texas.

"They're pretty high right now," Tech coach Marsha Sharp said about Tuesday's game. "It really gave them a boost of confidence. They feel like they were able to execute in a key situation and came out with a win."

With the victory, the Raiders (15-8, 8-4) moved into sole possession of third place, moving a half game of Texas A&M (15-7, 7-4).

However, all three of the Lady Longhorns' losses have occurred when Texas has been the visiting team. Conradi's troops have fallen at then-No. 16 Washington, Western Kentucky and Jan. 20 at then-No. 3 Tennessee.

Sophomore Vicki Hall, a 6-foot, 1-inch forward from Indianapolis, leads the Lady Longhorns in scoring, averaging 15.7 points a game.

"We have to control Vicki Hall," Sharp said. "She can do so many things to hurt you, especially in game-winning situations."

Texas is scheduled to travel to Lubbock Saturday after Friday's game with Texas A&M. Sharp said that as a result, Tech will be at an advantage.

"We should be the fresher of the two teams when we take the court on Sunday," she said.

gies Friday in College Station.

Texas enters the A&M contest sporting an 18-3 overall record and the No. 6 ranking in the Associated Press poll.

Coach Jody Conradi has led the Lady Longhorns to a 116-0 record in regular-season SWC games. After adding in victories in the conference postseason tournament, Texas stands 131-0 against SWC foes.

"When you go into a game like this," Sharp said, "you have to try and take away the things they like to do. We cannot let them get out and run like they did in Austin." The Lady Longhorns stomped the

Hopeful Tech faces reunified Indians

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

After failing to record a win in 12 tries in the Southwest Conference this season, Texas Tech will take a brief look elsewhere.

The Red Raiders take a conference breather Saturday when Tech plays Arkansas State at Jonesboro, Ark. Game time is 3:35 p.m. at the Convocation Center.

While the Raiders have self-destructed in 1989-90, the Indians have had troubles of their own.

ASU started the year 10-1 and appeared headed for an NCAA tournament bid before losing eight of its next 11 contests. Then The Associated Press reported that the entire team met with ASU President Eugene Smith Monday regarding problems the players were having with coach Nelson Catalina.

At least six players said they no longer would play on the team as long as Catalina was coach.

But the ASU sports information department reported Thursday that all players attended a Wednesday practice. Starting center Greg Williams issued a statement that the players would finish the year under Catalina after the administration promised that an investigation would be conducted regarding the problems between coach and team at the end of the year.

The Indians hosted Louisiana Tech Thursday night, but results were not available at press time.

Tech coach Gerald Myers expressed hope for the Raiders after they dragged their SWC contest with urging Houston into overtime Wednesday night before losing 74-71.

Much of the hope stemmed from the play of junior college transfer guards Dorex Butts and Cleveland Phelps.

"Coach Myers has been working with the guards a lot," Phelps said. "(From JUCO to Division I), it's a different type of ball game. But we're adjusting pretty good."

Track teams face tough test at SWC meet

By CAMERON MAUN
The University Daily

The Texas Tech men's and women's track teams will be in Fort Worth today and Saturday for the 1990 Southwest Conference Indoor Track and Field Championships.

Action will begin at 4 p.m. today at the Tarrant County Convention Center.

Men's coach Corky Oglesby said earlier this week the SWC is the most competitive conference in the nation and that the meet should be an excellent one.

"This is the best conference in the country," Oglesby said. "I was looking at the qualifiers for the national meet, and it looked like the Southwest Conference championship in every event. It's going to be tough."

"We're looking forward to the meet. It should be great competition."

The Raiders are strongest at pole-vaulting, Oglesby said, with two NCAA national indoor qualifiers in sophomore Brit Pursley and senior Mike Turner.

"I think obviously right now, our best people are in the pole-vault," he said. The mile-relay team of Tony Walton, Chris Davis, Ronnie Green and David Shepard suffered a heavy blow last week at the meet in Oklahoma City when top quarter-miler Davis suffered leg cramps and possible dehydration. He will be lost for the indoor season, Oglesby said.

"That was really a disappointment because we were pointing with pride to that mile-relay bunch," Oglesby said. "They had gone up there (Oklahoma City) with the idea of qualifying for that national meet."

"We'll go into the conference meet without Chris for sure. He's our best quarter-miler."

Charlie Tiggs or Martin Del Hierro will replace Davis for the Raiders, Oglesby said. While either substitute can be counted on to give 100 percent, Oglesby said, it will be difficult to replace Davis.

"It's tough when you go to your fifth-best quarter-miler when you lost your No. 1," lamented Oglesby. "That makes it mighty tough. We had high hopes for that group of guys. They were fifth in the NCAA last year."

Oglesby said Tiggs and long-jumper Sammy Walker could surprise some people at the meet. "Sammy Walker should have a chance at the long jump," he said. "He's such a strong guy — not real consistent right now — but he's capable of getting a big one and going out around 25 feet."

Tiggs has Tech's best effort in the triple jump to date this spring with a leap 46-6 $\frac{3}{4}$ .

"(Assistant) Coach (Abe) Brown has been working with him, and he may have a chance to pick up a point in that triple jump," Oglesby said.

In distance events, Oglesby said Victor Heredia is fully recovered from a foot injury last year and is anxious to compete. Heredia heads the 1,600, 3,000 and distance medley relay teams.

"He hasn't run for a year because he got hurt last spring," Oglesby said. "This will be his first chance at really big competition. We're hoping he's ready to go."

Green and Shepard could qualify for the indoor finals in the 200-meter race, Oglesby said.

For the Tech women, All-America triple jumper Amanda Banks is expected to compete for her first indoor conference title this weekend.

Banks, who qualified for her third NCAA indoor meet earlier this year, jumped 41-5 $\frac{1}{2}$  at the Texas Tech Invitational on Jan. 13. That jump is the third best in the conference this season.

The 1,600-meter relay team of Banks, Pat Collins, Cathy Rojo and Heidi Wilfong posted a season-best 4:01.17 at Oklahoma City last week, the sixth-best mark in conference to date.

Cyd Doherty was clocked at 8.45 in the 55-meter hurdles in January and could produce points for the Raider squad.

Women's coach Jarvis Scott said long-jumper Pat Collins is capable of a big upset.

"Pat Collins has been in the shadow of Banks, but she's capable of busting out a good jump at anytime," Scott said.

"I think the conference championships will be one of the best meets this season. The meet will be interesting because not many athletes have qualified for the indoors, and they'll be trying to qualify as well as earn points for their team."

Sports Briefs

Vick hopes to reset against TCU, Rice

After a disappointing loss to Arkansas last weekend, the Texas Tech women's tennis team will try to get back on track against TCU and Rice today and Saturday.

The Red Raiders own a 6-1 record this year, 0-1 in the Southwest Conference, with their lone loss coming at the racquets of the Razorbacks last weekend.

Tech lost to TCU and Rice last year, but rookie coach Kathy Vick said she thinks her Raiders will fare better this weekend.

Although Vick said her team is young — with four sophomores, one senior and one freshman — she said her players have good experience.

The doubles combination of Rebeca Nevarez Ayon/Samantha Isaac was the only successful Raider effort against the Razorbacks as Tech dropped the match 8-1.

TCU will be Tech's first test in a match at 1:30 p.m. today at Lubbock Athletic Club at 9000 Memphis Ave. Rice will visit Lubbock Athletic Club at 6 p.m. Saturday to face the Raiders.

Leading the charge for Tech this weekend will be sophomores Mallory Grantham, the No. 1 seed, and second seed Karen Biggerstaff.

Rain delays NMH series until Monday

Larry Hays announced Thursday that Texas Tech's two baseball doubleheaders with New Mexico Highlands originally scheduled for today and Saturday have been postponed.

The Red Raider coach said the series will be shifted to Monday and Tuesday, with the first games of the doubleheaders starting at 1 p.m. both days at Coronado High School's O'Banion Field.
