Four Tech students charged with counterfeit license possession

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

The Lubbock County criminal district attorney's office filed charges Tuesday against four Texas Tech students for possession of counterfeit driver's licenses allegedly purchased from other Tech students.

Charges were filed against Luis Alfonso Guerrero, an 18-year-old freshman arts and sciences major from San Antonio; William Samuel Singleton, an 18-year-old freshman arts and sciences major from Irving; James Jean, an 18-year-old freshman business major from College Station; and David Danley, a 19-year-old freshman business major from Midland.

The charge is a third degree felony, and cases against the students may come before the next grand jury that begins Monday.

Charges against a fifth student for possession of a counterfeit license will be filed soon, said a representative of the district attorney's office.

The students charged Tuesday allegedly purchased fake licenses from other Tech students. At least four Tech students face federal charges for counterfeiting, said David Freriks, resident agent for the U.S. Secret Service.

Freriks said an investigation uncovered information about a counterfeiting ring manufacturing fake Texas driver's licenses in at least two dorms on the Tech campus.

Freriks said the principal students involved are Tech freshmen who learned their craft in the Dallas area. The counterfeiting ring may encompass several other campuses, including Texas A&M University.

The investigation was conducted by the Lubbock Police Department, the Tech Department of Police Services, the Texas Department of Public Safety and the U.S. Secret Service. Forty-six Tech students were identified as having used the counterfeit licenses for the purpose of showing their ages to be 21 or over, Freriks said.

As a result of the investigation, at least 10 students will be prosecuted through the district attorney. Seventeen students were referred to the Dean of Students Office for disciplinary action, Freriks said.

Cases against the four students believed to have manufactured the licenses will be presented to a federal grand jury in early December. All four face federal counterfeiting penalties, including five to 15 years in prison and $25,000 in fines.

In an unrelated incident, the Department of Police Services presented a case to the district attorney Wednesday against a Tech student accused of assaulting a Tech traffic controller with his vehicle.

According to police reports, a man drove his car into Juanita Medrano, a Tech traffic controller, after she issued him a parking citation for illegally parking in the D2-J lot north of Clement Hall.

Medrano told police she and the man got into an argument concerning the citation and that the man got into his car. Medrano said she heard the engine rev and felt the car bump into her right knee, police reports indicated.

Medrano told police the man looked directly at her and backed into her a second time. He then sped out of the parking lot, reports indicated.

Board of education head says funding will change

By LEANNA EFIRD
The University Daily

Monte Hasie of Lubbock, president of the state Board of Education, said Wednesday the Texas Legislature will have to make major changes after the Texas Supreme Court's ruling on the landmark case of Edgewood vs. Kirby.

In the case, the Edgewood school district in San Antonio brought a suit against William Kirby, commissioner of education, stating that funding for school districts was inequitable.

Hasie spoke to secondary education administrators in Lubbock Wednesday on the state of public education in Texas during the 10th annual Conference for Administrators of Community Schools.

Weldon Beckner, a professor of education at Texas Tech, said 55 percent of the funding for Texas school districts comes from property taxes. "Districts with low property wealth receive much less funding than districts with high property wealth," Beckner said.

The Texas Supreme Court ruled that current funding was unconstitutional and concluded that the Legislature must change the way money is allocated to school districts. Gov. Bill Clements called a special session set for March 1 to resolve problems.

"The solutions to the problems are not that simple, but something must be done," Hasie said. "Educators are asked to teach in poor facilities, constantly battle their credibility and remain underpaid and unappreciated."

"Private manufacturers can pick and choose the best of the materials they use to make their products, but public schools cannot pick out only the best students."

Hasie said small, poor school districts no longer can implement mandates from the Legislature without funding.

"I spoke to the Texas Legislature in January and told them that mandates on school districts without funding were going to break all of us," he said. "But lo and behold, they passed some 200 education bills without funding, and sure enough, all the school districts in Texas are having problems."

Although a governor's task force is working on the problems of school districts, Hasie said new funding must be made available despite Clements promise for no new taxes.

East German professor

Dieter Heinemann, a professor from Martin Luther University in Halle, East Germany, arrived in Lubbock Wednesday to speak to Texas Tech students on "East Germany: 40 Years of Cultural Change." Heinemann, left, converses with Birgit Horz-Reynard, a Tech graduate school employee, and Frank Hegelev of Wilhelmshaver, West Germany, over dinner at Mesquite's Wednesday. Heinemann will speak at 8:15 p.m. today in 169 home economics building.

MX missiles go mobile

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Air Force announced Wednesday that 50 MX nuclear missiles will be removed from underground silos in Wyoming and placed on trains in six states — Louisiana, Texas, Washington, North Dakota, Arkansas and Michigan.

The announcement represents the Bush administration's commitment to push ahead with plans to modernize the nation's strategic nuclear missile force, even amid projections of Pentagon belt-tightening, heightened prospects for arms-control agreements and sweeping changes in the Soviet Union and its Warsaw Pact allies.

The 50 missiles — dubbed the "Peacekeeper" by former President Reagan — will be placed on 25 trains, each with two MX missiles aboard. The trains will be kept on six Air Force bases and moved onto civilian railroad tracks in time of crisis.

The Air Force did not indicate how many of the missiles would be at any particular site, but did say that Warren Air Force Base in Wyoming will continue to be the main MX operating base.

In a statement, the Air Force said that once the trains are sent out, they will have access to "more than 120,000 miles of commercial track."

"This dispersal will offer enhanced (missile) survivability in the event of an enemy attack, providing the potential for prompt retaliation vital to the successful deterrence of war," the Air Force said.

Texas House votes on Hobby's compensation bill

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

In the third week of a congressional special session, the Texas House of Representatives debated Wednesday Lt. Gov. Bill Hobby's bill for reforming the system of compensating workers for on-the-job injuries.

The Senate approved the bill last week with amendments that "really watered it down," said Texas Tech law professor J. Hadley Edgar.

The House and Senate have been divided on restrictions for jury trials and whether awards should be based on the type of injury or the injured person's occupation.

Under current law, the injured worker initially makes a claim before the Industrial Accident Board in Austin, Edgar said. He said employees and insurance companies can appeal board decisions in court.

"When the case is appealed to the courthouse, if it is appealed, that is what we call a trial de novo," Edgar said. "That means that whatever happened before the Industrial Accident Board is disregarded and you start from scratch. It's a completely new proceeding."

Edgar said some legislators think only limited appeals that would maintain the integrity of the Industrial Accident Board's decisions should be allowed. He said some states do not allow appeals without substantial evidence to warrant a trial.

Edgar said injured workers make claims against insurance companies, not employers. Employees receive less money, he said, by making a claim against insurance companies than they would by suing employers.

Award amounts still affect employers, he said, because premiums go up when insurance companies pay large awards.

Employers usually favor restrictions on jury trials, while employees and trial lawyers oppose restrictions, Tech economics professor James Jonish said.

"Jury trials tend to be very sympathetic to the employee," he said. "So what you're going to find is employers want to have a cap for benefits rather than a jury trial. Trial lawyers are against that because they get paid for going to trial. Probably most employees would be against that because they can get more money in a jury trial."

"Both businesses and insurance companies are taking the position that this trial de novo is too expensive and therefore should be disregarded. The employee's attorneys get a certain percentage of what they recover; therefore, they have an incentive to go to the courthouse to get more money. The business community says the employee really does not get the additional money because most of it goes to the lawyers."

Edgar said the legislative battle is being fought over whether to abolish the trial de novo or simply to reduce attorney's fees. He said Hobby's bill limits the trial de novo and reduces attorney's fees.

He said the Senate modified provisions of Hobby's bill to base awards on the type of injury instead of on an employee's wage rate and to limit medical expenses covered by insurance.

"Wages in occupations are so different," Jonish said. "The risk of injury also is considered to be different in different occupations. They want to attach premiums for different industries and different occupations. If you work on an oil well and you're essentially a roustabout — that's a potentially dangerous job. So they're thinking about attaching premiums to specific occupations within an industry."

Administration emphasizes 'no new agreements' at Bush-Gorbachev summit

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush's weekend summit with Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev should leave the superpowers "better prepared to make substantial progress" on a treaty to slash long-range nuclear weapons, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Wednesday.

However, he emphasized anew that no such agreement would be reached during the two-day meeting.

In a pre-summit news conference at the White House, Baker also said the democratic reforms that are bringing down Eastern Europe's hard-line communist regimes are "the only path to long-term legitimacy and stability in the region," and he warned against any crackdown by authorities.

While saying Moscow has not stood in the way of the stunning changes, Baker declared, "We firmly believe that any attempts to forcibly intervene and prevent continued reform will be extremely destabilizing and dangerous."

He made a clear distinction between "forcibly suppressing peaceful dissent" and intervention by authorities to restore order, such as in possible ethnic violence in the Soviet Union.

"I see those as two distinctly different things," Baker said.

The secretary spoke on the eve of the president's departure for the Mediterranean island of Malta. Bush and Gorbachev will hold talks Saturday and Sunday on U.S. and Soviet warships anchored in Malta's Marsaxlokk Bay.

Bush spent Wednesday preparing for his first meeting as president with Gorbachev, discussing the talks in a telephone conversation with West German Chancellor Helmut Kohl.

White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said the two leaders also talked about Kohl's new proposal Tuesday for a confederation with East Germany as a step toward eventual reunification.

On that point, Baker said, "If there's unification, it should occur in the context of Germany's continued alignment with NATO and an increasingly integrated European Community."

He ruled out any "trade" with Moscow in which the two Germanys would be reunited as a neutral government.

Mindful of some reservations among U.S. allies in Europe, Baker said he preferred a gradual, step-by-step process of bringing the two Germanys together.

Bush also planned to discuss the summit at a dinner with Canadian Prime Minister Brian Mulroney.

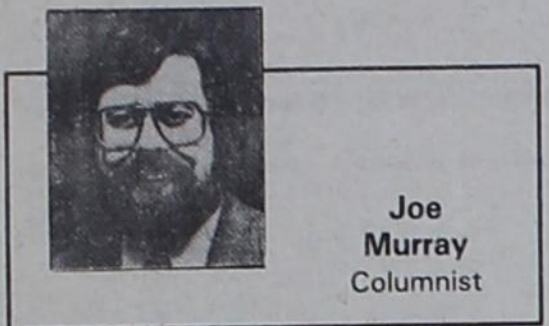

At his news conference, Baker said

Bush would complain to Gorbachev about what U.S. officials say is a continuing flow of Soviet-made weapons to the Moscow-backed government of Afghanistan, as well as to leftist rebels in El Salvador through Nicaragua.

"This pattern is a Cold War relic," Baker said.

Noting that Soviet officials have promised to prevent Nicaragua from shipping Soviet arms to El Salvador, Baker said, "Either the Nicaraguans are lying to the Soviet Union or the Soviet Union is lying to us."

Don't just stand there, go do it!

ANGELINA COUNTY — An old friend of mine, who is yet a young woman, has written me for advice on how to keep her head above water. As it is, she feels herself sinking into mediocrity, going down for the third time. First she got married. Then she had children. Now the children are beginning school. All the while she has postponed her career. Now it's now or never. "I need to figure out what to do with my life," she writes. "If I don't find some creative outlet, I think I'll go nuts. Sometimes I feel like I'm drowning." She's talented, educated and ambitious to succeed on her own, all of which can weigh you down. The smaller the town, the greater the weight. She wanted me to tell her what to do. That's the easy part: Do whatever you want. The trick is finding out what that is. Too many of us make the mistake of assuming it's what we always thought we really wanted to do. It may be as simple as that — but it may be something else entirely, completely new and different. When we're unhappy that, after all, is what we're looking for, something completely new and different. She's so much luckier than most. She has a dutiful husband, wonderful children, a lovely home. Consider the options: She can go to college or not. She can work or not. She can be a full-time mother and wife or not. She can involve herself in volunteer work or not. She can travel or not. It may well be that she has more of life's avenues open to her than anybody else I know. Unfortunately, there's yet another option. It's the one I'm afraid she's chosen. She can be unhappy, the world's worst waste of life. The truth is, most anybody can be most anything. You want to be a playwright? Then write plays. A painter? You have only to paint. A musician? Get a guitar and get with it. As for success ... well, what is success? Satisfaction in your work? If so, the greatest artists are the greatest failures. By the nature of their genius, they never are satisfied with their work. They know they always can be better. Perhaps you are one of the lucky ones. You are not a genius. You won't know any better than to be satisfied. But it is up to you. It's sink or swim. If nothing else, dog-paddle for all you're worth.

Homosexual rights activists are gaining ground in United States

Paul O'Bryan Guest Columnist

People in the forefront of the so-called "gay rights" movement would have us believe they are losing ground. Certainly the AIDS epidemic has caused great harm to the efforts of homosexual activists in changing societal attitudes in their favor. But the truth is that 1989 was a watershed year in America — not for the losses, but rather the victories that gay liberationists have scored in their battle to institutionalize homosexuality. Before I explain why I think these victories are so detrimental to our communities, I want to cite six of the ways gays are winning in the political and judicial arenas. Example 1: New York City has founded and funds a school with public tax dollars just for homosexuals. The Harvey Milk School, named after a deceased San Francisco politician who was gay, employs homosexual teachers and creates an environment where students can act and dress in a fashion that suits their style. This school attracts students from other New York City schools who are, as one official proudly lists, "gays, lesbians, cross-dressers and transsexuals." Imagine that.

It feels good to know that if your 12-year-old son comes home one day and wants to explore his sexual options, the taxpayers will gladly provide him with the place to do it. Example 2: Cities all over the country set up task forces this year to look into ways to give gay couples the same rights as those of us who get married in the traditional sense — everything from health insurance coverage of one's gay lover to guaranteed rent control if one's lesbian live-in happens to get hit by a truck. Thanks to New York Gov. Mario Cuomo, such proposals have been made into law. The rent control issue already has survived a court challenge. Example 3: Then there are the gay victories in funding their art exhibits through the National Endowment for the Arts, which ought to be called the National Endowment for Perverts. Now I am one who enjoys the arts as much as the next person. I feel that a mark of a truly great civilization is its artistic expression. When the NEA was founded 20 years ago, the idea was to help foster young artists. This year alone, taxpayers will subsidize $170 million worth of art through public NEA grants. The only requirement up until now is that the art not include religious themes, for fear of upsetting the delicate balance between church and state. This year Andres Serrano accepted a grant to exhibit the "Piss-Christ," a photograph of a crucifix immersed in urine. Then came Robert Mapplethorpe's exhibit of homosexual photographs that included such masterpieces as a bullwhip dangling out of a man's rectum.

This past week came the latest word on the go-ahead for funding an AIDS exhibit that includes several homosexual photographs — all outlined in a catalog that describes Cardinal John O'Connor, the highest American Catholic clergyman, as a "fat cannibal" and a "fascist." Cardinal O'Connor's sin in the eyes of the gay artists is his religious objection to the homosexual lifestyle. Example 4: Then there are the Vermont Public Schools, which have implemented the latest in sexual education instruction statewide. The program uses the latest in video technology to show students just how to perform various sex acts. Oh yes, we can't forget the homosexuals here, either. Homosexual acts are given equal time in the presentations made to junior high and high school students. Example 5: Then there are the inroads homosexuals have made in the religious arena. Gay liberationists have been waging bitter battle not just over acceptance by some churches, but for practicing homosexuals to become ordained clergy. Such denominations as the United Church of Christ and certain Lutheran sects have ordained such gay clergy. The Episcopal, United Methodist and Presbyterian churches are looking at changes in their methodology that would allow gay ministers. The Roman Catholic Church has fervently rejected such thinking. The pope issued a 1986 decree calling homosexuality a "moral evil" that must be seen as "an objective disorder." Hence this disdain by most homosexuals toward the Catholic Church. Example 6: And let's not forget Congressman Barney Frank. Sure, he came out of the closet several years back, only to be re-elected by his Massachusetts constituency by even larger margins. But in 1989, one of Frank's former prostitutes, Steven Goble, told the Washington Times how Frank hired him out of a newspaper ad to perform sex acts for $80. Frank enjoyed his new friend so much that he put him on his payroll and wrote letters to Goble's probation officer on his behalf. Goble claims he used Frank's apartment as the new center of his own prostitution enterprise. Of course, poor ol' Barney never knew what was going on. While an ethics investigation is under way in Congress, the gay rights lobby successfully has pressured capital-area prosecutors from charging Frank with soliciting a prostitute. So there you have it: six examples where gays have been successful in the past year in their battle to institutionalize their homosexual lifestyle in our communities. From schools to insurance policies, from apartment leasing to church on Sunday, from the city council meetings to the courts — gay rights activists are winning. With each victory, the gay liberationists are succeeding in making society a more comfortable place to sin. That is a direction that I think we have traveled much too far along. But that is just one straight man's opinion. O'Bryan is a Texas Tech graduate student.

Animals have souls too

To the editor: Trent Pettijohn's letter (11/6/89) asks about the Physicians Committee for Responsible Medicine and our work on the issue of animal experimentation. PCRM has a membership of about 2,000 physicians as well as many medical students. We have found that there is a healthy range of opinions on animal experimentation. Over 13,000 doctors have gone on record in opposition to the use of live dogs at U.S. Surgical Corporation in Norwalk, Conn., where sales personnel practice surgical techniques on dogs. A great many doctors have shared our concern over the grotesque experiments at Louisiana State University in which cats are shot through the head to study brain wounding. Over 700 cats and $2.1 million have been wasted to demonstrate facts known for nearly a century. Happily, our critiques and others have led to a temporary suspension of the project. A great many medical students choose not to participate in animal labs, and at least a dozen medical schools have totally abandoned all use of animals for teaching medical students. PCRM has responded to these concerns by providing a Summer Fellowship program in which these issues can be studied and discussed in detail. We work cooperatively with the animal protection groups. They need to have the input of doctors, and doctors certainly need to hear their important message. Those who imagine that all doctors are hard-hearted when it comes to animals should remember that Hippocrates, the father of medicine, wrote, "The soul is the same thing in all living creatures, although the body of each is different." Is abortion only choice?

To the editor: I have always tried to call those favoring abortion rights by their chosen name, "pro-choice." But now I wonder if their true colors aren't beginning to show. In a November issue of The UD, Gregg Puluka reports on a "pro-choice" rally in Austin. Two of the "pro-choice" slogans he finds fascinating attack adoption. On the next page of the same issue of The UD, the co-director of a local abortion facility is quoted as pooh-poohing efforts to establishing a home for single, pregnant women who desire to keep their babies. It seems that the "pro-choice" side, in its heart-of-hearts, really thinks the best choice for all women with unwanted pregnancies is ending the life of the baby. If those who favor abortion rights also ridicule both adoption and mothers who choose to keep their children, what else can I choose to call them but PRO-ABORTION? Clarke Cochran political science professor

IRA not freedom fighters

To the editor: This letter is in response to Paul O'Bryan's defense of terrorism. You portray the IRA and your hero, the murderer Bobby Sands, as freedom fighters whose actions are steeped in dignity, but I ask you this: how can you justify their actions in Britain such as the Guilford bombings, the numerous London campaigns, Birmingham, or Lord Montbatten's murder? A response to the effect that these actions are the direct responsibility of the British (and hence the citizen victims of these actions) and justifiable as part of a greater "struggle for freedom" only leads me to assume that the downing of the Pan Am 747 last December would similarly be justifiable for American meddling in Arab self-determination. I cannot deny that these are excesses taken by the RUC and British Army, but implying that beating, sodomizing, raping unarmed women and children is standard policy is pure inflammatory rhetoric (you know better). Further, to infer that the IRA is to be compared to true freedom fighters, such as the Maquis, who fought occupational forces and their collaborators without indiscriminately murdering civilians, is offensive. I do not have the solutions to the troubles in Ulster, but if you think that a troop pullout would result in peace, you are sadly mistaken. The resulting civil war between Protestants and Catholics would take a far heavier toll in terms of human lives. One last note: please recall back to London, July 20, 1982, a day of triumph and victory for your glorious and honorable IRA, when they valiantly set off a car bomb in Hyde Park as the ceremonial Household Cavalry passed by. My sister was but 20 feet from that bomb and was severely wounded with shrapnel over her entire body. Baron Bustin

Irish question complex

To the editor: In The UD dated 28 November 1989, Mr. Paul O'Bryan delivered a scathing attack on what he calls "the most bloodthirsty and hateful country in the world" — that country being Great Britain. I can certainly understand some of his grievances with regard to problems that face the Ulster province, but what solutions does he pose for that part of Ireland? Why should the British leave territory maintained by Protestant Britons who have no desire of unity with the south? And what of the IRA? Does he espouse the tactics of political murder for which the IRA is famous? What does he think his terrorist friends hoped to gain from Her Majesty's Government when they ruthlessly murdered Admiral Lord Louis Mountbatten while he vacationed in Ireland, Republic of, in 1979? What of the soldiers who were murdered in their barracks in Deal, England, just a short time ago? Mr. O'Bryan says that unity of Irishmen from every part of the globe is necessary to end the "horrors" of British rule in Northern Ireland. In this unity is it his hope that Irish Americans will continue to donate money for use by the IRA and its violent provisional wing? I can only hope that the answer is no. How can he prove any of his arguments when he knows very well that if put to plebiscite those in Ulster would clearly choose to remain in the British orbit. As I had a friend, who was one of Mr. O'Bryan's "notorious" British soldiers, murdered by the IRA just a few short years ago I understand the complexity of the problems in that besieged British province. However, violence by the IRA is not a means to any substantial end in dealing with the question of Northern Ireland. ## First Tech FFA national president to teach, tour

The first Future Farmers of America (FFA) national president from Texas Tech began his year-long learning and teaching tour today.

Newly chosen FFA national President Donnell Brown, an agricultural sciences sophomore from Throckmorton, said a year's leave of absence will be used to tour 40 U.S. states and three Asian countries to exchange agricultural techniques and to emphasize the happiness of freedom. "Life's little overlooked things, like freedom, need to be emphasized," he said. "Be happy where you are."

He considers time spent last year serving as the Texas FFA president and the time scheduled ahead of him as national president as investments in his future, Brown said.

"I admire him for taking a year off from school to serve others," said Howard Strother, the Texas FFA president.

Strother, who served as the Texas FFA president in 1929, said he is pleased that the traditional values of FFA are preserved.

The 1990 Texas FFA convention will be June 13-16 at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center.

Brown is scheduled to spend three weeks in China, Hong Kong and Japan. He will learn foreign agricultural techniques and become acquainted with the Future Farmers of Japan organization during the visit.

On behalf of Lubbock Mayor "Peck" McMinn, agricultural sciences Dean Samuel Curl presented a plaque dubbing Brown an Honorary Lubbock Citizen at a reception Tuesday.

Texas FFA was organized by E.R. Alexander, who taught vocational agriculture at Texas A&M University, in 1929 to equip students with necessary leadership skills and confidence.

Court urged to restrict girls' right to abortions

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The Supreme Court was asked Wednesday to rule that most young girls have no right to abortions without first telling their parents.

The justices, who have allowed limits on the availability of abortions for minors in the past, questioned lawyers defending and attacking parental notification laws in Minnesota and Ohio.

In two hours of relatively narrow arguments, the justices gave no sign that they are considering the broader possibility of scrapping the court's 1973 Roe vs. Wade decision that legalized abortion — an idea much discussed outside the court when they take up any abortion case.

"The court showed no interest in overturning a woman's constitutional right to abortion," Cleveland lawyer Linda Sogg said after the argument session in which she attacked the Ohio law.

Minnesota Chief Deputy Attorney General John Tunheim agreed. "I don't think Roe should be on the table in this case," he told reporters after defending his state law before the court.

Last July, the court voted 5-4 to give states more authority to regulate abortions for all women. Four justices appeared ready to go even further and overturn Roe vs. Wade, but Justice Sandra Day O'Connor refused.

Groups on both sides of the abortion issue had looked to the court this term to help clarify its allegiance to the 1973 decision.

But settlement of an Illinois dispute over regulating abortion clinics — a case that was to be argued before the justices next month — may have eliminated the greatest immediate threat to Roe vs. Wade. The Illinois settlement still must be approved by a federal judge.

O'Connor is expected to play the pivotal role again in the Minnesota and Ohio cases, to be decided by July. At issue in both are laws requiring parents to be notified before abortions are performed on unmarried girls under 18 who are still supported by parents.

Meat judging team wins in nationals

The Texas Tech meat judging team won first place Nov. 19 in national competition.

Nineteen four-year colleges from across the country competed in Dakota City, Neb., judging various qualities of the carcass meat of pork, lamb and beef.

Tech's leading scorer was Paul Heinrich. Second place went to Craig Kitten. Melissa Briscoe and Jeff Owen came in third and fourth, respectively.

Students get airport parking discounts

A 10 percent airport parking discount for college students and senior citizens will be in effect through the holiday season. In order to obtain the discount, students must present a driver's license and student ID cards to parking lot attendants when leaving the airport. The discount is good for short-term and long-term parking.

Book contends lawyer wine-dined panel examining Wright

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The outside counsel called in to investigate ethics charges against former House Speaker Jim Wright wine-dined and members of the ethics committee and ran up an expense account of more than $150,000, according to a new book on Wright's tenure.

The attorney, Richard J. Phelan of Chicago, "routinely took committee members out to dinner at some of the most expensive restaurants in Washington," writes John Barry in the book, The Ambition and the Power, published by Viking.

During the two years of research for the book, Wright, of Fort Worth, granted Barry unusually broad access to otherwise private meetings of the House leadership and meetings with the speaker's staff.

Barry, quoting from secret transcripts of closed-door arguments before the ethics committee, said Phelan continued his courtship of the panel in those sessions, praising them for their work and using exaggeration as he argued that Wright had violated House rules.

Phelan strongly denied the charges that he had exerted undue influence on the ethics panel.

Tech celebrates Christmas 1989

Along with the holiday season at Texas Tech comes another long-lasting tradition that can bring even the most covetous Scrooge into the yuletide spirit.

The annual Madrigal Dinner is transformed into the great hall of a medieval castle as the spirit of the days of brave knights and fierce, fire-breathing dragons comes alive.

Guests are surrounded with candlelit tables decorated with pine boughs, medieval clothing and decorations in brilliant red and green colors that lend an air of authenticity to the celebration.

Trumpet fanfares greet honored guests of the King and Queen of the festivities, while musicians, jugglers and the Madrigal Singers, from Tech's School of Music, entertain 16th-century style.

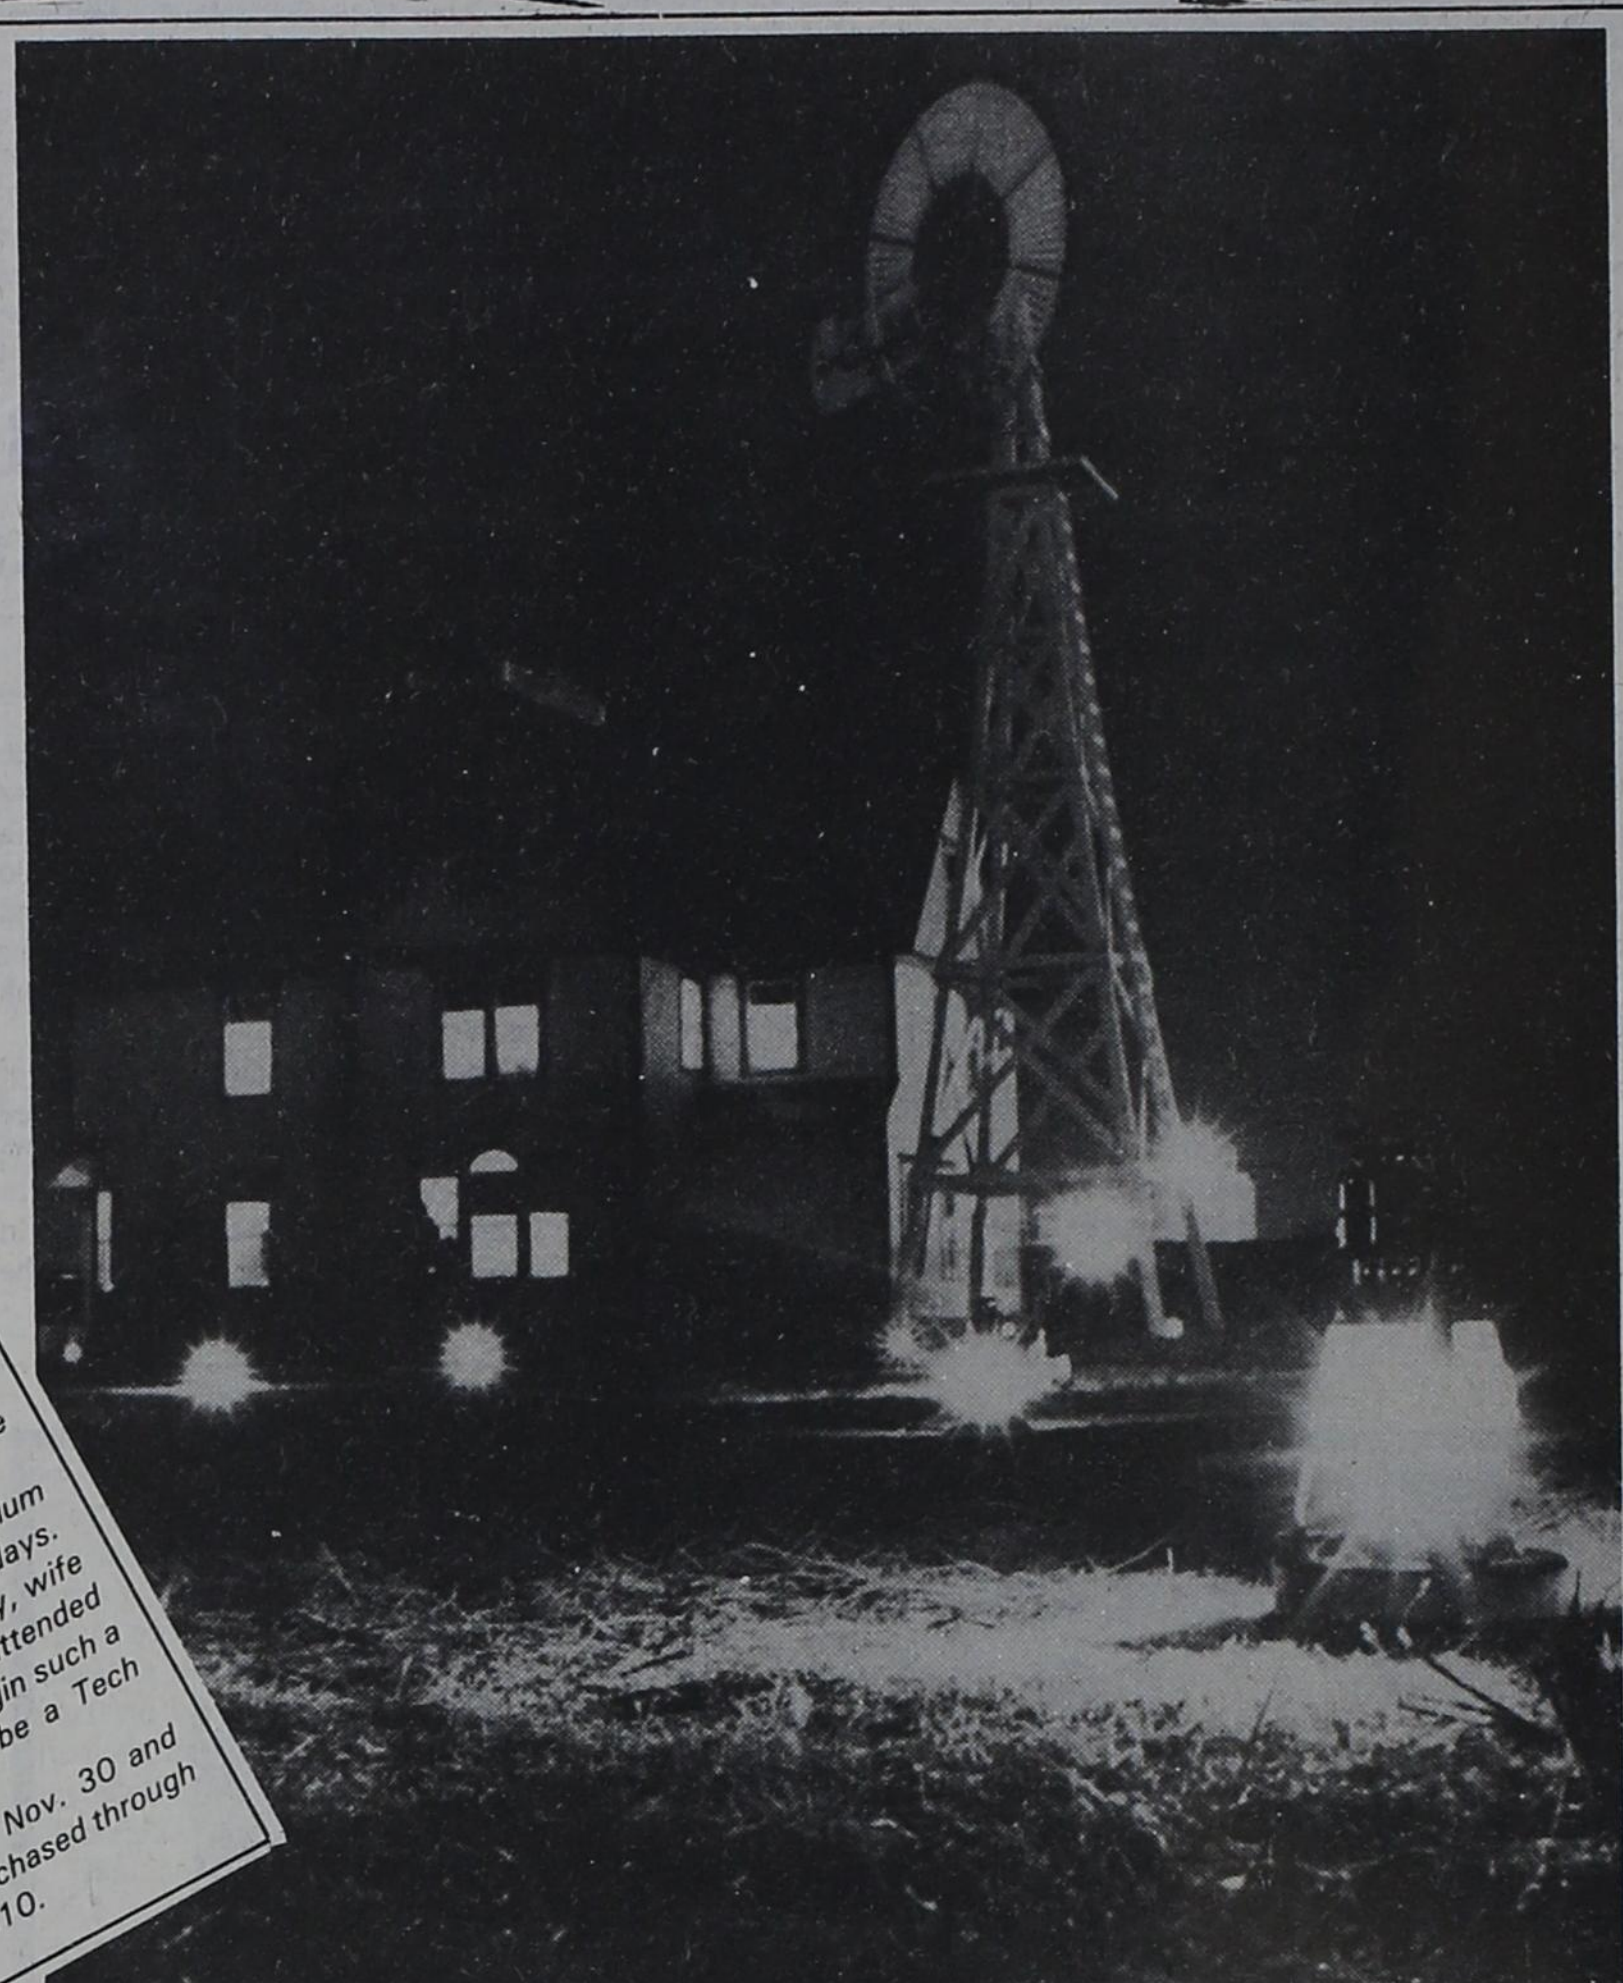

Dressed in medieval attire, entertainers will give two performances during the holiday celebration. The first performance, prior to the meal, will provide themes of love and poetry from the 16th century, and the second performance, after the meal, will include traditional Christmas carols.

Cheryl Shubert, coordinator of student activities for the University Center, said the Madrigal Dinner is unequalled by any other event on the Tech campus.

"The medieval setting for the Madrigal Dinner is very unique," she said. "The program and the meal are tied together, which makes the Madrigal Dinner come complete with roast boar's head, plum pudding, wassail punch and many more delicacies of medieval days.

The 13-year-old event was initiated at Tech by Claire Mackey, wife of former Tech President Cecil Mackey. Mrs. Mackey had attended similar dinners at other college campuses and wanted to begin such a tradition at Tech. Since then, the event has grown to be a Tech tradition.

The Madrigal Dinner is served five nights, including Nov. 30 and Dec. 2-5. All seats are reserved, and tickets can be purchased through the University Center ticket booth by calling 742-3610.

The traditions continue as visitors are transported back in time to experience Christmas of old at Candlelight at the Ranching Heritage Center.

The annual event takes place from 6 p.m. to 8 p.m. Dec. 7-8, when paths at the center will be lined with illuminaires and lanterns that pave the way to Christmas celebrations of days gone by.

Candlelight at the Ranching Heritage Center brings the early South Plains to 1989 as visitors have a chance to glimpse pioneer Christmas celebrations and the difficulty of living without today's modern conveniences, such as electricity.

Cabins at the center will be lighted by whatever means of light was used in the appropriate era. Volunteers dressed in traditional costumes of early settlers will bake cookies, square dance, decorate old-fashioned Christmas trees, sing carols and perform other activities reflective of life on the South Plains.

The event always has attracted large crowds, with as many as 2,500 people walking through the center in one night.

The Fourth Cavalry Memorial Regiment will have a camp site at the event. Hot apple cider will be available in the 6666 Barn.

Tech Christmas traditions also are carried forward during Christmas at the Museum.

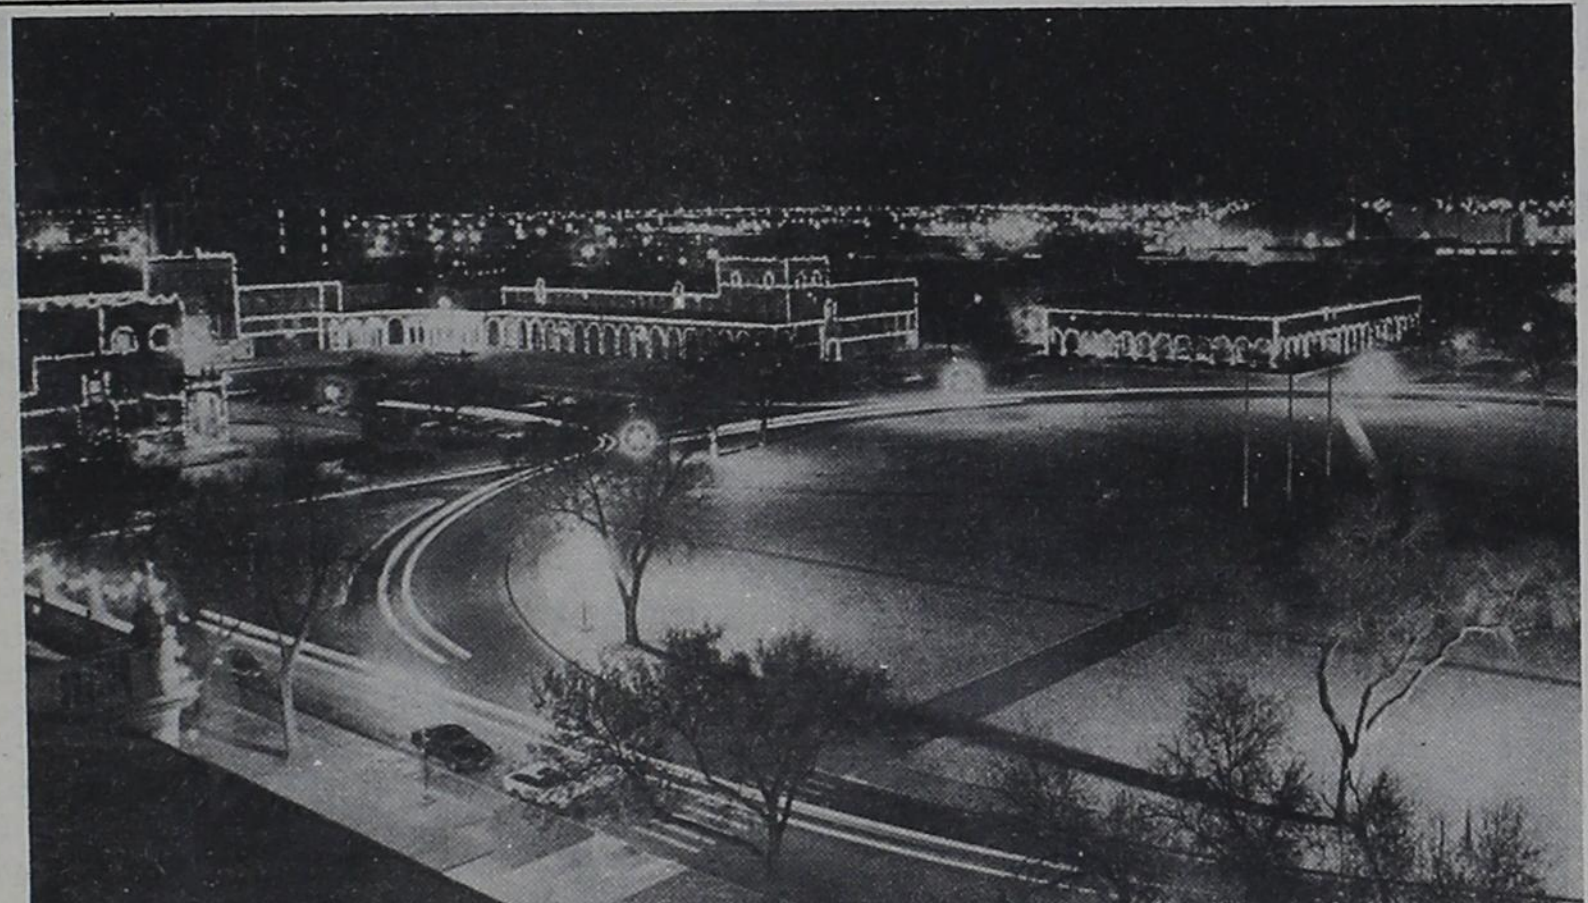

The Tech Museum will present a Christmas bonus to Lubbock and other surrounding communities with the presentation Saturday of "Christmas at the Museum."

Patricia Martin, education and program manager at the museum, said people of all ages are encouraged to spend a fun-filled day at the museum. The yuletide program, which will be from 1 p.m. to 5 p.m. Saturday, will include a showing of the "Story of the Star" at the Moody Planetarium.

Martin said Santa Claus will drop by to give away packages of goodies in the main gallery.

The tradition of exploring the origin of the Star of Bethlehem will be continued with the presentation of the "Story of the Star" at the Moody Planetarium of the Tech Museum.

The program, which opened Nov. 21 and will continue through Christmas, will be shown from 2 p.m. Tuesdays through Fridays, at 7:30 p.m. Thursdays and at 2 p.m. and 3:30 p.m. Saturdays and Sundays. Admission, any day except this Saturday, is $1 for adults and 50 cents for students and children over 5 years old. Adults over age 60 are admitted free.

It is almost time. Christmas songs float through department store speakers. Holiday spirit fills the aisles, along with toys and ornaments. Outside stores, Salvation Army Santas ring their bells.

Children laugh; people smile. Yes, it is almost time.

The avenues are lined with decorations and yuletide greetings. Houses are aglow with lights of the season. And even the grumpiest Scrooge can't help but admit, "It is almost Christmas time."

An explosion of more than 15,000 red, yellow and white Christmas bulbs will signal the beginning of yuletide season Friday as the Texas Tech Residence Halls Association presents the 1989 Carol of Lights.

The ceremony will begin at 7:30 p.m. Friday at the science quadrangle following a carillon concert at 7 p.m. by music faculty member Judson Maynard.

The annual Carol of Lights began 30 years ago when former Tech regent Harold Hinn donated the first 5,000 lights to illuminate the west engineering, social science, chemistry and administration buildings. The festivities were called the "All Christmas Scene" until 1961, when the tradition was given its current name.

Gene Hemmle co-founded the annual event, which began as a group of students and faculty members who gathered at Memorial Circle to sing Christmas carols.

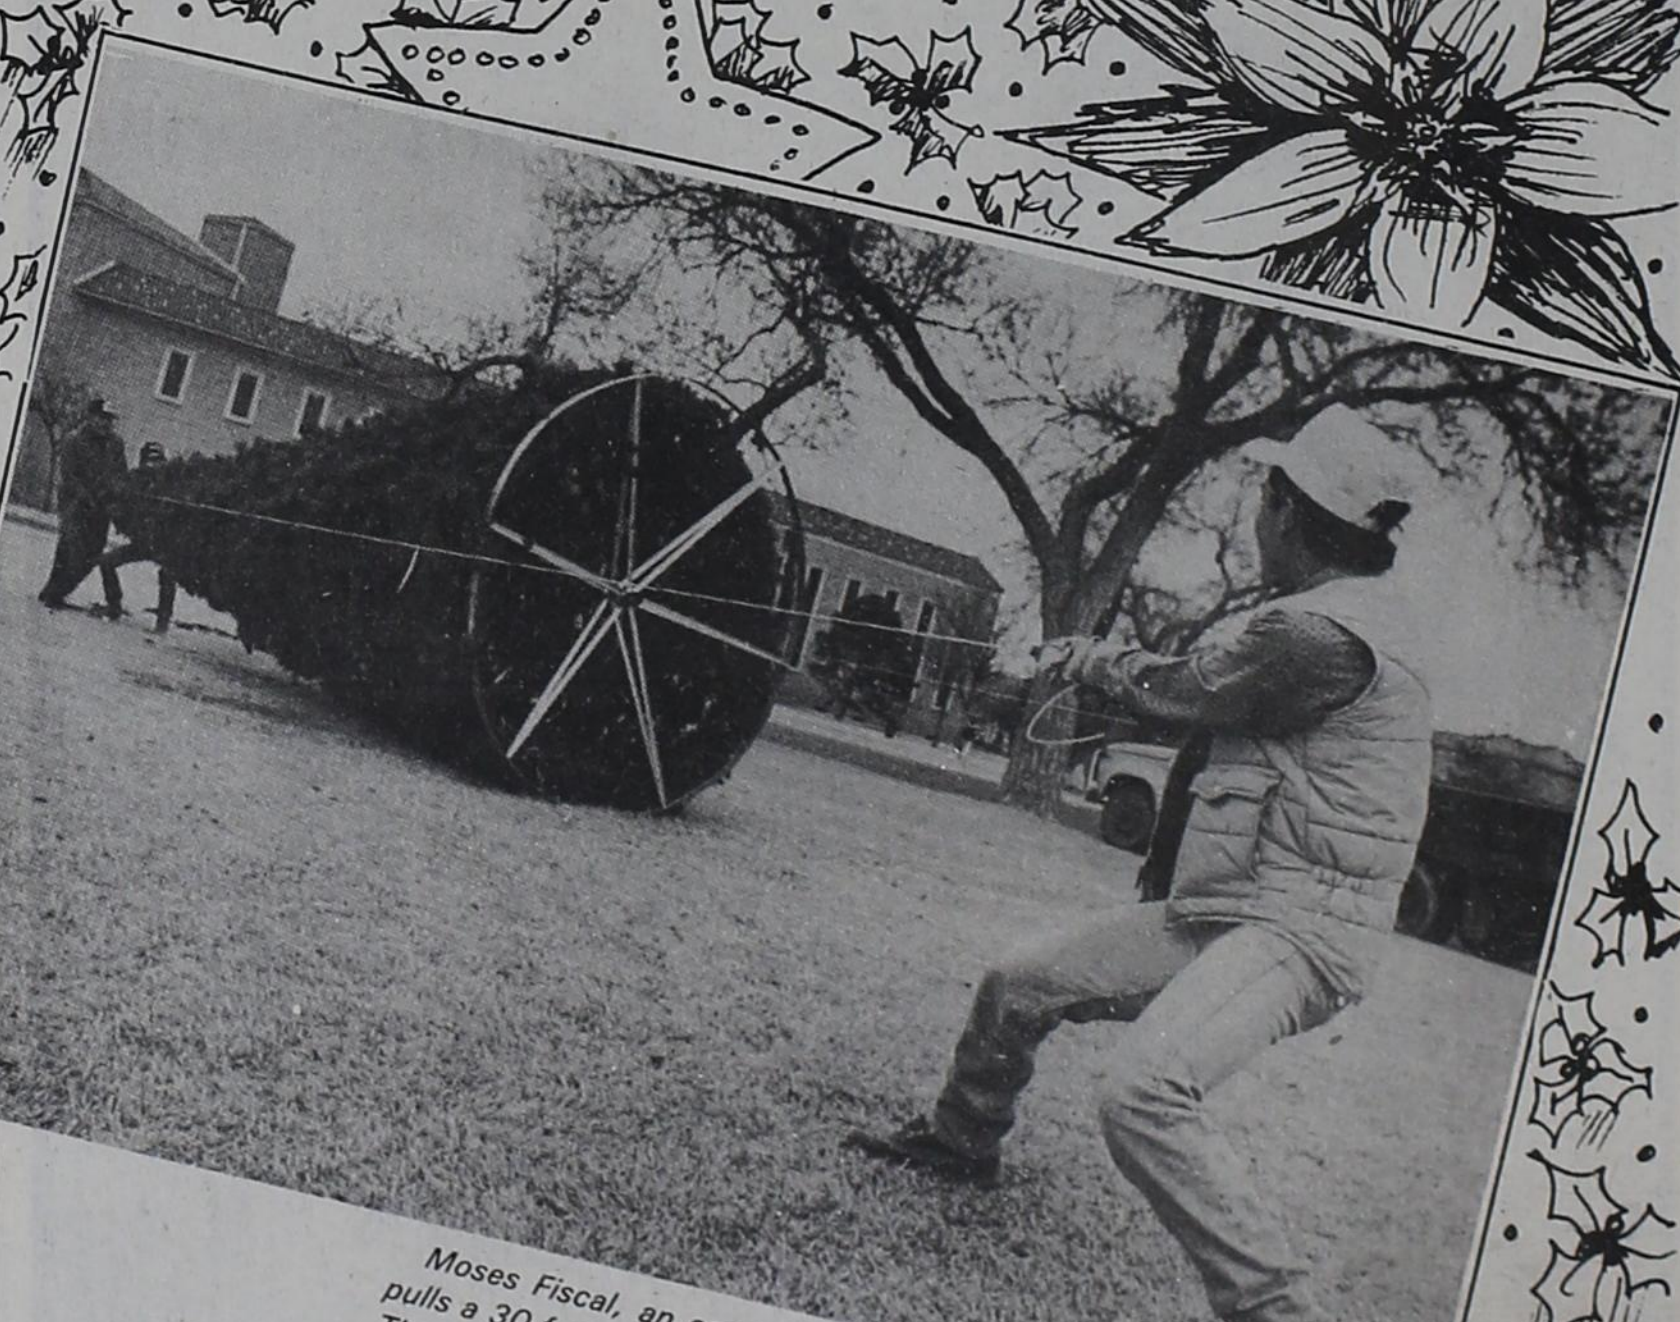

"Love Shining Bright," the theme for this year's "Carol of Lights," will include special dinners, music by several choirs and instrumental ensembles as an anticipated audience of more than 20,000 sings the lyrics of traditional Christmas carols.

A silent procession of torch-bearing Saddle Tramps will march up the paths and walkways of Memorial Circle, adding solemnity to the ceremony that has become an important part of Christmas traditions not only for the Tech campus but for Lubbock and the surrounding area.

Following the ceremony, wassail and Christmas music will be provided in the Tech Library's Croslin Room as a brass quintet plays Christmas tunes.

The University Choir and the University Singers from the School of Music will perform a free concert in the Hemmle Recital Hall of the music building.

The campus will remain illuminated from 6 p.m. to midnight through Jan. 1 so the community can continue to enjoy the colorful display of Christmas spirit throughout the holiday season.

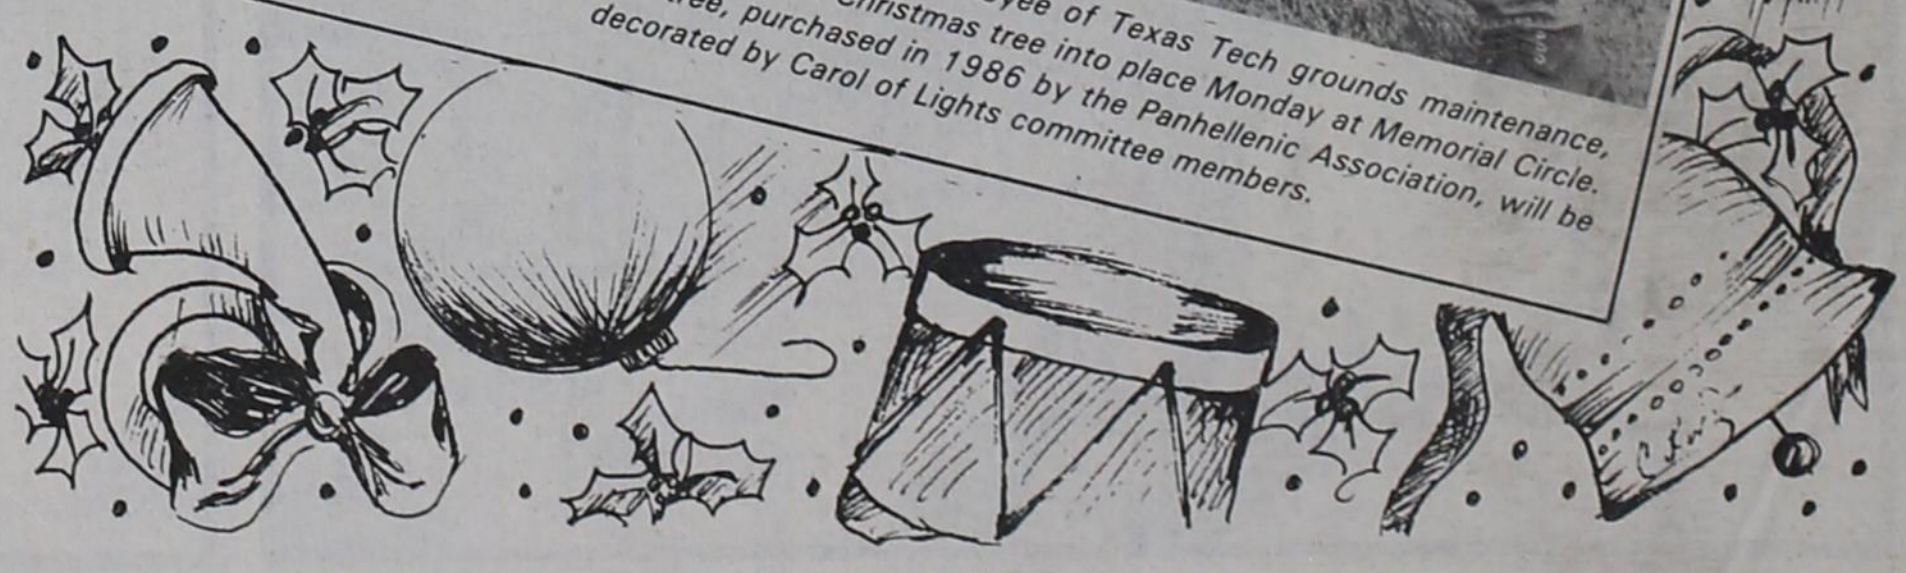

Moses Fiscal, an employee of Texas Tech grounds maintenance, pulls a 30-foot Christmas tree into place Monday at Memorial Circle. The tree, purchased in 1966 by the Panhellenic Association, will be decorated by Carol of Lights committee members.

Texas Tech has many traditions that convey the beauty and warmth of the Christmas season. Students, faculty, staff and administrators are invited to enjoy the special activities offered during the yuletide season.

We at The University Daily wish all our readers a very Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

Rebel group attacks rich neighborhoods

By The Associated Press

SAN SALVADOR, El Salvador — Rebels invaded parts of the city's most affluent neighborhoods before dawn Wednesday and dug in after often-fierce combat.

Heavy and sustained fire was reported blocks from the residence of U.S. Ambassador William Walker. Embassy spokesman Jeff Brown said Walker was "fine ... working in his office at the embassy."

Brown did not say when Walker went to the embassy. The ambassador has been spending nights at his home.

Many of the U.S. diplomats and embassy employees who live in the comfortable neighborhoods of western San Salvador did not make it to work Wednesday. The embassy's switchboard telephone was not answered.

In Washington, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said guerrillas "briefly overran" at least one embassy officer's home, and added: "We are taking steps to assure the safety of embassy personnel." Administration officials said no Americans were injured.

A statement from the leftist guerrillas said their fighters had been told not to attack Americans.

American sources said privately the embassy told employees "who feel insecure" to take enough food and clothing for two days and nights and go either to the embassy or the headquarters of the U.S. Agency for International Development, which are in more tranquil sectors of the capital.

They said the embassy was arranging charter flights to evacuate dependents who wanted to leave, and that those who planned to go home for Christmas were told to move up their departure dates.

A home about a half-mile from Walker's house was burned after having been taken over by rebels, and unconfirmed reports said a U.S. Embassy employee lived in it.

The guerrillas attacked working-class districts earlier this month in their biggest offensive of a 10-year-old civil war that has killed more than 71,000 people, most of them civilians.

A statement from the Farabundo Marti National Liberation Front, the rebel umbrella group, said U.S. personnel and buildings were not targets.

Report shows few illegal aliens actually deported

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Although millions of aliens have entered the country illegally, an average of only 22,000 aliens actually has been deported in each of the past three years, according to a study by Congress' investigative arm.

The General Accounting Office said aliens who do not appear at their deportation hearings suffer no consequences, and by delaying the deportation process they may prolong their stay in the United States and develop justification to remain here legally.

"If they are apprehended, these aliens are entitled to apply for relief from deportation, just like aliens who comply with our laws," GAO said.

GAO said the deportation component of the nation's immigration policy "does not work well. And if it is to be an effective part of our immigration system controls it must be improved."

Harry H. Flickinger, assistant attorney general for administration, said the Justice Department agrees in general with the GAO's findings. In a response included in the GAO report, Flickinger said the complexity of the deportation process and the desire of aliens to prolong it are major contributors to the time it takes to process an alien.

An alien has a right to counsel, to inspect and object to evidence, and to appeal a case from the immigration judge to the Board of Immigration Appeals and finally, to a judicial review in federal court, Flickinger said.

GAO said aliens here illegally are usually released on bond or on their own recognizance pending deportation hearings, as detaining all aliens who INS believes should be deported is impractical.

INS spokesman Verne Jervis said the agency is doing the best job possible deporting aliens as its resources allow.

India's leader resigns; opposition to form coalition

By The Associated Press

NEW DELHI, India — Prime Minister Rajiv Gandhi resigned Wednesday, and for only the second time since independence in 1947 his Congress Party did not claim the right to form the next government.

Opposition parties began trying to assemble a coalition.

Gandhi submitted his resignation to President Ramaswamy Venkataraman and said he was ready for the role of opposition leader.

"The people have given their verdict," he said in a televised speech Wednesday night. "In all humility, we respect the verdict."

"A new government will be formed.

We extend to them our good wishes and offer them our constructive cooperation," said the 45-year-old former airline pilot, who won his own Parliament seat overwhelmingly for a third time.

Congress won more Parliament seats in last week's elections than any other party, but was far short of a majority.

The Congress Party has been out of office only once before since independence from Britain, for 29 months after losing the 1977 elections.

National Front leaders predicted Wednesday they would choose the next prime minister, but differences arose among the five parties.

Trivia

John Glenn set a transcontinental speed record in 1957 when he flew a jet from California to New York in 3 hours, 23 minutes, 8 seconds.

The police drama "Dragnet," starring Jack Webb and Barton Yarborough, premiered on NBC radio in 1949.

Fox, Lloyd go back to same old plot

By FRANK PLEMONS
The University Daily

Predictable is the best one-word review I can give to this insufferable effort to make money. If "Back to the Future II" was intended to entertain, then Steven Spielberg would have attempted some kind of creativity instead of presenting the same story as the first.

If you saw "Back to the Future," then you've seen "Back to the Future II," give or take about 20 minutes of the same gimmicks that made the first one so popular. "Back to the Future II" conveniently takes up where the first one left off and also is integrated with the first film — over half of the movie comes the first story. So if you did not see the first one, you still can follow this one. If you did see the first one, then "II" is the same movie if you can appreciate it; I could not.

Marty McFly (Michael J. Fox) and Doc Brown (Christopher Lloyd) are up to the same things: they go into the future to change the more distant future, they go back to the past to change the future; they never accomplish anything until the last minute and only after numerous attempts.

"II" rips off the same plot and situations of the first movie. So this movie is nothing new. The last-second suspense situations follow the same patterns as the first; in fact, some are those of the first movie.

The art direction of "Back to the Future II" presents some neat futuristic ideas: hoverboards instead of skateboards, a nostalgia diner called Cafe 80s, skyways instead of freeways and hologram advertisements. Yet this movie does not pay enough attention to the future because it is too busy following the plot of the first film.

Not much can be said for this film's acting, dialogue, directing and music because (like everything else about this movie) it is the same as in the first.

Worst of all, "Back to the Future II" is an advertising vehicle for "Back to the Future III." "II" never really ends; the movie drops off with Marty in a desperate situation, and the last few minutes of the movie are dedicated to previews of the upcoming third movie.

If Congress can pass legislation against coloring movies, then it should do something to stop ridiculous sequels as well. Like the unstoppable "Police Academy" and "Friday the 13th" series, "Back to the Future" is a movie best left off at one. In the meantime, God save us from a "Batman" world.

3 smart ways to help pay for college.

Here's how the Army Reserve Alternate Training Program can help you pay for college.

THE MONTGOMERY GI BILL

If qualified, the Montgomery GI Bill can provide you with up to $5,040 for current college expenses.

STUDENT LOAN REPAYMENT

If you obtain a qualifying student loan, you can get it paid off at the rate of 15% per year or $500, whichever is greater — up to a maximum of $10,000. Selecting certain specialty training can increase the maximum to $20,000.

PART-TIME INCOME

And here's how you can make even more part-time money while in college. Take Basic Training one summer. The next summer, complete skill training at an Army school. You'll earn over $1,250 for Basic and even more for skill training. Then you'll train with your Army Reserve unit near college, usually one weekend a month plus two weeks a year. You'll earn over $85 a weekend to start.

This could be the smartest way to get the money you need for college.

Think about it. Then think about us. Then call us today:

Ware dominates Heisman poll

HOUSTON (AP) — A poll of 6 percent of the Heisman voters indicates that University of Houston quarterback Andre Ware is ahead of other top contenders for the prestigious college football award, the Houston Post reported in a copyrighted story.

Of 60 voters contacted by the Post, 26 placed Ware first on their ballot, which was more than two times the number of votes for any other candidate, the newspaper reported Wednesday.

West Virginia quarterback Major Harris was second with 11 votes, while Indiana running back Anthony Thompson was third with 10.

The Heisman Trophy is presented each year to the athlete who voters believe is the best college football player in the nation. This year's winner will be announced Saturday.

Mavs fire McLeod after team's worst home defeat

Assistant Aduabato gets nod as interim coach of troubled 5-6 club

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — John MacLeod, who brought the Dallas Mavericks to the brink of the NBA finals only two years ago, was fired as head coach on Wednesday for failing to motivate the stumbling 5-6 club.

Assistant coach Richie Aduabato was named to coach the Mavs against the Charlotte Hornets Wednesday night "as well as the next few games," said vice president of basketball operations Rick Sund.

Aduabato served as interim head coach for the Detroit Pistons in the 1979-80 season.

"The Mavericks have a multitude of problems," Sund said. "Certainly

John has not caused those problems, but at this particular time, in order to get the team turned around, we feel a coaching change is necessary.

"We need to get the team going again. For the time being, Richie is going to take over the team while we evaluate the situation."

A stunned MacLeod was fired after an 11 a.m. practice.

"The reasons being there were a multitude of reasons, and the team had a multitude of problems, and I am relieved of my job," said MacLeod, 52. "They felt the change was needed, so I'm out."

The trigger for the firing was a 47-point loss to Seattle at home last Saturday.

"A decision like this is never easy, especially when you have a person that we respect as much as we do John," said chief operating officer and general manager Norm Sonju.

"After reviewing our overall basketball situation, we felt that the present team that we have right now needs a coaching change."

The team also has been stung by the loss of forward Roy Tarpley, who was suspended indefinitely after his arrest on driving-while-intoxicated charges. Tarpley had been suspended before because of drug problems.

MacLeod said, "There are things in the coaching ranks that you don't have any control over. You don't have any control over injuries, and you don't have control over drug problems. John MacLeod can't go out and play for the guys."

The personnel change followed Saturday's 117-70 loss to Seattle. It was the team's worst loss ever in Reunion Arena and its second worst in franchise history.

"That was just one game in an 82-game season," MacLeod said. "I didn't have much of a chance to turn things around."

MacLeod joined the Mavericks on June 4, 1987.

UT's McWilliams sinking fast in storm of fan complaints

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — Texas football coach David McWilliams, a helmsman in a sea of complaints following the Longhorns' 50-7 thrashing by Baylor, responds with gallows humor.

"You're wired," an announcer told McWilliams after the game Saturday.

"Well, turn on the electricity," the coach said.

At his regular weekly news conference, McWilliams noticed that the chair he usually sits in was missing.

"I'll lay down on the floor and let you kick me," he said.

Jokes of that nature are the way McWilliams, 47, deals with the worst period in his three years as head coach at Texas, where he was a football hero in the early 1960s and later longtime assistant.

McWilliams' record is 16-17, the worst record since Jack Chevigny was 13-14-2 in 1934-36.

As a replacement for Fred Akers, who was fired in 1986 after his only losing record in 10 years, McWilliams' 1989 team finally seemed to be regaining its handhold at the top of the Southwest Conference.
