President announces administration 'on wartime footing' against AIDS

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush declared his administration "on a wartime footing" against AIDS Thursday and called for compassion, not discrimination, toward people infected with the virus.

"Our goal is to turn irrational fear into rational acts," he said in his first major presidential address on AIDS. For Bush, it was an unusually personal speech.

Addressing the National Leadership Coalition on AIDS, he said education is the key to curbing the spread of the deadly disease.

"Every American must learn what AIDS is and what AIDS is not," he said.

Bush presented no new policy initiatives, instead spotlighting as unprecedented his proposed $3.5 billion in federal spending on AIDS research, treatment and education.

AIDS activists dismiss the proposal — although it would drastically escalate the federal commitment to the fight against AIDS — as a small fraction of what is needed to find a cure and to treat victims.

Bush vowed to press further research at the National Institutes of Health in Bethesda, Md., and the Centers for Disease Control in Atlanta.

"We're on a wartime footing at NIH and CDC. Tonight, like every night, the lights will burn late in Bethesda and Atlanta, as a group of American pioneers work to solve this problem."

Bush urged business executives in his audience not to fire employees infected with HIV, the human immunodeficiency virus that causes AIDS. These people, he said, deserve the same compassion as others who are sick.

"There is only one way to deal with an individual who is sick — with dignity, compassion, care, confidentiality and without discrimination," he said.

"Once disease strikes, we don't blame those who are suffering. We don't spurn the accident victim who didn't wear a seat belt. We don't reject the cancer patient who didn't quit smoking. We try to love them and care for them and comfort them. We do not fire them or evict them or cancel their insurance."

Bush urged Congress "to get on with the job of passing a law" to prohibit discrimination against people infected with AIDS or HIV.

"We're in a fight against a disease, not a fight against people," he said.

More filing tax returns electronically

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

The deadline for filing Internal Revenue Service income tax returns is April 16, and more people are filing electronically this year, said Nancy Ramold, an H&R Block tax preparer.

"It seems like a lot of people need money this year just to buy food or pay medical expenses — or make down payments on cars," Ramold said.

Loetta Russell, office coordinator of Triple Check Income Tax Service, said people see electronic filing as a way to get their refunds back fast but usually do not consider the extra cost.

"I really don't understand why they would be willing to pay the extra money to get their refunds back quicker," she said. "I wouldn't pay the extra money to get my refund back."

Cliff Karr, an independent tax preparer, does not offer the electronic service because of the added cost to the customer, he said.

"If he or she is in dire need of the money, he should just file early to get his refund back early," he said.

Vernon Smothers, owner of VS Consulting, said the IRS is having problems with electronic filing because this is the first year it has offered the service nationwide.

"They apparently were not prepared for it," he said. "They say it will be 12 to 18 days, but it's been about three weeks for the people I've handled."

Jim Johnson of Jim Johnson Bookkeeping and Tax said he probably will not offer the service next year because the IRS has been slow in sending refunds and customers blame the tax preparers.

He said the problem occurs after the returns are sent to the IRS bureau in Ogden, Utah. When they arrive, they are sent to Martinsburg, W. Va., by mail or by truck, Johnson said. Martinsburg is a 40-hour drive from Ogden, he said.

Smothers said people who mail returns probably will receive refunds in the same amount of time as those who file electronically. He said the Austin bureau of the IRS probably is not as busy as usual since it does not process electronically filed returns.

Ramold said electronic filing will be the only way to submit returns in the future, probably by the year 2000, but Johnson said people always will have the choice of mailing returns.

Panhandle congressman on bad side of chief of staff, House minority whip

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The second-ranking House Republican said Thursday he would urge the White House to never again let Democratic

Rep. Bill Sarpalius attend a private meeting with the president because of the way the Texas congressman described a closed session on Lithuania.

House Minority Whip Newt Gingrich of Georgia said Sarpalius' comments to the press after the White House meeting Wednesday were "irresponsible, destructive and inappropriate actions."

Gingrich said he was called at 7:30 a.m. Thursday by President Bush's chief of staff, John Sununu, who reportedly complained: "Why are we letting irresponsible guys like this meet with the president?"

"When I saw the headline, I was as mad as Sununu," Gingrich said, referring to a front-page story in The Washington Times with the headline:

"Bush would sacrifice Lithuania."

The story quoted Sarpalius as saying Bush had decided to "stick with" Soviet President Mikhail Gorbachev.

A press release issued by Sarpalius' office said the president told the group "there was nothing more he could do publicly for Lithuania," the breakaway Soviet republic.

"All of us were very disappointed in the president's decision," Sarpalius said in the news release.

Czechoslovakia finally chooses new name

By The Associated Press

PRAGUE, Czechoslovakia — After weeks of stormy discussion and mounting tension between Czechs and Slovaks, Parliament on Thursday chose a new name for the country and eliminated the outmoded "Socialist" label.

Since the winter revolution, everybody — even the ousted Communists — had agreed that "Socialist" no longer had a place in their country's name.

But should the Socialist Republic of Czechoslovakia be changed to the Czecho-Slovak Republic? The Federation of Czecho-Slovakia? Or, for those in the anti-hyphen camp, Czechoslovak Federative Republic?

The anti-hyphen group finally prevailed after hours of debate, when the Czechoslovak Federative Republic won the required three-fifths majority in Parliament.

The debate over the hyphen, characteristic both of Czechoslovak love of detail and absurdity, split the Czechs and Slovaks.

Famous economist discusses changes in Soviets, Eastern Bloc

By FRANCISCO RODRIGUEZ
The University Daily

The alternate economic system taking over Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union is not classic capitalism, John Kenneth Galbraith said Thursday night in the Allen Theatre to a near capacity crowd.

Galbraith, considered by his peers to be one of the foremost economists in the 20th century, presented a lecture on national and global economy and how that will affect everyone in the years to come.

"We live in a changing world," he said. "There's nothing novel about that introductory expression. However, there has not recently been a time when this introduction was more justified than now. In these last months, we have witnessed the greatest transformation in the world's economic and political scene since the end of the second World War."

Galbraith is past president of the American Economic Association and a member of the American Academy of Arts and Sciences. In 1982, he was elected to the 50-member American Academy of Arts and Letters for literature. In 1984, he became president of the combined American Academy and Institute of Arts and Letters.

Galbraith said the changes, or rather the revolution, in Eastern Europe and the Soviet Union were predicted or imagined.

"There has been much useful discussion of this great change," he said. "There has also, alas, been an associated political and economic view that borders on absurdity. It derives from what I have termed primitive ideology: the notion of a choice between comprehensive socialist principles, on the one hand, and those rules needed to govern the free enterprise economy on the other hand."

Galbraith said the ideology that interprets the events of the past months frequently pictures a bipolar world.

"This idea says that each part of this world exists in its unadulterated ideological forms," he said. "Now reversing the great Marxian predictions of the eventual success of communism, it is held that capitalism is triumphant. Communism, having failed both economically and politically in Eastern Europe, the countries that were still afflicted will now make their way, it is said, to a clear-cut capitalist nirvana. So, and more gradually, will become the USSR."

Galbraith quoted a professor from the University of Nebraska saying "some evidence, that in economics, as in religion, converts, may become the most dogmatic upholders of the faith."

"It is not practical capitalism that the individual communist countries are seeing as an alternative," he said. "In fact, in the last century when Marx wrote, and continuing into the present century, at the time of Lenin, that capitalism must survive in its classical form was very much in doubt. It was that capitalism was characterized by highly unequal, even intolerable, distribution of power between employer and employee."

"What we in the West experience, and what the countries in Eastern Europe and the USSR are seeing as the alternative to communism is not traditional capitalism," he said. "Were this the alternative, the Eastern European countries would not want the change. The alternative they see is the modern, socially concerned state with a large protective and civilizing role for the government."

Little 'D' gets big treat with double dose of JJs

Joe Murray
Columnist

DIBOLL — Big doin's in this sawmill town we call Little D, what with Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson as the double feature attraction of the Angelina County Chamber of Commerce monthly luncheon.

I'm assuming just about everybody knows who Jerry Jones and Jimmy Johnson are.

It was Mr. Jones of Arkansas, a Razorback carpetbagger, as it were, who bought the Dallas Cowboys almost exactly a year ago and replaced head coach Tom Landry with Jones' old college roommate, Mr. Johnson, late of the Miami Hurricanes.

In leaving Miami, however, he brought the hurricane with him. Quite a blow, it was — more so with the Cowboys' subsequent 1-15 season, even worse than what had come to be expected of America's Team.

In the Q&A at the luncheon, Jones was asked in particular about the reception he has received from the Dallas media. He allowed it was somewhat of a surprise to him, in that putting "over 130 million in a community would normally be perceived as a positive thing."

He didn't say precisely how much over $130 million he paid Bum Bright for the Dallas Cowboys, but $300,000 is as good a guess as any.

Jones verified the story that has become a part of Texas wheeler-dealer legend and lore:

He and Bum were within $300,000 of closing the deal and decided to flip a coin to settle the matter of the loose change. Jones was tossed for a loss.

Jones says he now has that coin, a present to him from Bright. It's encased in a chunk of plastic and positioned in such a way that only one side of the coin, heads, can be seen.

Bum also gave him a couple of trick coins, which arguably could be twice as valuable as real coins, assuming two heads are better than one. The present included this note: "You'll never know..."

Yeah, as a matter of fact, Jones says, Bum had supplied the coin they'd flipped.

Oh, well. Win some, lose some. What really matters is that you keep a positive attitude.

Jones, in fact, told a parable of sorts illustrating exactly that point. It goes something like this:

"There was a man who had two sons, one an incurable pessimist and the other a total optimist. The father decided at Christmas to test the resolve of each in his own way.

"The pessimist son awoke Christmas morning to find his room filled with every gift his heart could desire. And yet when the father looked in on him, the boy still found reason to grouse.

"Meanwhile, the room of the optimist son had been filled with, if you can imagine, horse manure. And yet when the father looked in on him, he found this boy happily whistling as he shoveled his way through the manure.

"My heavens!" cried the father. "How can you possibly find any reason to rejoice?"

"The son, beaming from ear to ear, paused but a moment from his work. 'With all this stuff, I figure there has to be a pony in here somewhere.'"

Feel free to interpret that story any way you choose. Jimmy Johnson certainly did.

The head coach, in taking his turn at the mike, asked of his old friend and employer, "I can't help wondering: Which room have you put me in?"

The way I figure it, it's a coin toss.

U.S. dodges nuclear nightmare

Guy Lawrence
Editor

It had the makings of a classic spy-thriller paperback, except this one is for real — or almost for real.

British officials reported that they had nabbed five poe for attempting to export 40 American-made nuclear detonation devices.

Fortunately, the British and American authorities involved in the 18-month investigation were a step ahead of the five smugglers, one Iraqi, three Britons and a Lebanese, because the detonators the smugglers thought they had their hands on actually were dummies — at least this time.

Of course the whole world's concerned, especially the United States. White House spokesman Marlin Fitzwater said: "This issue raises once again our concern for the nuclear proliferation in the Middle East. It continues to pose a serious risk to U.S. interests, and it continues to exacerbate regional problems."

The export of such devices is controlled strictly, and for good reason. What if Iraq got its hands on the real McCoys? Could it be that they could use it against Israel? Would the United States be compelled to respond? Could the Soviets feel compelled to respond to the American response? Who knows?

A world that theoretically started with the "Big Bang" just as easily could end with a Bigger Bang.

The technological Frankenstein that the United States created in the tense moments of World War II someday could be used against us, just as the fictional monster turned on his master.

This time there was a happy ending to this international drama. Next time there could be a different ending.

Moderation in Mideast

Arab nations slow to grab hold of democratic idea

Flora Lewis
Columnist

PARIS — The change in the world's political climate finally is touching the Middle East.

Don't hold your breath.

Things are moving in millimeters, not the giant leaps that 1989 brought in East Europe.

Still, it is becoming more fashionable to sound a bit moderate than to shout shrill defiance.

The hard-liners are being put on the defensive, no longer assured that extremism and intimidation will keep them on top.

Different groups and pressures are at work in various countries.

But they all add up to recognition the receding cold war has given economic and political factors priority over the old ideological and strategic bulwarks.

The expression comes in some surprisingly blunt ways.

The Emir of Bahrain told a Persian Gulf newspaper the other day that he deplored how democratic forces in Kuwait and other gulf states were "trying to imitate Eastern Europe in doing away with totalitarian rule."

Iraqi President Saddam Hussein, heavy-handed as usual, told the new Arab Cooperation Council, comprising Iraq, Jordan, Egypt and Yemen, to watch out for the United States "now that the Soviet Union has abandoned in a way and for a time its role as the prime international defender" of the Arabs.

"Based on our friendship with the Soviets," he said, "we never expected they would give in to American pressure" to allow widespread emigration of Jews.

He urged Arab investors to transfer funds from America to the Soviet Union, as though they could buy back Moscow's help that way.

But this is a diversion from his greater concern with Iran, where something is stirring.

There have been a lot of signals Tehran is getting ready to arrange release of some, perhaps all, of the 18 Western hostages in Lebanon and that talks are going on with the United States.

The biggest problem seems to be the continuing power struggle in the Iranian regime.

Iranian President Hashemi Rafsanjani is getting desperate at his country's terrible economic situation and looks abroad to ease it.

Iranian exiles report large, angry demonstrations in several cities and claim that 200 to 300 people have been killed in the streets in the past fortnight.

European foreign ministries with diplomats in Tehran consider this a large exaggeration but say there have been public disturbances.

Tehran radio broadcast two telephone numbers last weekend for citizens to voice their grievances on a 24-hour hotline set up by Rafsanjani, an attempted steam valve.

Obviously, freeing the hostages would improve Iran's relations with the West, probably leading to the end of Washington's oil embargo, release of blocked funds and perhaps new international credits.

Baghdad wants to force Iranian concessions on the stalled negotiations for a peace settlement before tensions disappear.

Passions no longer are a reliable barrier.

Israel, too, is feeling the East-West thaw and economic pinch.

In one way it is as benefit: the arrival of hundreds and thousands of Soviet Jews would fulfill an old dream.

But Prime Minister Yitzhak Shamir put his foot in it with his claim that it would take a "big Israel" to settle them.

He avoided calling it "Lebensraum," but the implication was that large-scale immigration would justify refusing to cede any occupied territory.

That riled the Arabs, and Washington, and probably persuaded the Soviets not to allow the direct Moscow-Tel Aviv flights they had been considering.

There is no assurance the compromise that alone can bring peace lies in the foreseeable future.

Shamir said in an evident reference to Washington, "No nation can ask of us concessions and sacrifices that they would never make if their own security was at stake."

But that's the whole point.

Israel's security is at stake as long as it has no peace.

In the Soviet Union and in Eastern Europe, leaders have come to see there's a better chance for security and prosperity from a gentle wind than from a chilly blast.

South African President F.W. de Klerk is trying it.

There's still strong resistance in the Middle East, but the idea is gaining. Political global warming makes a difference.

Tech day care celebrates young children's week

By AMY LAWSON
The University Daily

A red-and-black paper chain may not signify much to people on the street, but to children who participate in the Texas Tech human development and family studies program, the chain may provide the link to letting the governor know the importance of day care.

The Tech Child Development Center, along with other Lubbock community day care centers, is kicking off the Week of the Young Child early by sending a paper chain to Austin and to the Lubbock County Courthouse.

The chain will be sent to Gov. Bill Clements to show that Lubbock cares about day care, said Cheryl Wilmington, an administrative assistant in human development and family studies.

"The reason we are sending it to him (Clements) is to show him that Lubbock cares about children and cares about the quality of child care and how important child care is," Wilmington said.

The chain is made of black and red paper strips and has each child's name and fingerprints on a link. About 50 links are in the Tech chain.

The chain is the beginning of a series of events, highlighted by a balloon launch scheduled for Wednesday.

"The purpose of the week is to commend the teachers, the people that work with young children and also make people aware of young children and the importance of quality child care," said Lucinda Hurlbut, head laboratory technician in the Cottage, the center for the 2½- to 5-year-olds.

The center has been involved with the Week of the Young Child for three years, she said. The week, which this year is April 2-6, was started in 1971.

Dean continues to increase alumni in engineering

By PATRICK RICCI
The University Daily

Texas Tech students eyeing graduation as the end of their involvement at Tech take notice: The university's future success depends upon alumni, College of Engineering Dean Ernst Kiesling said in an interview Thursday.

Kiesling, associate dean for research, established the Civil Engineering Academy three years ago to increase alumni involvement in the engineering department.

"The academy is primarily an attempt to recognize outstanding achievement by alumni of the civil engineering department and to increase their involvement with programs here at Tech," Kiesling said.

Financial contributions are one way alumni can support the university, but Kiesling said alumni can maintain involvement with Tech in many different and important ways.

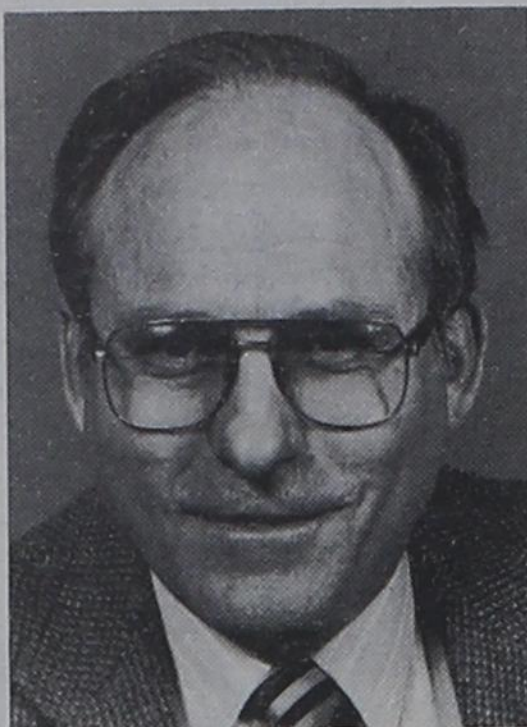

"The easiest way to help is through financial contribution, but alumni can help us in terms of recruiting outstanding students in their area," he said. "Alumni should also be involved with improving the image of this university. Certainly the image that legislators have of the institution depends as much on the alumni as it does on the current faculty or students."

For alumni who are interested in working directly with students, Kiesling said, "There are even programs where alumni can establish acquaintance with students who are here and serve as their mentors or advisers. There are many ways people can become involved."

"Certainly the key to quality education at Tech is the involvement of the alumni, because the amount of faculty is limited by legislators in Austin whereas the alumni continue to grow in numbers and stature. Alumni have the ability to do more good for the university than we on campus can."

Although alumni involvement is critical to a university's success, Kiesling said Tech alumni have not been as involved with the school as the university needs them to be.

Kiesling

"The best we have been able to do in our department is to get less than 5 percent of alumni participating in any way," he said. "That figure is characteristic of this university."

Private schools and some state-funded universities such as Texas A&M and the University of Texas traditionally have more alumni involvement than Tech, he said.

"That is making a critical difference. Not only do they have us beat in percentages, but in total numbers as well," he said. "But we are catching up in that regard."

Peggy Boyd, a clerical specialist in the engineering department, said the academy gradually will increase its current membership of 35 to about 125, about 10 percent of the living civil engineering alumni.

"The academy consists of alumni who are selected by the civil engineering department in recognition of distinguished achievement either in the profession or in public service," Kiesling said.

Kiesling credits Mason Somerville, dean of the College of Engineering, for bringing the academy concept to Tech.

The academy's third annual recognition banquet will be at 6:30 p.m. today at the 50-Yard Line restaurant. Thirteen alumni will be inducted into the academy at the banquet — raising membership to 48.

Student begins paper recycling drive, encourages others to join

By CHRIS BOBBITT
The University Daily

Typing paper, newspaper, colored paper or term paper — all types of paper can be recycled.

Kathy Gamble, a student assistant with the dean of students office, has been working with the division of Continuing Education on a paper recycling project. The Dean of Students Office has organized students, including Gamble, to collect paper, cans, glass and other recyclable products.

"It was a personal concern to start with. I started at Continuing Ed in August, and there were two other people who helped me develop the idea. One was Melinda Jones, and the other was Lisa Hand," Gamble said. "We talked about the fact that they utilize a lot of paper there (Continuing Ed) purely through the nature of what they do."

Gamble said Continuing Education constantly renews correspondence course manuals and once they have updated the manual or created new ones, she takes the paper from discarded manuals and envelopes to recycle.

"They have 15,000 students enrolled on a constant basis with correspondence, so they deal with sheer numbers of white envelopes that come into our office. It is phenomenal," she said. "Those are things we can't cut and make into pads, and they have made stuff into pads. They had boxes of paper in the basement they were just waiting to make into pads, but it was just more than we could possibly utilize. The idea then came up: 'Why not think about a way of recycling it?'"

Gamble said she and the others are working on recycling because of their environmental concern.

"It is just as a personal concern for the environment the fact that is it relatively wasteful to have that much paper that could be recycled into the environmental system," she said.

The money she collects from recycling goes into a flower fund to be used when the people she works with get sick, the money goes to buying flowers.

One Saturday, Gamble took 386 pounds of paper to Vista Fibers Recycling Plant. During spring break, Gamble collected 500 pounds of paper to be recycled.

According to an article in Texas Tech Today, "paper comprises about 41 percent of all garbage, but only 30 percent of paper is recycled. The main reason for this is lack of markets for recycled, low grade paper, such as newsprint plus the small number of processing facilities..."

Gamble has offered some notes on the paper she and the university are trying to recycle:

- Staples don't matter; they come out in the processing.
  - Save white bond envelopes of any size as long as they do not have windows. Vista does not take manilla or brown envelopes.
  - Save the tractor feed off your computer paper. This paper is premium at five cents a pound.
  - Vista does not take cardboard or any paper with a high clay content.
- Gamble said she hopes to continue the program she has started and hopes other people will pick up on the idea of recycling.

Symposium to discuss ethics in engineering

By PATRICK RICCI
The University Daily

Iran-Contra, Housing and Urban Development and Watergate all conjure images of unethical practices in business or government that have politicians and businessmen scrambling to regain a credible image.

Jimmy Smith, a professor of civil engineering at Texas Tech, said Wednesday the engineering field is not exempt from practitioners engaging in unethical practices.

"Engineering ethics have fundamentally the same background as other fields," he said. "What is right and what is wrong, however, not everyone has the same feeling about right and wrong."

"Ethics are emphasized primarily because of the importance that engineers play in protecting the public," Smith said. "When we build a bridge, a space shuttle, electronic components, an automobile or an airplane it involves the public. If we fall short on the ethical standards, we have done a serious disservice to the public."

Smith said the Challenger accident is a good example of the many types of ethical questions encountered by professional engineers.

In 1986, the space shuttle Challenger exploded seconds after liftoff. Smith said a design flaw in the shuttle's booster rockets O-ring seals was cited as a primary cause of the accident.

"Anytime something happens, it triggers a higher interest," Smith said. "Our own state law that established registration procedures for professional engineers was created back in the 1930s or '40s because of a boiler explosion in a grade school in East Texas that killed 300 or 400 children."

The James Harold Murdough Center for Engineering Professionalism at Tech will offer a symposium on the ethical questions raised in the various engineering fields at 3:30 p.m. today in 205 civil and agricultural engineering building.

The third annual presentation by the Murdough Center is titled "Engineering Education and Practice: Its Legal and Ethical Aspects," and will feature guest speakers T. Al Austin and Fu Hua Chen.

Austin is the director of the Iowa State Water Resources Research Institute at Iowa State University. He is a Tech graduate.

Who Made the First Fur Coat

Animal rights activists have lost touch with reality when they put man on an equal level with animals. What's real is that man is unique and precious, created in the image of god and capable of an eternal relationship with God.

God created man to share in his glory, not to wallow in cesspools of debauchery and perversion. He destined man for inexpressible joy, not for the despair of nihilism and materialism. He declared and is declaring to man the path of abundant life, not the road to death and destruction.

South Plains Bible chapel will be giving a special presentation on why we can believe God and the Bible. The public is invited to hear the topic, "Believing God: Evidence for the Christian Faith."

WHEN: Sunday, April 1st 11 a.m.

WHERE: South Plains Bible Chapel
5402 Quaker Ave., Lubbock, TX 79413

'Funniest Videos' gains TV ratings lost to VCRs

By The Associated Press

LOS ANGELES — Mailbags stuffed with fainting brides, singing dogs, polka-dancing chickens and raids into the privacy of the shower arrive daily at the busy shop that produces ABC's surprise hit, "America's Funniest Home Videos."

Programmers — and analysts of what the television audience wants to see — are agog at the reaction to the half-hour Sunday show, which has host Bob Saget introducing and narrating clips from home videos sent in by viewers.

Network television, which has lost viewers steadily over the past decade due in part to the advent of videocassettes, has found a way to bite back.

The midseason replacement series reached No. 1 in the A.C. Nielsen ratings for the second week of March, and a one-hour rerun special knocked venerable "60 Minutes" out of the Top 10 slot. It also has mugged "Murder, She Wrote."

In the cramped warren of rooms at ABC where "America's Funniest Home Videos" is made, executive producer Vic Di Bona oversees a hustling young staff of 70.

They have learned, this weary-eyed crew, some amazing trivia about America:

- There are still plenty of outhouses in this country, just waiting for someone with a Camcorder to kick open the door and astound the occupant.
- And spouses like to surprise each other in the shower with a video camera.

- There also are more folks than you realize who can make their bunched-up bellybuttons whistle out a tune.
- Nearly every kid in the nation sticks their face and hands into their first birthday cake.

The mailbags, bringing up to 1,800 tapes a day, are "America's Funniest Home Videos" lifeline.

"This is a show that is truly hand to mouth," said Di Bona. "If the country ain't funny, I ain't funny."

Di Bona said his weekly show costs around $400,000. His material is free, but he claims his staff and equipment costs are considerably higher than other half-hour shows.

He estimates, for example, that the video machines purchased a few months ago are about to wear out. And because the tapes are of private events, clearances have to be obtained from featured characters before it can run.

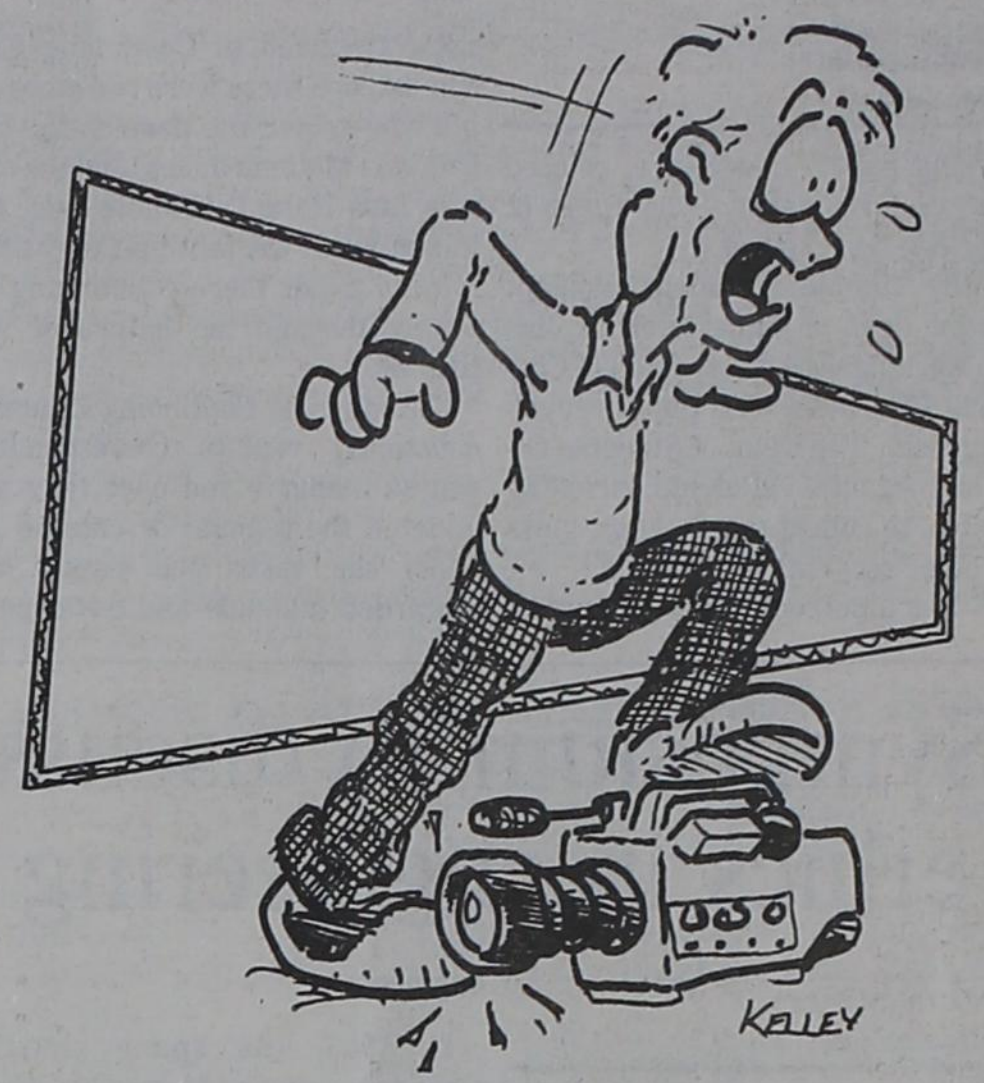

But the cost still is about half the estimated $800,000 a week needed to produce a Top 10 series like "The Cosby Show" or "Cheers," even with the $10,000 awarded to the funniest home video each week.

ABC's censors have so far squelched just two of the clips Di Bona submitted. A youngster applying the nozzle of a running vacuum cleaner to his face was nixed, as was one of a baby crawling with a clear plastic mixing bowl over his head — too close to the eyes and nose, censors said.

Efforts to stage events are so poorly done that they have always been spotted, staff members claim.

A clip gets on the show after being viewed by a screener, who grades it on a scale from one to 10, with those with a five or below eliminated. The others are viewed by an assistant producer and move up the line before being selected. Most segments zoom along with pratfalls, snaky garden hoses, upchucking babies and brides tossing wedding bouquets into the twilight zone.

Ryder rocks after more than 25 years

By KIRK BAIRD-PARKS
The University Daily

Best known for his classic song "Devil With a Blue Dress On," which was voted as one of the 100 best rock singles of all time by Rolling Stone, Mitch Ryder has been tearing up the rock/blues scene for more than a quarter of a century; he is the essence of the definition of survivor.

Ryder isn't on tour to promote any album — his last album, "Never Kick a Sleeping Dog," which was produced by John Cougar Mellencamp, came out in '83 — rather, he still considers himself a vital member of the "rock 'n' roll/rhythm and blues" group.

Ryder and his band will be performing at the Depot's Warehouse at 9:30 p.m. Saturday. Cover is $8.

His career began in 1962 when he recorded his first record under the name Billy Lee — his real name is Billy Levisse Jr. — in his hometown of Detroit. In the summer of 1964 he led a band called the Riveras. They soon changed their name to Mitch Ryder and the Detroit Wheels due to another group named the Riveras. Ryder and the Detroit Wheels soon were churning out hits like "Jenny Take a Ride," "Little Latin Lupe Lu" and his two Top 10 hits, "Sock it to Me Baby" and "Devil With a Blue Dress On," which was a medley with "Good Golly Miss Molly."

Ryder subsequently left the band and released some solo albums as well as a critically acclaimed album with the group Detroit.

His recent years have found him releasing acclaimed but slow-selling records. Ryder continues on undaunted, though. He still feels "there is a need for (me)."

He continues to tour and to release new records in Europe. And he plans to continue to tour as long as he is able, even though his current tour has been "strenuous" on him. "My age might have something to do with it," he said. "We're doing 21 days with two nights off — it can grab you. It's nothing I can't deal with at this point. I always enjoy walking on the stage — it's what I live for. As long as I'm healthy, I'll continue to do it."

Ryder also doesn't want to appear to be a bitter, nostalgia tour who just plays the hits. He wants to be more in the tradition of the Rolling Stones, who continue to add to their legacy. "It's a wonderful thing to have them (the Stones) around, because they keep breaking barriers and proving themselves," he said. "They're not tools of rock 'n' roll; they make things OK for lesser-known bands."

Ryder's life has not been without problems. "Being a national star from Detroit has its advantages, but I wouldn't trade those advantages for the wisdom I have now," he said.

What's particularly encouraging to Ryder is the audience he is attracting on his current tour. There are, of course, those diehards from the '60s, but there also is a large contingent of college-age people, too.

Ryder's show will consist of the classics, some from his European Collection, near-misses and new material.

Mitch Ryder

Baldwin, Connery shine in 'October'

Calvin and Hobbes

by Bill Watterson

By FRANK PLEMONS
The University Daily

"The Hunt for Red October" is a spy-suspense movie of the first degree that makes the latest James Bond movie look like an English Leather commercial.

The only problem with this movie, based on Tom Clancy's best seller, is that the relations between the United States and the Soviet Union are much better than they were six years ago when the book was published. Yet this movie doesn't falter due to political relations.

Sean Connery's performance as renegade submarine legend Marko Ramius is flawless.

Although far from his sophisticated comic acting as "Cucumber" Frank DeMarco in "Married to the Mob," Baldwin's literally perspiring intensity proves the another side of his acting abilities.

Baldwin's character is not without outstanding support, especially from Scott Glen as the cynical captain of a U.S. attack sub and James Earl Jones as director of the CIA.

The only character I wanted to see more of was arrogant Soviet sub captain Tupolev (Stellan Skarsgard), a former student of Ramius who is determined to hunt down his ex-teacher.

Yet "October" is not error-free. At a running time of two hours and 15 minutes, the pace is slow at times. Screenwriters Larry Ferguson and Donald Stewart keep some of the movie's characters shallow.

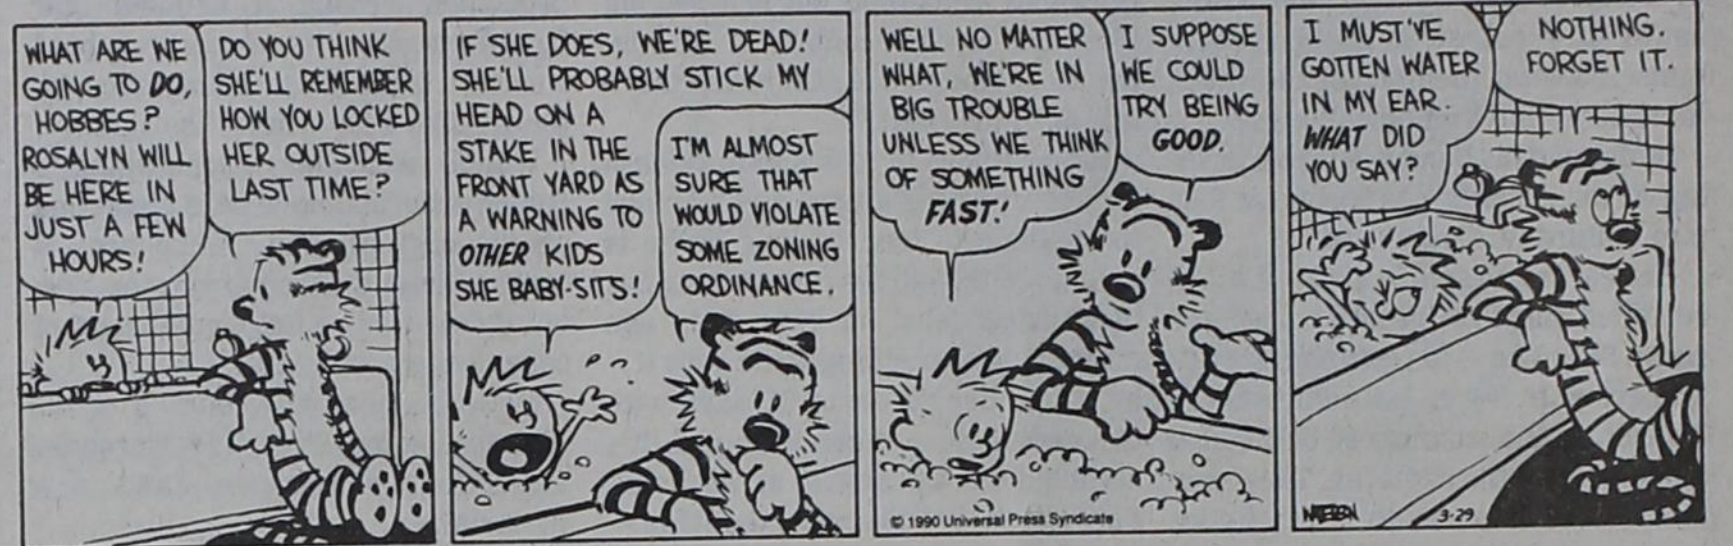

"October" also has another unavoidable problem: submarines don't make for the best action footage, but their torpedos do, and McTiernan doesn't forget this.

Despite those few errors, "October" shouldn't be overlooked, and the talents of the aforementioned actors along with their supporting cast make it well worthwhile.

The plot of this movie is not a question of whether Ramius is trying to defect, but rather how the Americans will find out and whether he makes it. Luckily enough, director John McTiernan builds the plot on answering those two questions.

One issue important in the book (but unaddressed in the movie) is what the death of Ramius' wife has to do with his defection. Such is one problem of transferring a book to film.

Sure, Connery is brilliant, but I'd expect nothing less from him. Alec Baldwin's role as the CIA analyst confident of Ramius' defection is this movie's standout performance. From loving daddy to "expendable" observer, the diversity of Baldwin's character makes this movie.

Japanese grid coach studies Tech program

By WAYNE BARRINGER
The University Daily

Although Texas Tech football coach Spike Dykes is hard at work getting his team ready for the annual Red-Black spring game, his duties this week have not been all business.

Along with coaching his Red Raiders on the field, Dykes has been entertaining and educating long-time Japanese friend Steve Ban about the ways and means of American — especially Texas Tech — football.

Ban has been a football coach in Japan for more than 30 years, and for most of that time has made occasional visits to the United States strictly to learn its system of football. He said he met a "young defensive coach Spike Dykes" in 1973 when Dykes was an assistant at the University of Texas. The two later became good friends during a visit to Mississippi State in 1978.

Ban, who was given his American name by former Oklahoma coach Bud Wilkinson, said the year Dykes was named head coach at Tech, Dykes invited Ban to come watch the Red Raiders practice. Ban has been back to Raiderland each year since.

"I am really interested in their system," the 46-year-old Ban said. "After the Coca-Cola Bowl (1988), we were so impressed and amazed. All of Japanese spectators were impressed also, I think."

Ban said he comes here because he likes Dykes' system and he is looking for ways to improve his Kobe University of Commerce team back in his homeland.

His first contact in the States was Wilkinson, and Ban said the Sooner mentor would send game films and playbooks to Japan when Ban was 15 years old. Ban introduced Wilkinson's 'Split-T' offense to the high school team he coached.

Ban has been successful in recent years with Dykes' offensive scheme, but he said he needs to pay more attention to the defensive alignments this time in Lubbock.

"Two years ago we won two and lost five — we were really bad," Ban said. "But last year we used Coach Dykes 'Offset-I' formation and were second in Western Japan with 5-2 season."

"Now I will concentrate on defense."

He said the Japanese system is quite different from the organization here. Ban cited examples that, although more than 200 colleges play Japanese football, no athletic scholarships are granted and most coaches, except for a few at the largest schools, are part-time with no pay.

"During Saturday and Sunday, our national holiday, I coach," he said. "The players practice on their own Monday through Friday."

Another problem Ban has is the size of his school. He said Kobe is the smallest school in Division II.

"My school has 1,600 enrollment, and half of those are female," he said.

Ban said with so few players to

Final Four coaches cast votes for Runnin' Rebs

By The Associated Press

DENVER — UNLV coach Jerry Tarkanian, one of five coaches to have won 30 NCAA tournament national championship.

And two of his Final Four colleagues believe he'll get it.

"I think Tark has a tremendous basketball team," said Arkansas coach Nolan Richardson. "We got a chance to play them earlier in the year (losing 101-93). They've got a nice front line and good guards, and they've got that wild man, (Moses) Scurry. He scares me."

Georgia Tech coach Bobby Cremins came away impressed after UNLV's 131-101 rout of Loyola Marymount in the West Regional final.

"Particularly after the Loyola game, I feel you've got to favor Tark's team," Cremins said. "But there might not be any favorite with how close the games have been."

In Saturday's semifinals, the Razorbacks (30-4) meet Duke (28-8) and UNLV (33-5) takes on Georgia Tech (28-6).

During a conference call Wednesday, the four coaches of the Final Four teams discussed the weekend's matchups.

Duke coach Mike Krzyzewski saved his praise for fellow-ACC team Georgia Tech.

"Bobby Cremins said all those nice things about me earlier and then he goes and picks someone else," Krzyzewski said. "I think he should do it. If not, the people of Atlanta should string him up."

Tarkanian was the most diplomatic.

"I don't think there's a clearcut favorite," Tark said. "If you took a poll after our game with Ball State, I don't think anyone would have picked us. I think it's about as equal a tournament as you'll find."

But Tarkanian said earlier that "if we play real well, there isn't a team we can't beat."

Tarkanian has a 31-15 tournament record while coaching at Long Beach State and UNLV. The other coaches in the 30-victory club are John Wooden (47), Dean Smith (43), Denny Crum (32) and Adolph Rupp (30).

The discussion then turned to the high altitude.

"I told our kids we'd be playing inside," Richardson quipped. "I remember when the Olympic team played there, some players were gasping for air. We may have to play a few more players."

Krzyzewski said the altitude "is a concern but it will be the same for all the teams."

Tarkanian insisted that high altitude "has always bothered us. We have trouble when we play at Utah State. I think everybody plays about a half-step slow up there. It will be real difficult to play two games with the type of intensity we like to play with, and it will be the same for the other three teams, too."

Annual Red-Black contest marks spring's end

 choose from, consistency is hard to establish.
 "We have no blue-chippers," he said.
 Ban said that in some of the private schools, recruiting is practiced. The only enticements for a prospective athlete is that college entrance exams, which are mandatory for other students, are unnecessary.
 The Japanese football system is divided into four divisions where teams are separated by their records.

Kobe is in Division II, but according to Ban, that will change soon.
 "We will win the Division II championship and be moved up to Division I," a confident Ban said. "Within two years, we will win Division I."
 Ban said that for the first time ever, he has brought team members with him to learn the Tech style. He said each had to pay $3,000 in airfare alone to get here.
 "But you know, each one said it has been well worth it," he said.
 Meanwhile, Dykes was offered a five-year contract extension, and as of Wednesday, he had not signed it. He said he sees no problems and should finish the details in a few weeks.

 "He's making his own dynasty here," Ban said.
 Ban and his seven players will be at the Red-Black game, which will start at 3 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium. The game will be aired on KTX-TM radio, and admission is free to Tech students.

Ryan may stay with Texas after '90

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — Baseball's all-time strikeout king — Texas Rangers' star Nolan Ryan — now says he might pitch beyond the 1990 season despite hints at retirement a few months ago.
 The Dallas Morning News reported Thursday that Ryan's agent, Dick Moss, spoke with Rangers general manager Tom Grieve on Wednesday about a contract extension. Ryan's two-year contract expires after this season. Moss relayed Ryan's interest in playing beyond 1990 and asked Grieve what the Rangers level of interest would be in keeping Ryan, who is 43, the newspaper said.
 "Nolan still feels pretty good,"

Moss said. "This is a nice situation for Nolan. He loves it here with the Rangers. I think the club likes having him, too. Something might happen."
 The Rangers are interested in bringing Ryan back both as an attraction and a pitcher. His gate appeal figured heavily in last year's club-record attendance of more than 2 million.
 "It's obvious what Nolan has meant to the franchise and the job he has done," Grieve said. "We're open to any discussions they might want to have. We're glad to hear Nolan is considering the possibility of playing beyond 1990. We'll continue to discuss it with him. I hope we can work something out."
 For Ryan's 19 home starts, the Rangers had an average attendance of 28,420. For all other home dates, the Rangers had an average home attendance of 25,067.

 With Ryan, the Rangers had their best team ERA since 1983 at 3.91 last season. Ryan led the staff in victories (16) and innings (293.3) with a 3.20 ERA. He also led the major leagues in strikeouts (301) and innings per start (7.48).
 Barring injury, Ryan will be the Rangers' opening-day starter April 9 against Toronto at Arlington Stadium.
 Grieve and Moss did not discuss salary. For his two season with the Rangers, Ryan will receive $3.2 million.
 In February, Ryan alluded to retirement in case of a lengthy owners' lockout. Ryan said spending more time with his family in

Senior Farst garners academic award

Texas Tech senior guard Karen Farst continued to let her academics speak for her when she became one of two recipients of the $1,000 Baden Scholarship award Thursday. Farst, a second-team 1990 GTE Academic All-America selection, is the first Tech player ever to win the award, given to the top two graduating basketball players who are planning to advance to graduate school.

Farst and Princeton's Sandi Butler were honored Thursday morning in Knoxville, Tenn., the site of this year's NCAA Women's Final Four. Farst will enter medical school this fall at a university yet to be determined.

Rain halts Tech-SWTSU matchup

Rain stopped Wednesday's Texas Tech-Southwest Texas State women's tennis match from taking place in San Marcos, but there will be more competition where that came from for the Red Raiders.

Tech will remain on the road throughout the weekend, taking on Baylor at 1:30 p.m. today, Houston at 1:30 p.m. Saturday and Texas-San Antonio at 11 a.m. Sunday. The Raiders are 14-3 this season and 1-2 in Southwest Conference play.

Owls, Aggies on tap for men netters

The Texas Tech men's tennis team enters weekend Southwest Conference play lacking in depth, but confidence remains strong, according to coach Ron Damron.

Damron said his Red Raiders still are savoring their first ever national ranking (No. 24) going into today's Rice matchup in Houston and Saturday's Texas A&M contest in College Station.

Tech's depth became a problem with the loss of 5-foot, 9-inch junior Rick Baird to a season-ending knee injury. Baird will undergo knee surgery today.

Earlier this season, senior William Dopson was lost for the year when he broke his wrist.

Rice, which was nationally ranked earlier in the season, is 7-6 and 2-2 in SWC play.

Hasty choice right one for Tech's Zalaya

By CAMERON MAUN
The University Daily

While choosing a college is a difficult choice for many, Texas Tech javelin thrower Rodrigo Zalaya made his decision within minutes.

Zalaya is looking to become the second Red Raider thincad to qualify for the NCAA Outdoor Championships when he competes in the Dr. Pepper/Texas Tech Invitational Saturday at R.P. Fuller Stadium.

Action will begin at 10 a.m. Saturday with five events scheduled simultaneously and will conclude with the men's mile relay, scheduled for 3:10 p.m.

Zalaya, a 21-year-old junior, was born in Santiago, Chile. He was competing for Catholic University in Santiago when track aficionado Donald Boucher of Lubbock noticed him at the South American championships, where Zalaya had just set a South American record with a throw of 235 feet.

"Donald Boucher from here at Tech went to Chile and saw the South American track meet there—the one I set the Chilean record at," Zalaya said. "He came up and talked to me and asked if I would be interested in coming to the States. I said OK, but I didn't think he was serious."

"About two weeks later I got a phone call and he said, 'Do you remember me? It's Donald.' He said he had talked to (track coach) Corky (Oglesby) and that if I wanted to come, I would have three years of eligibility left."

Corby Roberts/The University Daily

Rodrigo Zalaya

Zalaya said the opportunity to come to the United States to study mechanical engineering and throw the javelin was too good to pass up.

"They are giving me a scholarship and paying for everything, so to me, you have to take full advantage of that," he said. "With a diploma from America you can about name your job in Chile, especially with a mechanical engineering diploma."

Zalaya narrowly missed the NCAAs at last weekend's College Station Relays when his throw of 227-1 $\frac{3}{4}$  fell short of the qualifying standard by seven inches. Rodrigo said he is not worried about the NCAAs: he will make them.

"Right now we're coming out of basics like weightlifting and throwing the medicine ball, and we're starting to work on speed—getting faster and getting better technique," he said.

"I think I can do very well with this training. In Chile, all we did was throw the javelin."

Zalaya said he knew little English before he arrived at Tech in October and that he has had to make one adjustment.

"I went to a British school in Santiago," he said. "The first month here was especially hard, because in Texas, everyone speaks with an accent."

Hays: Raiders better prepared for battle with No. 9 Arkansas

Texas Tech will be trying to patch some holes this weekend as the Red Raider baseball team travels to Fayetteville, Ark., for a three-game series with the No. 9 Arkansas Razorbacks.

The teams are scheduled to play a 1 p.m. doubleheader Saturday followed by a rescheduled single game at 1 p.m. Sunday.

The Raiders have lost four of their five games, including a three-game sweep by Texas A&M last weekend. Tech coach Larry Hays said he hopes to establish all-around consistency, something that has eluded Tech for an extended period this season.

"I think the Nebraska series helped us," Hays said. "We made some mistakes but were able to come back from it, and I think now we're better prepared."

Tech stands at 22-15 (2-4 in the Southwest Conference) after splitting two games with Nebraska Monday and Tuesday. In those games the Raiders played solid until errors and the big inning late in the game.

Although the Raiders have been in a hitting slump of sorts, Tech stands second in the conference in many hitting categories, including batting average, home runs, RBIs and doubles.

The Hogs, who own a 23-5 overall record, lead the SWC in hitting thanks to the one-two punch of catcher Kirk Piskor and preseason all-America third baseman Greg D'Alexander. The two are in the top five in hitting and home runs and stand sixth and seventh in the runs-batted-in category.

Arkansas is 2-1 in SWC action after beating Houston 6-1 and 6-4 and losing 6-0 last weekend in Houston.
