Bush to become 1st president since LBJ to visit front-line troops

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush leaves Friday on an eight-day trip to the Middle East and Europe, becoming the first U.S. president to visit front-line troops since Lyndon Johnson in Vietnam. Before his Thanksgiving stop in Saudi Arabia, he'll sign a historic East-West arms control agreement in Paris.

The Persian Gulf crisis will dominate the tour, even while the president is in Paris attending a 34-nation European summit.

Aides said Bush would seek to coordinate his gulf policies when he meets with leaders of the Soviet Union, Britain and France at the three-day Paris gathering.

In particular, U.S. officials said, Bush plans to sound out these and other members of the 15-member U.N. Security Council on wording of a proposed resolution to authorize force to drive Iraq from Kuwait.

Although the European summit is largely a celebration of the end of the cold war, Bush is "more than a one-topic president," said a senior administration official.

"He understands the significance of what is going on in Paris... By the same token, I am sure he will use opportunities as they come along to discuss the gulf with others who are attending," said the official, briefing reporters at the White House on condition of anonymity.

Secretary of State James A. Baker III flew to Europe ahead of Bush on Thursday to help lay groundwork on gulf policy. He was meeting with foreign ministers of Security Council members, including three African countries — Ethiopia, Zaire and the Ivory Coast.

Before leaving Washington, Baker said that while economic sanctions against Iraq's Saddam Hussein seem to be working, "the real question is, are they working to achieve the goal" of Saddam's unconditional withdrawal from Kuwait.

Baker and Bush will link up again

U.S., Saudi Arabian forces start exercise in Persian Gulf

By The Associated Press

ABOARD THE USS O'BRIEN — U.S. and Saudi Arabian forces Thursday began a six-day amphibious exercise in the Persian Gulf codenamed "Imminent Thunder." Iraq called it a "provocative act" because it was close to Kuwait.

The exercise involved 1,000 U.S. Marines, 1,100 aircraft and 16 ships, including the aircraft carrier USS Midway, which arrived in the region earlier this month.

The exact location of Imminent Thunder was not revealed under military policy and a news blackout was imposed for the initial phases. Press reports have said the exercise would be 10 miles from the Iraqi-Kuwaiti border.

No live ammunition will be fired in Imminent

Thunder.

The exercise was not intended to provoke the Iraqis, said U.S. Navy spokesman Cmdr. J.D. Van Sickle.

"The purpose is to give participating forces training in joint and combined operations and to enhance amphibious warfare skills," he said. "Exercise Imminent Thunder is part of our Desert Shield training."

Military officials said there was no particular significance to the name of the operation and that its timing was not linked to any operational plans.

But it is being held as the United States doubles the number of aircraft carriers in the gulf region to six and sends in 150,000 additional military personnel to join the estimated 230,000 already deployed. The entire U.S.-led multinational force arrayed against Iraq numbers more than 300,000.

The planning is based more on concern that disorders may escalate than on food shortages, although they are severe, said the officials, who spoke on the condition of anonymity.

Bush was to leave Washington Friday evening for the trip, which will begin with a one-day state visit to Prague, Czechoslovakia.

On Sunday, on his way to Paris, Bush will pay a five-hour visit to recently reunified Germany. He will meet with Chancellor Helmut Kohl at Kohl's home in a suburb of Ludwigshafen.

After three days in Paris, Bush will begin the Middle East segment of his trip. He will visit U.S. forces in the Persian Gulf on Thanksgiving Day.

The White House will not discuss specific sites for security reasons, but Bush is expected to visit forces both on a naval vessel and in desert encampments in Saudi Arabia.

Bush will wind up the eight-day trip with a stop in Cairo, Egypt, on Friday, where he will meet with Egyptian President Hosni Mubarak.

Sancibrian recognized for excellence

The University Daily

Sherry Sancibrian, professor and clinic director of the Texas Tech Speech/Language/Hearing Clinic, is the fifth and final faculty member honored during Faculty Recognition Week.

Sancibrian is coordinator of the Lubbock Cleft Palate Team and president of the Tech Speech/Language/Hearing Association. The professor is also a speech/language pathologist for ACCESS, an interdisciplinary evaluation team for augmentative communication. Sancibrian is a member of the State Task Force on Technology-related Assistance.

She provides assessment and intervention primarily in the areas of language and learning disabilities, augmentative communication, non-verbal preschoolers and early childhood intervention strategies. She has made more than 60 presentations across the state dealing with her field of study and research.

Dealing with speech/language pathology, Sancibrian has had various articles and reviews published. She is also the past president of the South Plains Speech/Language/Hearing Association.

The Lubbock Interagency Action Council and the LISD Health Advisory Committee are two of the service committees in which Sancibrian is a member.

After earning a bachelor's degree in education at Tech in 1976, Sancibrian earned a master's degree in speech pathology and audiology at Tech in 1978. In the summer 1978, she served as a research assistant at Tech for the Research and Training Center in Mental Retardation.

Sancibrian's office door will be decorated by Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa to celebrate her contributions to Tech.

Lawless speaks to Tech Senate on progression of university

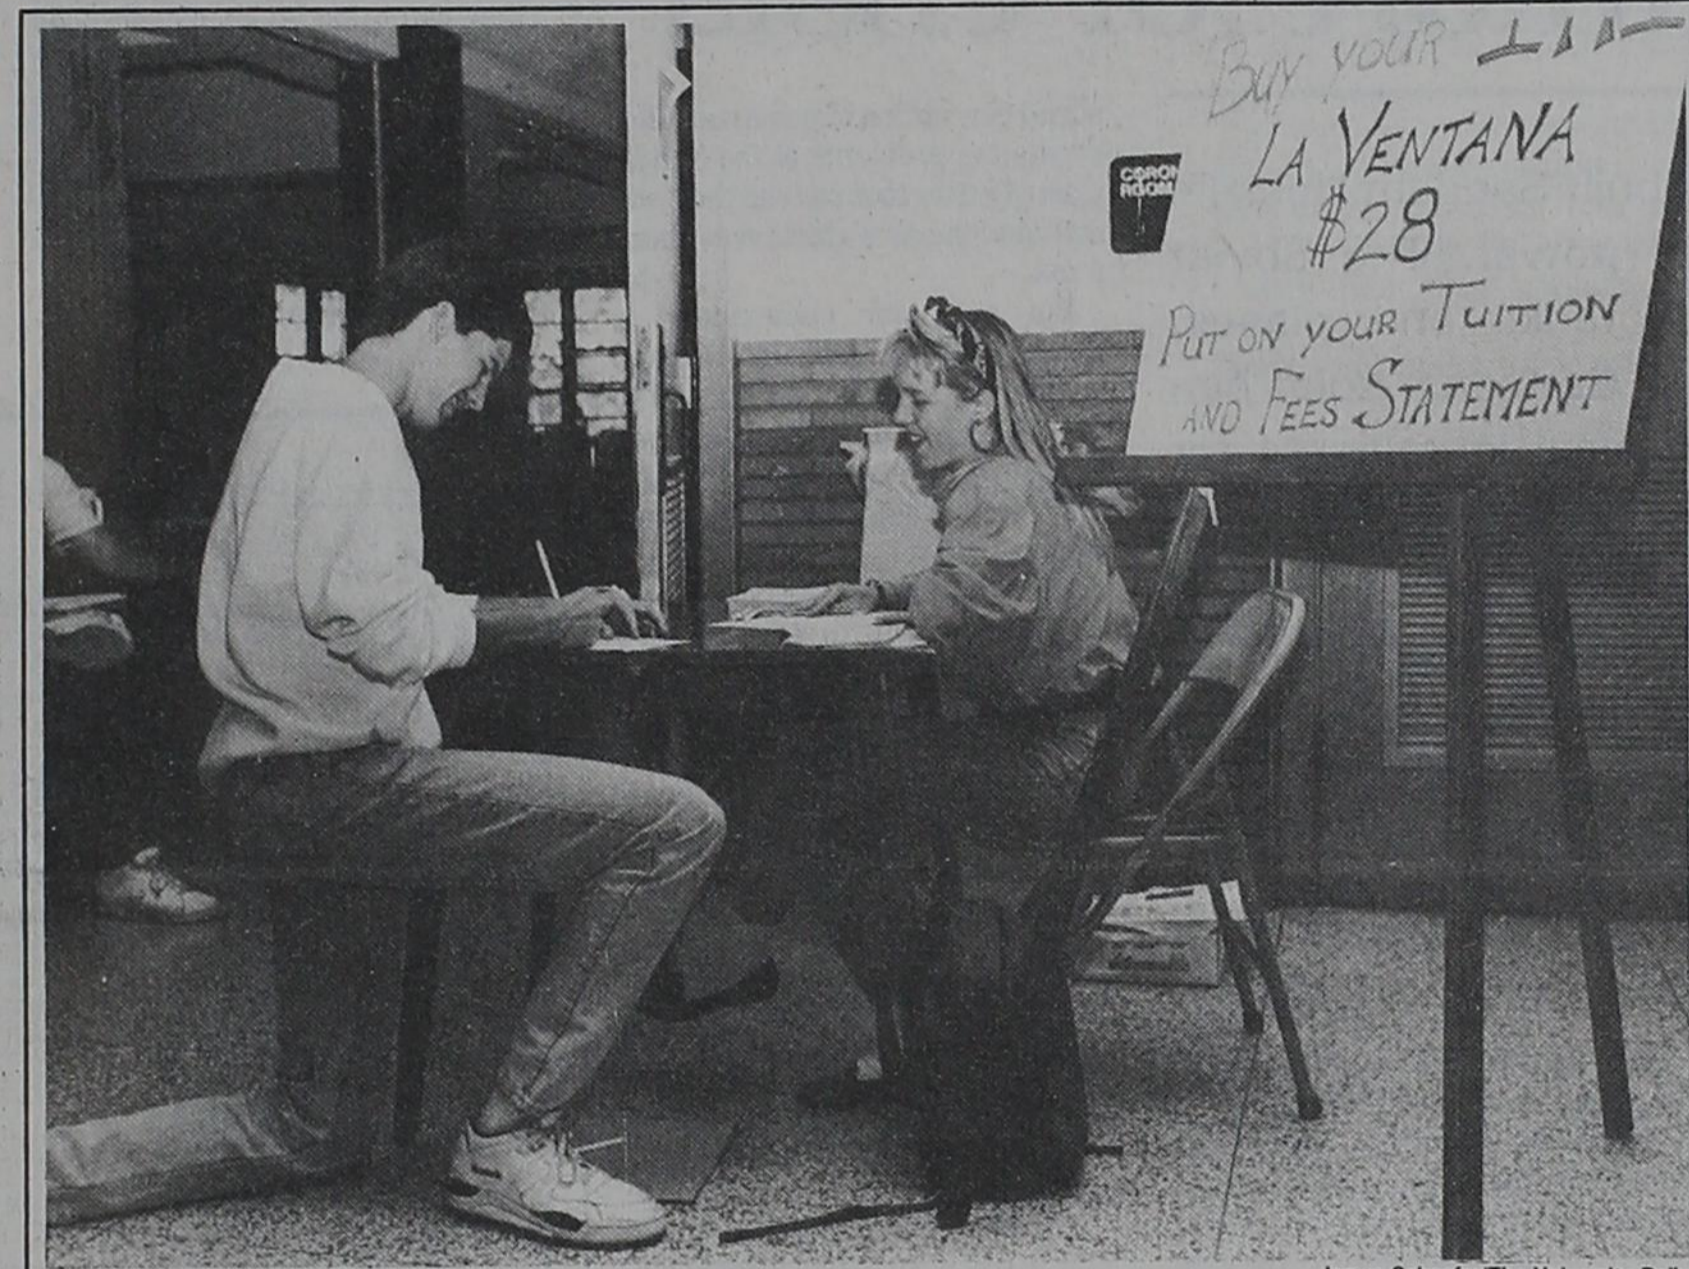

By JENNIFER SANDER
The University Daily

Robert Lawless, president of Texas Tech, spoke to the Student Senate Thursday night about the progression of the university and the ranking Tech has due to new student admissions.

"I think things are continuing to move in the right direction," Lawless said. "Still, about the time it seems we are one step up, some publication puts us a step down."

Lawless was referring to a U.S. News And World Report ranking of Southwest Conference universities. The universities were ranked according to average scores on the SAT and ACT of entering freshmen, the percent of freshmen in the top 10 percent, and the acceptance rate each semester. Tech was placed ninth when compared to the other eight schools in the Southwest Conference.

Shuttle blasts off from cover of night on secret military mission

By The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. — Atlantis lit up the sky in a rare launch in darkness Thursday as it streaked into orbit on a secret military mission that reportedly will send a satellite to spy on Iraq.

The shuttle thundered from its oceanside launch pad at 6:48 p.m. EST, trailed by a 700-foot-pillar of flame. On board were five astronauts who will deploy the satellite during the flight.

Mission control's Jeff Carr described the launch as "picture perfect, absolutely no anomalies to report." He said the mission commander described the liftoff as "spectacular."

The 100-ton spaceship was visible for miles as it rocketed into the nighttime sky.

It was the fifth after-dark launch in 37 shuttle flights. It also was NASA's fifth launch for 1990 and the seventh and probably last Pentagon mission to be shrouded in secrecy.

Two minutes into the flight, Atlantis' two solid fuel rockets burned out and dropped into the Atlantic Ocean. The shuttle reached an undisclosed orbit 6½ minutes later on the thrust of its three main liquid fuel engines, and all public communications with the craft were cut off.

Throughout the day, high crosswinds and low clouds threatened to delay the launch, but the weather improved. The countdown also was unaffected by a last-minute problem with a unit at the launch pad used to cool the shuttle.

A news blackout has been imposed on Atlantis' four-day flight, during which the astronauts will deploy a satellite that sources said is to spy on Iraq. Experts believe it is either a photographic imaging or an eavesdropping spacecraft.

Atlantis carried a spy satellite into orbit during its last flight in March.

The shuttle's all-military crew, commanded by Air Force Col.

Richard Covey, has been waiting for months to fly this mission. The flight was scheduled for July but was delayed indefinitely when Atlantis was found during a fueling test in June to have dangerous hydrogen leaks.

It was the second shuttle to be crippled by leaking hydrogen. Columbia's astronomy mission was scrubbed in May when the spaceship sprang leaks during fueling.

During the grounding, the National Aeronautics and Space Administration replaced Atlantis' external fuel tank, plumbing between the orbiter and tank, and valve seals. In addition, Atlantis' military cargo reportedly was modified for gathering information in the Persian Gulf.

Atlantis, like Columbia, was cleared for flight during a fueling test last month.

NASA set a Nov. 9 launch date for Atlantis, but the Air Force delayed that mission because of undisclosed cargo problems. That trouble quickly was resolved, clearing the way for Thursday's liftoff attempt.

Also on the crew are Navy Cmdr. Frank Culbertson Jr., pilot; and Army Capt. Charles Gemar, Air Force Lt. Col. Carl Meade and Marine Col. Robert Springer, all mission specialists.

Profs discuss German reunification

By COURTNEY CHRISTIAN
The University Daily

Changes which caused the reunification of Germany flowed naturally because young people had a desire for freedom, a native German said Thursday.

Ulrich Goebel, chairman of the Germanic and Slavic language department, said during a forum on the implications of a reunified Germany that he thought the reunification was a good idea, and he will still think so 20 years from now.

John Gilliam, Tech economics professor, agreed with Goebel that the world does welcome the reunification of Germany. However, Gilliam said he was concerned about the short term economic implications for West Germany.

"The economy of East Germany is a basketcase," Gilliam said. "West Germany has an enormous financial burden placed on their people because the cost of rebuilding East Germany would shift to them."

In a 10-year period, it will cost more than $400 billion to clean up the pollution from and modernize East German production facilities, update the transportation and communication systems, support future unemployed East Germans, and update the East German education system, he said.

Implications of the reunification to the United States is hard to know, Gilliam said. However, the biggest effect of the reunification will be the withdrawal of the large military force. The military personnel will no longer need to be so large.

"United States military represents a source of income for the community. I have been told the Germans do not want us to leave," he said.

Gilliam said implications to the rest of the world are also difficult to perceive.

"West Germany has probably been the biggest supporter of the common market, but with the present financial burden of updating East Germany, it is questionable if West Germany will be able to play this role in the common market," Gilliam said.

Lawrence Mayer, a political science professor, said the success of democracy in Germany is a big question mark.

"Do East Germans really want the abstract values of freedom and tolerance that democracy represents? Or, do they only want the material goods the West has to offer?"

"If Germany is going into an economic crisis for the next 10 years, I am not sure how strong their commitment to democracy will be."

Lawless

of top students, Tech is trying to attract a large number of these students.

"We want a recommendation from high school counselors for top students to want to come to Tech," he said. "Many high school counselors recommend The University of Texas or Texas A&M, and I want counselors to think of Texas Tech first."

Tell us how you feel: Student Senate to consider updating reapportionment procedures, new methods

Nick Federspiel
Student Senate President

The Student Senate is required by the Student Association constitution to determine annually the proportion of representation in the Student Senate. The 1990 Senate Reapportionment Act is voted upon at the first senate meeting following the announcement of the official enrollment figures for the fall semester.

The policy currently being used was adopted by the Student Senate on Nov. 8, 1973. The Student Senate must update our apportionment procedures and establish appropriate methods and formulas as a result of two constitutional amendments which the student body adopted on March 7, 1990.

The first amendment adopted by the student body last spring was to increase the number of senators at large in the Student Senate from three to five members.

The second amendment adopted by the student body last spring was to entitle each academic college/school to at least two members of the Senate.

The 1990 Senate Reapportionment Act, which was introduced by Senator Elena Perales, will apportion the Student Senate according to appropriate methods and formulas.

At our meeting last night, the senate began discussing exactly what the "appropriate methods and formulas" will be. The 1990 Senate Reapportionment Act was referred to the committee on rules and administration for further consideration. The senate will consider the committee's recommendation and the 1990 Senate Reapportionment Act at our next meeting on Nov. 29.

The Student Senate is required constitutionally to determine the apportionment procedures. It is our hope to have input from the student body so we may make the best decision possible for Texas Tech.

We ask that interested students please contact the senate to let us know how they feel about the 1990 Senate Reapportionment Act.

Tech volleyball team deserves more support

Michael Catt
Student Senator

In case you haven't heard, Texas Tech has a nationally-ranked team which is about to begin post-season play. No, it's not Coach Spike Dykes' football team which won't return to a bowl this year due to a season full of hard luck. It happens to be the Texas Tech volleyball team.

Coach Mike Jones' 13th-ranked Red Raiders have a current record of 27-2, including a 7-2 record in conference play. The Red Raiders are set to play the University of Houston at 7 p.m. tonight at the Recreation Center. A win over the Cougars would give Tech second place outright in the SWC and a better seeding in the national tournament. However, there is a group of young women working (often behind the scenes) who deserve the thanks of both the volleyball team and the student body. Those young women are the High Riders.

The High Riders have been strong supporters of women's athletics since their founding (which was almost 15 years ago). Even through the rough seasons, the High Riders have been there to roll out a red carpet to send the team off on a road trip as well as welcoming them back home upon their return. They have been there with their banners to cheer the team on at home when the rest of the bleachers were bare. In short, they have been ideal fans.

This season has put the High Riders and the Red Raiders in a dilemma. With the remarkable season that the team is enjoying this year, the crowds are larger than ever before. The Rec Center has been packed for their games — especially for rivals such as the University of Texas. The fact is that the turnout for many of their games has been so great that the High Riders themselves have had trouble finding room to cheer on the team. The fact is that the Rec Center has had trouble finding room to accommodate everyone. Solution: the Red Raiders must have a larger place to play.

Don't get me wrong. Rec Center personnel have done everything they can to try to keep everybody happy. They have been faced with the problem of keeping the building what it is, a student service for students, as well as blocking off a section in order to accommodate the volleyball games. They have been gracious in their efforts, but the fact remains that the team needs to play in a larger, better location.

You can help the situation as a student and a fan. Go to the game tonight and have a good time rooting the team to victory. If enough people are there supporting the team, the athletic department will have no choice but to move the games elsewhere. Alternatives to the Rec have been discussed — such as the coliseum or the Athletic Training Center.

Whatever the case may be, the athletic department must act to the needs presented by the Red Raiders and their fans. The success and support of the team have certainly warranted that.

“ The fact is that the Rec Center has had trouble finding room to accommodate everyone. Solution: the Red Raiders must have a larger place to play. ”

U.S. faces nightmare of crisis

A.M. Rosenthal
Columnist

So often, the worst thing about a nightmare is waking up, remembering that you have had the same dreadful dream before, and knowing that you will have it again.

And of course you do. The confusions and mistakes of life that created the terror of the night have not been worked out, so it returns.

Sadly, the errors of U.S. policy that did so much to create the Saddam Hussein nightmare have not been faced in the daylight by our leaders. So we are in danger of making them again.

Only the president can free the country of the nightmare — by telling the truth about the past and looking into the future with every bit of intellectual and political candor in him.

Until Bush does it, at least we can tell ourselves some truths, as close to the bone as we can get.

One truth: Saddam Hussein is a neighborhood killer who rose to regional power with the help of Arab governments that did not care what he did as long as he left their own necks unsplit.

Second truth: Then the major nations built him into a first class military power. The Soviet Union stuffed him with tanks and planes, France shipped missiles, Germans sold him equipment and basic chemical ingredients for poison gas weapons.

A disgustingly long roster of

“ Then the major nations built Saddam Hussein into a first class military power. The Soviet Union stuffed him with tanks and planes, France shipped missiles, Germans sold him equipment and basic chemical ingredients for poison gas weapons.

A disgustingly long roster of countries delivered technology and material for the nuclear weapon power he will have in a couple of years. The United States is on that list — a particularly ugly part of the nightmare.

countries delivered technology and material for the nuclear weapon power he will have in a couple of years. The United States is on that list — a particularly ugly part of the nightmare.

Third truth: Appeasement was the key to U.S. policy on Iraq. U.S. policy was based on the theory held by officials in the State and Commerce Departments, White House and National Security Council that we should help the vicious, aggressive Iraqi tyranny as counter to the vicious, aggressive Iranian tyranny.

Sick — but even so, why appeasement continued after the Iran-Iraq war ended should provide work for journalists and Congress.

Fourth: An influential number of U.S. officials and some members of Congress were willing to strengthen a fascist power, the only appropriate description of Saddam Hussein's Iraq.

Democracy, human rights, the First Amendment concepts of the U.S. Constitution — all nonsense, sentimental garbage to the Washington officials, U.S. ambassadors and congressmen who licked Saddam Hussein's boots.

This is the fifth bone truth: Still in office are officials who were part of the policy, from Secretary of State James Baker down.

Some of them will spend their days trying to justify and repeat appeasement of Middle East fascism — as will the like-minded journalists and academics.

They believe that since Saddam is "not as bad" as Hitler or Stalin, the principle of non-appeasement is repealed. So they talk of "containing" him with terrified Arab regimes.

But the brutality, weakness and social corruption of our Arab allies create the problems of the Middle East. Left to themselves they will contain Iraq as a chicken contains a fox.

But even our commander in Saudi Arabia, Gen. H. Norman Schwarzkopf, took it on himself to talk about how destroying Saddam Hussein's government might hurt the Middle East balance of power, whatever that is.

The White House was not amused, but who wants to smack down a general on election eve?

It's no wonder that throughout the United States, Americans are confused as to why we are guarding archaic despots from an up-to-date despot.

Bush tries so hard to psych out Saddam Hussein that he bewilders his own countrymen. Many believe that the benefits of the only way to end the nightmare — wiping out Iraq's missile, nuclear and chemical weapon installations — are not worth casualties.

If Bush believes that, he should get the troops home by Thanksgiving instead of visiting them.

But he does have to say clearly whether destruction of Iraqi missiles, chemical weapons and nuclear power is in U.S. interests and worth fighting for now, if need be.

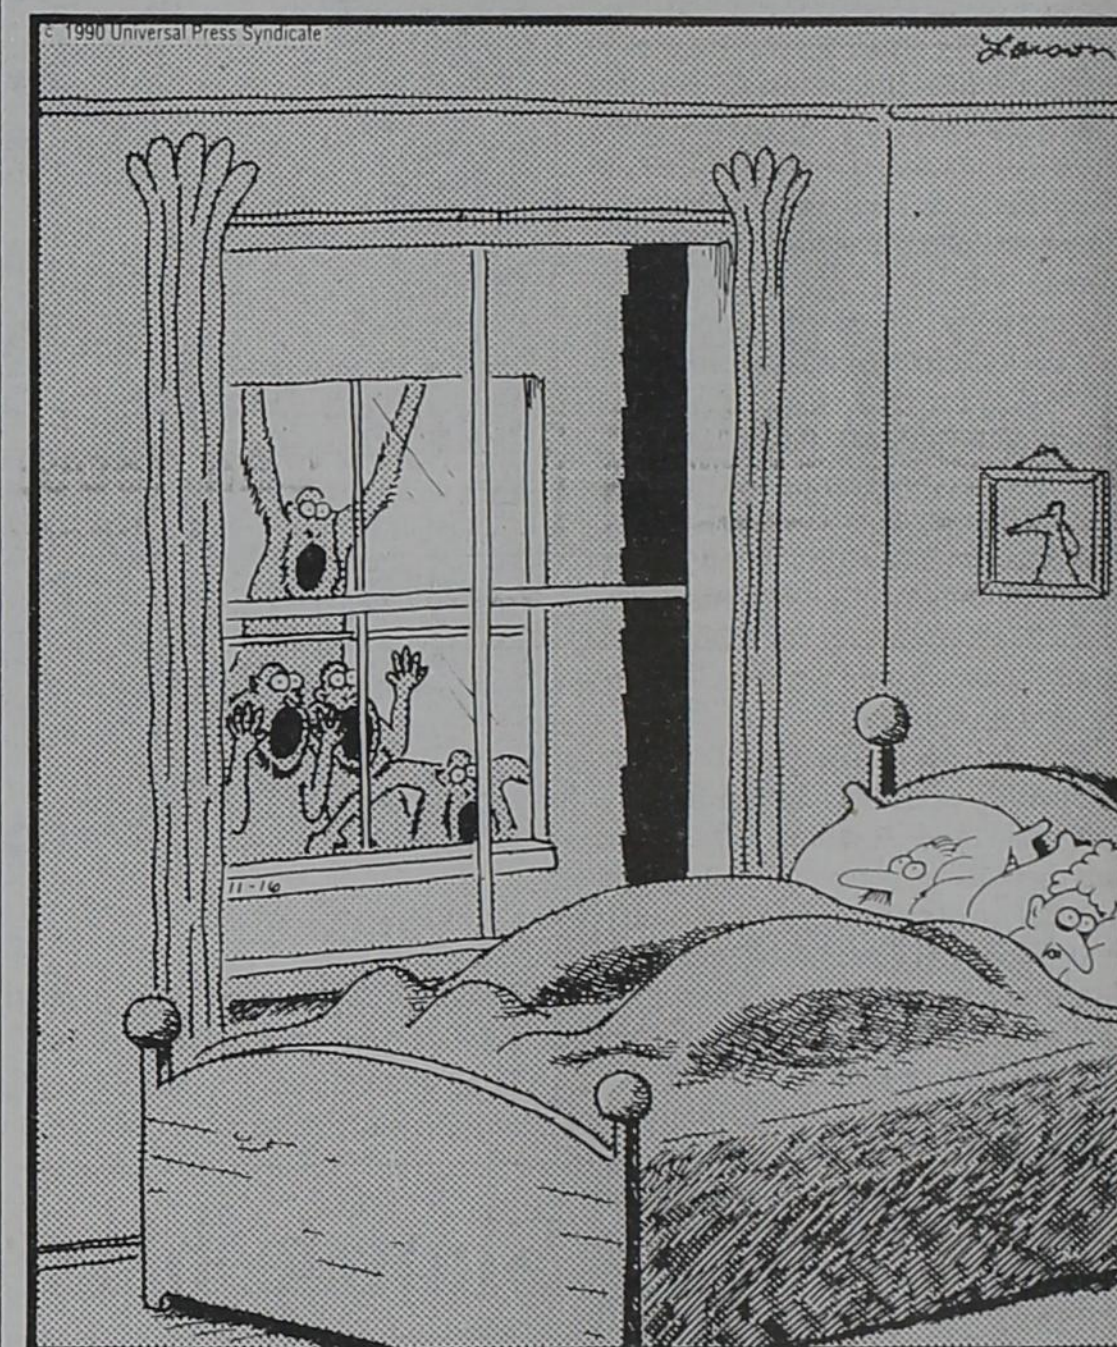

Or does he want to wait until Saddam Hussein actually develops nuclear bombs and then ask the Israelis to go get him again — if they can.

U.S. soldiers are entitled to know they are sharing Thanksgiving with the president in the desert for a purpose they can support, or whether it is all part of an unresolved American nightmare.

TODAY'S QUESTION

Do you like living in Lubbock? Why or why not?

Reporter: Courtney Christian

Photographer: James Schaefer

Deril Farris, Freshman Fashion Design Denver, Colo.

I like Lubbock because the people that you do meet usually become good friends. I hate it too, because there is nothing to do but be with your friends. The weather changes too much.

Ross Davis, Junior Therapeutic Recreation Amarillo

I like living on campus, but as for the town, I don't like the wind, dirt, road systems or the drainage systems. The roads flood. Also, you can't go down to 7-11 and buy a beer.

Keith Moon, Senior Mechanical Technology Houston

I like living here because the weather is pretty decent, usually. But, the area is not that great. There is not much to do outdoors. It's too far from the surf.

Cyndi Rankin, Sophomore Early Child Development Spur

Lubbock is a nice place to live, but people here are not as concerned about the environment as they should be. It stresses me that Lubbock does not have a standard recycling program.

Scotty Wallace, Sophomore Agricultural Economics Lorenzo

I like living in Lubbock because I have lots of friends here, and I pretty much know what is going on. The people here are a lot friendlier than other places.

Program provides help for illiterate

By MINDY HURT
The University Daily

A volunteer tutoring program at the Lubbock Mahon Library provides an opportunity for illiterate adults to learn to read.

An estimated 30,000 adults in Lubbock County are illiterate, according to a 1988 Lubbock Area Coalition for Literacy survey.

One in three adults cannot read or write satisfactorily. Texas ranks 47th of the 50 states in lowest literacy, according to a Texas Employment Commission report.

In 1988, a Texas Department of Commerce report estimated that illiteracy costs Texas $17.12 billion each year through lost productivity, unrealized tax revenue, welfare and costs associated with criminal activity.

Leigh McPhaul, director of the library's literacy program, said illiterate people are unemployable.

They may turn to drugs or crime because they cannot get jobs.

The Lubbock Area Coalition for Literacy provides one-on-one tutoring for people with reading problems.

McPhaul said the program offers the right atmosphere for adults who are learning to read.

"The tutoring is great because the majority of these people need that one-on-one attention," she said.

"They were lost before. They need a small group setting if they're going to learn because they don't feel secure."

McPhaul said students must be willing to make a commitment to learning. "The hardest step students take is coming forward and taking that step of asking for help and admitting their deficiency."

Irma, a student in the program, said she was embarrassed to be a part of the program at first. Now, she is able to read to her children. "Now I can be proud of myself." Irma plans to get a job once she graduates from the program.

All classes are taught by trained volunteers. Kristine Martin, a tutor for the program, said volunteers must try not to discourage students. A positive attitude is essential because students are easily frustrated.

Martin said tutoring is challenging because teaching adults to read is different from teaching children to read. "You have to be careful not to degrade them."

The program provides a learning experience for tutors as well as students. "You see a whole different side of life," Martin said. "You learn to be real compassionate. We're fortunate for what we have."

The Mahon Library will conduct its next volunteer training session Saturday, Nov. 17, at the Garden and Arts Center. For more information, contact Leigh McPhaul at 747-READ.

Proper dental hygiene can save teeth

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

Most people are attached to their teeth and would probably do anything to keep them. Nevertheless, the two most common causes of tooth loss — tooth decay and gum disease — are largely due to inadequate or improper dental care.

Carol Plugge, student health educator at Student Health Services, said gum disease, gingivitis and periodontitis, is the leading cause of tooth loss among American adults. Yet, gum disease can be prevented by proper dental self-care, regular professional check-ups and good oral hygiene habits.

Gingivitis is the early stage of the more serious condition periodontitis. Gingivitis is caused primarily by deposits of plaque that adhere to the base of the tooth.

Plugge said symptoms include red, swollen, glossy-looking gums that bleed easily upon brushing. Left untreated, gingivitis can lead to periodontitis, a disease in which hardened plaque or tartar pries the gum away from the teeth and erodes the bony structures that support the teeth. Periodontitis eventually causes tooth loss.

Symptoms of periodontitis include chronic bad breath, a foul taste, loosened teeth and/or widening of the spaces between teeth as well as a sensitivity to cold, hot or sweet foods.

"Brushing is one of the most important things we can do to keep our teeth healthy and cavity free," she said. "Brushing the right way takes no more time than brushing the wrong way."

Basic techniques include using a soft-bristled brush and brushing each area 15 to 20 times before moving to adjacent teeth.

For outside surfaces, place the brush horizontally at a slight upward angle against the gum line. Brush lightly back and forth without scrubbing too hard.

For inside surfaces of the upper front teeth, place the brush vertically against the teeth, using short downward strokes over gums as well as teeth. For the lower front teeth, use short upward strokes. For the inside back teeth, use short angled strokes.

For the chewing surfaces of the teeth, back and forth motions should be used for both upper and lower teeth.

Flossing your teeth daily also helps remove food particles and plaque that can lead to tooth decay and gum disease, Plugge said.

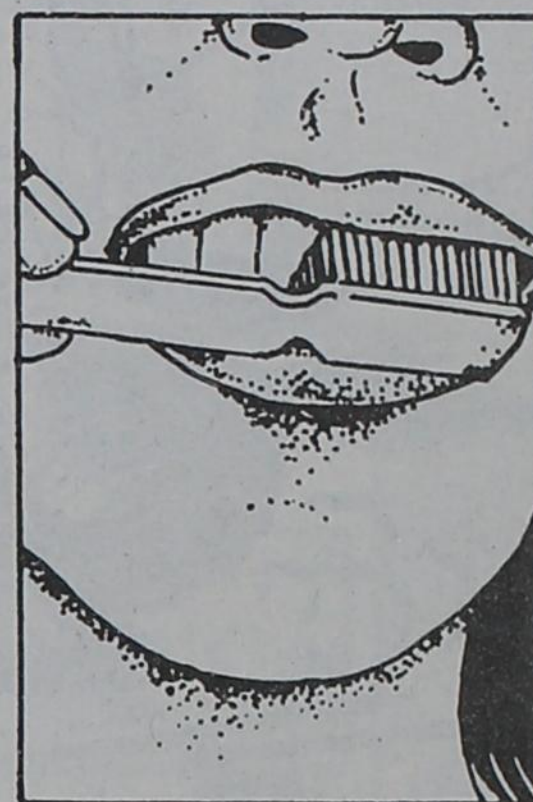

"Flossing only takes a few minutes, but it can make the difference between keeping your teeth or losing them," she said.

Ideally, one should floss whenever brushing, Plugge said. A person should try to floss before going to bed at night.

To floss, wrap most of one to two feet of dental floss around the middle or forefinger of one hand, and the rest of the string around the same finger on the other hand. Hold a one-inch section of floss between your thumbs and forefinger and use a gentle sawing motion to slide the floss between two teeth.

Plugge said that at the gum line, gently slide the floss around the bottom of the tooth until resistance is felt. Use an up-and-down motion to wipe plaque from the side of each tooth.

The following tips can help a person care for his or her teeth to keep them for life:

- Avoid sticky sweets such as honey, candy and pastries that adhere to the teeth and "feed" decay-causing bacteria.
- When eating sweets, eat them as part of a meal and be sure to brush afterwards.
- Brush thoroughly a minimum of twice a day — ideally, after each meal.
- Replace worn tooth brushes — they will not clean teeth properly.
- Use a fluoride toothpaste.
- Floss between teeth a minimum of once a day before going to bed.
- Have teeth cleaned professionally by a dentist or hygienist at least once a year to remove tartar that brushing and flossing can not dislodge.
- Have annual dental check-ups and keep on smiling.

CNN demands FBI return Noriega tapes

ATLANTA — The FBI said Thursday it had obtained Cable News Network tapes and was checking to deter-

Pickup presented

The General Motors Corporation of Detroit is donating a pickup truck to a Texas Tech student engineering team. The truck is being presented for the team's project focusing on reducing the nation's dependence on foreign oil and using natural gas reserves in Texas.

The 1990 Sierra pickup will be presented at 10:30 a.m. Saturday at the Tech Engineering Key. As part of the project, the team will convert the truck to operate on natural gas.

mine whether they are Manuel Noriega recordings at the center of a court battle.

The network demanded the return of the tapes, which it said were obtained without a warrant.

The FBI said the tapes turned up in a hotel lost and found department.

CNN aired a report saying a box of materials belonging to a network reporter had been taken by FBI agents alerted by Turner Security, which provides security for the office complex which houses CNN and the Omni Hotel.

The network said the FBI agents had no warrant and acted over the objections of a CNN attorney. It said it was demanding the tapes be returned.

In Washington, FBI spokesman Scott Nelson confirmed authorities obtained some CNN tapes without a subpoena.

"We were made aware of the tapes and merely picked them up for analysis," Nelson said.

The network said the Turner Security official called the FBI because agents had told him they were looking for "stolen government property."

The network said the material was not stolen.

Milli Vanilli did nothing but lip sync on 7 million albums

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — The rumors are true: Milli Vanilli — those dreadlocked, hunky dudes Rob and Fab — never actually sang on their debut album that sold 7 million copies, the producer-arranger conceded.

"The record company never knew that. I never told them anything," said Frank Farian, the German producer who turned a pair of anonymous pretty boys into an international phenomenon. "Later on, after the record was out, there were some people who raised some questions."

The questions were never really answered as the Vanillis won a 1989 Grammy for Best New Artist. Rob Pilatus and Fab Morvan became international stars, lip-syncing their way through television and concert appearances.

"Girl You Know It's True" and "Blame It On the Rain" were huge hit singles for the band. At the MTV awards, the boys boasted they were better than Elvis or Bob Dylan.

Farian — who has a new album with a new group coming out in January — said he was forced to go public with the revelations when the guys told him they wanted to sing on the follow-up to "Girl You Know It's True."

"I said, 'No. I don't go for that.' Sure, they have a voice, but that's not really what I want to use on my records," said Farian, describing the encounter that occurred earlier this month.

So the bare-chested vocalists once described by The New York Times as "exotically sexy" really did nothing but look good and lip sync for videos?

"Nothing more," Farian said. A telephone message left Thursday to the group's manager in Germany was not immediately returned.

Farian would not say who the real singers were but added that they will appear on his next album — not a Milli Vanilli album.

Actor combines talent, experiences to be successful

By CRISSIE McMENNAMY
The University Daily

The Bard of Avon once wrote that all the world is a stage. That is to say, there is an overwhelming tendency for people to engage in the art of acting, for performance and survival.

No one is exempt from this primitive behavior. Whether greeting the most obnoxious person with a pleasant "hello" or smiling for a portrait when the photographer snapping the shot is almost as irritating as your crawling underwear, we all participate in acting.

There are those, however, who choose to take their acting talent to the very realm of its existence and devote both time and effort to becoming an actor. One such individual is Steven Earl-Edwards, a Ph.D student in theater management and playwrighting at Texas Tech, who attributes his success to life experiences.

"I think one of the only ways to excel in any field is to realize what you don't know. You have to be open to all types of learning experiences, not just those you believe will help you," Edwards said. "When you confine yourself to one idea or one teacher, you limit your future greatly."

Some of Edwards' opportunities to experience life have come from living, surviving and acting in New York City. He moved to the Big Apple 15 years ago and unlike most struggling actors, within three months landed a job.

His task was to introduce "A&W Root Beer" to the citizens of New York while standing in Shea stadium wearing a Yankee uniform. It was a moment that combined his childhood dream of playing professional baseball with his dream of becoming an actor.

"I was still a kid, and I was so excited. There I was in Yankee stadium actually filming a commercial. Of course that is the only way I could have ever made it to the stadium because my baseball certainly wouldn't have gotten me there, but I was there," Edwards said. "It gave me a really good taste for New York and acting, and I decided to keep at it."

Anyone who has tackled new experiences knows that achieving success can be a fight. For Edwards however, it has been more of a fight than usual. He is a founding member of "Fights R Us," a stunt organization which provides the destructive force for any set that needs it.

Since 1979 Edwards and his fellow "actor-combatants" have been responsible for nearly 75 percent of all action sequences filmed in New York. In particular, Edwards has appeared on the set of every soap opera filmed on the east coast either tearing up a barroom or falling down a flight of stairs.

"We really hesitate to call ourselves stunt people, because some people think of a stunt person as separate from an actor. We are actors who happen to be good at action," Edwards said. "I have found that being able to do the action part has enabled me to do things I never would have thought possible. I got to travel on the Orient Express in a murder mystery performance and take a week-long cruise."

His affiliation with Tech came before his decision to enter graduate school. Last year he choreographed the "Aggie Dance" for the University Theater's production of "The Best Little Whorehouse in Texas." It was not the first time Edwards had been associated with the musical.

For 14 months beginning in 1981, he played the role of Melvin P. Thorpe in the National Bus and Truck tour of the production. And while he readily admits that he considers live performances to be the purest form of acting, he also admits that they can also be purely demanding and tiresome.

There are those times when Edwards has debated throwing in the mask and giving it all up. But when he thinks about what he actually accomplishes as an actor, he always finds the strength to continue.

"When you sit in front of the mirror putting on make-up, you become someone else. And when the audience walks into the theater, they leave reality," Edwards said. "For a little while we both go somewhere else and leave our problems behind. If I can make you laugh, cry or think, then I have done my job. As long as I feel that way, I will continue acting."

The next step in Edwards' acting career remains uncertain. He is attending classes at Tech working toward his goal of owning a regional theater.

Many people dream of having the power to correct an injustice in the world, and if Edwards had this power, what would he correct? He would stop disrespect for our elders.

"When I was younger, I always wanted to be Merlin. He's an old guy in a long white beard and a robe who sits in the woods and counsels people," Edwards said. "We have so much to learn from people who are older, even if they're two years older."

King bends time, space in new collection of four scary stories

By The Associated Press

Time and space become malleable when Stephen King applies his own theory of physics in his new collection of stories, "Four Past Midnight."

King's stories emanate from the four corners of his unique universe. Each has its own life and depth.

The first, "The Langoliers," is a wild ride beyond the conventions of time. An ill-fated flight has a rare glimpse of where yesterdays go to die.

In "Secret Window, Secret Garden," a writer's imagination and personal guilt are placed on a collision course.

"The Library Policeman" finds common people in an uncommon situation when a vampirelike creature feeds off their deepest fears.

In the final offering, King's style marries that of Franz Kafka to create a nightmarish tale called "The Sun Dog." When a boy receives a Polaroid camera for his 15th birthday, he focuses on sheer terror.

The stories carry the power to transport the reader to the limits of imagination. They are captivating and show the definite strengths of King as a short-story writer.

LAKEWOOD, Colo. — Laurel Pupa has just the thing for U.S. soldiers in the Persian Gulf — an arsenal of humor wrapped up in greeting cards. Pupa's cards are aimed at giving both Operation Desert Shield soldiers and their loved ones a chuckle. "I hope the cards can help boost morale by taking a lighthearted look at a serious situation," she said.

reverse the intent and make them applicable for the soldiers to send over here." A former advertising agency copy writer, Pupa said she came up with the idea a couple of months ago. The cards, printed in olive ink on sand-colored recycled paper, carry illustrations by Denver artist Perry Hillegas of Rhino Design Co.

Then she tried AAFES, which placed an initial order for 10,000 cards after she reworked the sentiments to gear them for the soldiers, she said. Pupa said her intent is to show support for the troops. "It was one of those things it was worth doing because if it works it would be a really neat thing for the soldiers," she said.

Among properties seized were Nelson's Pedernales Country Club and recording studio near Austin, and his Pedernales Fishing Camp. Also seized were land and houses in Colorado, Alabama and Washington state, said IRS spokeswoman Silvia Tovar.

Tovar said agency rules prohibited her from saying whether Nelson has contacted the IRS or paid any of his bill. She said no date had been set for auctioning the property.

Nelson reportedly was in Hawaii and not available to comment. Neither his lawyer in Dallas nor his manager in Connecticut returned calls to The Associated Press.

But his fans are speaking out. "Public response has been there. We've had several radio shows talking about it," Tovar said.

White said customers at the Broken Spoke, where Nelson often played in the 1960s, tell her they want to help. After all, she said, "Nobody's got $16 million in his back pocket."

She and husband James are organizing a benefit dance for Dec. 2, contacting such performers as George Strait for items they might auction, and collecting contributions from average folks.

"We've got signs up that say 'Where there's a Willie, there's a way.' We've got a ledger where people can sign up and give a dollar or whatever. We collected $16 yesterday," she said.

Cougar roadblock impedes Raiders' tourney wishes

By BELLE MILLER
The University Daily

Coach Mike Jones and the Texas Tech volleyball team take another step toward earning an invitation to the NCAA Tournament as they play their last Southwest Conference match of the year at 7 p.m. Friday in the Student Recreation Center when they host Houston.

Should the Red Raiders (27-2) fall to Houston, they would be tied for second in the conference with the Cougars, which could possibly dampen their hopes for an NCAA Tournament bid.

Tech is coming off a win over non-conference foe Southwest Texas earlier in the week in a three-game match 15-12, 15-12 and 15-1.

With the offensive help of outside hitter Sabrina Zenon and defensive play by setter Sheila Solomon, the Raiders beat the Cougars in a three-game match on Oct. 20 when they traveled to Houston and won 15-5,

Ventura Ruegg

16-14 and 15-6.

Zenon racked up 10 kills in the two teams' last meeting while Solomon led the defense with nine digs during the match-up.

Tech, who has won nine straight, is currently holding on to the number two spot in league play behind Texas.

The Cougars are in third place in the conference after defeating Rice on Wednesday to improve their record to 17-12 overall and 6-3 in SWC play.

Houston's win on Wednesday gave fifth-year coach Bill Walton his 100th win with the Cougars and maintained its upward surge of winning six of their last eight matches.

Tech stayed at No. 16 in the AVCA/Tachikara Top 20 Coaches Poll and No. 13 in the NCAA National Poll this week.

The Raiders are ranked second in the NCAA South Region Poll behind Texas. Houston is at the No. 11 spot.

The Cougars are ahead of the Raider squad in team hitting percentage. Houston is third in conference competition with a mark of .170. Tech is not far behind with a .160 mark in league matches.

Houston is also ahead in the kill averages category with an average of 13.87 as opposed to the Raider's 12.58 average.

Houston middle blocker Latisha Charles was named SWC player of the week as she averages 3.63 kills per game.

Charles has accumulated 94 kills on the year and tallied 15 in this week's match against Rice.

The Raiders continue to lead the conference defensively as three Tech spikers help round out the top seven spots in digs averages.

Solomon is first in the league followed by middle blockers Lisa

Clark (fourth) and Chris Martin (seventh).

Zenon and Clark lead the team in kills per game against SWC opponents with averages of 3.20 and 3.03, respectively.

Tearful Archer calls it quits as Tiger mentor

By The Associated Press

BATON ROUGE, La. — Amid rumors he was about to be fired, Louisiana State University football coach Mike Archer announced Thursday that he will resign after the final game of the season.

He cried during his brief address. "What I did is in the best interest of the football team. It is in my best interest. I need to get on with my life. They need to get on with theirs," he said during a news conference.

The youngest college football coach in America when he was hired four years ago, Archer, 37, is 4-5 with games remaining against Mississippi State and Tulane. His career record at LSU is 26-17-1.

"To be a head football coach, you have to recruit. I felt like the report last night has killed recruiting," he said.

Chancellor Bud Davis and Athletic Director Joe Dean blamed television reports for making it impossible for

Archer

Archer to do his job. Archer said he decided early Thursday morning to resign, then waited until he could inform his team.

"I must emphasize that I was not put under any pressure to resign ... we leave here with our heads held high," he said.

Dean said that about six weeks ago he hired a national executive search firm to produce a list of candidates, should that become necessary. He said hiring the firm probably added fuel to the rumors that Archer would be fired.

"There was a very good chance that Mike Archer would have been here next year," Dean said.

Archer entered the 1990 season with a team that had lost 16 starters, including quarterback Tommy Hodson, the most prolific quarterback in Southeastern Conference history.

Two years remain on Archer's contract at $88,400 per year. The rest of his contract will be paid, Dean said.

Rumblings of Archer's ouster began last year when the Tigers went 4-7.

Archer sported the best first-year record by an LSU head coach in 1988 when the Tigers were 10-1-1 and went to the Gator Bowl. That was followed by an 8-4 record in 1989.

Television station WBRZ quoted unidentified LSU sources as saying Archer's fate was sealed after the Tigers' 24-3 loss last weekend to Alabama.

Later, Archer mentioned several times on his Wednesday night call-in radio show that his stay at LSU seemed to be over. He said neither Dean nor Davis contacted him before the show.

"I can say it now, because obviously it looks like I'm gone," he said.

On Thursday, Archer said the LSU football program needed to regain stability.

"In the eyes of a lot of people in this country, the way things are handled here is a joke," Archer said as a large group of his players applauded.

Archer would not comment on what he thought of Dean starting a preliminary search for a new coach. "That's between the three of us," said Archer in reference to a meeting he had Thursday with Dean and Davis.

Dean said a search for a new coach would begin immediately. The fate of Archer's assistants would be left up to his successor, Dean said.

Archer would not say if he had been contacted by other schools for a job.

LSU basketball coach Dale Brown, who attended the news conference, said Louisiana "has lost one hell of a human being" and blasted news reporters.

"I think you all help perpetuate this and I think it's a damn shame," Brown said.

Alydar destroyed after fracture

By The Associated Press

LEXINGTON, Ky. (AP) — Alydar, who could never quite catch Affirmed in the Triple Crown but whipped him as a sire, was destroyed Thursday after breaking his injured right hind leg.

The 15-year-old chestnut fractured the leg late Tuesday when he kicked the door of his stall, which happens to adjoin Affirmed's.

Surgery was performed Wednesday morning and "went so well that we were optimistic we could get him through," said Dr. Larry Bramlage, who operated on the leg with Dr. William Baker.

But Alydar couldn't handle a sling, and then the bone snapped.

"He began resenting the sling last night and was tranquilized," Bramlage said. "Today, it was either maintain him in a tranquilized state ... or wean him out of the sling. Fifteen minutes after it was off, he slipped and fell, breaking his right femur."

Alydar was destroyed at 8:30 a.m. EST and buried at Calumet Farm, where he spent his entire life and where he stood at stud since 1979, becoming perhaps the nation's most influential sire of the past decade.

His offsprings included champions such as Alysheba, Easy Goer, Turkoman and Althea. Another offspring, Criminal Type, is among the contenders for 1990 Horse of the Year honors.

Alydar will always be linked to Affirmed. The first of their epic duels began in their 2-year-old season and culminated in a pitched battle at the 1978 Kentucky Derby, Preakness and Belmont Stakes. Affirmed won all three races by a total of less than two lengths.

Alydar, ridden by Jorge Velasquez and trained by John Veitch, went off as the hometown favorite in the Derby. He came into the race as the 2-year-old champion of 1977 and winner of the Florida Derby and Blue Grass Stakes.

But Affirmed, with youngster Steve Caution aboard, took command in the stretch and held off Alydar's charge to win by 1½ lengths.

In the Preakness, Velasquez brought Alydar off the pace for another big stretch run, this time falling short by a neck at the wire.

And in the Belmont, the colts put on a classic two-horse battle in the stretch. Alydar took a slight lead, but Caution went to his whip to urge Affirmed to victory by a neck.

The son of Raise a Native-Sweet Tooth, Alydar won 14 of 26 career starts and $957,195. He was elected to the National Museum of Racing's Hall of Fame in 1989.

Texas boat tax called unfair

Mike Pender
Associate
Sports Editor

I was skimming through The Dallas Morning News yesterday, looking for Ray Sasser's Outdoor page, and when I finally found it (17 pages into the sports section), one of the headlines read, "Recreational boat owners angry about Congress' new 'user-fee' tax."

I'm thinking, OK, this seems interesting. I wonder what kind of fishing or outdoor recreational activity the money made from the new tax hike will benefit.

As I continued to read the article, the picture began to take focus. The $25 to $100 extra that as many as half of the boat owners in Texas will have to pay, seemed to have undetermined destinations.

Sasser spoke about people in the article, one a U.S. Rep. from Dallas, who seem to be oblivious to the actual meaning of the bill.

The representative was in fine political form telling Sasser, "The boaters should be mad; this is just one of the million reasons I voted against the budget."

Budget? What in the hell does boat user taxation have to do with the federal budget approved by Congress last month?

He went on to add that he feels it is a pity that Congress is raising the taxes of the normal Joe to fund the defense of Europe and Japan.

I may be totally off base, but how does the Representative know if this new tax hike is such a bad idea (if it can help with the budget) if he does not even understand what the "user-fee" tax is all about.

How can any politician not know what $130 million is going to be used for?

I have probably missed the whole gist of Sasser's story, but once again, sportsmen are being chastised and this time, no one is for sure why.

Now that I have thoroughly confused everyone, on a lighter side — the Thanksgiving holiday has always been a treasured deer hunting time, but this year you might want to get on a lake somewhere and hunt lunger bass.

Nearly every lake around the state is reporting above average bass fishing conditions.

Dallas' Joe Pool Lake and the power plant lake, Monticello, are reportedly bulging with bass.

Texas' pride and joy, Lake Fork, has produced extremely large numbers of crappie and catfish.

Around the Lubbock area, the city lakes are gearing up for their rainbow trout stockings, to occur in early December and the beginning of 1991.

Buffalo Springs is still experiencing low numbers of fishermen, thus few catches have been reported.

OUTDOOR NOTE — The Texas Parks and Wildlife Department said more than 21 million people visited Texas state parks last year. Approximately 21.1 million people visited the parks around the state last fiscal year.

Raider comeback falls short Tech's three-point shooting can't stop loss

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

Texas Tech coach Gerald Myers called upon junior-transfer Stacey Bailey for the second game in a row to work his three-point magic, but this time the Red Raiders were not so fortunate.

Bailey's three-point attempt with :05 left to play fell short, giving Australia's Newcastle Falcons a 77-75 win over Tech Thursday night in Lubbock's Municipal Coliseum.

"I thought we had real good effort," Myers said after only his third exhibition loss as the Raiders' head coach. "I'm not disappointed in our effort or the way our guys competed."

"They were five (points) down near the end and could have given in, but they played hard."

Senior guard Bernard Sausberry, who scored only two points in the first half, led an inspired Raider team on a second-half comeback charge that saw the lead change hands 10 times.

"I was a little nervous, but I felt like I was into the game," said Sausberry, who finished with 10 points and five assists. "I was so hyped up for the game."

Falcon guard Al Green, who finished with 16 points, shot a perfect six of six from the free-throw line, sinking two shots with :15 to play to give Newcastle the lead for good.

Sophomore Kraig Smith's lay-up pulled Tech to within three with :50 left in the game and a double-clutch Bailey three-pointer with :25 left tied the game at 75 before Green's free throws.

Bailey finished with 14 points, including a four of 11 effort from behind the three-point mark, and Smith ended with four points.

Tech faced a five-point deficit with 1:01 left in the second-half, but the Raiders would not give in.

Tech built a seven-point lead 13:16 into the second-half on the strength of back-to-back three-pointers from Bailey and Drex Butts, who scored seven of his nine points in the second half.

The Falcons got a big break midway through the second half when Raider forward Steve Miles fouled out, leaving the game with a team-high 15 points.

Newcastle entered the locker room at halftime with a 40-37 lead behind the shooting of forward Mike Johnson.

Johnson, who scored 11 of his game-high 20 points before intermission, sank an eight-footer with 4:17 left to play as the Falcons never trailed from that point on in the first-half.

Freshman Allen Austin, who also fouled out in the second-half, scored all six of his points from the free-throw line in the first-period to keep Tech close.

The Raiders took a 16-7 lead early in the first-half as Bailey drilled a three-pointer with 7:29 gone.

Freshman point-guard Barron Brown had the hot-hand for Tech early as he sank consecutive three-pointers to give the Raiders an 8-2 lead with 4:38 gone in the first-half.

Worthy arrested on prostitution charge

HOUSTON (AP) — Los Angeles Laker forward James Worthy was arrested at his hotel Thursday and charged with solicitation of prostitution, authorities said.

Worthy, 29, was arrested about 3 p.m. CST at the Stouffer Hotel in a sting set up by undercover vice officers, said Houston Police Sgt. Ralph Gonzales.

He was released from the Houston City Jail at 7:10 p.m. after posting $1,000 bond. The Lakers-Houston Rockets game began at 7:30 p.m., with former Dallas Maverick Sam Perkins starting for Worthy.

Worthy reported to the Summit at the end of the first quarter and entered the game with 9:33 to go in the half after reporting to the bench and shaking hands with his teammates.

Great Midwest becomes newest league

CHICAGO (AP) — The structure of Division I college basketball continued to change Thursday with the official creation of the Great Midwest.

The formation of the NCAA's 34th conference ends DePaul's independent status. The Blue Demons join Alabama-Birmingham, Cincinnati, Marquette, Memphis State and St. Louis University in the non-football conference which will begin play in the 1991-92 season.

It may also mean the end of the Metro Conference which now has four members with the defection of Cincinnati and Memphis State on top of prior departures by Florida State and South Carolina.

DePaul, passed over for an NCAA tournament bid last season with an 18-14 record, has been looking for years for a league that could help its postseason chances and simplify scheduling opponents.

The offices of the Great Midwest will be located in Chicago as is DePaul, but little else is definite.

Marquette and St. Louis came in from the Midwestern Collegiate Conference, while Alabama-Birmingham was in the Sun Belt Conference.

Louisville, Dayton and Detroit have been mentioned as early candidates for expansion.

Metro commissioner Ralph McFillen said Thursday his conference will step up its meetings with prospective members after the Great Midwest's official announcement.

Under NCAA rules, the new league will have to wait five years before it can be considered for an automatic NCAA tournament bid.

Raider seniors aim to finish on right foot Gregg's Mustangs aiming to ruin final SWC contest for Tech

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

When Southern Methodist squares off against Texas Tech at 2 p.m. Saturday in Jones Stadium, coach Forrest Gregg and his 1-8 Mustangs will again try for that ever-elusive first Southwest Conference win that has evaded Gregg since taking over the program in 1988.

Gregg enters this year's contest with an 0-14 record in SWC play, and a paltry 3-17 record overall in his second year as the SMU mentor.

The Ponies have not won since their first game of the season when they drubbed Vanderbilt 44-7 Sept. 8 in Dallas' Ownby Stadium.

The SMU defense has not exactly helped in the cause, giving up 43 points per contest, a mere one-half point better than Arkansas' league-high 44.5 points.

They are also giving up an average of 487.9 yards per outing, which is last in the SWC.

One of the few standouts for the Mustang defense this year has been the play of sophomore inside linebacker Bill Kiely.

The 6-foot-0, 240-pound Kiely leads the Pony defense in tackles, stacking up 116 so far in 1990.

Together with fellow backers Jason Bednarz, Michael Henderson and

Romo Rowe

Chris Collins, the SMU linebacking corps has accounted for 32 percent of the defenses' tackles.

Sophomore free safety Cary Brabham has also done his part this season, contributing 89 tackles to place him second behind Kiely.

Although the Mustang offense ranks fourth in the SWC in passing, they are last in the conference in total offense and rushing offense.

For the second straight year, sophomore quarterback Mike Romo has been the Ponies' offensive leader, completing 202 of 346 passes for 1,979 yards and 16 touchdowns.

Romo set seven SMU records in 1989, but his inconsistency in 1990 has placed him far below his 2,927 passing yards of a year ago.

However, Romo does have a pair of talented receivers to aid him in the Mustang's Run-and-Shoot offense.

Wide receiver Michael Bowen, one of the Ponies' few seniors, leads SMU in receiving, hauling in 48 passes for 408 yards and six touchdowns thus far this season.

Sophomore wide receiver Jason Wolf, an all-SWC second team selection in '89, ranks second in receiving behind Bowen with 349 yards on 39 receptions and six touchdowns.

Sophomore running back Rongea Hill, who has recently replaced last year's starter Kevin Love, is second in rushing for SMU with 376 yards on 68 carries.

For 16 Red Raiders, Saturday's game will be their last in a Tech uniform.

Among those playing their last game for the Raiders are flanker Anthony Manyweather, fullback Shane Sears, tackle Bill DuBose, cornerback Ronald Ferguson and linebacker Stephon Weatherspoon.

Linebacker Charles Rowe, also playing his last game at Tech, said his biggest concern is leaving the Raiders on a good note.

"I just want to go out with a win," Rowe said. "If we could do that to lead over into next year, that would be great for the team."

Tech opened as a 18½-point favorite over the Mustangs.

FAYETTEVILLE, Ark. — Oklahoma and Arkansas are both unpredictable and that's what Nolan Richardson says will make Friday night's game so hard to handicap and so much fun.

"That's what I like," the Arkansas coach said Thursday. "You come to the game, question mark, play ball. That's fun when nobody knows anything."

The 15th-ranked Sooners and the No. 2 Razorbacks meet at Barnhill Arena in the second round of the Big Apple NIT. Arkansas beat Vanderbilt 107-70 at home on Wednesday night as Oklahoma prevailed at home over New Orleans, 95-65.

Richardson said the Razorbacks would use the same type of forcing defense they used against Vanderbilt to take the Commodores out of their offense. The catch, he said, is that Oklahoma is as quick as Arkansas, maybe quicker.

"That's one of the reasons we try to play the way we play," he said. "I don't want you to come down and have my defense man-to-man against your great offense all the time where you have eight passes and great execution."

"We want to disrupt your game plan. We scramble. We almost send two people after the ball on almost all of our halfcourt defenses.

"I don't want to have to worry about anybody else and what they're doing; I want them to worry about us more. When you play a team like OU, I don't think they're going to worry about us because they play similar."

Richardson was at Tulsa before he took the Arkansas job six years ago and his Tulsa teams were 4-0 against Billy Tubbs' Oklahoma teams. In those days, he said, the Sooners did not play much defense — they tried to force the pace with their offense.

Now, he said, Oklahoma uses a variety of trapping defenses.

"I really enjoy playing people that I know what they're going to do," Richardson said. "Teams that run are not predictable.

"I don't care about X's and O's, you pass here and you go here and you pick down here because my defense doesn't worry about those kind of patterns."

Those things work only on the blackboard, not on the floor, he said.

He is much more interested in the names of the opponent's 3-point shooters and whether the other team crashes the boards with all five players and whether they force the ball inside.

He was quick to point out that Oklahoma has three excellent long-range shooters — Terry Evans, Brent Price and Terrence Mullins — two more than Vanderbilt had.

The Commodores made only seven of 31 shots from the field in the first half against Arkansas and trailed by 25 points at halftime.
