Reagan supports jobs bill

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Reagan gave his first public blessing to a multibillion package of emergency jobs and recession relief Tuesday as Republicans moved to protect their party's $4.3 billion program from Democratic "tinkering."

Reagan conferred with Republican congressional leaders, who then cautioned that adding provisions opposed by the president — and more spending — could sink the entire effort to pass emergency jobs legislation quickly.

The House Republican leader, Robert Michel of Illinois, said the GOP program could provide the first of "several hundred thousand jobs" by this spring.

"We must resist build-on, pump-up, Christmas-tree" legislation, said Senate Majority Leader Howard H. Baker Jr. of Tennessee, who told reporters that departing from what Reagan sees as "socially useful jobs ... would sabotage the package."

The Democrats, said House Majority Leader Jim Wright of Texas, "have no intention of sabotaging the package."

House Democratic leaders insisted, however, that they may want to revise the president's proposal, either by switching some of the funds from one program to another, or by increasing the overall amount.

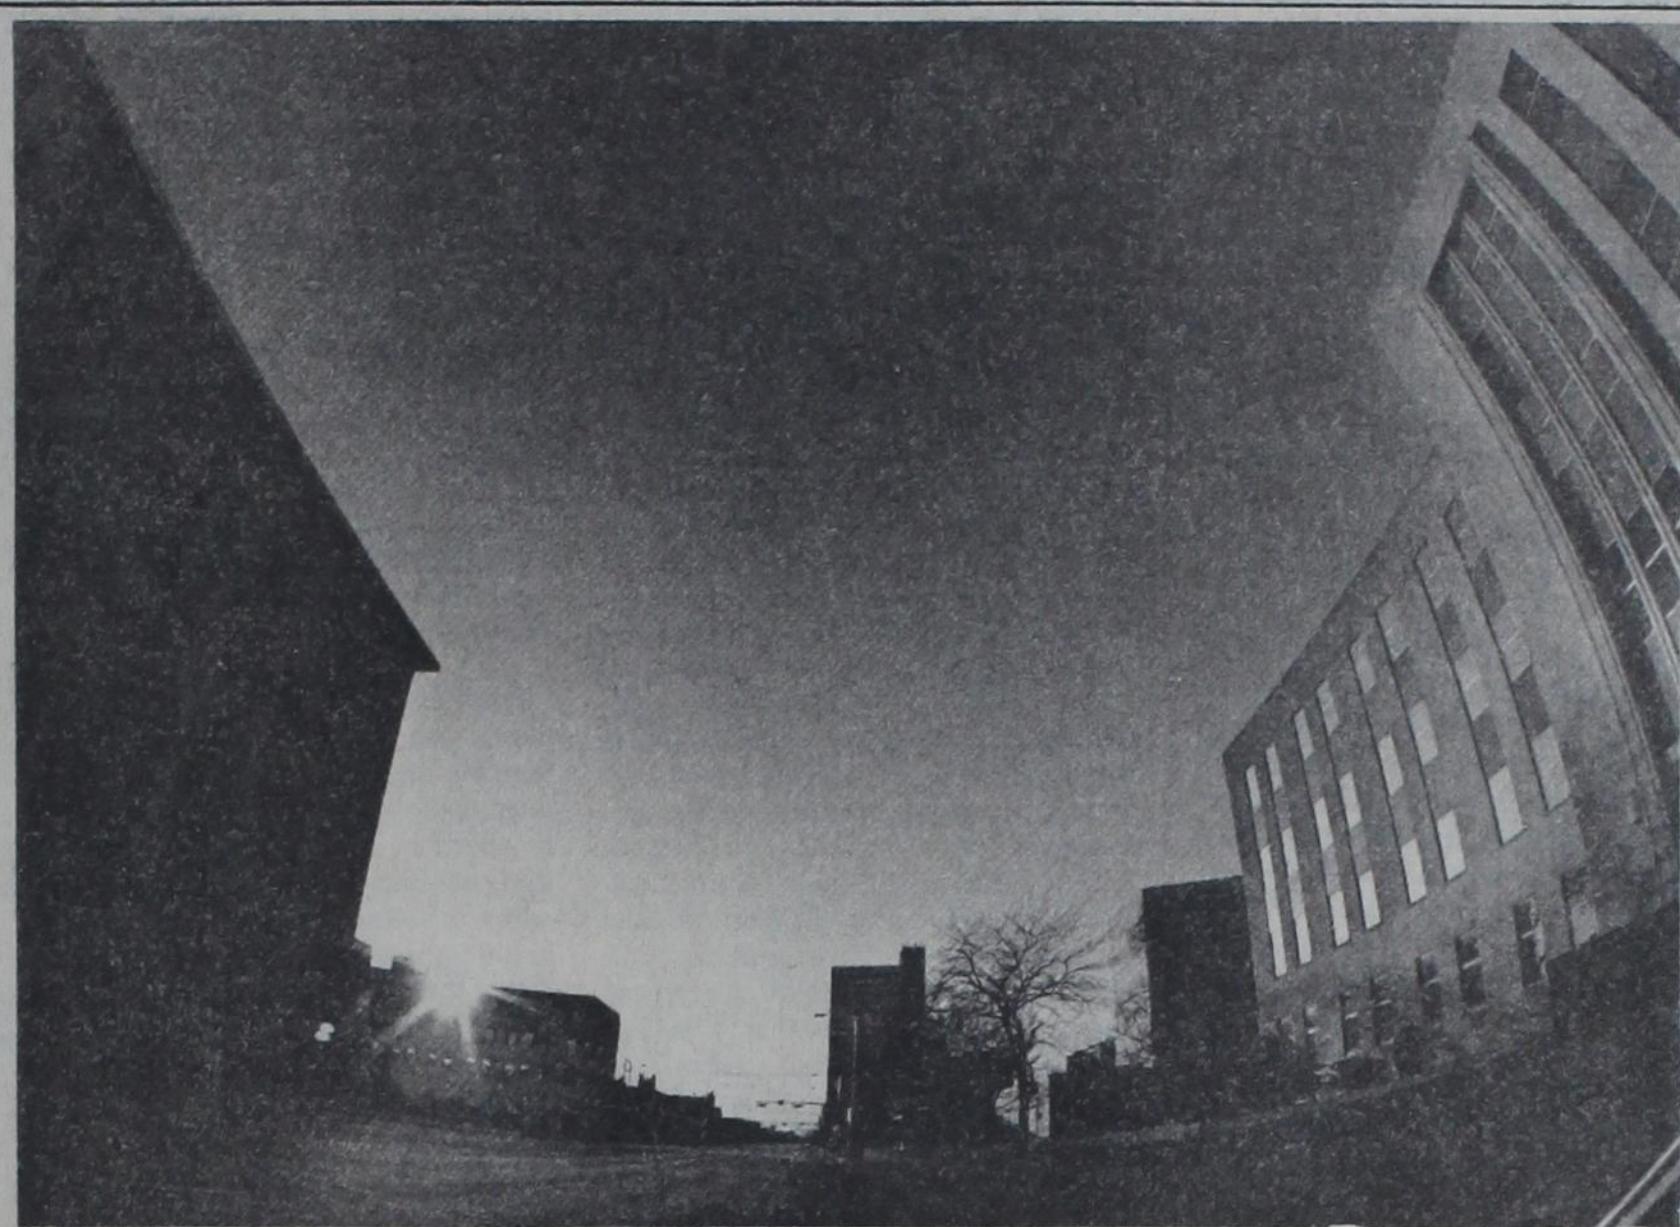

House Speaker Thomas P. O'Neill Jr., D-Mass., said Monday that Democrats might want to add as much as $1 billion to Reagan's $4.3 billion for summer employment, nutrition programs for women and children, and weatherizing low-income housing.

And Democratic Party whip Rep. Thomas Foley of Washington said White House aides clearly understood that may be the case.

Foley and White House chief of staff James A. Baker III were expected to meet Wednesday about specific items in the legislation.

Sen. Baker, meanwhile, sought to discourage Democrats from increasing the administration's proposal by suggesting other legislation could be used later in the year to increase spending on jobs programs.

Reagan, Baker, House Minority Leader Robert Michel of Illinois, and other Republican congressional leaders met for more than one hour with Reagan, who told the group that he hoped "we can pass on a bipartisan basis a bill that does not contain any make-work jobs but does provide on an emergency basis real jobs and on a one-time basis humanitarian relief."

Skyjacker strikes regional airplane

By The Associated Press

NUEVO LAREDO, Mexico — A gunman who commandeered a Rio Airways plane with 20 other people on board Tuesday and demanded to be flown to Cuba released his hostages here and was put on a plane headed for Mexico City, officials said.

None of the 16 passengers, two pilots or two flight attendants was injured, officials added. A co-pilot on the Rio Airways plane said the hijacker claimed to be an Iranian and blamed the United States for poor economic conditions in Iran.

"He wanted to go to Havana. He's getting his wish," said Frank Flores, the co-pilot of the hijacked plane. Flores said his understanding was that the hijacker boarded a Mexican police plane headed for Mexico City to make a connection with a Cuban airline.

The craft was about 15 minutes out of Killeen on a flight to Dallas-Fort Worth, when Flores and chief pilot Mike McNeil heard loud noises from the passenger section, Flores said.

They found passengers struggling with a man armed with a broken-down machine gun.

The man was carrying a torn-down machine gun "and he told us he had a bomb on him," Flores said. Flores said it appeared the man was carrying a Molotov cocktail-type bomb in the pocket of his jungle-like pants, but he said he didn't know whether it actually was a bomb.

"He wanted to prove his point. He was an Iranian, he said. He asked for no money. He made it very clear he had no regard for his own life," Flores said.

The man gave McNeil three copies of a list concerning his views of economic conditions, and said he wanted the list distributed to American news media, Flores said.

The man identified himself as Jose Gonzalez when he bought his plane ticket out of Killeen, but on a handwritten note to the president of Rio Airways, the man listed his name as Hossein Olya.

The check the hijacker wrote for his air fare was drawn on an Austin bank account belonging to Hossein Olya, the FBI said.

Senate panel to consider college funding bill

By ROBIN FRED
University Daily Reporter

The Senate education committee in Austin today will consider a proposal that would provide a dedicated fund for Texas Tech University and other public higher education institutions that do not benefit from the Permanent University Fund (PUF).

The House committee on higher education Monday gave unanimous approval to a similar piece of legislation, clearing the way for a debate later this week on the floor of the House.

The House resolution, authored by Rep. Wilhelmina Delco (D-Austin), passed committee hearings by a 6-0 vote. If the resolution passes the House and the Senate version also passes, the measure will come before Texas voters.

The proposed constitutional amendment provides for the allocation of $125 million annually for construction and rehabilitation projects at the 25 state universities and branch campuses not included in the University of Texas (UT) or Texas A&M University systems.

The amendment also would restructure the UT and A&M systems and fund branch campuses within those systems with money from the PUF fund. Currently UT-Austin and Texas A&M receive most of the money generated by the PUF fund.

Tech President Lauro Cavazos said he is convinced the proposal is the correct way to fund non-PUF schools, and said he is optimistic the measure will pass the House and Senate. He said the proposal is crucial to Tech.

"I think Mrs. Delco and the (higher education) committee did a superior job in looking over this legislation," he said.

Cavazos said he is cautiously optimistic about the legislation, which was proposed as a way to fund non-PUF schools after the ad valorem tax was repealed last fall. He said several obstacles still must be overcome.

Under the resolution, the $125 million annually (a sum that would be adjusted upward with the Consumer Price Index each year) would come from the first money entering the state's general revenue fund.

Cavazos said with current state budgeting difficulties the Legislature may be hard pressed to find a source for those funds.

"That's going to be a big problem. The Legislature has to determine where that money will come from," he said.

State Comptroller Bob Bullock in January lowered his estimate of expected state revenue, and Cavazos said another decrease may be forthcoming. He said the decrease in expected revenue concerns him not only because less money will make passage of the constitutional amendment more difficult, but because funding for schools also would be endangered.

Cavazos said if the measure passes the House and Senate and is approved by voters, universities will be able to plan expansion and construction projects in advance. He said the schools will be able to "plan a more orderly fashion to use their money" than if they were required to continue appearing before the Legislature to have such projects funded.

Funding for the schools named in the resolution would be appropriated by "equitable formula." The formula is to be set by a committee named by the Legislature.

"The formula funding part of the resolution is very important to Tech because it keeps us out of the political arena," he said. "Even though we are a statewide institution, we do not have that many votes in West Texas."

In a Tuesday telephone interview from Austin, Tech Public Affairs Director Bill Parsley said the Coordinating Board, Texas College and University System, probably will set the appropriation formula.

He echoed Cavazos' praise of Rep. Delco in helping the resolution to come before the House.

"We're very much pleased (with the House resolution)," Parsley said. "Mrs. Delco did an outstanding job of presenting the bill (at public hearings Monday)."

Parsley said some amendments were attached to the resolution in committee.

The first of the amendments prevents schools from using the funds for "auxiliary purposes" like the University Center or the Tech Bookstore. The second states that the schools cannot ask the Legislature for additional funding for projects covered by the resolution's appropriations.

Cavazos said a third amendment to the legislation requires approval by the Legislature for major construction projects.

The latter amendment was added when higher education commissioner Ken Ashworth expressed apprehension at the possibility that schools could complete major construction projects and leave the state to pay for their upkeep later.

UT system Chancellor E.D. Walker, A&M system Chancellor Arthur Hanson and University of Houston Board of Regents Chairman John Kolb all appeared at the House committee hearings to support the measure.

Cavazos also went to Austin prepared to testify on behalf of the resolution, but said Tuesday his testimony had not been necessary.

House Speaker Gib Lewis said the measure probably will be debated in the House later this week.

Cavazos said legislators still are trying to decide when the issue should go to voters if it is passed.

Some believe the vote should be taken in May so the Legislature can appropriate money for the schools if the amendment is defeated at the polls. Others say a May election would not leave enough time to educate voters about the proposal.

"We, as universities, have to educate the voters. The voters have to make the decision," he said.

"This is a difficult issue — we're dealing with a lot of money. I think what we'll have to do is inform the voters."

"Without this, we're going to really have a two-class educational system in Texas."

Romanian princess speaks on value of U.S. freedom

By TIM MCKEOWN
University Daily Reporter

Romanian Princess Catherine Caradja, the featured speaker recently at Lubbock Christian College, spoke out on the value of freedom in the United States.

Caradja, speaking at the Honor America Seminar, told of her years behind the Iron Curtain, communism, and freedom in the United States.

The 90-year-old princess, at a press conference Tuesday, said the United States should "start worrying a little more" about keeping its freedom.

"You (Americans) worried about Sputnik, so why aren't you worried now that (the Russians) are trying to arm space?" Caradja asked. "If you would worry with a result, then you would be safe and I could rest."

Caradja, who escaped in 1952 from behind the Iron Curtain, travels across the United States to tell of her four years under Hitler's occupation and six years under Stalin's communist regime.

Caradja said that while the depression in the United States was bad, the U.S. economy was nothing to be compared to in a country that had lost World War I.

"Have you ever been hungry for month after month?" she asked. "That's my complaint (about the United States). You take your freedom for granted."

The princess was complimentary toward the United States, citing victories in the world wars and the manned moon flights. There is nothing Americans cannot do once they set their minds to the task, she said.

Speaking out against the "Red Russians," Caradja warned about tactics used by the communists.

Lubbock death a grim reminder of toxic shock syndrome

By BECKY HOLMES
University Daily Reporter

Toxic shock syndrome, the baffling disease associated with tampon use among menstruating women, has not gone away.

The disease recently claimed the life of a 32-year-old Lubbock woman and served as a frightening reminder to many women.

Reported deaths from toxic shock syndrome (TSS) reached a peak in 1980, as the disease awakened many women to the danger of tampon use.

TSS results when a bacterium known as staphylococcus aureus is present in the vagina, said Lubbock internist Dr. Scott Robins. The bacterium generates poisonous waste products, which are circulated by the blood.

"Toxic-shock syndrome affects about nine out of every 100,000 menstruating women," Robins said. "It isn't as unusual as people think."

TSS causes profound illness, Robins said. The disease is not limited to women, although 85 to 90 percent of the cases occur in menstruating women.

Tampons, especially those billed as "super absorbent," promote the growth of bacteria and irritate the vagina, Robins said.

"Women who use tampons have an increased risk of getting toxic shock than do women who don't use tampons," he said.

Symptoms of TSS are similar to flu symptoms, Robins said. Fever, nausea, vomiting, diarrhea, headache and mental confusion are common among sufferers of TSS.

A rash around the upper body is one of the first signs of TSS. The mortality rate for TSS is less than 10 percent, Robins said.

Low blood pressure can cause a TSS sufferer to lapse into a coma in which death may occur as a result of multi-system injury, Robins said.

Early detection plays a vital role in surviving TSS, Robins said. If not treated properly or in time, TSS can cause severe disturbances in the pulmonary, cardiac and clotting systems, as well as damage to the liver and kidneys.

Treatment for TSS includes antibiotics, intravenous fluids, steroids and any medication that will raise dangerously low blood pressure caused by the disease, Robins said.

In 1978 the first case of TSS was reported in a British medical journal, Robins said. Today physicians can study medical cases dating back to 1960 and find typical TSS symptoms at the time undocumented in the medical world.

The TSS scare served as a catalyst for lawsuits and eventually caused the voluntary recall of the Procter and Gamble tampon Rely, most frequently linked with TSS.

Although not as prevalent today, TSS can develop when a tampon is left in the vagina too long resulting in prolonged contact with the vaginal wall, Robins said.

"Toxic shock is a disease where diagnosis is made by exclusion," Robins said. "You rule out every other possible cause of illness before you find that it's toxic shock."

Robins recommended that women use sanitary napkins, not tampons, when sleeping during their menstrual cycle. On light days of the cycle, he suggested that women not wear tampons at all. However, if tampons are worn he said they should be changed often.

'Man's need for Christ'

Tom Dirks

This editorial is written to expose Dean Schaner's twisted and perverted interpretation of biblical scriptures on homosexual rights and to challenge Texas Tech students to examine the evidence first hand from the biblical writings.

The only thing Mr. Schaner has proved is his ability to ignore the historical, contextual, linguistic and theological evidence in his attempt to support his reasoning.

To equate the laws of nature with the moral imperatives of scripture — especially when the context demands differently — it is an inconsistent and contradictory means of interpretation.

Again to explain away the words natural and unnatural with examples like shaving, dyeing garments, regular bathing and scores of other examples is totally inappropriate in view of the context.

exchanges the natural function for that which is unnatural, and in the same was also the man abandoned the natural function of the woman and burned in their desire toward one another, men with men committing indecent acts and receiving in their own persons due penalty for their error.'

To say this refers only to temple prostitution is to miss the obvious implications of the verses and the broader context.

Another misinterpretation is in reference to Leviticus 18:22 and 20:13 where the Hebrew word 'toebah' is used to describe God's view toward the act of homosexuality.

The word meant something disgusting and detestable. The word was not used in connection with the ceremonial and dietary rules and regulations of the Jews.

Another error is the interpretation of close intimate friendship with those of the same sex in the Bible as homosexual relationships.

Just because there were close loving relationships in the Bible, there is no reason to believe that sexual love was involved.

To say that the Council of Jerusalem mentioned nothing of homosexuality; therefore it must be permissible is to over simplify the whole question that they were dealing with.

It is obvious in dealing with a subject like this there will always be a counter argument and appeals to this or that so called authority on the subject.

No matter what a person's desires or convictions, he can always find someone to support and justify them for him.

Lying hurts collective self-worth

H.P. Frisby

Why are people always lying to each other? What's the deal?

Have you noticed how much people are lying?

I don't mean the fun kind of lying, like lying with someone ... I mean that destructive vice that breeds mistrust.

I noticed it the other day when I went to a local restaurant. They said it would take three minutes to fix up a batch of fish and fries. It took 10 minutes.

I wasn't appalled, they had lied to me before — said it would take three minutes and it took 10 — about three weeks before. Therefore, I wasn't as upset as I was the first time.

People get used to being lied to and they begin to accept it.

"Oh, that's what happened before, I should have known they were lying. It was my fault."

Fool me once, shame on you, fool me twice, shame on me.

So I knew when the clerk said it would only take three minutes, it would take 10 — big deal.

But it is a big deal.

Do you realize that not that many people get upset when the government lies any more? They were all outraged the first few times, but they seem to have mellowed now.

"Oh, the MX missile is for peace. Well, I really know what that means — it's for war. Can't fool me."

So they sit smugly satisfied that they've figured out the lie, without really thinking about the real issues like "If those things are ever used, we'll get peace, because there won't be any governments left to make war. There won't be any people left to make war."

How about this to bring it a little closer to home:

"Oh, they say they've reduced the city tax rate. Well that just means they've increased valuations so they don't have to raise the tax rate. It really means they've raised taxes. I can figure that out."

Our educational system is full of lies and half-truths, too.

"Sure, if you major in this field — you'll get a job," we're told. And when that damp dawn comes the day after graduation, we find we're having to settle for less than we've been told to expect.

That's not to mention the little biases and lies that are actually drilled into our tiny little pea-brains:

• America has never lost a war and has treated Indians fairly. They taught the first before Vietnam. And in case you're wondering, we did lose the War of 1812.

• America has never started a war. We invaded the Indian nations repeatedly, started the Mexican-American War and the record isn't exactly clean when you start talking about the Spanish-American War.

I guess one can't really complain when we start lying to each other — after all the institutions which run our lives for us do it to us, why can't we do it to each other?

We don't get mad anymore when we get lied to. We accuse ourselves for trusting another person.

"Why, oh, why did I trust him/her? How stupid. It's all my fault. I shouldn't expect them to be thinking about me — they've got themselves to think about."

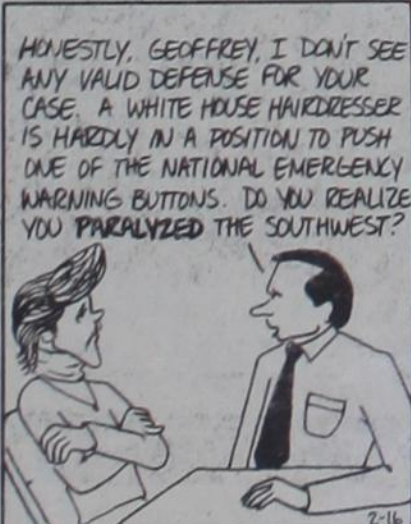

Our collective self-worth is taking a nose dive.

The next time someone says they'll do something and they don't demand to know why — whether it's business, government, the educational monolith or a friend — and the next time you say you'll do something, do it.

We have to help each other folks. It can't be done alone.

this situation have been of some help, but the central issue continues to be unresolved.

If we are to fully and unconditionally accept the concept proffered by many that life begins at conception, then this must apply to all fetal situations, not only abortion.

Let us now, with the previous idea firmly ensconced in our minds, turn to a fictitious, though certainly possible, situation that will illustrate the problem.

Embracing the view that life begins at conception, one could argue that the fetus, or embryo, was deprived of its right as a human being, namely, the right to life.

Before attacking this question on a superficial technical basis, please be aware that I know little on the legal concept of negligence and even less about the sciences of obstetrics and gynecology.

I would especially like to hear from those for whom the concept of life at conception is an accepted reality and, consequently, whether prosecution of the woman described is justified.

I am writing this letter in response to Dean Schaner's editorial (UD Feb. 11). Although I respect Mr. Schaner's rights as an individual to freedom of choice, Mr. Schaner must realize that the opinions he forms on biblical context are just that: his opinions.

Jonathan and Ruth and Naomi I find no overtones of anything which could be considered homosexual.

As a political science major Mr. Schaner should realize that looking at an issue from only one side gives a person a very limited perspective on that issue.

If Mr. Schaner needs to show justification through distortion, perhaps he should re-examine his own actions.

Now that I have received an abundance of phone calls about my necro-outcoming I must say now that people are gullible.

The Bible says (if you read it with both eyes open) that homosexuality is a sin.

Homos, necros, thieves, murderers, people whose god is their car or stereo are all under the same command in the Bible — to repent and believe in the Lord Jesus Christ.

I have a message for the gentlemen of CRAWFISH (UD Feb. 15).

So you think that the gay community should go out, buy .44 magnum, and blow themselves away?

Want me to tell you where to stick your flamethrower?

Actually, I should not be so angry at your violent nature toward another human being's sexual lifestyle.

Your alternative to this, however, sucks. You are the ones with no guts.

Once again, I ask the gentlemen of CRAWFISH and all of the other Bible-quoting people, GAY OR NON-GAY, to stop bickering back and forth.

Hereafter be it known that Matthew 16, 18 has been changed by Rev. Grover Stevens to read as follows: "Thou art Peter and upon this Caprock I will build my church."

"Propaganda is a form of war and you (Americans) are not fighting back. You let them tell stories about you and you owe it to yourself to protect yourself from that danger," she said.

"The Reds are having a bad headache now and I hope it will grow," Caradja said, in reference to Afghanistan. "I just hope (the United States) doesn't give them any aspirin."

A freeze of nuclear arms only would give the communists an advantage because even if the United States kept to the freeze, Russia would cheat, she said.

Pacifism is not an answer because if the United States waits until "they come to our shores," then it would be too late, Caradja said. Despite the events and hardships the princess has endured in her life, she appeared bright and quick-witted throughout the conference.

She suffered a partial hearing loss during her escape from her country, she said.

"They took my hearing and they took my poundage," the princess joked, explaining that she lost nearly 80 pounds during her escape.

Ariel Ricks of the Freeman Institute presented the General Washington Award of Excellence to Caradja for her work in promoting freedom.

Caradja still keeps an active schedule and will continue to do so for a while, she said.

"As for me, I'll go on talking. I have no intention of quitting," she said.

Student injured in collision

A 21-year-old Texas Tech University student was listed in serious but stable condition Tuesday evening at Lubbock General Hospital for head injuries he suffered in a motorcycle-vehicle accident earlier Tuesday.

Glen Roth, of 3306 25th St., was struck by an oncoming vehicle as he was driving his motorcycle west on 19th Street near the intersection of 19th Street and University Avenue, Lubbock police said. The north-bound vehicle collided with the motorcycle when the driver of the vehicle made a left turn heading east on 19th Street, police reports said.

Roth is a senior chemical engineering major at Tech.

Doctors cure immunity disease

BOSTON (AP) — For the first time, doctors have cured a deadly assault on the body's immune system, saving the life of a week-old baby with an experimental treatment called monoclonal antibodies.

The child developed the deadly reaction following a blood transfusion because of a rare birth defect: He had no thymus gland. But many other people develop the reaction, known as graft-versus-host disease, after bone marrow transplants used to treat leukemia and other diseases. Rosen said the new treatment holds great promise in reversing the often-fatal complication in these patients.

The new treatment, developed by doctors at Boston Children's Hospital and the Dana-Farber Cancer Institute, uses monoclonal antibodies to wipe out T lymphocytes.

PUC members resign from posts

AUSTIN (AP) — Public Utility Commission members George Cowden and T.G. Smith — two-thirds of the panel under heavy fire for the way it sets utility rates — said Tuesday they are quitting their $55,000 jobs.

"I've decided the best thing to do was let somebody else try to do it for a while," said Cowden.

Gov. Mark White, who has led much of the criticism of PUC, called the resignations "delightful."

Begin expected to defeat motions when parties demand resignation

By The Associated Press

TEL AVIV, Israel — Prime Minister Menachem Begin is expected to narrowly defeat three no-confidence motions in Parliament today when the opposition parties demand his resignation over the Beirut massacre inquiry.

Begin's coalition has a 64-56 majority that was strong enough to withstand two absences and an abstention Monday in approving Ariel Sharon's departure from the Defense Ministry. Monday's vote was 61-56, and today Begin is expected to receive about the same margin.

No-confidence motions were submitted by the two-man centrist Shinui Party and the four-man, Moscow-leaning Communist Party as well as the major opposition Labor Party. They demand that the Knesset, Israel's Parliament, oust the government for having kept Sharon in the Cabinet as a minister without portfolio. The massacre inquiry said Sharon should resign or be fired for blunders that set the stage for the massacre.

Labor's motion also goes in to the detailed criticism by the inquiry commission of the way the Begin government functions.

The commission, chaired by Supreme Court President Yitzhak Kahan, outlined indifference and mistrust in Begin's Cabinet, and it showed Sharon ignoring Begin's authority without bring restrained.

These issues have not been aired in the Knesset, and today's debate will set the tone for Labor's political assault on Begin. The party also plans public demonstrations to try to whittle away Begin's enduring popularity.

The Kahan report indicated Sharon had misled Begin with a rosy report saying that Israeli troops met no resistance when they invaded west Beirut last September after the assassination of Lebanese President-elect Bashir Gemayel. Though three Israeli soldiers were killed and more than 100 wounded, Begin and Sharon agreed on a public statement saying the operation was "executed without resistance."

The report notes Sharon and top military leaders made the decision to send Christian Phalange militiamen into the refugee camps where they killed hundreds of Palestinians Sept. 16-18. The report said it was a "puzzling oversight" that Begin was not consulted.

The report examined Foreign Minister Yitzhak Shamir's failure to act on a tip from Communications Minister Mordechai Zippori that a massacre was taking place. Shamir, the report said, explained that his inaction was shaped partly by Zippori's constant criticism of Sharon.

PLO may adopt U.S. resolution

By The Associated Press

ALGIERS, Algeria — One of Yasser Arafat's chief aides said Tuesday that the Palestinian exile parliament will adopt a "clear-cut resolution" on President Reagan's Middle East peace initiative at its meeting this week.

Abu Jihad, Arafat's deputy military commander in the Fatah guerrilla organization, refused to elaborate. But Ahmed Abdel Rahman, the Palestine Liberation Organization's chief spokesman and one of PLO chairman Arafat's closest aides, said at a news conference: "The Reagan plan has definitely not been rejected outright."

The 400-member Palestine National Council opened a week-long session Monday to consider various Middle East proposals, and Arafat's moderate majority clashed openly and acrimoniously on the sidelines with a Moscow-influenced, hard-line minority opposed to peace moves.

Arts & Sciences dean candidate expresses concerns

By ALISON GOLIGHTLY
University Daily Reporter

William Kelly, dean of the College of Letters and Science at Montana State University, said he would like to incorporate the use of computers in each discipline if he were selected as the new dean for the Texas Tech University College of Arts and Sciences.

Kelly is one of five finalists in the College of Arts and Sciences dean search. He spoke Tuesday to a group of student representatives from departments of the College of Arts and Sciences.

"I would like to see every student have the opportunity to experiment with computers in the discipline they are in," Kelly said.

Kelly said he has noticed problems exist with computer usage and instruction on the university level throughout the country.

Students from high schools are coming to college with an expertise in computers and they are expecting to build on it, Kelly said.

However, most schools have limited computer facilities, which do not allow students to expand their knowledge or continue using computers, he said.

"In most institutions there is limited access to computers and students have to wait in long lines."

Another problem is that a relatively small number of faculty have expertise in computers because they were educated when computers were not widely used, he said.

Kelly said in an effort to attack the problems, he would work to get increased access to computers for faculty members and to find ways computers could be used in research and teaching.

One student asked Kelly to comment on the effectiveness of teaching assistants.

"I've seen TAs that were more effective than faculty, and then I've seen some that were the other extreme," Kelly said.

However, Kelly said he thinks it is the department's obligation to work with teaching assistants so they do the best job they can.

One student complained about the language barrier between students and foreign teaching assistants.

"I think it's unfortunate if the language problem is so serious that you can't understand the teacher," Kelly said.

However, Kelly said he also could see advantages of having foreign teaching assistants.

Exposure to cultural differences and development of an understanding of different languages is going to become much more important in the future, he said.

Kelly said he had a "preference" for high admission standards, but he said he also could see benefits in less stringent admission requirements.

"There is a tendency on the part of a large number of students not to be as well-qualified when they come in."

Kelly said he would like to work more closely with the public school system to develop a better understanding of expectations of students before they enter college.

Kelly said he did not agree with one student's stated belief that more stringent admission requirements would decrease enrollment.

"Very often when you raise standards, some of the better students get turned on to it."

Kelly said he would like to see more interaction between the disciplines within the departments of the college.

The only bothersome point about the possible separation of the fine arts department from the College of Arts and Sciences would be the loss of interaction between the disciplines, he said.

Education program receives award

By TIM MCKEOWN
University Daily Reporter

Texas Tech University's Program for Teachers of the Visually Handicapped was awarded first runner-up of all the exemplary programs for education in North America.

This rating by the National Association of Teacher Educators praised the Tech program particularly for its outreach to teachers in rural regions of Texas.

The Tech program, led by Virginia Sowell and Vivian I. Correa, is set up for teachers who would not be able to take the course otherwise because of conflicting schedules.

Each semester, Sowell and Correa travel to different communities, sometimes as far away as 700 miles. The program is taught on alternating weekends to train students for consulting teacher roles, Sowell said.

The consulting teacher works with parents, teachers, administrators and other professionals serving visually handicapped and blind children.

"Job opportunities for trained consulting teachers to aid the visually handicapped are abundant," Sowell said. "In order to train more teachers, our program takes into consideration that many cannot take time from their teaching to attend classes on campus. So we take the courses to the teachers."

The course taught in the community is the same that is taught at Tech, Sowell said. Students are expected to develop expertise in Braille, Optacon and other communication systems used by the visually handicapped.

The "Consulting Teacher" program has been operating at Tech for four years and is the only one of its kind in the United States, Sowell said.

The award was presented to Sowell at the Feb. 1 meeting of the National Association of Teacher Educators in Orlando, Fla.

SA election to use computerized ballot

By ROBIN FRED
University Daily Reporter

Student Association elections at Texas Tech University will feature computerized balloting this year for the first time, election commission chairperson Nick Depanilis said.

Filing for places on the March 9 ballot for Student Association elections will begin at 9 a.m. Monday and continue through Feb. 25.

A mandatory seminar for Student Association candidates will be conducted at 5:30 p.m. March 1 and 2 in the University Center Senate Room.

With computerized balloting, the voting procedure will be changed, Depanilis said.

To vote, students will go to one of 13 polls on the Tech campus and show their spring certificate of enrollment (the green enrollment card sent to all students).

Election workers will sign one of the numbers on the back of the card to verify that the student has voted, then give the student a computer ballot.

Students must vote for a senatorial candidate from the college they are enrolled in or their ballot will be disqualified, Depanilis said.

Election results will be announced March 10.

Musical fantasy set tonight in Hemmle Hall

By WILLIAM WATSON
University Daily Staff

Alice in Ragtime, a relaxed version of Lewis Carroll's classic Alice in Wonderland, will premiere at 8:15 p.m. today in Hemmle Recital Hall.

Alice in Ragtime is a co-production of Texas Tech University and Kansas State University.

The musical Ragtime portrays a young girl, Alice, eager to cross over to the adult world. As she dozes off, she is startled by the White Rabbit as he rushes on, notices her and escapes through a tunnel. Alice follows and finds herself in a strange world. Disregarding the advice of the philosophical Caterpillar, she peeks through a set of swinging doors.

Inside, Alice finds the Wonderbar, where life is bright and exciting. Characters inside the Wonderbar include the White Rabbit, a card shark called the Mad Hatter and the Queen of Hearts, who happens to be the queen of the Wonderbar as well.

The bartenders are Tweedle Dee and Tweedle Dum. Chessy is a nightclub entertainer and the Doormouse is a sleepy bar patron.

Alice encounters laughter, dancing, a crazy card game and a nightclub act. Enraged by the Hatter's affection for Alice, the jealous queen chases Alice back into the tunnel and the return to her drab world. Alice has a difficult choice between the two worlds.

Tech Assistant Professor

Diana Moore is the producer of the musical. The choreographer is Luke Kahlich and the music supervisor is Ron Williams, both former Tech students.

Kahlich is director of dance at Kansas State. He is responsible for the scenario, costume and scenery design, as well as choreography. Williams has conducted more than 40 musical productions and is an accompanist for several singers in the New York City and Washington, D.C., areas.

Four of the major characters will be played by Kansas State students. Lea Shroyer will portray Alice, Keith Banks will play the nervous White Rabbit, David Orlington will play the Mad Hatter and Linda Johnson will play the Queen of Hearts.

Tech student actors for the production will be: Elizabeth Reddell as Caterpillar, Kent Parham as Doormouse, Brenda Stubblefield as Chessy and Lisa Bumbela and Barb Israel as Tweedle Dum and Tweedle Dee.

Equilibrium Percussion-dance duo slated Sunday

Percussion and movement duo Equilibrium will perform a free concert of original music and dance at 3 p.m. Sunday in Hemmle Recital Hall.

Nancy Udow's dance compositions explore detailed rhythms and gestural subtleties in movement. She has been a dance instructor at the University of Rochester and Dartington College of Arts in England.

Michael Udow experiments with new sounds through extended techniques on traditional percussion instruments. He has performed as a member several ensembles including the Blackearth Percussion Group.

English actress waiting for more challenging roles

By The Associated Press

NEW YORK — Cherie Lunghi has a ready answer for those who ask what she's been doing lately.

"Turning things down," said the popular actress from England, who adds in some haste, "though it still hurts to throw a script in the bin."

Indeed, there's nothing impulsive about Lunghi's approach to work.

"I feel now that I can choose what I want to do. I've been in certain productions that especially appeal to me," she said, "and that's the drug I want."

Lunghi's in The Manhood of Edward Robinson, an hour-long film scheduled for broadcast Thursday night on public TV's "Mystery" series.

She's got nothing in the works right now, but that's partly a result of her new attitude.

"That's why I'm here," she said. "It's time to push the barriers out. I want to create new challenges. I'd like to start finding my own material, to find stories about women and by women, to dig down into feminist material for things that seem important to me."

Fender hits bad times

By The Associated Press

CORPUS CHRISTI — Country singer Freddie Fender, who had smash hits with such songs as "Before the Next Teardrop Falls," has filed for bankruptcy.

Fender, who was born Baldermar Huerta and grew up in San Benito in far South Texas, won the "Single of the Year" award for "Teardrop" in 1975, but his career took a dive after a 1981 traffic accident that killed two members of his road show.

U.S. Bankruptcy Judge R.E. Wheelers Jr. on Monday appointed an interim trustee to oversee the assets remaining to Fender, 45, and his wife, Evangelina.

"Freddie has a lot of talent, but he just hasn't been able to fight these circumstances," said Alberto Huerta, Fender's lawyer. "All he wants now is a new beginning."

Meux of San Antonio, said that he expects the singer to continue recording and performing. But he told the Corpus Christi Times that times have been hard for Fender lately.

In the next three weeks, Fender has a singing job at the San Antonio Jume, Meux said.

Fender has had bad days before. He spent three years in prison on a marijuana conviction in 1960 which effectively killed his fledgling career. Later, however, his song "Wasted Days and Wasted Nights" was a big hit.

He and his wife contemplated divorce. Meux said that the proceedings were very expensive and contributed to the couple's financial difficulties. The case was set for trial Jan. 25, but the Fenders reconciled.

Fender was not riding on his 1969 Silver Eagle bus with his band and crew Sept. 14, 1981, when the bus and a tractor-trailer rig collided head-on in New Orleans. The driver of the bus, Joseph Lambert, and Fender's drummer, "Little Joe" Parker, were killed.

Lambert's and Parker's families, another bus passenger, and the driver and a passenger in the tractor-trailer have sued Fender and his company.

The turnaround: How it happened

By JOHN KELLEY
University Daily Sports Writer

Not so long ago, the Texas Tech University basketball program was wandering around like a wounded animal in the wilderness. The team was going in all directions at once, jumping about aimlessly. Only one thing remained constant — losing.

Much has changed since those days in December. Coach Gerald Myers has eight players he can rely on. The team has matured, the players have received experience — many without choice. The thorn in know how long it would take. It could have been next year.

"They're still improving," Myers said, "but I don't want to think they've reached their potential. No guy on the team has reached the point where he can't improve."

After the rocky start, some coaches may have bagged the season. Maybe it would have been easier for Myers to call it a rebuilding year. After all the Tech coach had more excuses than a kid with a bad report card. Myers, however, didn't see it that way.

"I never did write this year off," the coach said. "If I had written this year off, I wouldn't have worked so hard with these guys. We would have had limited practices, and I would have started recruiting. I thought we had a responsibility as players and coaches to get better and work hard."

Some figured Myers might be to blame for the season. Suspending three starters (Charles Johnson, Joe Washington and Dwight Phillips) never has been a sure-fire method of securing the SWC crown. Maybe there is a time for discipline, but most fans — and coaches — place it directly behind winning.

"A coach has to do what's necessary or what needs to be done for the overall program," Myers said of the suspensions. "Some coaches may have done the same thing, some might have overlooked it. Every coach has a different philosophy. I didn't think about how it would affect the team."

As far as Myers is concerned, the ordeal has been wrapped in a Hefty, the twistee tied, and the bag set on the curb.

"It's not anything that I look back at as a pleasant experience," Myers said. "It's something no coach wants to see happen, you want to see them succeed. It's a hard decision anytime you suspend some guys. I felt it came to a point where it had to be done."

Many teams would have crumpled like a wet paper bag. The Raiders held on. Myers has but one explanation.

"The attitude has been such that I have been able to teach and coach," Myers said. "I haven't had to fuss to make them work hard. They've responded. They try to do what you tell them. It's an enjoyable situation. Any coach wants that kind of environment on his team."

"The key is good harmony," Myers said. "I enjoy working with this group. A lot of times when you face adversity as a group, it's going to pull you together."

Myers has not had a losing season since taking the Raider helm midway through the 1970-71 season, but the streak appears to be coming to a close this year. Ironically Myers' name is being circulated for SWC Coach of the Year honors.

"If I'm being mentioned for Coach of the Year, they should change it to be Team of the Year," Myers said. "I don't think you can just make it one award. It represents the work of a lot of people. It would be nice recognition, but it's not just one person involved in this team turning things around."

The turnaround, although noticeable, hasn't been monumental. Tech still will have to battle to make a splash in SWC post-season play. Maybe it's just a case of how one measures success. Not much was expected from this team.

"Three games ago we were just trying to win enough games to finish sixth," Myers said. "I think we got that far. We still want to do as well as we can. I don't think we're satisfied with where we are."

But many are surprised. It almost has been two seasons rolled into one for Myers and his boys.

Myers states his case

Tech women defeat UTSA

By LYN MCKINLEY
University Daily Sports Writer

The game began with as much sportsmanship as Wimbledon Center Court. Pre-game handshakes at mid-court, and lots of smiles made it seem like 60 minutes of basketball was just a formality. In the end, they brought out the rule books and left all courtesies aside.

If the University of Texas at San Antonio Roadrunners had their way, the entire game against Texas Tech University would be scrapped because of three shots awarded to Carolyn Thompson after a UTSA intentional foul. But it really didn't matter.

All the Raiders needed was a slap in the face to wake themselves from what seemed like impending disaster. The second-place team in the Southwest Conference isn't supposed to lose to a team in only its second year of existence.

But the protest seemed like the tonic the Raiders needed as they came alive and took an 86-76 win Tuesday night at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. If the game stands, the Raiders' season record will improve to 16-6.

Although a ruling will be made to determine if the game stands, Tech coach Marsha Sharp didn't seem too worried about the outcome. She got the only thing she wanted — a Tech win.

"There's a rule where you can have a three-shot foul on an intentional foul on a shot," Sharp said after the game. "I think the game will stand. You can't protest a judgment call."

But how the Roadrunners tried. In fact the few minutes both teams were off the court after the call gave the Raiders just the spark they needed. Tech trailed UTSA in the opening minutes of the first half. But after the rest, Thompson and Co. got untracked. And left the Roadrunners reeling.

Tech was led by a resurgent Thompson, who lately had been feeling the pains of a slump. But there was nothing wrong with the junior post on this night. It was vintage Carolyn for a team-high 28 points.

The Raiders led at the half 40-25, capitalizing on the Roadrunners' anemic 36-percent shooting from the field. The Raiders hung on in the second half behind Thompson and Kellye Richardson.

Ex-champ, commentator call for control of boxing

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Former heavyweight champion Floyd Patterson and television commentator Howard Cosell urged Congress Tuesday to create a federal commission to control what Cosell termed the "desperately sick sport" of professional boxing.

Patterson, representing the New York State Athletic Commission, declared, "We just need one set of rules nationally," including mandatory use of thumbless gloves.

Patterson and Cosell, of ABC-TV, testified before a House subcommittee on commerce, transportation and tourism headed by Rep. James J. Florio, D-N.J. Other witnesses joined their call for a national boxing authority.

Boxing has come under renewed criticism since the death of South Korean Duk Koo Kim from brain damage after a lightweight championship fight against Ray "Boom Boom" Mancini last Nov. 13.

Jogging experts give instruction

A variety of experts will give instruction on all aspects of running at the Rec Sports jogging clinic at 7 p.m. Thursday in Room 201 Student Rec Center.

Featured speakers will be Dr. Jeff Rupp, exercise physiologist with the Department of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, Dr. Paul Schwarzentraub, Lubbock podiatrist, Jim McWhirter, owner of the Swift Foot Running Store, and Sharon Moultrie, Tech assistant women's track coach.

Instruction will cover how to start and develop a running program, when to run, stretching exercises, proper running technique, footwear and physiological benefits.

Pool shark
Robin Martinez lines up a shot during Wednesday's intramural 8 Ball Pool match against Bruce Clark. Martinez won the match and three others to advance to the finals against Thad Rains.

Softball to begin

Registration for men's, women's, co-rec and campus community slow-pitch softball will be Feb. 22-24 in the Rec Sports Office. Play begins the first week in March.

Instant scheduling will be used, so teams that sign up first will have the best opportunity to play at the times they choose.

A $25 forfeit fee must accompany each team entry.

Rules clinics will be conducted in an effort to give players a better understanding of softball rules. A men's and women's softball clinic will be from 8-9 p.m. March 1 in the Student Rec Center classroom and a co-rec softball clinic will be from 8:30-9:30 p.m. March 2.

IM BRIEFS

Injury clinic continues

The weekly sports medicine injury clinic continues at 7 p.m. today in the Rec Center classroom. Orthopedic surgeon Dr. Bud Yost will discuss different types of athletic injuries and examines a limited number of injuries each week. The clinic is free and open to students, faculty and staff.

Backpacking workshop offered

The Outdoor Program will offer a backpacking workshop at 7 p.m. Thursday in 201 Student Rec Center. Ted Riggs, outdoor activities coordinator for Rec Sports, will discuss types of equipment, packs, boots, tents, accessories, costs, meal planning, wilderness manners and backpacking sites in the Southwest. Instruction will also cover packing the backpack, proper weight load and basic survival skills. For more information, telephone the Outdoor Shop at 742-2949.

Early bird lap swim continues

Lap swimming for early birds continues from 7-8 a.m. Mondays, Wednesdays and Fridays at the Aquatic Center. An area will be reserved for this purpose. The program runs on a trial basis, and attendance will be reviewed Feb. 25 to determine continuation.

Med school tournament slated

Full-time med/health science students, faculty and staff are eligible to represent Tech in an All-Texas Medical School Softball Tournament March 5-6. The contest is sponsored by the University of Texas Health Science Center at Dallas. Telephone Jim Bob Jones at 743-3022 or Betty Blanton at 742-3351.

Softball officials' clinic slated

The first clinic for prospective softball officials will be from 6-8 p.m. Feb. 28 in the Student Rec Center classroom. Clinic participants should obtain an information sheet on additional clinic dates from the Rec Sports Office.

Saturday Morning "Live" entries due

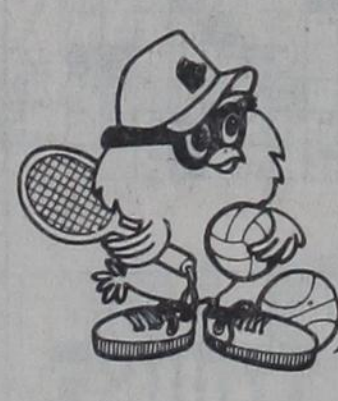

Entries for Saturday Morning "Live" table tennis singles are due by 5 p.m. Thursday in the Rec Sports Office. Play will be divided into men's and women's singles and co-rec doubles. The tournament is open to students, faculty and staff.

Let's go skiing
Bruce Barshop, Outdoor Equipment Shop assistant, checks out a pair of skis and poles to a student. Skis, boots and poles are just a few of the items available for rent in the Student Rec Center. For more information, telephone 742-2949.
