Faculty senator questions administration

By LAURA TETREAULT University Daily Reporter

The Texas Tech Faculty Senate will discuss during its Wednesday meeting a list of questions presented by Sen. Henry Wright at the Jan. 11 meeting. Three of the eight questions deal specifically with administration procedures.

Item two of the proposal addresses the possible need for an administration evaluation system. Item four questions the "phenomenal rate" of growth in administration personnel, and item seven asks if "administrators have the option to not answer letters of inquiry."

The proposal could not be discussed at the Jan. 11 meeting because it was not included on the agenda.

"It's good to look at where you're going, but maybe every five years," Wright said.

He said discussion of the questions he presented could bring to surface problems in other departments and colleges, such as registration and large classes meeting in rooms that are not suitable for the class size.

Wright said there are some advantages to computer registration, namely that classroom space is used better and students' needs are better met.

Herrera declares intention to run in city election

By KEVIN SMITH University Daily Reporter

Gilbert Herrera announced his intention to run for the City Council Monday, the first day candidates could file an application for a place on the April 7 ballot.

Herrera and councilwoman Joan Baker were the first to announce officially their intention to run for city office.

Because of the uncertainty of the election-by-district lawsuit, candidates are being asked to file twice pending a decision of whether two at-large places or six district seats will be on the ballot.

The judgment requiring implementation of a single-member district system for electing city council members instead of the current at-large system is on appeal to the Fifth Circuit Court of Appeals in New Orleans.

Judicial considerations notwithstanding, the single-member district system will be used for the April election. But the city secretary's office must be prepared to conduct the election under the old system should the court so rule.

Herrera is filing for election in District 2, and in the event of the single-member district ruling being overturned, he also has filed for Place 2 under the at-large

Baker has filed for District 6 under the single-member district system and Place 4 under the at-large system.

Herrera, who is director of the Auxiliary Use Drug Center at 1638 Main St., said he is anxious for minorities to receive a voice in local government. He said if elected he will do his best to represent the community at large but that he will pay particular attention to the needs of minorities.

Historically, Herrera said, minorities rarely have held high-ranking positions in city government. In running for the council, he said, he hopes to address the problem of racial representation.

"Today I hope will be an historic day for Lubbock," he said. "The minority community has an opportunity to elect a Hispanic candidate to represent them in city council ... I believe the citizens of District 2 will give me their support."

Candidates have until March 7 to file for a place on the April 7 ballot. Voters have until March 8 to register for that

If no decision has been made by the court regarding the method of election by the filing deadline, the single-member district plan will be used.

Under the single-member district plan, the original decision of the U.S. District Court, the districts would be divided between two- and four-year terms. Districts 2, 4 and 6, which includes the districts for which Herrera and Baker have filed, would be four-year

The remaining districts, 1, 3 and 5, initially would be for terms of two years. But in 1986 they would revert to four-year

Lubbock warrant officer announces candidacy for JP

Lubbock County Sheriff's Department warrant officer David Turner announced Monday that he is a candidate for Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1, Place 1.

The 36-year-old father of three has been employed by the Lubbock County Sheriff's office for 41/2 years.

"No one can work that long without having a strong belief in law and prosecution," Turner said. "Not only have I the practical experience in law enforcement, but (I have) the college hours in criminal law."

Turner has 160 hours of college credit, 40 of them in criminal law.

Turner never has held public elective office, but he said he believes his work as a pastor of a church in Germany, along with "several supervisory positions," are assets to his campaign.

"I don't see why this should be any different," he said.

Responding to a question about possible campaign issues, Turner said, "I don't think I should make a major issue besides saying that I believe I am qualified to hold public office."

Turner said he "is deeply concerned for a safe Lubbock."

"I feel I can best fulfill that concern by being your next Justice of the Peace, Precinct 1, Place 1," he said.

Turner's candidacy is part of a vigorous early-season effort by the Republican Party to secure elective offices on the national and local levels.

Texas Tech's chapter of College Republicans Sunday announced plans for a major voter registration drive before the March 5 Republican primary.

College Republicans member Mark Shniderson also has announced his candidacy for Precinct 3 chairman.

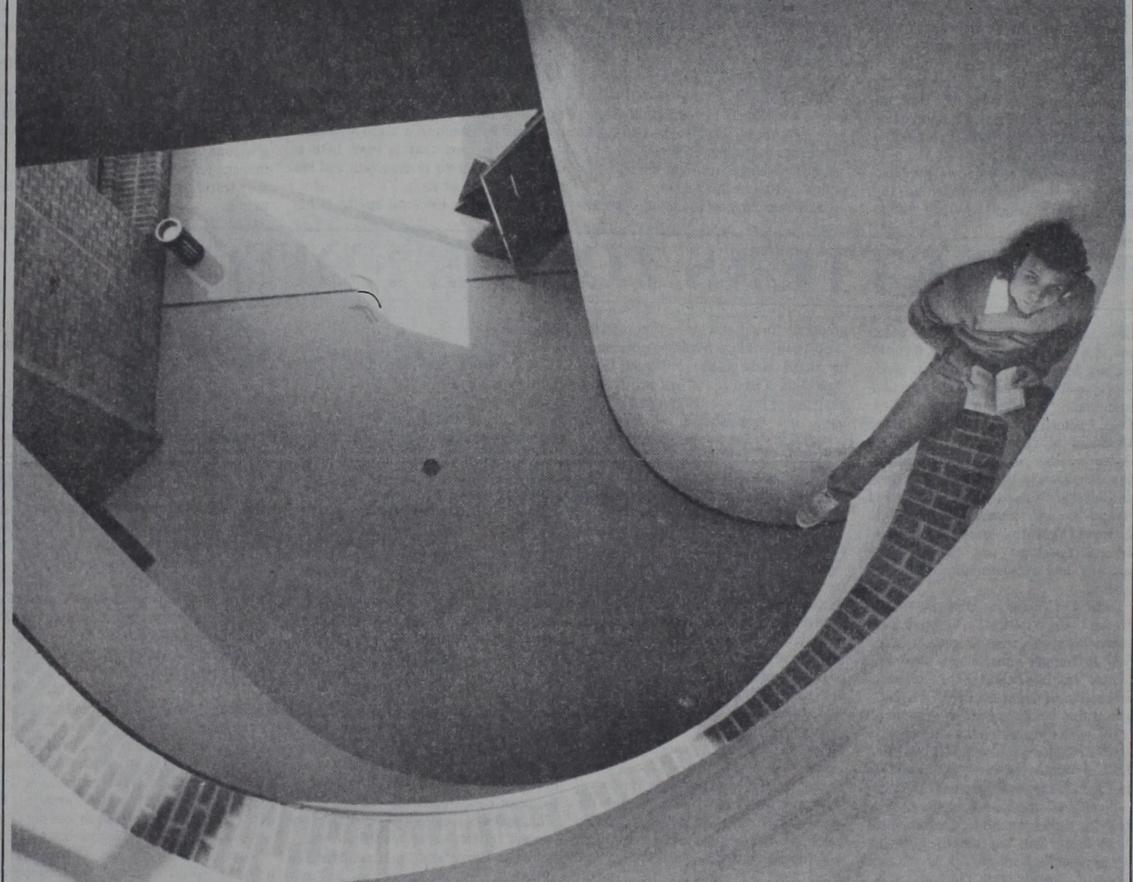

Shniderson, a 21-year-old junior, said the party is making a special effort at community mobilization.

"The Republican side is very organized this year," he said.

BEIRUT, Lebanon - Antigovernment Moslem militiamen seized most of west Beirut in furious street battles with the Lebanese army Monday and demanded the resignation of Christian President Amin Gemayel.

GILBERT DUNKLEY

Now that presidential elections are at hand, it is useful to scan the scenario of faces voters in November.

President Reagan Wednesday sent Congress his version of the national budget for 1984-1985 — $925.5 billion.

Not coincidentally, that budget carries else's concern. with it a deficit of $180.4 billion.

U.S. Marines are tied down in Lebanon in pursuit of a military-political objective. Most people are ignorant of the true nature of that objective. To date, in excess of 200 of those Marines have died.

For the first time in decades, the United States and the Soviet Union are not engaged in arms control negotiations.

time in more than 20 years, there are open and belligerent verbal exchanges between Moscow and Washington about who is first likely to use nuclear weapons. and about who is looking for a fight with whom.

Now, for the first time in recorded history, two world powers are so heavily armed that they can swiftly eliminate most, if not all, animal life on this planet. That, of course, includes you and me.

Let's think about these things. Two weeks ago the president invited Congress to join him in a cooperative effort to reduce budget deficits and to make a "down payment" on the national debt.

I wondered about the motive for this gesture. I got my answer on Wednesday. Reagan has proposed a budget that includes further unwieldly deficits, and his two-week-old offer has taken on the hollow ring of sophistry.

Remember candidate Reagan in 1980? We will have a balanced budget by 1983, he declared. But what has he actually delivered? Driven by his peculiar obsession with military procurement, he has realities and dreadful possibilities that delivered trillion-dollar deficits and an excess of bad-mouth diplomacy.

> He has continued the policy of recent U.S. presidents — spend today what you don't have, for tomorrow is someone

The U.S. presidency indeed is a gem, and this child of America intends to have as much fun as he possibly can with his shiny trinket before he leaves.

And so Mr. Reagan buys and buys and arms his soldiers beyond the limits of reason. What's worse, he's not even getting his money's worth.

He is being bilked by so-called defense contractors who overprice their goods In this presidential term, for the first and rob the Pentagon, and by extension the taxpayers, of millions upon millions of dollars. What a shame!

Reagan's foreign policy in the Middle East and toward the Soviet Union is a puzzling entity, a fleeting ghost - now you see it, now you don't. When we do see it, it hurls a curse at the other side and ducks out of sight, again.

The president's reaction to Soviet infractions of past arms control agreements has been frightening - and dangerous in its carelessness.

If Andropov-the-Invisible throws a tantrum and questions Reagan's commitment to peace, the Great Communicator returns a barrage of focus-of-evil-in-theworld expletives.

That immature response to provocation from the Soviet Union is the hallmark of a leader who has yet to

LETTERS TO THE EDITOR

Abortion I

To the Editor:

By the way, has anyone out there actually read any anti-abortion literature? I suggest that persons concerned about the issue drop by the Lubbock Right to Life office and pick up some. They might be startled at what they find; those who favor a human life amendment to the Constitution are a lot less mainstream than one might think.

Certainly, I was startled to find that these good folks not only want to ban abortion; they're also quite interested in banning the PILL, because "it acts primarily as an abortifacient." How does that grab YOU?

The anti-abortion folks say they oppose "abortion on demand." Read the literature; what that catchy "on demand" phrase turns out to mean is, regardless of the circumstances of conception or the consequences of carrying to term. Which consequences, since when we speak of birth, we must of necessity speak of DEATH? In the proposed human life amendment, could we allow abortion for the possible consequence of death to a woman who carries to term? On what RATIONAL bases? (The pamphlets I read glibly skirted that side of the issue.)

Who would rule on such grey areas which bureaucrat in which department might hold your life, your future, in HIS (I feel sure) hands? Make no mistake those who think they are competent to rule on such issues are dangerous; they are not interested in life, they are interested in power. Ms. Stephens was correct in her assessment: abortion - and any other form of birth control - must remain an individual moral decision.

I am writing in response to a letter written by Candice Stephens concerning the issue of abortion. It is a volatile, sen-and at that point the baby is granted all of the rights guaranteed in our constitution - "inalienable rights ... life, ... " When a woman exercises her "right" to an abortion she denies the baby the right to live, and when one's rights impose upon the rights of another, freedom loses its meaning. Only the One who gives life (God) reserves the right to take it away. If asked, do you think the baby would choose life or death? If there is any question about whether or not the baby is a person, shouldn't they be given the benefit of the doubt?

Is the right to have an abortion a right granted to women by our constitution? No. We are living in a day when the founding documents of our country are being grossly misinterpreted. The clause "separation of church and state" is nowhere to be found in the first amendment, yet landmark cases are being decided frequently with that as the standard. "Inalienable rights" are rights which are given by our Creator and which no other human being should be deprived of. The phrase should not be interpreted to mean any right at all especially the right to take another life. Our rights end where someone else's begin. A woman is at least partially responsible for bringing a baby into the world, and she is responsible to at least offer it a chance to live. Rights demand responsibilities, and the right of sex demands responsibility for the "finished abortion is related to our belief about assumption of fact and therefore is God. It is logical, though not expedient. for an atheist to advocate abortion. Without God there are no moral absolutes, no inalienable rights, no eternal destiny, and there is no value to human life. However, if one even admits the possibility of a "God," then it is illogical and contradictory to support abortion. God is the Creator of life and the One who grants Americans "inalienable rights." I appeal to your intelligence, your conscience, your humanity and your sanity to cease from justifying a national holocaust which has thus far taken the suppose you are wrong about abortion. To the editor:

This letter is in response to SR 19:34, the proposed Student Senate resolution petitioning the Student Service Fee Advisory Board to deny any funding to the High Riders and KTXT unless they immediately discontinue their alleged religious affiliation.

The proposed resolution says it is based upon the Establishment Clause (separation of Church and State) of the First Amendment. The resolution is misconceived and should not pass.

There are two issues in this resolution. The first pertains to the funding of High Riders and the second with funding of KTXT. Let's examine each of these

.Charlene Conlin, Lorraine Brady, Bret Combs

The proposed resolution alleges that "freedom of choice." They are free to High Riders is a religious organization, have sex if they are willing to have the but it is not. The purpose of the High baby, but they should not have the Riders is to promote women's athletics, freedom to choose to snuff out the life of not religion. Secondly, membership in the unborn child. Our society is growing High Riders is not contingent upon any religious requirement. Thirdly, the coupled with abortion-on-demand are organization has no religious affiliation or doctrine. In regard to the High Riders, Ultimately, what we believe about SR 19:34 is founded upon an incorrect without logical basis.

The second issue in this resolution addresses KTXT's religious programming on Sunday mornings. In Widmar v. Vincent, the U.S. Supreme Court held that the University of Missouri could not constitutionally forbid equal access to its physical facilities by a religious group recognized by the University when it permitted access by other recognized groups. Texas Tech University cannot prohibit the use of its broadcasting facilities based upon the content of the lives of more than 13 million innocent, programming and thereby discriminate voiceless, helpless human beings. Just against religious free speech any more than the University of Missouri could discriminately deny use of its dormitories to a student organization desiring to exercise free religious speech. (Widmar)

> University censorship based on content also is unconstitutional. First Amendment free press and free speech rights extend to broadcasting. If the Student Service Fee Advisory Board were to deny funding to KTXT based on religious content, then it could also deny funding to The University Daily because it publishes articles containing religious material. The Constitution does not permit content-based decisions of this nature.

> KTXT prides itself in being the "alternative station." It offers a variety of programs during its broadcast week, many of which are not available on other stations in the Lubbock market. It offers classical, opera, jazz, rock, soul, contemporary and country music. The station also airs public information programs. Out of the approximately 130 hours aired weekly by KTXT, only one 30-minute period is devoted to a Sunday morning religious program.

A substantial percentage of Tech students, faculty and staff have an interest in religion. KTXT management believes that there is audience demand for a Sunday religious program. KTXT serves Tech and the Lubbock community well with its excellent programming. While the Constitution does not require that the student fee be used to support the station, there is good reason to do so, and past Student Service Fee Advisory Boards have chosen to do so. The resolution before the Senate is based upon the misconception that KTXT's religious programming violates the Establishment Clause.

As an aside, the courts and the public have blown the whole idea of separation of Church and State out of focus. The founding fathers wrote the Establishment Clause partly in response to the tyrannies of the English system. In England, the King or Queen was not only the head of the government but also the head of the Anglican Church. This system resulted in the suppression of religious freedom. We do have separation of Church and State in the United States. We do have religious freedom. We are not forced to observe any one religion or any religion at all. Funding High Riders and KTXT with student fees does not violate the Constitution, and the Senate should not attempt to influence the Student Service Fee Advisory Board by passing SR 19:34.

Tuesday will prove to be a good opportunity for Tech fans to see the progress of the women's athletic program. The Tech women's basketball team will be playing nationally ranked University of Texas. With Tech being 7-2 and second in the conference, this promises to be an exciting event. Coach Sharp and the team have worked very hard to build a winning tradition, and we would like to invite fans to take part in the Southwest Conference showdown. ## New satellite lost in space

By The Associated Press

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. - The shuttle astronauts launched an Indonesian satellite Monday, but the manufacturer declared it lost in space when it disappeared from view of radar trackers just like its twin three days earlier.

Giant radar screens were trying to find the communications satellite, called Palapa B2. The North American Defense Command was called in, just as it had been when Westar VI disappeared Friday.

"Hughes tracking personnel have confirmed the satellite cannot be found in its expected orbit," said a one-sentence NASA announcement by mission control's Brian Welch six hours after the satellite was ejected from the shuttle.

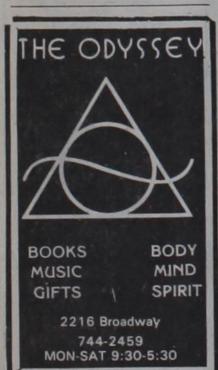

It was the third setback for the Challenger flight. Westar VI, launched for Western Union, is in a useless orbit after the failure of a rocket; on Sunday, a balloon exploded ruining a rendezvous exercise.

Today, the astronauts plan the most daring part of their mission - making the first walk into space without a

The astronauts apparently were told about the latest satellite failure in a teleprinter message. There was no comment from space.

The Hughes Aircraft Co., which built both Palapa and Westar, said it had not been able to establish "a confirming signal" from the very beginning. The satellite was ejected from the shuttle at 10:13 a.m. EST and its attached rocket stage fired 45 minutes later as planned.

Crews repair University Avenue

Traffic on segments of University Avenue will be restricted for about a month so city street crews can undertake a crack

The project involves cleaning out cracks and joints in the concrete with compressed air, then applying a sealer to prevent moisture from seeping in under the street.

Traffic between 19th Street and Fourth Street will be restricted to one southbound land during the initial phase of the project. The crew will be working on about two blocks at a time, beginning with the southbound lanes.

As the southbound lanes are completed, the crew will reverse its operation and seal the northbound lanes.

Don Jennings, city street engineer, said the seal work is a routine preventive maintenance procedure to help guard against deterioration of the underground street foundation.

UD correction

A portion of an article in The University Daily Friday concerning astronaut Charles Duke had to be cut in production, leaving out part of a quote. The last sentence read, "I looked back at the Earth and cried 'Well done. Man is in charge.""

The next paragraph should have read as follows:

Such a "humanistic philosophy of life" eventually was replaced with the belief that he needed to make some spiritual moves in his life. "I asked God to direct my life," Duke said. "My life changed. It wasn't an instant change. Peace began to settle in my life, to settle in my heart."

Stress handled by accepting reality

By REAGAN WHITE University Daily Reporter

College students often experience stress because of changes in lifestyles and decisions that have to be made, but proper management of stress can help students deal successfully with their problems, according to Delores Mack of the Counseling

Mack will present a lecture on stress management at 6 p.m. today in the Bledsoe Hall formal lounge.

The college years, from the ages of 17 to 23, sometimes are difficult because of the adjustments that have to be made when a person leaves home for the first time, Mack said.

Mack said some students have trouble adjusting to Lubbock's environment because Lubbock is big compared to some students' hometowns.

Leaving lifelong friends and beginning new friendships with new people also can be a problem for some people, Mack said.

She said another major cause of stress for students is having to make decisions for themselves. Students are thrown from constant supervision to complete independence overnight and must deal with social, personal and academic problems on their own, Mack said.

Many students begin their first close relationships with members of the opposite sex when they reach college, Mack said.

Others have trouble making choose between a field they the transition from a pressure- are interested in and another free high school academic enfield their parents want them vironment that requires little to study, she said. or no organization to the much college, she said.

may be one way to cope with a problem, and changing the way you feel about the situation may also be a solution, she said.

One way to help reduce stress is to learn a method of relaxation. Many people cannot relax easily, she said. Mack said she teaches ways to relax, as well as techniques to change negative thought patterns. Learning to recognize thoughts that make things worse is important, as well as how to focus on good thoughts instead of bad ones, she said.

Writing out problems helps keep them from growing out of proportion and helps clarify possible alternatives to solve the problems, she said.

Often what an individual needs is a "life review" to help Identifying the source of sort out what things are more stress is an important first important and what things a person could do without if they

A primary factor in helping manage stress effectively is to learn to accept reality.

TI donation improves library

By JON GRIFFIN University Daily Staff

After receiving a grant in January of more than $9,000 worth of computer equipment and software from Texas Instruments Inc., the Texas Tech computer learning lab in the library basement now better accommodates Tech students and faculty with computer check-out service and in-lab use.

Originally funded by donations from Texas Instruments in 1982, the library's computer department offers Tech students and faculty the opportunity to check out and take home TI computers and software for up to three days.

Faculty and students also have access to the computer learning lab in the library basement, where 25 TI computers and their expansion systems are available for in-lab use.

Roberta Casella, special services librarian and head of the computer lab, said she is especially interested in providing the computer learning lab to faculty for class and instruc-

Any student or faculty member who has normal library check-out privileges can check out one of the 10 TI computers available at the library. Items available for checkout include keyboards, modulators and adaptors to hook up to any video monitor, and many different pieces of software ranging from "Weight Control and Nutrition" and "Checkbook Manager" to "TI Invaders" and "Hunt the Wumpus." Several manuals and aids also are available.

Up to three software items can be checked out with or without a computer for a three-day period. Casella said several new software items are available.

"We now have TI LOGO products which include graphics. In addition, we have PLATO Courseware, which is generally high school reading and math material good for teacher training and review for college freshmen," she said.

In addition to the 50 software items available, the library has several hardware items such as speech synthesizers, joysticks and modules. A full list of available hardware and software equipment is posted at the reserve desk in the library basement.

Casella said students and faculty interested in obtaining the equipment or reserving the computer learning lab can contact the reserve desk by calling 742-2243.

"That joke derives its humor from taking a fairly simple situation and flipflopping it," explained Drummond, 27. Collecting jokes is part of the young entrepreneur's daily activity, besides his three parttime jobs, including his own fledgling consulting firm, Achievement Consulting. Now he's working on attitudes - management attitudes, selling vitamins, frozen food, and time management advice. But the advice usually comes with a bit of dry wit. "I'm a bachelor, and a lot of jokes concern bachelor life: I was asleep the other day and a roach woke me up and said, 'Hey, we got ants.'

"I can teach anyone to remember jokes. First of all, you have to tell yourself, 'I can remember jokes.' If you have a negative attitude, you can't remember."

Successful hunt

PBS to air film of ancient lifestyle

In the rain forests of Zaire, in the heart of Africa, live the no chiefs; glory is accorded only to the best hunter. And the Mbuti pygmies. The pygmy way of life always has been ex- Mbuti are extraordinary hunters, so conditioned that they traordinarily difficult to capture on film, although many have tried. At 7 p.m. today on KTXT-TV, NOVA presents "BaMiki BaNdula: Children of the Forest," a rare portrait of an elusive people, made by an independent filmmaker who lived with his subjects.

Kevin Duffy lived with the Mbuti pygmies in 1975, recording with remarkable intimacy a way of life that has remained unchanged for thousands of years. Including rare footage taken by the noted anthropologist Colin Turnbull, Duffy's extraordinary portrait may well be the first and last of its kind. The government of Zaire no longer grants permission to photograph the pygmies.

Attempts to relocate the pygmies have failed; as NOVA points out, to the Mbuti pygmies, the forest is their life. The pygmies, whose average height is 41/2 feet, are nomads, moving through the rain forest in small bands. Using the same weapons and tools used by their ancestors 6,000 years ago, they hunt only for food. In their communal society, there are can outrun a full-grown bull elephant. They catch forest antelope in vine nets, kill monkeys and birds with poisontipped darts and begin archery lessons at the age of two, shooting at butterflies with tiny bows and arrows.

Because the Mbuti are nomadic, the women of the tribe are adept at building a camp from only a small bundle of possessions. Monogamous, yet communal, the pygmies call every woman "mother" and every man "father." But life in this crimeless, reverent society is no paradise. "BiMiki BaNdula" paints an honest picture of unsettling respiratory diseases, ferocious ants and a way of life as stark as it is ancient. An invaluable and engrossing document of a people sheltered by the rain forest from the march of history, the film also asks how much longer this isolation can last.

"BiMiki BaNdula" was written, photographed and produced by Kevin Duffy. Executive producer for NOVA was John

And so can an audience if they choose to see his new film, Star 80, rather than viewing something else.

Fosse (the film's director and screenwriter) has chosen to follow up his long string of directorial hits (Sweet Charity, Cabaret, Lenny and All That Jazz) with a shallow attempt to portray the tragic life of Playboy's 1980 "Playmate of the Year," Dorothy Stratten.

As is his style — to portray the tragedy and reality of life Fosse became intrigued with the story of Stratten when he learned of her gruesome death in 1980. STOCKHOLM, Sweden - A research team at Gothenburg University is developing a unique method for bringing current events to blind people - a newspaper that talks.

"The voice is not sensual. It's metallic and non-human, but it's understandable," said Kjell Emanuelsson.

Emanuelsson, 33, a computer programmer who's been blind since he was born, said he was prepared to accept such shortcomings. "This is the only way I have access to a whole newspaper on almost the same terms as everybody else," he said.

As conceived by researchers at Chalmers Technical University, blind people connected to the system will receive daily news on a special terminal that transforms the text into electronic speech at the push of a button.

The idea behind the futuristic paper is surprisingly simple.

Goteborgsposten, the morning newspaper that initiated the research project, already files its production into a large computer that changes the words into a digital language of zeroes and ones.

Once the talking newspaper is operational, the digital information will be transmitted, when the newspaper goes to press, over regular FM waves to receivers in subscribing

Road weary

Third-place Raiders prepare to host 'Horns

By COLIN E. KILLIAN University Daily Sports Writer

The strain of two tough road games was easily apparent Monday on the face of Texas Tech basketball mentor Gerald Myers.

After Wednesday's 70-60 loss to SMU in Dallas and Saturday's 47-45 sqeaker over TCU in Fort Worth, it was plain to see that Myers was relieved to be back in the Hub City.

"We're glad to be back home," the coach said wearily.

"We got it down to a minute, then we had to go for the last shot - we didn't have any choice," Myers said.

Despite losing to SMU, Tech remains tied with the Ponies for third place in the Southwest Conference. SMU fell to the Houston Cougars 76-57 Saturday in Houston, so both Tech's and SMU's records are 6-3 in SWC games.

The Raiders are preparing for the home stretch of the conference race, hoping to finish in the top three. Myers said the remaining schedule should give Tech an edge.

"Our schedule from here on out favors us a little more in the second half of the season," the coach said. "We've still Reynolds' game-winning got to go down to Houston, but Arkansas and SMU have to

Myers said one thing the Raiders need right now is

"We need some time to "Normally, we wouldn't review some things and get some people straightened out," he said.

> Yet time is a commodity that is in short supply for Tech. Myers' troops have until Wednesday to recover from the excursion to the Metroplex and to prepare for battle with the Texas Longhorns in the "Texas is an improved team," Myers said. "They have some young kids with a lot of talent; they'll get better every game.

The coach said the Raiders must forget the first meeting between the two teams, a meeting that saw Tech come away with a 74-47 victory in Austin.

"We were playing well at the time," Myers said. "Our defense bothered them more then than it will now.

"We can't go out thinking Texas is a team we beat by 27 points in the first game," he concluded. "If we do, it'll be a Kathy at 799-4019. tough game - it'll be tough enough anyway."

Sarajevo citizen gives gift of gold to Olympic Games

By The Associated Press

SARAJEVO, Yugoslavia — The work of Fuad Kasumagic paid off in gold even before the first medal was awarded at the XIV Olympic Winter Games.

one of more than 1.2 million Yugoslavs who donated money and other gifts to help pay for the Games, which begin today. The only difference is that he donated the largest single gift - one kilogram of gold, worth more He doesn't make jewelry, than $14,000.

"I wanted to do something repairs some. to help the Games, to concess," Kasumagic said in his shop, located on a narrow city's old Turkish district.

Nordic skier to compete for U.S.

By The Associated Press

SALT LAKE CITY — A bleary-eyed Audun Endestad was sworn in Monday as a U.S. citizen hours after a 6,000-mile journey from Switzerland, where he will return as the newest official member of the American nordic ski team at the XIV Winter Olympics.

"yes."

"I would like to thank everyone involved in getting my citizenship," the former Norwegian said in a statement to a packed federal courtroom moments after being sworn in as an American citizen.

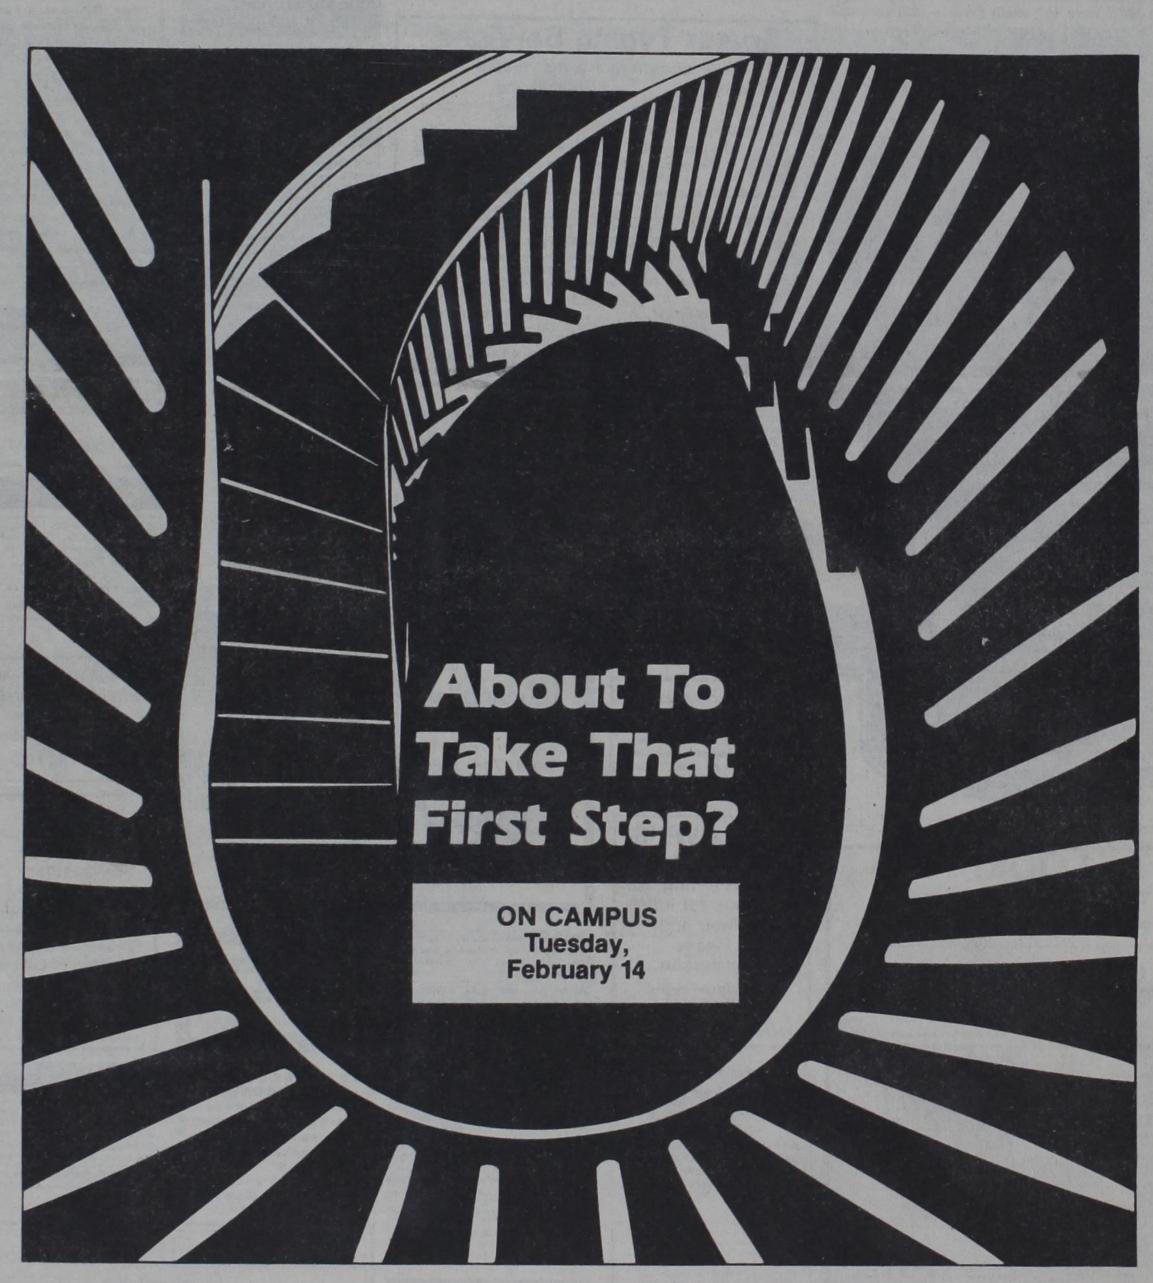

The 10-minute ceremony before U.S. District Judge David Winder ended Endestad's 27-month quest for citizenship and a oath with upraised right hand, Endestad said, "Believing in berth on the U.S. Olympic team. The 31-year-old's non-stop what I said and hoping to do all that I said."

flight from Sarajevo, Yugoslavia, took more than 24 hours. He arrived here Sunday night.

It took a special act of Congress and President Reagan's signature last Thursday to gain a waiver of the final nine months of the three-year waiting period for a citizenship hearing. The process was accelerated so Endestad could compete for the American team in Sarajevo this week.

After signing Endestad's naturalization papers, the judge warmly pumped the new citizen's hand, saying, "Mr. Endestad, congratulations. We're pleased to have you as a citizen of this country."

Asked what went through his mind as he took the citizenship
