We all admire greatness!
Sometimes I believe we all envy greatSometimes I believe we all envy great ness, although this may be gainsaid by the fact that there are many who do not seem nclined to make the least po ssible

I think we might come to a better unde standing of the subject if we could come some- common definition of "greatte some common definition of "greatness." much, as it defines greatness as being large and extensive, or supreior. In our own little coilege a student may become great and still remain as small as he was before he came here, was before he came here, so far as physica stature is concerned. He may become grea in the eyes of some students and still re in the eyes o mainn as small
The student main as small as ever in the eyes of others.
The student who comes to college for the sole purpose of becoming great, usually fails There are several classes of greatness, so far as the student is concerned. In our schlete, we have the great thinker, the great ather the great social lion, the great lounger and naay other students who "grate", on our must throw their chin in the air and look digniffed in the eyes of the others to be looked upon as great. Greatness, in the college definition, has been mashed all out of shape There are students who believe that to be great they must keep themselves before the great they must keep themselves before the stualent body constantly. There are students whb believe to achieve a small greatness in ol, they must be able to excell in scholgreat, they must excell in domination and कo my mind, greatness is that whiel makes for the increased happiness makes for the increased happiness and con-tentiment of the entire student body. Happiness, and happiness alone ness, and happiness alone, is the one and nely goal of human life. Not merely hen neys of self, for there can be no such thing. There is more happiness to be obtained in giving the student body your spare time than keeping it to yourself. There is more happiness to be obtained other fellow to a piece of cake that in eating two pieces yourself. Happiness is only possible in possible in proportion to the happiness we give to others. The argument that man shoud not be permitted to be happy in his ignorance has no weight with me, if perchance a man is to become unhappy in his wisdom.
That simplicity That simplicity may be the means o greatness is sappreciated too little. The achievement, of great power, without the abuse of that power, is the acme of great ness. The possession fo knowledge does not sor is able to use that knowledge for the knows; it is what he does with what he knows t could b thelr-narrow great, provided they would ghet thmigs of life as a part of the entire student bodvininstead of for themselves. There stizdents who ofould become great workers thinkers, and leaders in the thiikkers, and leaders in the school if they wpuld only forget self and work for the tefphent of the school the, students who take part in the activities of the school. Do you see any students who "do things" in "Do things" in college activities, who whe mote noticeable among a crowd than any other students? Do you see the leaders in the various clubs of the school, standing head and shoulders above a group No they are among the group, yet they are great, in, that they are doing and helping "do things." Tech needs more students who will "do." If ech needs more students who will "do."

DOAK HALL DOINGS
COURTEOUSNESS
In this modern era, when numerous ac tivities occupy the whole day, there is little time for retrospective time for retrospective study. We are apt to go on for weeks without looking back and considering our past conduct. As a conse quent we are liable to forget that which most evident in our dealings with other students. Courtesy is the exhibiting in our manners and speech a considerable regard for others This and speech a considerable regard This thoughtuluness arises in gentleness and goodness bitually. It cares for the comfort and the happiness of others even in the smallest matters. The courteous man is unselfish and never refuses a shight favor act. He makes his dealings with his fellowman and and another friend is usually the outcome of every one of his courteous acts. Courtesy renders the hard path of life delightful delightful and easy, since it acts as a lubrica delightful and easy, since it acts as a lubricator. which smoothes out our dealings with one another. one another. It is the most potent force in daily life. Courtesy makes one polished in his behavior, and shows him well mannered and cultivated cultivated. It marks one out as a gentleman.
It makes the first impression on a stranger Truly such a force should have its place in every man. Let it lack in a business man and notice how rapidly his business will decline The and notice how rapidly his business will de have won favor with the have won favor with their subjects. Cou tesy costs nothing and achieves wonders. Discourtesy is a mark of an uncouth man It makes life's ways rough and difficult to travel. It sifts emery between ofe's tions with another. It causes friction and Everyone expects a college boy to be a gentleman. His reputation has been merited gentleman. His reputation has been merited for him by those formally trained within col lege walls. The best lege walls. The best and only way to keep this repute is to be courteous. During one's time in college there is ample opportunity to cultivate this most valuable asset.

 with different musical compositions. In on minute, he says, gif you are keeping time to the music, you will take 222 steps. If w consider that the dance lasts three hours, you will perhaps dance only ninety minutes of that time, the remainder being consumed by intermissions. Which would mean that during the evening you would take 19.980 steps steps. The average man, when dancing, takes a step of 18 inchees, Thus it will be found that you cover a distance of 29970 found that you cover a distance of 29,970 feet, or 5.67 miles in one night's dancing.
A fumny thing about it is that the dancer hardy realizes that he travels that fan And another funny thing is that the delicate young lady who thinks it is perfectly ter rible that the physical education teacher would want her to take a hike of one three or five miles in the open air, will eagerly accept a young man's invitation to walk backwards five miles and a half with THE ART OF THINKING The base of every basic principle is thought. It is the beginning of every end It is the fore-runner of all advancement.
Carlyle has somewhere said: "All that a man does and brings to pass is the vestur of a thought." The highest aim of man i some purpose.
