'Shell game' considered

WASHINGTON (AP) — Senior Pentagon officials believe the United States could temporarily hide many of its long-range missiles by shuffling them from silo to silo in a "shell game" that would keep the Russians from knowing exactly where to aim an attack.

The "shell game" would be an interim measure designed to protect land-based Minuteman II missiles during the early 1980s and until the United States can develop a bigger, more powerful missile in the 1986-1987 period.

The interim system might cost about $10 billion, officials calculate. This would be about half the price of developing and producing a full new advanced force of mobile missiles.

Sources said the interim concept of shuffling the Minuteman III missiles from silo to silo would not upset strategic nuclear stability between the United States and Russia and, instead, would add to factors discouraging any Soviet surprise attack.

Bullock receives DWI

AUSTIN (AP) — Comptroller Bob Bullock blew out the candles on his birthday cake but he refused a few hours later to take a breath test when arrested on suspicion of drunken driving.

The 49-year-old state official was stopped at 1:40 a.m. Tuesday in North Austin by two officers who said he sat through a green traffic light then drove over the street curb numerous times.

Both tires on the right side of Bullock's bronze and white Cadillac were flat when Bullock finally stopped in answer to the patrol car's blinking red light, said Officer Mark Smith.

Smith and his fellow officer reported Bullock was "very cooperative" but declined an alcohol breath test.

Bullock's wife and another couple were in the car.

Bullock told the officers he had a few beers at a birthday celebration in an Austin steak house.

Bullock was booked in city jail on a complaint of driving while intoxicated then released about two hours later to his attorney, Randall Wood, a former top official in the comptroller's office.

At 7:30 a.m. he appeared before Municipal Judge Alberto Garcia, who released him on $500 personal bond. Arraignment on the charge was set for July 25.

"It was my birthday and he didn't recognize it," Bullock said of the appearance before the judge.

Gas truck explodes

TARRAGONA, Spain (AP) — A runaway butane gas truck exploded at a campsite near Tarragona on Spain's Mediterranean coast Tuesday and estimates of the dead ranged as high as 180 and the injured 250.

Police said the blast killed "nearly 100" but sources at the civil governor's palace said the dead "could number around 180."

Witnesses said the truck caught fire as it was traveling down a road that runs next to the camp when the driver apparently lost control. They said the vehicle ran off the road and into the camp, where it exploded. The camp is 25 yards from the road, they said.

Skylab under watch

SPACE CENTER, Houston (AP) — Robert O. Aller, coordinator for Skylab operations, said Tuesday the 85-ton satellite will need closer attention to keep it in a proper attitude and keep it from crashing back to Earth before it can be boosted into higher orbit.

Aller said Skylab, which temporarily lost power in one of two sets of batteries on Saturday, apparently is more sensitive to changing conditions than anticipated and will have to be monitored more closely.

Despite the power loss, Aller said he is confident no major damage occurred and scientists will be able to correct problems aboard the craft within a few days.

The power loss caused gyroscopes and a computer aboard the craft to stop. Scientists at JSC have been working around the clock to recharge the batteries and re-program the computer.

Health Center hours

Hours for student services in the Health Sciences Center will be from 8 a.m. to 7 p.m., Monday through Friday, for the second summer session. Students needing medical care should bring some form of enrollment verification, such as a schedule of classes.

WEATHER

Partly cloudy and fair today through Thursday. High today and Thursday is expected to reach the upper 90s with the nighttime lows in the lower 70s. Winds will be out of the south at 10-15 mph.

Hance inheritance tax bill leaps first committee hurdle

By LARRY ELLIOTT
UD Reporter

State Senator Kent Hance's bill to increase the inheritance tax exemption for the first time since 1923 passed its first hurdle Tuesday when the Senate Finance Committee approved the measure for consideration by the Senate as a whole.

Hance said the anticipated $3 billion in Texas' new growth revenue can adequately cover an increase in the exemption from the old $25,000 figure to $200,000.

During the last regular session a similar bill was introduced by Hance and killed by the Finance Committee, but a new mood for tax reform seems likely to improve the bill's chances this session.

Hance said he feels the $25,000 exemption is inadequate in a time of inflated property values.

Other legislative action Tuesday saw the House fail to suspend its rules and begin hearings immediately on other tax relief constitutional amendments.

An 82-50 roll call vote in the House fell eight votes short of the two-thirds needed to suspend House rules and open the floor to proposed constitutional amendments that could change the state's tax structure, but not all legislators were sorry to see the motion defeated.

Froy Salinas, Lubbock's representative from Dist. 75-B, said the defeat of the motion to suspend the rules would give him a chance to hear from local officials who would be affected by tax reform.

Registration scheduled

Registration for the second term of the summer session is scheduled for Monday from 7:30 a.m.-6 p.m. in the Lubbock Municipal Coliseum. Classes begin at 7:20 a.m. Tuesday.

Final examinations for the first summer term are set for Thursday and Friday.

According to Don Wickard, registrar, registration materials will be distributed today through Friday from 1 p.m. - 5 p.m. in the second floor conference room of West Hall. Materials will be available on registration day from 7:30 a.m. - 5 p.m.

Packets are available for students who were enrolled and completed the spring semester and the first summer session.

Enrollment figures for the second summer term are expected to be 5,600. First summer term enrollment totaled 7,713.

Registration materials and class schedules for the fall semester are scheduled to be mailed to students the first week in August.

"A lot of people just want to get on with it and get out of here," Salinas said Tuesday. "But this thing has been sudden. I'm not ready to start voting on the amendments tomorrow (Wednesday). To me that's a rush to judgement, a knee-jerk reaction." Hearings on proposed amendments now cannot begin until Monday unless another vote suspends the rules.

Salinas said he supports a move to grant a homestead exemption of $10,000 from school taxes, with an additional $10,000 exemption to persons over 65, meaning that senior citizens whose homes are assessed at $20,000 or less would be exempt from school taxes.

To make up the revenue that local school districts would lose by increasing exemptions on school property taxes, Salinas and others propose that the state make up the loss in revenue.

A bill by Rep. Wayne Peveto, (D-Orange) would place responsibility for tax appraisals of property at the county level, rather than the 3,000 taxing entities currently in existence, and Salinas said this would be a good move.

"A unified appraisal system statewide will place the proper value on property," Salinas said. "We have several taxing authorities now. School districts, hospital districts and others put different values on the same property. A uniform appraisal office in each county or area could change this so that people that have been paying less than their fair share could relieve some of the burden of middle-income people."

Salinas said many of the tax proposals that did not have the support of House leaders during the last session may have a better chance to win approval during the special session.

He said passage of the $10,000 exemption with an additional $10,000 exemption for homeowners over 65 could provide "significant relief" for Texas property owners.

Other legislators called for Gov. Dolph Briscoe to add reform of property tax administration to the special session's call, a move that would allow the legislature to change tax appraisals, as Salinas suggested.

The House passed such a bill last session but it died in the Senate, and Briscoe is known to fear it would remove local control over taxes.

"We are going to have a hard time passing any of these constitutional amendments on the property tax, because how are you going to administer them without reform of the system?" Peveto said. "This thing could turn sour if he (Briscoe) doesn't submit property tax reform."

Salinas echoed Peveto's stand in remarks to the University Daily Tuesday.

"One of the problems some of the members have is that the governor has failed to include property tax reform and we need that to have property tax relief," he said.

Any constitutional amendments passed by the Legislature must be approved by voters after being passed by a two-thirds majority of both the House and Senate.

That means at least 100 House members and 21 Senators must approve any amendments. Tuesday's roll call vote found only 82 House members willing to begin immediate hearings on the amendments.

If Briscoe doesn't add property tax reform to the call, Peveto said, "the votes are on the floor to keep anything from happening in the way of constitutional amendments, and it's going to be a job even then."

Salinas said he voted against suspension of the rules to allow consideration of the amendments because many of them will affect Lubbock and he would like more time to meet with local leaders to find out how some of the amendments will affect the taxing structure here.

Tech production sets precedent

By IELENE BENTLEY
UD Reporter

Nudity will make its debut on campus in late February with the Tech theater department's production of Peter Shaffer's drama "Equus."

According to Ronald Schulz, director and professor, the stage drama calls for a 5-10 minute nude scene. The staging of the scene will be the first time a nude scene has been performed at Tech although actors and actresses have stripped down to undergarments in past plays.

"Equus" is about a conflict between a psychiatrist and a teenage boy, Schulz said. The psychiatrist concerns himself with the boy's compulsion to blind horses with a metal spoke.

Near the end of the play, the boy tells the psychiatrist about an encounter with a girl and his later blinding the horses, Schulz said.

"The scene is not a realistic scene," he said. "It is metaphorical."

Schulz said the play was chosen because it is very important and significant. "Equus" is a play of high artistic matter, he said.

"The nude scene had nothing to do with the selection," he said. "If the audience expects pornography, they will be disappointed."

In 1975, "Equus" was named the Best Play by the New York Drama Critics Circle, the American Theater Wing, and the Drama Desk and the New York Outer Critics.

Before deciding on the play, the University Theater called the publishing company to contract for the rights to do the play. Richard Weaver, University Theater chairperson, said they were told Peter Shaffer would not permit the play to be changed in any way, not even the nude scene.

Schulz said some people have compared the play to "Hair" and "Oh! Calcutta" because of the nudity involved.

"That's like comparing potatoes, pecans, and gingersnaps because they are all brown," he said. "The three plays are all different."

Schulz and Weaver recently met with Lawrence Graves, dean of arts and sciences, to tell him of theater's intentions.

"We talked to him as a matter of courtesy," Schulz said. "So he would know what we were doing."

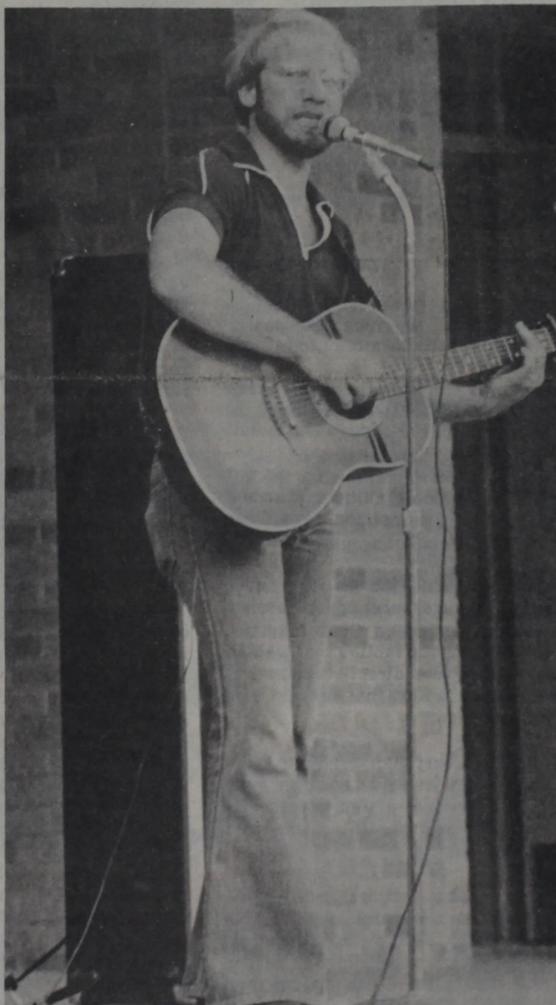

"I have great confidence in Schulz and Weaver," Graves said. "As I understand, the play is a powerful psychological drama."

Students in the Theater Department seem excited about the play, Weaver said.

"But not because they get a chance to take their clothes off," he added.

According to a paper titled "Equus: Human Conflicts And The Trinity" written by Samuel Terrien, professor emeritus of Old Testament at Union Theological Seminary in New York:

"The nude scene is not, as in some other plays of our decade, a gesture of conformity to current fad. It is intrinsic to the plot, for Alan and Jill expose themselves spiritually more than physically. Their innocence is poignantly made manifest."

Coalition offers to help HRC in drafting ordinance

By MIKE VINSON
UD Reporter

Spokesmen for the Coalition for Equal Justice Monday offered assistance to the Human Relations Commission (HRC) in drafting an ordinance prohibiting discrimination against minorities at local clubs.

The coalition representatives, who spoke before a monthly HRC meeting, also told the commission they would aid the HRC in urging the Lubbock City Council to adopt the discrimination ordinance into law.

The Coalition for Equal Justice announced its formation at a press conference Monday morning. The coalition is presently composed of 14 minority and legal organizations but coalition member Jesse George said he expects membership to eventually include approximately 25 clubs and organizations.

The coalition spokesmen criticized the City Council for failing to pass an ordinance prohibiting discrimination.

The Lubbock City Council passed a resolution at its last meeting condemning discrimination in public facilities, but council members said an anti-discrimination ordinance would be ineffective because of the relatively small penalties city ordinances carry.

According to council members, discrimination cases could be dropped after being appealed to the county court level because Lubbock has no court of record. A court of record would enable appeals to be made only on the basis of legal technicalities.

Dannie Botros, member of the National Organization for Women called the council's arguments against an ordinance a "smoke screen."

"That just won't cut it," Botros said. "We intend to pressure the council into passing an ordinance and we intend to keep up the pressure."

Rodric Schoen, Tech law professor and coalition member, said, "Whatever is done, there will probably have to be litigation and I don't think a court of record would have any bearing whatsoever."

The HRC has sent questionnaires to the 20 largest Texas cities to find what types of ordinances they have regarding discrimination said HRC director Luciano Perez.

"Of the seven responses we have gotten so far," Perez said, "three have tried cases and apparently got the problem straightened out. All of the ordinances are pretty much the same and most of the cities don't have a court of record."

Perez said the HRC's ordinance would not be completed until all the responses to the questionnaires had been received.

Freedom of speech: Nazis deserve it, too

Larry Elliott

When Nazis machine-gunned 100 citizens of Prague, Czechoslovakia, in front of the town's stately cathedral in 1941, German SS leader Heinrich Himmler fainted in his chair at the sight.

An onlooker said the gunner's first sweep left about one-third of the group alive "with agonized faces spurting gouts of blood, hands clutching at torn flesh, and limbs moving in puppet gestures..."

Himmler slipped from his chair, his glasses "fell off and the clanking sound they made on the floor was simultaneous with the sound of the machine gun as the executioner swept his gun from left to right again..."

The Nationalist Socialist Party of America, which has adopted the name, if not the tactics, of the German party that made even Himmler faint at times, held a Chicago's Marquette Park, raising some interesting questions about how far free speech can go in America today.

Marquette Park is surrounded by a residential area that many Eastern Europeans call home. Not far away, in the Chicago suburb of Skokie, thousands of survivors of Nazi concentration camps were faced with the prospect of seeing another demonstration in their own streets.

Should people who have survived death at the hands of European Nazis be forced to endure American Nazis goose-stepping through the streets of their hometown?

The people of Skokie didn't think so. They forced American Nazi leader Frank Collin into court for a legal battle that kept him off their streets for more than a year.

Collin cancelled the Skokie rally in favor of a speech in Marquette Park when the U.S. Supreme Court refused to stop the demonstration while the Chicago Park District continued its appeals.

At long last, Collin gained what the Constitution guarantees every American, the right to make a speech within the boundaries of free speech, which are rather large if the First Amendment is taken seriously.

That amendment says "Congress shall make no law respecting an establishment of religion, or prohibiting the free exercise thereof; or abridging the freedom of speech, or of the press; or the right of the people peaceably to assemble..."

The same amendment that allows The University Daily to irritate regents, college presidents, and even students who take the time to read the editorial page, lets American Nazis march through streets lined with screaming survivors of German Nazi concentration camps if they want to.

The Supreme Court acted correctly in allowing the march while the Chicago Park District appealed. The park district wanted the Nazis to post a $60,000 bond as a prerequisite, and nowhere in the First Amendment does it say the posting of a bond is part of freedom of speech.

Chicago's attempt to stop the Nazis, whose membership at the Sunday rally was only about 20, was an effort to license free speech and restrain it by unreasonable demands.

Constitutional scholar Martin Shapiro points to the opinions of former Supreme Court justices Black and Douglas during the "Red scare" of the fifties as an example of confidence in the Constitution. The anti-Nazi demonstrators could profit from that confidence.

In his book, "Freedom of Speech: The Supreme Court and Judicial Review," Shapiro says "a collapse of our national self-confidence in the face of an alien ideology" led people to imagine a Communist menace from within America "that never was and never could be."

What Shapiro said of Communism deserves to be repeated about Nazism: It is a menace that has never threatened America from within and never can if Americans believe in freedom of ideas.

The Chicago Nazis are similar to the German Nazis of the thirties in one way: They are a group of losers, cheap thugs with no future except through extremism, men whose method of operation repels people with a sense of fair-

The same amendment that allows The University Daily to irritate regents, college presidents and even students who take the time to read the editorial page, lets American Nazis march through streets lined with screaming survivors of German Nazi concentration camps if they want to.

No sensible person believes in Collin's "1978 white revolution" in which he hopes to wipe "blacks and their collaborators (Jews) off the face of the earth."

At most, Collin is simply a tiresome person who would have trouble drawing a crowd at Tech, unless he hit campus at a particularly dull time. (He might do well here after all.)

By including the First Amendment in the Bill of Rights, the Constitution's authors affirmed their belief that all political opinion, regardless of what others may think of it, has merit.

The Skokie march, though it never materialized, was a huge success for fascists because it split the American Civil Liberties Union squarely between one faction that wanted to protect views that were directly opposed to their own, and another faction that saw the Nazi issue as a "special case."

If the Supreme Court had prohibited the march, the fascist victory would have been even greater. It would have been a step toward giving those in power the right to restrict free speech.

Each year television networks roll out the story of the Holocaust to remind us of how the Jews suffered. So why should Jews object to Collin and his followers reminding us of the philosophy that built the death camps and created the Holocaust?

Cutting the cooling

(c) 1977 N.Y. Times News Service

If I were a conservative, having given the big taxers a taste of the axe, I would now forget the death penalty and the crusade against homosexuals for a while and attack one of the taproots of waste and big government. I refer to air conditioning in Washington.

Air conditioning has contributed far more to the decline of the Republic than unexecuted murderers and unorthodox sex. Until it became universal in Washington after World War II, Congress habitually closed shop around the end of June and did not reopen until the following January. Six months of every year, the nation enjoyed a respite from the promulgation of more laws, the depredations of lobbyists, the hatching of new schemes for federal expansion and, of course, the cost of maintaining a government running at full blast.

ONCE AIR CONDITIONING arrived, Congress had twice as much time to exercise its skill at regulating and plucking the population. The bureaucracy naturally slowed toward an idle after Congress had retreated to the boondocks, and even the president often went fishing. As recently as the 1950's, President Eisenhower regularly took two-month vacations in the Rockies.

He could afford to. Congress usually cleared out of town by midsummer even then and there was nobody left to hector him about running a limp presidency. Air conditioning at the Capitol ended all that, with the results we see today. After 20 years of year-round activity, what do we have? Grotesque inflation, swelling public payrolls, soaring taxes, library shelves bulging with incomprehensible government regulations, a flabby dollar, dying cities, failing families, too many lawyers, not enough porters and big air-conditioning bills.

A SOUND CONSERVATIVE solution is to turn off the Capitol air conditioning at midnight every June 30. If Congress insisted on sitting there afterward, fine. They would have to do it without air conditioning, though. After a few days of Washington in its natural July juices, we can be certain, they would not sit there long.

By August the rest of the country would be wallowing in relief from fresh ideas for taxation, ingenious schemes for making life more difficult and pressures on the president to exert more muscle in equatorial climes.

No longer would we have to sit in the parlor on summer evenings watching Congressmen scold us from air-conditioned television studios at the Capitol for being a nation of energy wastrels.

Here is conservatism at its very best. Cutting off the air conditioning takes us back to a time when American statesmen had to organize their business efficiently to save themselves the agony of summer sessions. Had there been air conditioning in 1776, the Declaration of Independence would not have been completed until December and we would now have to celebrate the Fourth of July and Christmas in the same week.

SUMMER WAS, AFTER ALL, terribly hot in most of the colonies from which the rebels came. The temptation to sit out the heat in the air conditioning of Independence Hall would have been overpowering. And who knows what they might have contived to fill the long summer months and to justify their preference for cool comfort in Philadelphia?

Since 1950, three elegant new office buildings have been constructed at the air-conditioned Capitol, although the membership of Congress has increased by only four persons since the building boom began. It is a lesser illustration of what happens to a government whose operators find it more convenient to stay in business year-round than to operate seasonally.

The custom of sitting year round in Washington was begun, not surprisingly, by the Southern block that dominated Congress during the 1950's. Until air conditioning arrived, they had made it a point to schedule business so they could take relief from Washington summers in the shade of the catalpa and the magnolia.

WITH AN AIR-CONDITIONED Capitol, however, the necessity for perspiring into their juleps abruptly ended. Instead of wilting by the swamps, they could now stay crisp as lettuce in the cool splendor of the Capitol. For voters accustomed to seeing them working the home turf during the steam season, of course, they had to offer justifications for remaining in Washington, and the best of all justifications was the pressing duty of toil for the national good.

This naturally required that toil be created to keep them bustling in the news. And so we had more governing. As Parkinson's Law observes, work expands to fill the time available for doing it. With twice as much time at its disposal, Congress created twice as much work, which meant twice as much governing. Let's pull those wires.

Letters:

Review 'the pits'

Dear Mr. Phinney:

Having been a student at Tech for two years now, I have had a chance to read your critiques. Some of these have been very good while others have been down right dumb.

I never have been compelled to write to a newspaper, but your critique of "Grease" was the pits. I find you suffer from one problem - you are a realist. The imagination is the key to Broadway plays. Who knows what might have happened if the movie had been "The Wiz" or "South Pacific"?

Olivia Newton-John may not be the girl next door, or John Travolta the original tough guy, but those two make the movie very enjoyable and put on a first class performance.

This is not intended to be a nasty letter, only one persons opinion that you should let your imagination be used. You are a fine writer or else you would not be writing in the U.D. Keep up the reviews (so that people like me may complain).

P.S. - Kevin, Grease is already breaking records at the box office, so we can't all be wrong in saying "Grease" is a good movie.

Metroplex midwife says results same without frills

ARLINGTON, Texas (AP) — There's no framed diploma on the wall, no mood music wafting through a lushly-appointed office. But Ken Revell, the Dallas - Fort Worth area's only advertising midwife, says the results are just the same.

The 30-year-old ex-Marine admits he has no impressive credentials to lend credibility to the happy words "mother and daughter are fine." He learned his work from other midwives and textbooks.

However, natural childbirth is in vogue and Revell said his lack of schooling doesn't seem to matter to the prospective parents.

"When people call me, they've already checked me out," he said. "I think what appeals to them is having the child in their home."

Revell has been a practicing midwife for about six weeks. He moonlighted for nine months while working as an unlicensed private nurse, but quit when his part-time delivery schedule got too heavy. He said he has had six healthy deliveries since he quit nursing.

"It took me three months to get listed as a midwife in the Yellow Pages," he said with a chuckle. "Southwestern Bell didn't believe midwifery was legal so I had to convince them."

Legalization is a sore spot with the Texas medical profession, but there's apparently no remedy for what ails the doctors.

"It seems to me that it's practicing medicine without a license," said Dr. James Short, director of the Tarrant County Medical Society in Fort Worth. "I wonder what his Revell's position will be on malpractice, if something goes wrong during delivery?"

John Sortore, director of investigations for the Texas State Board of Medical Examiners, said there is no law on midwifery in Texas. In fact, Sortore said the Texas appeals court ruled in the 1950s that obstetrics was "not the practice of medicine."

"We take the position that child birth is a normal phenomenon," he said. "Anybody can do it. It's when they midwives start performing Caesarean sections and using different kinds of drugs that it becomes questionable."

Sortore said a legal opinion has been requested from the Texas attorney general on those questions.

Revell knows how doctors feel about his occupation. He said he has extended an invitation to anyone in the Tarrant County Medical Society to watch him work.

To date, the invitation has not been accepted. But Revell really doesn't have time to worry about it. He's too busy trying to get recognized in the community — and what better way to do it than cut the competition's prices.

"I charge $675 for everything from prenatal through postnatal care. You can save $800 to $900 in hospital costs. And when it's done at home, the father can catch his own child," he said. "They don't allow that in hospitals. Usually, if he's in the delivery room, he's at the mother's head coaching her or over in a corner watching."

In Revell's case, it's the doctors who are watching him — and very closely at that.

Theatre workshop set

High school students with an interest in drama are invited to participate in a summer high school theatre workshop on July 21-August 5 at Tech.

Dr. George W. Sorenson, professor of theatre arts, who will direct the program, said interested students should already have some experience in the field.

He has scheduled sessions in the University Theatre to provide practical experience in acting, voice and movement development, make-up, stage combat, lighting, publicity and set and property design. Master classes will also be offered.

The sessions will close with performances, for which the students prepare for three hours daily.

More information about cost and specific offerings may be obtained by contacting Mona Brooks, Tech Theatre business manager, or Sorenson at 742-3601.

Music Man memorable

By ANA MORALES
UD Entertainment Editor

Tech Music Theatre and Civic Lubbock, Inc. joined forces and presented a memorable production of "The Music Man" Friday night in the Memorial Civic Center Theatre.

Music, sets and choreography were outstanding, and blended well with the pleasant comedy of the musical, resulting in an entertaining evening.

The entire cast interacted well. Tim King portrayed music man Harold Hill with an air of confidence which won over the hearts of the audience. Jana King as Marian Paroo, Hill's foil, was equally commendable. Both created their roles and delivered their musical numbers in an enjoyable manner.

Also outstanding were Helen Dewey Reikofski as Mrs. Paroo, and Carla Mc Coloum as Eulalie Mackecknie Shinn. Both women were equally humorous in their character roles.

Choreography of "The Music Man" was one of the most noteworthy portions of the production. Peggy Willis deserves special notice for her arrangement of the dance numbers. All seemed natural and effortless, and were very successful in capturing the mood of the show.

The sets of Hal Mack added depth to the production. The spirit of a small town in 1912 was captured through the design.

Collectively, the musical numbers were well done. The "Music West" barbershop quartet as the school board who become a vocal ensemble through Hill's magic, were especially well received by the audience.

Other musical highlights were "Ya Got Trouble," "Seventy-Six Trombones" and "The Wells Fargo Wagon." "Wells Fargo Wagon" at the close of the first act, which featured a live horse, was applauded wholeheartedly.

Producer-director John Gillas and musical director Kyung Wook Shin are to be commended for their efforts in making "The Music Man" an evening of enjoyable family entertainment. The entire show ran smoothly, and was well cast. Working with a large cast is often a difficult feat, and both men met the challenge well.

Friendship enhancement course planned

Quality communications skills can help college students increase adjustment, academic performance and general satisfaction, according to reports from the Tech home and family life department in the College of Home Economics.

As a result, a new interpersonal communication skills course in friendship enhancement for women will be offered at Tech next fall, according to Dr. Arthur W. Avery of the Home and Family Life Department. Contact course instructor

Debi Hegi for pre-registration, which will continue through Aug. 25. Women registering for the course are required to sign up for the course with a female friend.

A primary objective of the course is friendship enhancement.

Hegi said an advantage of the course is that students will be taught communication and helping skills which could help prevent relationship problems. Skills taught in the course include enhancing self-esteem, increasing openness, improving problem-solving abilities, helping students develop more rewarding relationships, learning the unique worth of friends and realizing the importance of friendship in the lives of students.

Empathy as a communication tool also will be taught. "In friendships people sometimes have the tendency to give too much advice instead of just being understanding and accepting," Hegi said.

The course will teach women participants to apply communication skills to other relationships outside the classroom with friends, dating partners and family members.

Relationship enhancement skills will be learned through group experiences, readings and assignments designed to develop skills as a part of the typical way students relate to others.

Dockery announces addition of two coaches

Donnie Laurence and Watson Brown already know what they must do when Aug. 19 arrives — help Tech's head football coach Rex Dockery transform a team with six returning starters into a Southwest Conference gridiron power. Laurence, the former head coach at Mount Pleasant High School, and Brown, one of Jacksonville (Ala.) State College's football staff, were recently chosen by Dockery to complete Tech's coaching staff.

"WE'RE ELATED to get two coaches of the caliber of Donnie and Watson," Dockery said when he made the official announcement last week. "Donnie has a great Southwest Conference background and is highly regarded throughout the state, and Watson is one of the top offensive coaches I have ever been associated with," he added. Laurence, a former all-Southwest Conference defensive end at Baylor, will replace Jess Stiles as defensive end coach. Brown, an ex-quarterback at Vanderbilt (Tenn.) University, will take Pat Hodgson's place as receiver-quarterback coach.

the first high school coach to be added to Dockery's staff.

BROWN WAS a coach at Jacksonville State last fall when the team went to the NCAA Division II national finals. He was a three-year starter at Vanderbilt during his college days and was national back-of-the-week after leading Vanderbilt to an upset of Alabama in 1969. He was also Southeast Conference sophomore-of-the-year.

Prior to coaching at Jackson State, Brown was on the staff on East Carolina University. The school had a 15-7 record during his two-year stay.

DOCKERY, LAURENCE, Brown and the rest of the Raider coaching contingent will start supervising two-a-day workouts on Aug. 21.

The men will work with 30 returning lettermen (six of whom were starters last year) and multitudes of hopefuls for the remaining 19 positions in preparation for the Sept. 9 opening game against the University of Southern California.

Mount Pleasant High School had a 66-11 record, went to the Class AAA semifinals once, and was district champion four times during the seven years Laurence was head coach there.

LAURENCE WAS also the athletic director at Mount Pleasant. The school won 29 district and two state championships while he was there.

Before his Mount Pleasant position, Laurence was an assistant coach for four years at Temple High School. Tech will be Laurence's first collegiate assignment. He is

Myers signs final recruit

Tech basketball coach Gerald Myers added the final recruit to his 1978 list which promises a change of style, with the signing of Larry Washington, a 5-11 guard from Brooklyn's Canarsie High School. Myers describes Washington as "a good all-around floorman. He can handle the ball and pass. He is very quick, and especially effective on the fast break."

Washington's abilities should fit into Myers' plan to open up the Tech offense more in the future. Myers said at the beginning of this recruiting season he was looking to fast break more if he could get the players. Washington, the fifth player signed by Tech this year, was recently named the most valuable player in the Phoenix Prep All-Star Tournament, which attracts outstanding high school players from across the nation.

He averaged 24 points per game on the Canarsie High team and was named to the All-New York City team. He was also the leading vote-getter on the team. Washington is the second Raider from Canarsie High. Tech's senior guard Geoff Huston played at Canarsie, also. Myers said the signing of Washington would probably conclude the 1978 recruiting season.

Campbell must still prove himself to Oiler assistant

SAN ANGELO, Texas (AP) — Heisman Trophy winner Earl Campbell, the nation's leading collegiate rusher last season and No. 1 pro draft pick of the Houston Oilers, still has to prove himself to Oiler offensive coordinator Ken Shipp.

"People do tackle better in the pros," Shipp said, contemplating the former Texas All-American's prospects against 240-pound pro linebackers. "So Earl will have to show me what he can do. I'm not really worried about anything with Earl though. "The little time I've been around him, I've been impressed with how he handles himself."

Campbell has been the center of attention at the Oilers training camp at Angelo State University since rookies started working out Monday in preparation for the Oilers' pre-season opener Aug. 6 in the Astrodome against the Denver Broncos. Campbell, who led the nation in rushing with 1,744 yards last season, starts camp as the No. 2 fullback behind

Tommy Duniven, who has played in one pro game, and rookie Gifford Nielson will battle for the backup position. The Oilers also are looking for a backup tight end to replace Jimmy Giles.

Dockery sets training schedule

Tech Head Football Coach Rex Dockery has announced that the Red Raiders will report Aug. 19 for fall training.

Two-a-day work-outs will begin Aug. 21. Since classes will begin late this fall, the Raiders will have only three weeks to prepare for the season opener against USC Sept. 9.

Dockery will welcome 30 returning lettermen at the beginning of fall drills. The Red Raiders will be looking to rebuild the offensive backfield and most of the defensive secondary.

Dockery sees these two areas as the primary concern during fall drills. With only six full-time starters returning from last year's squad, Dockery will face problems with experience and depth on his squad.
