A QUICK READ OF THE NEWS

Iron clad alibi doesn't work

The Dolly Cup Drive-In, then located at the southeast corner of South 1st Street and Avenue B, was robbed the night of Oct. 21, 1969.

Nothing unusual, until it was discovered who committed the crime — two Bailey County Jail inmates who thought they had an iron-clad alibi.

While investigating the offense, deputy sheriff Bob Henderson made a mental note that, based on footprints inside the Dolly Cup, one of the intruders walked on the outside of his right foot. Later, when Henderson was making a jail check, he noticed that one of the inmates walked that way.

A subsequent search by the deputy sheriff turned up packages of lunch meat, potato chips, bread and other food items stashed under the bunks.

The two inmates confessed to the crime.

They had broke out of jail (then located on top of the courthouse), climbed down the side of the courthouse, gone across the street, and broken into the drive-in.

They returned to jail by climbing back up the side of the building.

The two men thought their alibi was tight, even though the jail obviously wasn't.

A Memorial Day prayer

This Monday, we honor a very special group of Americans; men and women who have served our country and who gave their lives in the service.

Since those first shots were fired at Lexington and Concord in the Revolutionary War, over one million Americans have died in defense of our liberty and freedom.

In peacetime and war, these Americans answered our nation's call and defended our American way of life.

In honoring them, we recognize their dedication, courage and sacrifice, and we also celebrate the freedom they gave us.

These were people much the same as we are. They had the same dreams, hopes, ambitions; but when called upon, they put aside their personal interests and answered a higher calling.

In dying for our country, they passed on to us a legacy of liberty and freedom — and they also passed on to us a commitment to preserve what they died for.

A Memorial Day reminder

In observance of Memorial Day, schools, banks, the post office and government offices will be closed Monday.

Local medical clinics will also be closed.

Muleshoe, Lazbuddie, Three Way named valdectorians, salutatorians

Local high schools have named the top students from the 1998 senior class.

Brianne Locker is the valedictorian for Muleshoe High School. She is the daughter of Don and Donna Locker. During high school, she was involved in the student community action club, was treasurer of the National Honor Society and Fellowship of Christian Athletes. A student pilot, Brianne also served as senior class secretary.

The honor graduate received the UIL Scholar Award, the AP English III award, the algebra II award, the honors and AP physics award, the economics award, and the Academic Award of Excellence. She was also named a Tandy Technology Scholar.

After graduation Locker plans to attend Angelo State University, majoring in biology. Her long term goals include going to medical school and specializing in neonatology.

Julie Slayden is the salutatorian for Muleshoe High School. Slayden, the daughter of Mike and Teresa Slayden, was involved in many UIL events including ready writing, literary criticism, and the computer contest in which she advanced to region and state levels. She was a member of the student community action club, and a Tandy Technology Scholar.

After graduation Slayden plans to attend Tarleton State University.

Three Way Schools named Joshua Tooley, the son of Howard and Jan Tooley of Maple, the top student.

Honoring all those who died to keep us free

By all accounts, Billie Mack Black was well-liked and had a flare for poetry.

He was 21 years old when he went off to fight in World War II. Black didn't make it back alive. He was killed in battle in the South Pacific in early 1942.

The 1939 Muleshoe High School graduate was Bailey County's first casualty in World War II.

The Bailey County Cemetery Association is holding a Memorial Day ceremony at the cemetery at 9 a.m. Monday to honor the 99 known veterans who served in four wars that are buried there.

It is not know how many died in battle.

"We're trying to get back to what Memorial Day really means," said David Wyer, a board member of the Bailey County Cemetery Association. "To honor those who went before us."

Two of Black's three surviving relatives expect to attend the ceremony; his sister Margaret Alton Epting and his brother Eugene Black, both of Muleshoe. Another sister, Jewel Lawrence Perry, is unable to attend.

"I think it's wonderful," Epting said of the special ceremony.

In a 1942 edition of the Muleshoe Journal, Muleshoe superintendent W.C. Cox paid tribute to Black.

"He was an excellent student, thorough and loyal. He was not satisfied just to do a job. He wanted to the very best it was possible for him to do."

It is my firm conviction that if Billie had known in advance that to serve his country had meant to give all, he would have stepped up as cheerfully as if he were going to a ball game."

Billie Black is survived by Eugene Black, Margaret Epting

Billie Mack Black

Black had a flare for poetry according to those who knew him. The following is a Christmas poem from a letter he wrote home in 1941.

"Your Merry Christmas" I won't be there for Christmas

I'll stay, like other soldiers do;
Ten thousand miles away
— Defending the red, white and blue.

In the world of dreamland
Far across the rolling sea;
I'll wish you the merriest Christmas that ever can be.

We're not in the land of reindeer

No snow for Santa's sleigh;
But he'll bring a cart of wishes

For you on Christmas Day.

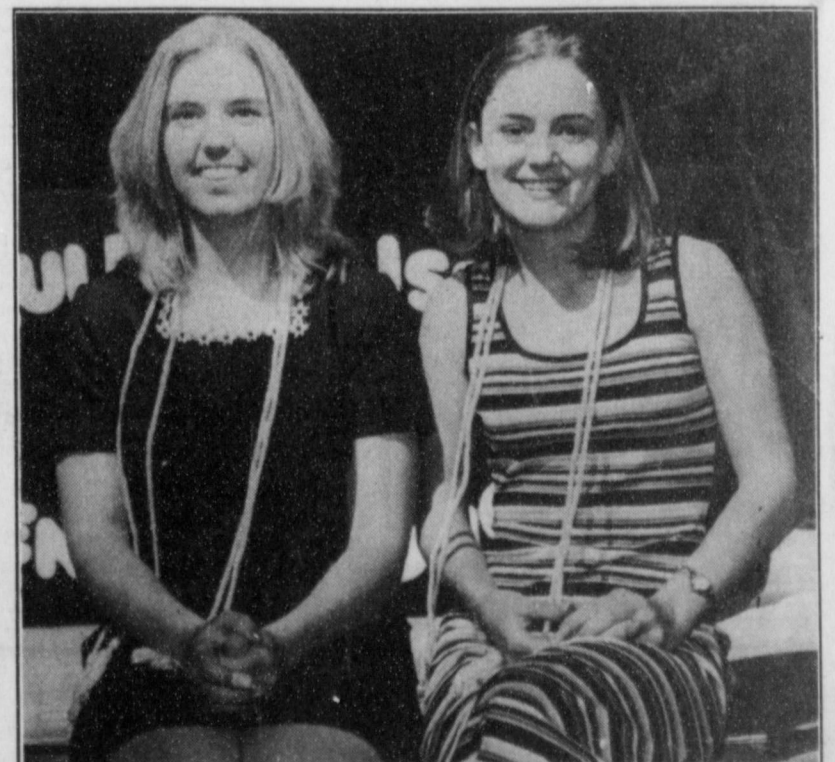

and Jewel Perry.

After training at Fort Bliss in El Paso, Black was sent overseas to the Phillipine Islands in September of 1941.

Private first class Billie Black was wounded in a Japanese bombing raid Jan. 1, 1942, near the town of Orani, Luzon Island, as he was about to cross a bridge. He died five days later in a military hospital in Limay and was buried there.

His body was later returned

Guest speaker
Krish Dhanam, a motivational speaker with the Zig Ziglar corporation, came to Muleshoe Wednesday to help inspire the local youth to stay on the right track.

WJHS speaker preaches self worth

By TERESA STONE
Journal staff writer

Muleshoe junior high students were given a few helpful hints in living a successful, happy life.

Krish Dhanam, a motivational speaker with the Zig Ziglar corporation, came to Muleshoe to help inspire the local youth to stay on the right track.

During four performances Wednesday at the Muleshoe High School auditorium, Dhanam spoke to Watson Junior High School students, Muleshoe High students, the MISD staff, and local parents and concerned citizens.

Dhanam, who usually addresses adult audiences, said that he talks to student groups because "children are close to my heart."

Although the 35-year-old native of India was brought to Muleshoe by the Muleshoe

Parents' Coalition for a Drug-Free Community, he didn't focus on the traditional "just say no" campaign.

Through stories and anecdotes, Dhanam focused on telling students that each and every one was unique, different and special.

"You need to care for yourself first," Dhanam told junior high students. "You do matter. You are important."

It was the theme of his 45-minute speech.

Dhanam captivated the audience as he explained his own struggles of growing up in India, and moving to the United States with only $9 to his name.

He told the students how hard work and determination paid off, making him a successful family and business man.

Although everything is going great now, Dhanam said that he realizes how easily his life could have taken a completely different path.

"It only takes a second to do the wrong thing — to make the wrong decision. In that one instant, when you decide to drink alcohol, skip school, steal, do drugs, make a poor decision, your situation, your future could change."

Dhanam stressed to the kids that there is no easy way out once on the path towards destruction.

"Before you do something, remember that just because someone is saying something is cool, that doesn't make it cool. You need to ask yourself, Is it worth it, do I really want this?"

Dhanam talked about how decisions can be difficult when you are young due to pressure from teachers, parents and peers, as well as dealing with the physical and physiological changes of becoming an adult.

But when you are at rock bottom, Dhanam has a solution — hope.

"How do you become successful if you are at rock bottom?", Dhanam asked the junior high kids. "Your place in life is determined by your hope, not where you are from, not what color you are, and not how much money you have. You must have hope, you must care about your dreams and aspirations."

The kids that were told to plan for their futures, plan to be successful, and surround themselves with people who want them to succeed, not ones who want to hold them back, drag them down.

Through it all, Dhanam had one main message for the pre-teens — "You are worth success."

Big turnout expected for Memorial roping

For those other than the die-hards, team roping could be called a conversation sport — fleeting moments of excitement followed by extensive periods of conversation.

But for the annual Muleshoe Roping Club Memorial Weekend team roping, something has been added for the fans.

To kick off the weekend's events, the MRC will host an Open Rodeo Run on Saturday night at Dusty Rhodes Arena. Instead of the ropers using their heads (sort of) and roping for the typical four-head average, it's a brains-out-the-window battle to see who's the fastest on one run. No handicaps, no numbers. Open to the world. Shake your face, drag a knot, get left, pull back.

Instead of runs in the 9 to 12 second range, the times will be in the 5 to 7 second time frame.

"We thought we'd try it and see what happened," said Thurman Myers, who with his brother C.L. produces the roping in conjunction with the Roping Club. "It should be fun to watch because there's no laying back on a rodeo run. You've got one shot and being conservative won't win money."

The Open Run Rodeo is expected to draw some of the best ropers in the area, including several PRCA members.

The Open Rodeo Run starts at 6:30 p.m. and will be followed by a No. 11 in a 6 head for $100 per team format and $1,000 cash added. For the team roping purists, the 6-header could be a classic.

The event resumes Sunday at 10 a.m. with a No. 9 in a 4 for $60 format. No. 7 and No. 5 ropings will follow. Average winners in each of Sunday's ropings will get trophy saddles in addition to cash prizes.

The event saw 923 teams compete over two days last year.

Phone lines to trails: seeking fairness on rail corridors

Editor's note: This is the second part of a two-part series questioning the ownership of abandoned railroad corridors. By MACE THORNTON Farm Bureau writer

People who own property along railroad tracks frequently own the adjoining strips of land on which the rails were built. Railroad companies do hold rights on that land, but only for the purpose of running a railroad.

Many rail companies, however, are leasing nonrailroad rights to that land and, in some cases, selling it, according to Washington, D.C., attorney Nels Ackerson.

The lead attorney in several landowner lawsuits that cite abuse of railroad rights-of-way, Ackerson says when individuals along the corridor own the land, they, not the railroads, are entitled to any resulting nonrailroad profits.

Today, however, the true landowners often go unrewarded.

Telecommunications firms, utilities and groups wishing to establish hiking and biking trails bear some responsibility. They often negotiate with rail companies to lease rights or purchase the corridor, while disregarding the land's true owners.

"Beginning in the 1980s, AT&T, MCI and other major telecommunications companies tried to kly as possible," Ackerson says. "The techniques they used are remarkably similar to what the railroads did earlier. Often, they made sweetheart deals with railroads for land the railroads controlled but did not own. Then they just put the cable down and waited for somebody to complain."

Many times, the cable was installed under operating and abandoned rail corridors and the telecommunications companies paid the railroads nice fees. They paid the true landowners nothing. According to Ackerson, even if the landowner protested, the only option was the highly unlikely action of taking the offending telecommunications giant to court.

Landowners vs. AT&T

That's why Ackerson recently filed a classaction lawsuit on behalf of landowners against AT&T.

Landowners along other telecommunications lines also have approached him about lawsuits against several other companies that have used land without landowner consent. Huge profits are being reaped by using other people's land, according to Ackerson.

"The railroads are getting a cut of that, which in many cases they don't deserve and have no right to," Ackerson noted. "And the telecommunications companies are getting a break because they are not paying the rightful owners."

Telecommunications firms may be headed for a financial train wreck, according to Ackerson.

Many of the agreements they negotiated for their fiber optic cables were 25-year leases or licenses, entered into about 15 years ago with railroads that didn't own the land.

"In 10 years or so, if not sooner, even without landowner lawsuits, telecommunications firms are going to have to find a way to negotiate new deals with railroads and others for fiber that's already in place. And, they will have to negotiate at market value," Ackerson says. "The railroads are going to hold 'em up. And second, landowners are going to be smarter by that time. So, in 10 years, AT&T and other firms are going to have a huge problem. But, it's been a hidden problem because the railroads have pretended they owned all of this, and nobody's given them a serious challenge."

Ackerson's classaction lawsuit against AT&T on behalf of landowners could change that. Landowners vs. government

The federal government is also making illadvised calls on who controls and can sell abandoned rail corridors. Based on the National Trails System Act, the government allows hiking and biking trails to be established along abandoned lines with no permission from the true owners of the land. Ackerson has represented landowners who have succeeded in stopping trails where the federal government did not have jurisdiction and where the owners had not consented or been compensated.

"Don't get me wrong. Trails can be wonderful benefits to a community," Ackerson says. "But that's really not the point. The point is, you have to respect people's ownership before you simply take something."

Trails proponents have been successful in blanketing the rails-to-trails issue in virtue, by ignoring the question of whose land is being taken and focusing only on public recreational benefits, according to Dan Throckmorton was born June 23, 1932 in Hockley County. Dan's parents, 4 siblings and himself moved to Whitharral where Mr. Throckmorton graduated from Whitharral High School and joined the Air Force. He served four years. After his discharge in 1956 Dan moved to Bailey County.

Mr. Throckmorton engaged in farming from 1956 until 1987. Although he no longer works the farm, Dan still lives in the same country home he first bought. To supplement his farming Dan and his wife started doing refinishing work in their back yard in 1980.

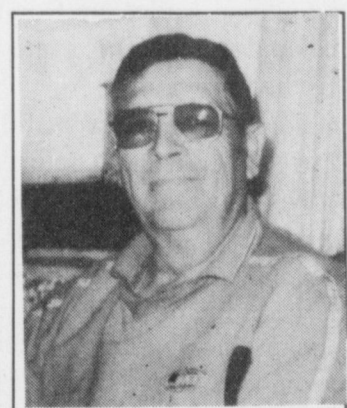

In January of 1991 the refinishing business was moved into town with lots of help from the Muleshoe community. A fire virtually destroyed their back-yard shop December 22, 1990. Dan retired in June 1997 although he still dabbles in refinishing trunks.

Mr. Throckmorton married Millie Bryant in December 1952. The couple has been married for 46 years but have been "sweethearts" for much longer. Dan admits that he would have married Millie when they were 16 but she had enough sense not to say "yes" to him at such a young age. The couple has 3 daughters: Vowery Carlile of Sundown, Danita Fischvach of Anchorage, Alaska, and Belinda Caswell of Needmore. Dan is the proud grandfather of eight.

Mr. Throckmorton enjoys travelling with Millie in their fifth-wheel camper, sight seeing, hunting and fishing. The couple is planning several trips after Dan's recovery from hip surgery.

Dan is on the board of the Heritage Foundation and is a member of the 16th & D Church of Christ.

He really praises the staff of M.A.H.H.A. "They're wonderful. You can't find any nicer people. They're very efficient."

May business of the month

SENATOR

Marque, began her career on the state level, twice being elected to the Texas House of Representatives. In 1990, she was elected Texas State Treasurer, where she trimmed her agency's budget more than any other state official while increasing returns on Texas investments to a historic $1 billion annually. She also spearheaded a successful fight against a state income tax.

During her four years as a senator, the University of Texas Law School graduate has been instrumental in the passage of several important federal laws. Most notable are the federal anti-stalking bill and the Home-maker IRA legislation that significantly expanded retirement opportunities for stay-at home spouses.

Hutchison currently serves on the Senate Commerce, Science and Transportation committee, where she chairs the subcommittee on Surface Transportation and Merchant Marine. She is also co-chair of the Congressional Oil and Gas Caucus and the U.S. Mexico Interparliamentary Conference.

In January 1997, she joined the key Senate Appropriations Committee. Her defense and military construction subcommittee assignments give Senator Hutchison an excellent opportunity to represent Texas on two panels which make crucial decisions on federal defense spending.

Serving on the Armed Services Committee for more than two years, the Senator was able to be an effective advocate for United States military personnel and their families, and help increase the readiness and support for the armed forces.

Senator Hutchison lives in Dallas with her husband Ray, a former colleague from the Texas House.

to his family and he was laid to rest in the Bailey County Cemetery Oct. 14, 1948.

His parents, Mr. and Mrs. C.M. Black of Muleshoe, received the Purple Heart awarded posthumously.

Pfc. Black was born Perryton and his family moved to Muleshoe in 1933.

After graduating high school, he attended business school in Clovis, N.M., where he was a member of the National Guard.

"He was just a regular teenager," said Epting, now 82. She said he attended business school "because he didn't want to be a farmer."

RAILROADS

Ackerson.

"If you attack the idea of a trail, you'll find you are attacking apple pie and motherhood," Ackerson says. "What needs to be attacked is the idea of taking somebody's land without even considering paying for it and without consulting them first. Now, that's offensive to almost everybody, including most trails advocates."

While some trails supporters consider Ackerson to be an opponent to trails, he takes it all in stride, buoyed by his belief that, in his class actions and other cases, he is doing what's right and fair for the landowner.

Revised projections

"When I began these cases and took them on, it was primarily because people had been done a wrong and I wanted to help them correct it," he says.

"I did not anticipate that the cases might involve hundreds of millions of dollars of those companies' revenues and therefore make them into huge cases. I didn't anticipate that I would have three or sometimes four lawyers working full time for years in order to accomplish this.

What I thought might have cost us many thousands of dollars to pursue is instead costing literally millions of dollars worth of time and resources."

In fact, Ackerson says he has overheard attorneys defending the railroad companies privately boast their beliefs that his firm "did not have the horses" to keep the cases going.

While it's true that Ackerson and his associates have made personal sacrifices for the sake of furthering their work, Ackerson and his supporters know the cases are firmly on track.

There's a track on the window sill of Ackerson's office, where he displays a model train. The locomotive and each box-car is stamped with the logo of a railroad he has met in court. To Ackerson, the train symbolizes victory a victory for landowners, who, for so long, have not been given any choice by America's railroads.

USDA launches new egg safety regulations

In an effort to boost consumer confidence in the safety of eggs, the Agriculture Department on Monday launched a program that will reduce the risk of salmonella.

The program prohibits companies from repackaging eggs once they leave the henhouse.

The plan also changes egg processing, handling and storage procedures to prevent food borne diseases. USDA also is considering requiring "sell by" dates on fresh eggs, strictly controlling the temperature in trucks transporting eggs to market, setting guidelines on safe handling of eggs at restaurants and supermarkets and creating a nationwide surveillance program to track salmonella among flocks.

The Agriculture Department also is stressing egg safety at home. Proper refrigeration and cooking drastically reduces the risk of salmonella bacteria.

The egg industry has said it will work with regulators to assure the public egg products are safe.

SPORTS BRIEFS

Kemp selected for all-star game

Muleshoe senior Layne Kemp has been selected to play in the Texas High School Baseball Coaches Association All-Star Game June 17 at the Ballpark in Arlington.

The third baseman/pitcher batted a team-high .561 with three home runs and 31 RBI. On the mound, Kemp was 12-3 with a 2.81 earned run average.

Lady Mules hoop camp June 1-4

The annual Lady Mules basketball camp is being held June 1-4 at the Muleshoe High School gym.

The camp is open to girls in the third through ninth grades (as of next year).

Morning sessions (8 a.m. to noon) are for third through sixth graders. Afternoon sessions (1 p.m. to 5 p.m.) are for sixth through ninth-graders.

Sixth-graders can attend either of the sessions. The cost of the camp is $45.

For more information or to register, contact Muleshoe girls head coach Jim Gruhkey at the high school at 272-7571.

Walk-ins will be accepted on the first day of camp.

Summer in the Panhandle can sometimes feel like the Sahara. That is, unless you have the Energy Efficient Heat Pump. In summer, the heat pump removes the warm air from inside your home to keep you cool and comfortable. And in winter, it reverses itself to become a high-efficiency heating system. Today's heat pumps save more energy and money than ever before...on the average, they're 40 percent more efficient than models were 10 years ago.

Energy, beyond.

Killingsworths celebrate 60 years of marriage

By O.J. Killingsworth
Special to the Journal
After six decades of love and dedication, O.G. and Loyce Killingsworth guess that everything is going to work out just fine.

The couple celebrated their 60th wedding anniversary May 9 with nearly their entire family in attendance to help celebrate.

The Killingsworths have four children; Mary Ann, Jerry, Jean and Kay. All were present along with their respective families. With children, grandchildren, great-grandchildren and friends of the family, it was quite a weekend on West 7th Street in Muleshoe. At one point, the count was 42 people. The celebration could have easily been mistaken for a rodeo as trucks and horse trailers lined the block. With a rope in almost every hand, there wasn't a thing walking that was safe from grandkids with ropes. Probably the most memorable quote of the weekend was when Loyce said, "I sure am glad we got together like this so you kids will know one another."

shoe playing basketball, pool, and ping-pong.

Everyone took a break to watch a slide presentation of pictures from the past. Some commented on the dress Loyce was wearing while others noticed the old tractor in the background that ole' so-and-so sold to O.G. 30 or 40 years ago.

The show was in chronological order which made it funny to see the number of people in each picture keep getting bigger and bigger.

There was a story behind every picture. Older family members reminisced talking about things that happened on that day and trying to guess which baby was in the wagon or on the couch.

Saturday evening was spent at the activities center in Mule-

Sunday morning everyone filed into church filling row after row. Everything was exactly the way O.G. and Loyce wanted it to be. The entire family was together and in church. It may seem like a simple idea, but just try and get 42 people from four different states in the same place at the same time.

Everyone visited and gave their congratulations after church. Within a matter of hours almost as fast as they blew in. The only difference was the promise that it would not be 10 years before they would meet again.

So congratulations Grandmother and Grandpa. You are truly role models for all of us. We love you very much and can't wait to celebrate your 70th.

I would like to say thank you to everyone for their prayers, visits, phone calls, cards and expressions of concern to myself and Mary during my recent illness and surgery.

A Life Is a Terrible Thing To Waste

One advantage to the evening service time change our church adopted a year or two ago is that I now occasionally get to hear CBS commentator Andy Rooney as he closes out "60 Minutes" on Sunday evenings.

I agree with Rooney often, but never more than on the decided that life was meaningless, he chose to waste his own wiped out on drugs and writing repugnant lyrics to songs that would be meaningless if they weren't worse. Assisted by greedy handlers who stayed sober enough to count profits, he marketed his mental filth by selling truckloads of tapes and CDs filled with "songs" that are profane, rude, hateful, and offensive by any standard.

Focus On Faith
Curtis Shelburne
When will our society learn that ideas have consequences? Our thinking about life, about God, about meaning, about who we are and why we are here, matters. Our answers to those questions become the basis on which we chart the direction of our lives—and our society.
The Kurt Cobains of our world are more than willing to market their own blindness. Why we make millionaires out of them and cry when they're gone is beyond me. (It makes me wonder what we've been smoking ourselves!) A society that stomachs this stuff deserves the bitter harvest it reaps.
But we have a choice. We can buy their product and their philosophy and wallow with them in blind despair, or we can focus on the Author of Life and allow Him to fill our lives with beauty and meaning. It's our choice.
Curtis Shelburne is minister of the 16th & Avenue D Church of Christ in Muleshoe.

evening he talked about the life and death of Kurt Cobain, who, until he ended his own pathetic life, was the lead singer for the hard rock (and mostly stoned) group, Nirvana.
Rooney noted that on the same day Cobain took the final step, the logical end of his morally bankrupt life, a prize-winning scientist and university professor (whose name I can't recall) died. The man had devoted his long life and career to the pursuit of knowledge and the betterment of humanity. Rooney figured he'd save his tears for the professor whose death was a genuine loss. Me, too.
I don't know when Kurt Cobain started flunking tests, but I know he bombed out on life's most important ones. Having
