COMPANIES CONTINUE DRILLING LEASES IN FIELD

Major companies have continued to buy leases in the western part of Mitchell county during the week. The independents have been busy in the district during the week and have purchased many small tracts. Practically all the active companies, both independent and new owners in Mitchell county.

The wells will be drilled by the Standard Oil Company, subsidiary of the Standard Oil Company of California, according to unofficial reports. By far the greater part of the Standard Oil Company's holdings are in the south central part of Mitchell county.

A. T. Spaulding Oil Company, Elpha Morrison No. 1, was on the pump Thursday. Flush production is estimated at 100 barrels. The well is producing from a depth of 2662 feet.

Reno-Tex. Oil and Land Company, Conewey No. 1 is to be drilled at 3250 feet. The company has made another location for the same block and survey. Magnolia Petroleum Company, Foster Ranch No. 1 will be drilled by the latter part of the week. Material is being hauled to location from Iatan.

Colorado-Tex. Oil Company's No. 2, has set 8-inch casing at 51 feet.

LeSurre No. 1 is drilling at approximately 600 feet. Murphy No. 1 is drilling at approximately 1800 feet.

LeSurre Petroleum Company's No. 1 is shut down at 700 feet.

Etta Brennan No. 1 is down approximately 1650 feet.

Drilling Company's No. 1 is fishing for drill at 51 feet.

Association made location and have tools ready.

Johnston's Stewart No. 1 has derrick up and are moving. At the company's Capps No. 1 derrick is being erected. Tools are at Iatan. The company Jones No. 1 expect to erect this week.

OIL ACTIVITIES.

It is now firmly believed that the expected oil development campaign is to be launched in Mitchell and Howard counties by the big companies. This campaign seemed to be under way for some time, but about a week ago operations were expected. The field was opened in some other part of the State and our section is waiting. The oil found in the wells drilled in this territory is adding credence to the report that there is a big field of oil somewhere in West Texas, and some of the big companies believe that it is in this section. The fact that more or more of the big oil companies are going to drill test wells in this section is a further fact that there is a big field of oil in this section. The fact that we can expect some development in this field within a few months. It should not be too long before we know something definite about the oil possibilities in this section.

UP THOSE DELINQUENT SCHOOL TAXES

Members of the School Board of the Independent School District are sending notices to all who are delinquent with their school tax payments for any year from 1916 to 1922. They are sending notices in order that our folks pay such taxes now and avoid the additional penalties and costs. If taxes are not paid it will be necessary to publish the delinquent names and suits for collection will be instituted in accordance with the law. If suits are filed this will mean an additional cost so it will be necessary to pay up these delinquent taxes promptly.

Our schools are going to need money that can be raised, it is essential that these taxes be collected as soon as possible.

It is generally known at a thing they are doing.

Meeting of Democratic Chairmen.

A meeting of precinct chairmen of the Democratic party of Howard county was held in Big Spring Monday for the purpose of appointing judges for the primary election precincts, apportioning the cost of holding the first and second primaries, among the candidates, selecting by lot the order in which the county candidates names shall appear on the ticket, and transacting other business.

After a discussion as to whether or not the election of the candidates shall be by a majority or plurality vote it was unanimously decided that the successful candidate must receive a majority vote. It was also decided that the statutory pledge—"I am a Democrat and will support the Democratic nominees"—shall be printed on the official ballot to be used in the primary.

The following presiding judges were named to supervise the elections in the various precincts: Precinct 1—L. E. Lomax; Precinct 2—Sam Etone; Precinct 3—A. L. Throp; Precinct 4—J. M. WATER SYSTEM AFFORDS VERY GOOD PRESSURE

A test was made here Monday afternoon to determine the pressure at the fire hydrants and the result was most gratifying. At the fire plug at the corner of Main and First streets the gauge registered a few pounds over one hundred and settled to an even one hundred pound pressure. Another test was made near the fire station which is on a much higher point, but owing to a leaky connection an exact register could not be secured. At this hydrant the natural pressure was seventy-five pounds.

The reservoir being so much higher than the city gives us this excellent pressure, this and the further fact that a much greater reserve supply of water can be maintained since the city reservoir has been enlarged. The reservoir is now adequate to store a ten day supply of water for our city should the pumps be stopped for that length of time.

HONORING BRIDE TO BE.

A pretty social event of the week was a three course luncheon given by Miss Zue Hardy at her home Tuesday, June 20, announcing the approaching marriage of Miss Juell Wright to Mr. M. D. Stoner, June 22nd.

The color scheme of pink and white was carried out in the many beautiful flowers decorating the reception room and dining room.

The place cards were represented by miniature brides and grooms mounted on little hearts on which was written the date of the marriage. Tiny gilded wishbones as a significance of luck were presented to the guests as favors.

Those present included only the intimate school friends of the bride-to-be: Mrs. Clyde Fox, Mrs. T. E. Helton, Mrs. Yvonne Robb, Misses Sadie Lee Hod, Vivian Johnson, Maud Leeper, and the honoree, Miss Juell Wright, and hostess, Miss Zue Hardy.

Painters and carpenters have been busy making improvements on the Chamber of Commerce building this week. The office furniture and fixtures of the Chase Oil Association, Inc., of Boston, are being installed in this building and John Cheer, President of the Association will make his headquarters here for the present.

JULY FOURTH CELEBRATION

The members of William Frank Martin Post No. 185, American Legion, have everything in readiness to stage a big Basket Picnic and Rodeo in Big Spring on Tuesday, July 4th, and extend a cordial invitation to everyone in West Texas to attend.

The morning program will consist of a Community Sing Song; an address by a speaker of statewide prominence and other numbers.

The morning program will be carried out on the Court House Lawn. In order that women and children attending the picnic may be protected against accidents the streets adjacent to the court house will be closed to traffic. Main Street will be closed between Second and Third Streets. Third Street will be closed between Main and Scurry Streets. Tables for spreading the big picnic dinner will be arranged on Third Street and everyone is urged to bring a well filled basket and join their friends in seeing that there is a big "feed" for all visitors, especially.

In the afternoon, beginning at 1:30 o'clock the big Rodeo will be held at the ball park. This is to be a paid attraction, a price of 50c for children and 75c for adults will be charged at the gate. This admits one to all the Rodeo events and to the baseball game which is to be held at the close of the Rodeo.

A big platform dance will be given Monday and Tuesday nights, July 3rd and 4th. A big outdoor dancing pavilion will be erected at the corner of West Third and Scurry Streets for those who care to enjoy dancing.

As to just how big and successful a celebration this is going to be is up to our folks. We can all join in and make it a whopping success and there is every reason why we should back up the members of the American Legion in making it a huge success.

The day is a national holiday and one that should be observed by all red-blooded Americans. We can pack up our little picnic lunch and selfishly seek a place to spend the day or we can all attend this picnic, pool our lunches, meet and mingle, renew old friendships, enjoy the program prepared for the day and make it a day of real enjoyment for everyone. Let's throw in and make this celebration the biggest and best Big Spring has ever attempted.

A full program of the activities planned will appear in the next issue of the Herald. Make your plans to attend and urge your neighbors. Plenty of shade and ice water will be arranged for.

MIDDLETON-WHEELDON

The marriage of Robt. Vincent Middleton and Miss Louise Wheeldon took place Friday, June 16th, at 6:30 p. m. at the home of the bride's parents Mr. and Mrs. W. E. Carnrike. Rev. E. T. Eteson, rector of the Episcopal Church performed the ring ceremony. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out in the house decorations as well as in the lovely three tier wedding cake, beautifully decorated. Before the ceremony Miss Vivian Johnson sang "Because", accompanied by Miss Lucile Johnson, who also played the wedding march. Miss Vivian Johnson wore pink taffeta and Miss Lucile wore blue taffeta; both wore large leghorn hats trimmed in garden flowers. Miss Reba Orenbaun was maid of honor, she wore a frock of periwinkle taffeta with hat to match. The bridegroom was accompanied by Harry Wheeldon, brother of the bride as best man. The bride's costume was navy blue suit, grey and blue blouse, grey hat, shoes and gloves.

Miss Patti Douthit of Abilene, lovely in afternoon frock of pink taffeta was in charge of the brides register.

After the ceremony a reception was held, after which the bride and groom left for a wedding trip. Both young people are well known and loved in Big Spring and their friends wish for them many years of happiness.

The out-of-town guests were Mr. and Mrs. E. W. Douthit, of Abilene; Mr. J. W. Middleton, of Stamford, and Mrs. J. F. Milstead of El Paso.

NEW FILLING STATION OPENS

Homan & Lees Service Station opposite the Lyric Theatre on Third Street was opened for business Wednesday and has been one of the busiest places in our city the past few days. On Wednesday there was almost a constant procession of cars driving into this handsome new filling station. The station is equipped with every modern convenience and in addition to selling gasoline and lube will keep a full line of auto tires and accessories.

Harold Homan and Herb Lees, the proprietors, are going to give real service to their patrons and expect their station to become famous as the station of "personal service" on the highway. A welcome always awaits you at this drive-in filling station.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

On of the most enjoyable social events of the season was a five course breakfast given to twenty-three of her girl friends by Miss Reba Orenbaun last Friday morning, announcing the coming marriage of Miss Louise Wheeldon to Mr. Robert Middleton, Friday, June 16th.

The dining room was beautifully decorated with flowers, and other attractions significant of the occasion. Six tables were adorned with lovely shaded candles, and when they were lighted they cast a soft glow over the snowy linen and cunning little baskets used as favors, presenting a lovely picture. A color scheme of yellow and white was carried out, both in decorations and in the breakfast. As the guests were seated a large heart shaped box was passed to each from which they drew small white envelopes, numbered from one to twenty-four. Each was read in order beginning at one and contained jokes, quotations, and personal remarks; the twenty-fourth and last containing the announcement.

The breakfast served in courses consisted of the following: Grape fruit, fried chicken, shoe string potatoes, french fried tomatoes, hot biscuits and coffee, apricot salad, ice cream and cake, cocktails were served when toasts were given by Miss Mary Johnson to the groom, to the bride by Mrs. Harry Hurt, and to the bride and groom by Miss Mabel Ricker.

Each guest was presented with a favor by the hostess as they departed.

KITCHEN SHOWER.

On Monday afternoon Misses Annabell Cook, Elsie Coon and Essie Haller entertained at the home of the latter, with a kitchen shower honoring Miss Louise Wheeldon, a June bride-to-be.

After the arrival of the guests, each one was asked to write their favorite recipe which was slipped in a box as a memoir. Then every one was given a little story of "The love affair of Johnny Cake and Miss Poppy Pan." The missing words were to be filled in by naming some kitchen article which made it very enjoyable. Misses Zou Hardy and Mary Johnson winning the prize for the most correct story, which was a box of animal cakes.

Amidst this laughter Miss Wheeldon was called into the dining room where a friend awaited her in the person of Old Aunt Dina. Aunt Dina was under a burden of kitchen utensils of ever conceivable variety. A most beautiful and original color scheme was carried out on each plate. Green and red being the chosen colors. The course consisted of fruit salad, sandwiches, olives, cake and iced tea.

Miscellaneous Shower.

Among the numerous social courtesies extended Miss Louise Wheeldon, whose marriage to Mr. Robert V. Middleton takes place Friday evening, July 16th, at 6 o'clock, was a miscellaneous shower given by Miss Vivian Johnson Tuesday morning, June 13th. This being a surprise to the honoree. Each gift was concealed on every individual guest. Miss Wheeldon was seated in a large chair in the middle of the room. All the guests skipped merrily around her with as much gaily as if they were children, in the old style. "Going to Jerusalem," as they danced on their way. The gifts were deposited on her lap. The reception rooms were most beautifully decorated with flowers. The refreshments, which consisted of a salad course, were very much enjoyed.

Handkerchief Shower.

At the beautiful home of Mrs. R. F. Harris on Wednesday afternoon Mrs. Harris and daughter, Mrs. Yvonne Robb, entertained with a handkerchief shower, complimentary to Miss Louise Wheeldon. Upon the arrival of the honoree all of the guests were hushed and little Mabel Robb in her charming way led Miss Wheeldon through the house blindfolded until she became lost. She found herself in the midst of a heavy shower of dainty and lovely handkerchiefs. These were passed by the guests.

The spacious rooms were decorated with flowers of the season. The delectable tray of perfection salad, olives, chicken sandwiches, camel cake and iced tea was an added feature to this beautiful affair. Place favors were Nasturbiums.

COLO. NATL. CONTRACT GOES TO BIG SPRING MAN

From The Colorado Record:

Contract for construction of the new building of the Colorado National Bank was awarded Friday of last week to J. M. Morgan of Big Spring. The bid of Mr. Morgan, which was the lowest submitted, was $35,535, and is for construction of the building alone. Contracts for the heating plant and electrical wiring and equipment have also been let. When completed and equipped the new home of this bank will represent an expenditure of from $55,000 or $60,000.

The building is to be of fire proof construction throughout and will be one of the best bank buildings in West Texas. The structure will be forty by seventy-five feet, the entire ground floor to be occupied by the bank. The second floor of the building will be used as offices.

The building is to stand at the corner of Second and Walnut, on the corner across Walnut from the old Colorado National Bank building. Work of razing the two brick buildings on the site is to be commenced Monday. Under the terms of the contract, Morgan is to have the building completed by November 1.

David S. Castle of Abilene, has been retained as architect to superintend construction of the building. Mr. Castle stated recently while in Colorado that this building would be one of the best he has any knowledge of in this part of the State. The outstanding walls are to be of face brick and stone construction. On the interior the floor of the lobby is to be of tile, while the offices and working departments are to be floored with composition. The fixtures and interior wall decorations are to be of marble.

J. M. Thomas, active vice president of the bank, stated Monday that the building and the large vault to be installed would be both burglar and fire proof.

CHARLES H. SPARENBERG MAKES FINE RECORD

From time to time we hear of our former school pupils often with highest praise. Friends and relatives of Charles H. Sparenberg have received invitation to the Annual commencement exercises of Austin High school, where Charles will appear as valedictorian. Out of a class of 185 members, 170 of whom graduated, he has come out with highest honors. It makes us feel proud of the foundation work laid here in Big Spring. As his friends will recall, Charles graduated into High school in 1919, and was valedictorian of his class. He is possibly the youngest member of the senior class, as he will not be 17 until July. We congratulate our friends Mr. and Mrs. George Sparenberg, on the success of their splendid boy and wish for him continued achievements along the path of knowledge.

HONORING MR. AND MRS. J. M. MANUEL.

On Tuesday afternoon, the Ladies Auxiliary of the Y. M. C. A. gave a reception to Mr. and Mrs. Manuel, the new secretary, and his wife welcoming these good people to our town and community. About fifty ladies attended, and the time passed very pleasantly in progressive conversation on interesting topics of the day. Many interesting topics were brought out and lively discussions, thoroughly enjoyed. Some of the members of the younger social set favored us with songs and readings, which were a real treat. Refreshing punch was served at the close of the meeting, and every one left, feeling that the future of our Y. M. C. A. looks very bright under the direction of Mr. Manuel, as he is a live-wire, and both he and Mrs. Manuel have the work very much at heart.

Among the list of 1922 graduates of Perdue University at La Fayette, Ind., as announced by the faculty, appears the name of Blake Ragsdale Vanleer of Berkeley, California, who was awarded the degree of Mechanical Engineer. Mr. Vanleer who is now an assistant professor in the University of California, is a graduate of the Big Spring High school, and recently visited J. W. Waid and other friends here when en route from Berkeley to La Fayette to attend commencement exercises at Perdue University.

MRS. EMMA GULLEY DEAD

The announcement of the death of Mrs. Emma Gulley, one of our respected and esteemed citizens brought its toll of sadness to relatives and friends in this city. She died at the Arlington Heights Sanitarium at Fort Worth, Texas, at 2 o'clock Friday afternoon, June 16th, where she had been undergoing treatment for some time in the hope of combating a kidney trouble. Though everything possible was done to overcome the attack it proved futile and she was called to her reward.

Deceased, who was aged fifty-one years, three months and twenty-two days, had made her home in Big Spring for a long term of years. She was a most worthy woman, a good friend and neighbor, ever ready and willing to aid in cases of sickness and distress and though she has had more than her share of sickness, she was always cheerful and eager to make the burdens of others lighter. She was a true Christian and was ready to meet her Maker when the summons came.

She is survived by her aged parents Mr. and Mrs. J. B. Hooten of Lamesa, two sons and four daughters, E. W. and L. L. Gulley, Mrs. Mit Hare, Mrs. Essie Freeman, Mrs. Ruth Hicks and Miss Grace Gulley, two brothers and one sister, Tom Hooten of Lamesa; Dave Hooten of Sterling City and Mrs. Wesley Ditto of Brownfield and to these who mourn for a dutiful daughter, a kind and indulgent mother and a dearly beloved sister, is extended the heartfelt sympathy of many friends throughout this section.

Funeral services were conducted at the family residence on East Third street at 3 o'clock Sunday afternoon and the remains were laid to rest in Mt. Olive cemetery.

SHRINER SPECIAL IN BIG SPRING MONDAY

The Hella Special traveling in two sections arrived in Big Spring about 10:30 o'clock Monday morning. As the first section neared our city they turned loose a big siren whistle and as it made an unearthly noise almost identical with our fire whistle, they had a few of our folks scurrying around trying to locate a fire.

The special trains were transporting 150 or more members of Hella Temple from the Shriners convention at San Francisco. They report one grand and glorious time thru-out but as they had been on the go for nearly three weeks they were mighty anxious to reach home once more.

Uncommon Sense By JOHN BLAKE

CANNOT HOARD TIME

IN A certain time you can make a certain amount of money. You can put the money away for years later, but you can't put the time away.

Money, called by the economists frozen labor, might also be called frozen time.

But time is more than money. It can be turned into many things that can be stored away—education, cultivated taste, pleasant and profitable memories. But time itself you cannot hoard. You must use it as it passes, or it is gone forever.

Time spent in recreation is not wasted, unless you spend more than a due allowance for recreation.

But time spent in absolute idleness, or in activities that are worse than idle, is sheer criminal waste.

If you could go back over your life and gather back the hours that have never been improved, you would still have enough time to do great things.

But those hours are gone.

You can only, as Shakespeare says, "regret your dear time's waste" and resolve to waste less of it in the future.

Many men whose time had never been turned to account until they were past forty have still had enough left to accomplish great things in the world.

But these are the most sincere mourners for the years that might have been utilized.

If you will begin today to bear in mind that time cannot be hoarded, and if every hour of it is converted into something that can be hoarded, you may lay the foundation for a fortune. You will certainly lay the foundation for happiness by and by.

Count your hours, and allot each one to some task or to some profitable recreation. See that none of them slip by. They are as water through a mill, which if sent over the wheel creates valuable energy, but which spilled over the dam is gone forever. (Copyright.)

EVERYDAY GOOD THINGS

NOW is the time to go forth and pick the early watercress, the wholesome dandelion, the dock and poke, the new shoots of milkweed and marsh marigold or cowslips, all giving the needed zest to the food of spring.

Fresh Dandelion Salad.

Those who appreciate the value of the tender bleached heart of dandelion like it with a bit of salt without any dressing. For a salad the bleached leaves are best, but the tender green shoots, cut and mixed with a small green onion and served with French dressing is a salad not to be despised. Cut the dandelion close to the root, with all the tender green buds. Wash carefully and slice the root from the base, buds and tender leaves for an inch above the root. These use for a fresh salad; the rest of the leaves may be cooked for greens. Another addition to this salad is a thinly sliced tomato, which adds a bit of acid and softens the bitter of the dandelion. Using mayonnaise on the fresh green dandelion is another appetizing method of serving it.

Cooked Dandelion Salad.

Cook the greens until tender, which will take two hours or more unless the greens are very young, then serve with the following salad dressing: Rub a small bowl with a cut clove of garlic, add one-half of a teaspoonful of salt, a few dashes of paprika, two tablespoonfuls of orange juice and four to five tablespoonfuls of olive oil. Whip this dressing until it is creamy, then serve on the cooked dandelions.

Pigweed or Lamb's Quarter.

This is a good wholesome green and common enough to be generally well known as a weed, but not well known as a good food. Pull it up by the roots and strip off the green leaves, as the stalk is generally too tough to serve. Cook with pork or corned beef and serve hot.

Purslane is another good green, which grows in profusion. Pick the leaves and stalks, shake well and wash, then cook as any other greens.

Horseradish, peplant and dandelion cooked together make a good flavored combination. Yellow dock when young and tender is good.

Cowslips are delicious when well cooked and seasoned. They are easy to clean and do not shrink as do the dandelions when cooking. A half peck of tender dandelion greens will shrink when cooked to a small vegetable dishful.

Mustard is grown for a green and makes a most tasty dish. The wild mustard is good, but the leaves are much smaller than those of the plant called Chinese mustard. A few leaves of the mustard cut in bits and added to the dish of lettuce improves it.

The Friendly Path

EVERYONE MUST PAY

EVERYONE must pay for what he gets.

There is a law of recompense which cannot be evaded or ignored.

If one prizes his happiness he must expect to pay. Eventually the bill collector will demand his toll. Unless payment is made a rough pathway lies directly ahead.

Many constantly fear the bill collector who comes and demands money toll. But he is the most harmless of all the collectors. The real collector to be feared is the one which takes the form of conscience. It is impossible to dodge this one or to frighten him off with a double-barreled gun.

Those who imagine they have ended the collector when in the form of conscience are foolishly deluded. But even though they may get some enjoyment out of life because they think they have satisfied themselves that their consciences were wrong, they can always expect another collector which takes the form of law to hound them until the debt is paid.

In this age when many fathers and mothers are worried concerning the future of their children, there is good reason to impress upon the young people the importance of being on the square—with the square with the world as well as with themselves. Too many start into their world's pathways bent on getting as much as they can—both in material value and pleasure—without paying for its worth. If parents allow boys and girls, when their characters are in the making, to get this false impression of the way best to get on, sorry days are likely to be ahead not alone for the sons and daughters and their children, but for the fathers and mothers as well.

The Chimney-Swifts

By MYRA C. LANE

Copyright, 1914, Western Newspaper Union

Every spring, as soon as Mrs. Hale had ceased to burn the fire in the parlor stove, the swifts would build in the chimney. Sometimes there was the flutter of wings against the iron pipe, sometimes the "tweet! tweet!" of fledglings.

"There's the swifts' back again," the old woman would say to her daughters, Muriel and Rachel.

She liked to hear them, and however cold that spring might be, of course the advent of the building swifts made fires impossible.

Mrs. Hale lay in her bed upstairs. She would never leave it again, but she might live months, even years, the doctor said. Rachel did all the housework. Muriel was a stenographer in the mill.

Burton Hendricks was coming to see Muriel. He was twenty-five, and a traveling salesman. He was considered good-looking by the girls of the village. Muriel knew as well as Rachel did that his reputation was not the best. But she was tired of the mill. And Burton was infatuated with her. There was no doubt she could marry him.

Rachel found him nice too. But Rachel was different from Muriel. She believed in love, which, to Muriel, meant only a flat in town, a maid, perhaps a car some day. Anyway, a good time. Rachel, who was only eighteen, wondered.

She wondered what Burton could see in Muriel. Did he not see how shallow, how empty she was? How blind all men were!

He was coming to see Muriel for the first time in a month. He had written that he had made a "killing" on the road. He was to be made salesman for his firm.

That week was freezing cold. In the pipe the baby swifts were twittering. "Mother, we must have a fire in the parlor for Burton. What will he think of us?"

"Are the swifts come yet, Muriel?" The old woman looked at her anxiously.

"They haven't built yet. A little smoke will scare them away. They haven't made their nest, and Burton's coming, Ma."

"If you're sure, Muriel . . ."

Rachel had not heard. Her sister had sent her to the village for provisions. It was four miles to that particular shop where alone you could buy things good enough for Burton. Rachel trudged drearily through the slush. How blind Burton must be! She loved him. She was jealous of her sister. She thought her unworthy. When she came back she saw smoke pouring out of the parlor chimney. She threw the provisions on the kitchen table and ran to Muriel in the parlor. Her face was white.

"Muriel!" she gasped. "You—you've lit the parlor fire. The swifts—"

"Bother the swifts!" said Muriel.

A little brown body, then another, tumbled down the pipe and quivered upon the logs. With a cry Rachel picked them up and carried them to the door. The eyes of the fledglings were glazed. Their hearts had ceased to pulsate.

Rachel stood there in horror. Then, deliberately, she carried the dead birds to the hedge and put them under a heap of loose soil. Her eyes were blazing. Burton ought to be told. Why shouldn't he be told? Muriel was not fit to marry Burton, not fit for any man.

How long she crouched there she did not know. Long afterward, when she returned, she heard Burton's voice in the parlor.

"Where's Rachel, I wonder?"

"Day dreaming somewhere, I guess," answered Muriel carelessly.

"Say, Muriel, did I ever tell you the story of the drummer and the flea?"

Rachel listened. Muriel burst into shrieks of laughter and Burton joined in. How coarse his voice sounded.

"Say, Muriel, when is it to be?"

"Be? What be?"

"Why, you and me—church—parson—ring—nice little flat for two—happy as turtle doves!"

Through the doorway Rachel saw Burton's fat, jovial face. She shuddered. How had she ever dreamed she cared for him?

She was glad Muriel was going to marry Burton. They were well suited to each other. Her eyes were opened, her heart, her understanding. She had become a woman—through the understanding of suffering, through sorrow.

Health or Wealth? WHICH DO YOU CHOOSE?

is the matter with the people of this country today? I know full well, and we are just as guilty as the rest of us. We are too much concerned with chasing after the dollar, and too prone to neglect our human health.

It is handy to possess, but what is a million dollars worth to a man who can't enjoy a square meal; who is crippled with rheumatism; half of the time who cannot sleep at night; who cannot walk up a flight of stairs without wheezing and gasping for breath? Many a wealthy man today would be glad to get back to the old log cabin if he could enjoy a simple life again.

To Whom It My Concern.
For the benefit of any who may be in doubt as to whether or not I am competent or qualified to fill the position of Sheriff of Howard county, I herewith present affidavit as to my past experience.

R. S. McDONALD,

State of Texas, County of Lubbock:

Before me, R. I. Wilson, a Notary Public in and for Lubbock County, Texas, on this day personally appeared G. C. McDonald of Big Spring, Howard County, and in the first part of the year 1918 affiant met the said R. S. McDonald, who was employed on the detective or police force used at the E. I. DuPont & Co.'s Gun Cotton factory, at Hope Well, Va. and that under the supervision of O. M. Reeves at said factory there was employed as police and detectives to guard said plant, during the war, about 470 men in uniforms and 18 plain clothes men and that the said R. S. McDonald was employed as a plain clothes man and from affiants associations with the said McDonald at said factory during the year 1918 and until after the armistice was signed affiant always found and knew the said McDonald to be a fearless peace officer and ready at all times to do his utmost to preserve law and order and to do his duty regardless of fear or favor, since said time affiant has served as Deputy Sheriff and Chief of Police in Lubbock County, Texas, and as such has had various occasions to call on said McDonald to assist him in running down criminals and has always found him to be ready at all times to assist in upholding the majesty of the law, in preserving peace and ferreting out crime; and affiant takes great pleasure in recommending the said R. S. McDonald to the voters of Howard County, Texas, and in his race for sheriff for said county, and believes they will find no better man to enforce the law in that county.

G. C. Hufstедler, Affiant.

J. M. MORGAN AWARDED COLORADO BANK CONTRACT

J. M. Morgan of Big Spring was awarded the contract for the construction of the new bank building for the Colorado National Bank at Colorado, Texas. This is to be a modern two story structure with basement for steam heating plant; to be constructed of brick and stone, with reinforced concrete floors. It is to be modern in every respect, and the contract price of the building is approximately $36,000. The steam heating plant and other furnishings and fixtures will run the cost up to the neighborhood of $55,000. Mr. Morgan won this contract in competition with contractors from all portions of the State, and one of the factors in his favor was that work done by him heretofore has stood the test.

In addition to this job on which he will start work June 28th, Mr. Morgan is erecting two brick structures at Slaton, Texas, a $14,000 bank building and a $7,000 store building and a $20,000 school building at O'Donnell, Texas.

DO YOU LIKE TO TALK?

FRANKLY ask yourself the question: "Do you like to talk?" And if you have to admit that you do then bear in mind that certain pitfalls of bad manners lie in your path that do not beset the person who has no such fondness for the sound of his own voice.

Very often the person who likes to talk is the person who actually does talk cleverly. He likes to talk because he can see that people are interested by what he says and their show of interest is gratifying to his vanity. It is very pleasant to see a group of keenly interested faces around you when you are letting your tongue wag and when you tell a droll story it is gratifying, indeed, to hear the peals of hearty laughter. The person who sees readily that his listeners are bored can get no pleasure from talking. And usually, though not always, people who talk too much are persons who have naturally a gift in that direction. But they are wise if they do not abuse it.

The hostess especially should never monopolize the conversation. She should remember even if her women guests are extremely poor conversationalists, even if they are young and shy and timid, that good breeding demands that she bring them out and give them a chance to express their view and tell their funny anecdotes rather than that she should seize every opportunity to show her own wit and fluency.

Don't make the mistake of thinking so intently about what you are going to say when you can get a loophole in the conversation that you do not know what the others are talking about. Do not expect to gain their attention if you do not give them your attention when they are talking.

A Little Ramble

By AUSTIN FLEET

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"Mr. Bramwell, meet my friend, Mr. Johnson," said Mr. Haynes. "Mr. Johnson's an Englishman."

"I'm always pleased to meet representatives of your illustrious country," said Mr. Bramwell, sitting down in the hotel lobby and scraping his jaw.

"On business?"

"No, just a little pleasure tour," said little Mr. Johnson wearily.

The others exchanged glances and studied Mr. Johnson attentively. He had the appearance of a retired tradesman; he was mild, meek and inoffensive—also small.

"You see," said Mr. Johnson, "I made my pile in the drapery line, and I thought I'd give myself the pleasure of a long trip to America. I'd always wanted to see your great country."

"Oh, we can show you the town," said Mr. Bramwell. "I wonder, Haynes, whether—"

"No, no," said Haynes. "Mr. Johnson wouldn't want to consider—"

"It's a great opportunity," said Mr. Bramwell. "I'm going to let him in. Mr. Johnson, Haynes and I are looking for a partner in a sure thing. The trouble is, we don't quite know you—you see, dishonesty is so rampant over here."

"No more than in my country," said Mr. Johnson briskly. "I can tell a crook by his face. What's this business?"

"Extracting gold from the city water," said Mr. Bramwell. "We've discovered that there's an ounce of gold in every hundred tons of water. All you have to do is to turn the faucet onto a mercurized plate and let it run. We've got the chemist's assay. The trouble is, we want another $5,000 for our plant."

"I've got $5,000," said Mr. Johnson wearily, putting his hand into his pocket. "Never trust a bank. They burst, you know."

Haynes and Bramwell breathed hard. "If this isn't the doggonest—" began Mr. Haynes. "Why, Bramwell and I have each brought $5,000 here tonight to meet the assayer later. But I guess you wouldn't want to come in, Mr. Johnson."

"Try me," said Mr. Johnson, briefly. "You wouldn't trust us. How can we inspire confidence in each other?" asked Mr. Haynes.

"See here," said Bramwell, "suppose each of us stays here in turn and hands his $5,000 to the two others. They walk round the block with it and then return, to prove their honesty. I guess that's too hard to test you, though, Johnson?"

"Well, I would like one of you gentlemen to stay here first," Johnson admitted.

It was quickly arranged that Haynes should wait in the hotel lobby, while Bramwell and Johnson walked round the block with his money. Haynes produced his roll.

"Let Mr. Johnson carry it," he suggested.

"I'm agreeable," answered Bramwell.

Haynes delivered his $5,000 into the hands of the Englishman.

"I've absolute confidence in both of you," he said.

Bramwell and Mr. Johnson had a nice little stroll round the block.

"Really, you Americans are very trustful people," said Mr. Johnson.

"And why?" asked Bramwell. "Because, sir, we haven't the poverty, the incentive, crime that exist in your great, but effete country—you'll pardon me?"

"Of course, because it's true," said Mr. Johnson.

When they came back it was arranged that Mr. Johnson and Mr. Haynes should stroll round the block with Mr. Bramwell's money.

"Let Mr. Johnson carry it," Mr. Bramwell suggested.

"I'm agreeable," answered Haynes. Mr. Haynes and Mr. Johnson had a nice little stroll.

"I think you Americans are wonderful," said Mr. Johnson.

"You wait till we get our gold extraction plant in order," answered his companion.

"You're sure you trust us?" asked Mr. Haynes, as Johnson handed him his roll.

"Absolutely," answered Mr. Johnson. Mr. Haynes and Mr. Bramwell did not stroll round the block. They took a taxi to the Pennsylvania terminal.

"Two to Stanton," said Mr. Bramwell. And suddenly he turned pale and caught his friend by the arm.

"Stung!" he bellowed, snatching the roll of bills that Mr. Johnson had given him.

"What?" yelled the other.

"Snides, every one of them! That shark was wise to us!"

Haynes cursed softly. "That leaves us where we were!"

"It don't!" He took the good $100 bill off the top of your roll and mined two hundred out! Here, you!" he was addressing the booking clerk, "change these tickets; make them two to Philadelphia instead!"

High-Stepper. Observing a lady amazingly bedecked with glittering ropes and bands at the opera the other evening, our mind reverted to a remark made by the empress of Austria, P. Z. Farming, like every other business, must cut down the overhead.

It is not a question of being able to afford a Fordson; it is a question of being able to continue farming on the old too-costly basis.

The farmer's problem is not all a sales problem; it is also a production problem. He must cut down the cost of production.

The Fordson does more work at a lower cost and in less time than the old hand methods.

JUNE TIME

SINGIN' o' June, when the roses blow;
Littin' a song when the sun hangs low;
Whistlin' away
Through th' livelong day—
Singin' an' whistlin' a merry tune
To the rosiest month of them all—
That's June.

Watchin' the clouds as they hasten by,
Catchin' the gleam of the bright blue sky;
Layin' 'round
On th' sun-kissed ground—
Hearin' th' wind through the woodland croon
Her songs to the rarest of months—
That's June.

Off through th' meadows cool an' sweet,
Where th' violet blooms in their bloom retreat;
Dreamin' dreams
By the purlin' streams,
As they hasten by with their rhythmic run
To the rosiest, fairest month—that's June.

Home at eve when the moon hangs low
And the sky gleams bright with a silver glow;
Just layin' there
In the old arm chair
A watchin' th' man who lies in the moon
And laughs at th' fairest of months—
That's June.

It Doesn't Always Happen

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD
 Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"And worship her with years of noble deeds
 Until he wins her . . ."
 Little Miss Kramer repeated the words to herself softly. They were out of her favorite Tennyson, and Miss Kramer was romantic.

She was the telephone girl at Bridge & Stours, the wholesale tile people. She had held her job five years. She was romantic. She had slipped her Tennyson under her hat, and she was reading the poet in the lunch hour.

"The trouble is," sighed Miss Kramer, "men are so horribly swift nowadays. And there's so little room for noble deeds. How is one to be sure?"

She almost wavered from her fixed determination never to let any man speak to her of love until he had worshipped her for at least two years. But things did go faster now, and Miss Kramer was twenty-five.

That was not old, of course, but she could be twenty-seven before her knight-errant had worshipped her for two years, even if he came riding along immediately on the elevated.

No one had ever shown any disposition to worship Miss Kramer. Everybody liked her, and twice in her life young men had behaved foolishly and Miss Kramer had looked at them reproachfully and they had shrunk.

That was the pity of it. Men took so much for granted. There was young Don Haydon, the assistant bookkeeper, for instance. They had been good friends for nearly a year. Then he had asked permission to call at her boarding house, and—well, just what had happened?

All Miss Kramer could remember was that his arm had stopped hanging along the edge of his chair and had shown a tendency to stray across the arm of her chair to where her hand rested. And then—

Subtly, very subtly, Miss Kramer had conveyed the impression that that was not where Don Haydon's hand ought to be. He had left a few minutes afterward. And they had not been such good friends since. He had never called again.

She glanced across the hall at him as he sat wrestling with the books. Perhaps—a thrill of apprehension ran through her—perhaps he was even now struggling to avert the rumored insolvency of Bridge & Stour. Every one knew the firm was in deep water.

The cashier came out of the manager's office, carrying a package of letters. He left one on Miss Kramer's desk, went on without speaking, left one on the next desk, on every desk.

Miss Kramer opened hers and read with terror:

"On account of the winding-up of business we shall be unable to utilize your services after Saturday next. A check for two weeks' salary is enclosed herewith."

She let the slip of the check flutter unheeded to the floor. Then she picked it up and put it in her bag.

At two o'clock the office was agog with excitement. Everybody had received notice. That day was Thursday, and it meant one more day's work, one week of salary to follow, and—the gruelling search for jobs.

Jobs, at a time when they were as scarce as raspberries in January!

"Tough luck, Miss Kramer!" It was Don Haydon speaking outside the office. "It means the breaking up of old associations for all of us."

Miss Kramer nodded. She could not trust herself to speak. After all, she might not have insisted about—about the hand.

"Will you let me take you to dinner?" Don asked.

Pride struggled with principle. "Well, a very inexpensive restaurant," said Compromise.

They sat over the meal. "I'll be sorry not to be seeing you every day," said Don.

Miss Kramer nodded. "Got anything in prospect?" she inquired.

Don shook his head. "Not a thing," he answered. "Have you?"

"No," said Miss Kramer.

"But see here," suggested Don. "I've got five hundred put aside for a rainy day, and that's bound to last until something does turn up. And two can live as cheaply as one—"

What was he saying? Miss Kramer looked at him in consternation. And whose was that hand—hers or Don's?

"You know, I've wanted to ask you so long, only you've got a way of sitting on a fellow, but—wouldn't it be jolly to have a nice little flat and—Oh, I'm no hand at talking, but will you, darling!"

Alice Joyce

At some time or another, a "movie" star reaches the very apex of her career. In the case of Alice Joyce, she is said by some to have attained her very best work in a recent popular production. Alice Joyce is said to have played a greater variety of roles than any other screen star. She began her career by telling a little untruth—that she could ride a horse. She could not—but she had to say she could to get the engagement. She found she could.

YOUR HAND How to Read Your Characteristics and Tendencies—the Capabilities or Weaknesses That Make for Success or Failure as Shown in Your Palm

MONEY IN THE HAND

IF THE line of the head, the lower I of the two principal horizontal lines of the palm, is well branched at its beginning it is an indication of money made by one's own merit and exertions, probably in business. Much wealth gained in business is also shown by a strong, well-marked line of fortune, a line not seen in every hand, but which, when present, runs up the palm to or into the finger of Apollo, or third finger.

Other good signs of money gained in business are little lines going from the line of life to the line of the head, and also little lines leaving the line of life and running toward the wrist. Lines running upward from the line of fate, which ascends the palm about the middle, are also a fortunate indication in this respect.

These signs of acquisitiveness are seen more surely and frequently in what are known as the practical hands; that is, hands of the square or spatulate type, rather than the conic or artistic and psychic or pointed types.

WHY?
 DO WE WAKE UP IN THE MORNING

THE human body "goes to sleep" in order that the heart and the brain have time to build up the portions of the body which have been used up during the day, by exertion of one kind or another.

Generally speaking, the brain acts as sort of an alarm clock which wakens us when the process of rebuilding has been completed and it is for this reason that persons who have been unduly fatigued sleep longer than those who have taken but little exercise. The process of awakening is principally due to two factors—the necessary amount of rest and habit. The former being the stronger of the two, persons who are quite tired when they retire find it difficult to wake up at their accustomed time, though an equal amount of fatigue upon going to bed each night will soon enable one to acquire the habit of arising at the same hour, no matter how early or late this may be. The process of natural awakening, therefore, is merely the result of being completely rested in all parts of the body—even though certain muscles may appear fatigued through unusual exertion on the preceding day.

Little Flower-Blossom

By JUSTIN WENTWOOD

Copyright, 1922, Western Newspaper Union

"It's preposterous, shameful, intolerable, unhuman!" said Mrs. Anderson.

"So I told the cub myself, or thereabouts," replied her husband, Frank Anderson, the banker. "But it's hard to make him understand. You know, he always was queer in social ways."

"That's just the point," answered his wife. "And that's what comes of taking up social work in the slum."

If Flower-Blossom could have heard, she might have let fall the two big tears that trembled upon her dark lashes, instead of winking them away, according to the Precepts of Women, which she had learned from her honorable father before he left her, an orphan, and she was adopted by the mission school.

Flower-Blossom was eighteen now, and she had been designed for a teacher of her own race in this strange land of America. That was before she met Tom Anderson, fresh from college, who meant to devote himself to all sorts of enterprises among the poor.

He drifted into the school one day and watched Flower-Blossom teaching pithooks and hangers to a score of yellow-faced, black pigtailed children from the purlieus of Chinatown.

Flower-Blossom looked up at him and—can a Chinese girl blush? At any rate, Flower-Blossom's pretty, yellow cheeks became unmistakably pinker than they had been before.

Many times after that Tom Anderson found himself in the mission. There was no Mr. Flower-Blossom to ask him his intentions, but then Tom was the soul of honor.

It was just that which so irritated his parents. They did not approve of anything that was not strictly moral, of course; but still, what was more awful than Tom's announcement that he meant to make Flower-Blossom his bride—Flower-Blossom who had only the haziest idea of social conventions?

Ah Wing, who sold dried soles and ducks, and strings of strange vegetables in his big shop, waylaid Flower-Blossom at the corner of the street.

"Next week I sail for home," he said. "I am rich. You come with me and be my honorable second wife?"

Flower-Blossom shook her head tolerably. She knew how hard it was to eradicate heathen ideas from her own people.

"A man has only one wife," she said. "I will divorce her!"

Flower-Blossom laughed at him, though she felt far from laughing. Ah Wing had been persecuting her for weeks past; she would be glad when Tom and she were married.

One day a strange woman came into the mission school. Flower-Blossom, looking up as she bowed to the visitor, thought she looked a little bit like Tom.

"I want to speak to you," said Mrs. Anderson. "You are the young girl who is to marry my son next week?"

Flower-Blossom humbled herself to the ground, as if correct with one's mother-in-law. Mrs. Anderson sniffed. "An absolute heathen, Frank," she told her husband afterward.

"You understand what this marriage means?" she asked. "It means that Tom will be cut out of his father's will. He will never have a penny. He has never been taught to work. What are you going to do about it?"

Flower-Blossom looked like a pink petal. "My father," she said softly, "was an honorable Mandarin."

"Oh, I dare say!" said Mrs. Anderson. "But I'm not sure he himself would have approved. East is east and west is west, you know."

"They told me," said Flower-Blossom, "when I went to the mission school, that all were equal in America."

"Under the law, yes. I'm sure I don't know whether you can vote or not, but—I don't want you to marry Tom. For his sake," said Mrs. Anderson.

There were four days to the marriage. Tom saw Flower-Blossom every evening.

"I must see as much of you as I can, even though we're going to have each other forever after Tuesday," he said.

"Yes," answered Flower-Blossom.

Monday night came. Flower-Blossom was not at the mission school that night. Nobody had seen her; she was not in her room. She had slipped away quietly, because the Precepts of Women says, "Go softly when thou goest, and, when thou must wound, let thy steel be sharp and silent."

Far away on board the liner Flower-Blossom bowed herself at Ah Wing's feet.

"There is no need to divorce her," she said humbly. "I will be thy honorable second wife."

Curious Copper Mining.

It is said that about nine miles from Santiago de Cuba there are copper mines, having shafts from 900 to 1,200 feet deep, which were regularly worked until some years ago, when they were abandoned and became filled with water, all but 300 feet of their depth being below sea level. But in later years copper was obtained from the drowned mines in an interesting manner. The water with which they are filled holds a considerable quantity of copper in solution, and this water was pumped out into tanks. Scraps of iron were then thrown into it and the dissolved copper became deposited on the iron. When the deposit grew sufficiently thick it was broken off and the iron was thrown back into the water to gather a fresh incrustation of the red metal.

The Old Tin Box

"I'll do a bit of clearing up tonight, mother," said Marian. "If we're going to sell the place to Mr. Faulkner, the attic ought to be put straight. I guess nobody's touched it since grandfather died."

"We've got to sell, I s'pose," answered her mother, sullenly. "It's queer, seeing that your great-grandfather was always accounted owner of the Faulkner property. I'd fetch fifty thousand, Mr. Bates was telling me."

"How did we lose it?" asked Marian. "Why, it bears your great-grandfather, who settled there, never took out a claim, or whatever it was; and the Faulkners, well, I guess they took it away from my mother, I dunno," said Mrs. Marlowe. "But it's no use hanging on to this place, if you and Jim get married, and two thousand's a fairish price for it—more'n we'd get anywhere else, only the Faulkners want to round out their property."

Marian went upstairs after supper. She sighed a little as she stood in the attic. It was hard to leave the old house, with which she had been associated since her earliest memories.

It was hard, too, thinking that had her great-grandfather not neglected to take out his claim, the Faulkner place would be theirs. Marian had always envied the Faulkners—the girls, who had come home from college and greeted her with the coldest of nods when they passed on the village street, or in their car.

Ah, well, it was no use sighing for the unattainable! Marian had never been to college, and she clerked for Higgs, the grocer; but she was as well educated as the Faulkner girls. And she had Jim Harlowe!

And at the thought of him a wistful little smile played about her lips.

She had refused him so often, and he had always been so patient. Jim would never amount to anything very much. He was just a small farmer, with his heart in the land, simple, honest, true. He had loved her for years, since she had been a little thing in pinafores.

That was what won her at last. Jim's unwavering loyalty to her. He was not educated. Marian had weighed his love for her against all the disadvantages, and love had won.

She began her cleaning. The place was full of rubbish. To add to it all, there had been a fall of brick from inside the chimney; the floor was covered with debris.

"I suppose we'll have to have that fixed," she thought.

Something gleaming in a corner of the chimney attracted her attention. It was the edge of a small tin box. Curious, Marian drew it out amid a cloud of dust.

It was fastened with a rusty nail, but not locked. Inside was a yellowed parchment. Marian took it to the light and read it. It was some time before she could understand the gist of it, and it was strange that it was dated 1824.

And at last she understood. It was the title to the Faulkner property. Her long cherished dream had come true!

She stood holding it, trying to repress the fit of trembling that had seized her. The Faulkner lands! Comfort, wealth, happiness! The Faulkner girls—the car—their pride humbled!

A rousing tattoo on the front door startled her. Then she smiled. It was Jim—dear old Jim, who always looked in, prompt to the minute. She must go down.

But—a thought struck her! This title—how would it affect her and Jim?

And, with prophetic vision she seemed to see herself mistress of the Faulkner lands, of the big white house with the colonial porch, the many rooms, servants, and—Jim?

He did not fit into the picture. She could not see Jim, uneasy in a stiff collar, seated beside her in the car; nor in evening dress, helping her entertain the elite of the neighborhood.

Jim was only possible as he had been made; his path of life was a single rut stretching on and on. It was the Faulkner lands or Jim!

Slowly she went down the stairs, and at the bottom she was enfolded in Jim's arms.

"Darling," he whispered, "I'm so happy to think the time's so short now. It come over me all at once this afternoon, when I was plowing up the old patch by the pigstyes."

He looked at her in sudden fear. "It—it's all right, ain't it, honey?" he asked anxiously.

"Why, of course," she answered.

"Of course, dear old Jim!"

"What's that you're burning, Marian?" asked her mother a minute later.

"Only some old rubbish that I found in the attic," Marian answered.

Pope a Wonderful Linguist.

Pope Pius XI is credited with a knowledge of from 15 to 27 languages. The Rome correspondent of LaCroix writes that after the second solemn "jubilee" of the cardinals after the conclave his holiness went the round of those present and said a few words to each one in his own language—Italian, French, English, German, Spanish and Polish. All were in admiration of the wonderful linguistic versatility of the holy father. His Holiness is said to need some brushing up before speaking it fluently, but those who know his aptitude for learning say he will soon be able to converse freely in the language of England and the United States.

TO THE VOTERS OF HOWARD COUNTY

It having come to my attention that a rumor is being circulated that I had been expelled from the Farm Labor Union of Howard County. I wish to take this means to correct said rumor.

My occupation is that of a real dirt farmer, and just here I want to state my connections with the Farm Labor Union of which I was a member until I saw that my relations with this organization would handicap me as Sheriff, if elected, to repress the fit of trembling that had seized her. The Faulkner lands! Comfort, wealth, happiness! The Faulkner girls—the car—their pride humbled!
