Professors To Attend Circle K Fort Worth Convention Sponsors Election

Ten Texas Tech English professors and seven foreign language professors will attend the 19th annual meeting of the South-Central Modern Language Association in Fort Worth Friday and Saturday.

The association includes sections for comparative literature, English, French, German and Spanish. Texas Christian University is serving as the convention host.

Papers will be read by four of the Tech English professors attending the convention. Dr. W. B. Gates, Graduate School dean, will read a paper, "A Neglected Satire on Cooper's Home Is Found," while Mrs. Grace Wellborn, assistant professor of English, will speak on "Willa Cather and the Southwest."

Dr. Joseph T. McCullen Jr., professor of English, will present "Two Key Speeches by Hamlet." Another English professor, Dr. Truman Camp, will present a paper on "Swift and the Bickerstaff Papers."

Other members of the English department attending the convention will be: Dr. John C. Guilds, Dr. Lawrence E. Bowling, Dr. Everett A. Gillis, Dr. Alan M. Gunn, Prof. F. E. Eddleman, and Dr. James Hansford, visiting professor from Princeton, who is president of the National Modern Language Association.

Chairman of the foreign languages department, Dr. John C. Dowling, will read his paper on "The Taurine Works of Nicolas de Morstin."

Theodor W. Alexander, associate professor of German, is the SCMLA secretary-treasurer. Others representing the foreign languages department will be: Dr. Eunice J. Gates, Prof. A. B. Strehley, Dr. Harold L. Simpson, Prof. Beatrice W. Alexander, and Dr. A. P. Hull.

The Circle K, men's service organization, is sponsoring a mock campus-wide election Friday. Students will be given an opportunity to express their political preference in the up-coming state election.

The ballots will allow the students to mark their choice for governor, lieutenant governor, and congressman-at-large. Bobby Harris, president of Circle K, urges a large turnout so that the voting will be representative of the student body.

Polls will be located in Tech Union, Ad Bldg., C&O Bldg., and East Engineering Bldg. They will be open from 8 a.m.-12 p.m. and 1-5 p.m.

An Editorial

Rumor versus Truth

There comes a time in every newsman's life when he is faced with such a dilemma as this:

Whether to print as news the activities of a small group which run against general opinion and common welfare; or

Risk arousing reader's ire by not honoring such occurrences with newspaper coverage.

In the former case he will be accused of rabble-rousing and in the latter of cowardice.

When faced with this problem, he'll usually write an editorial.

Why?

Because a large responsibility of any newspaper is to dispel rumor with truth.

Rumor: Coach J T King was hanged in effigy about a week ago.

Truth: Only one news medium "happened" to be on hand for this brief ceremony indicating that it was planned and that Tech students had no hand in it.

Rumor: Coach J T King was hanged in effigy last Sunday morning.

Truth: He was; but the small group of brave demonstrators scattered quickly and the effigy was cut down before general attention was aroused.

Rumor: Coach J T King will be hanged in effigy tonight by residents of a certain men's dorm.

Truth: If he is, this newspaper will do its best to discover and print the names of those responsible.

Why?

For the same reason that an unsigned "letter to the editor" is tossed into the waste basket. Because this newspaper has a responsibility to print opinion of responsible readers but not to foster misbehavior of cowardly elements who must preform their dirty work in obscurity. Because public opinion can be swayed in utterly wrong directions by small groups acting in a dramatic manner.

But mainly because nothing Coach King has done or has failed to do deserves such measures.

Here's more truth: King's players are first students and secondly athletes. King is in the process of building a program which will probably not have obvious winning result for two more years. Tech has recently joined one of the toughest conferences in the nation. None of King's recruits have yet reached his junior year. His schedule of five conference games to date is the roughest in SWC.

Still more truth: When King was hired two years ago it was with the understanding that he would develop a winning team within four or five years. At present his program is on schedule and considered "healthy" by experts. King took the helm at one of the Raider's lowest ebbs and agreed to the tremendous task of building a real contender with less recruiting funds than many other schools command.

Truth: The Raiders are playing better ball against more competition this year than last, although the win-loss record does not show it. Much of the disappointment with this year's record stems from the fact that the Raiders last year unexpectedly won a couple of games in which they were outclassed. If this year's win-loss record could be swapped for last year's, there would be no complaints for either year.

Keep these facts in mind before you do anything rash.

tech is my beat

A story on page six several weeks ago didn't stir up much ruckus, it hardly was noticed. Probably no one, who read the story quickly can remember it now. The Story?

Ten sophomores were elected to a student honors council established for the first time at Tech.

The TOREADOR story read, "The student honors council is the result of more than a year's work by the honors students to found an organization to serve as a liaison between them and the faculty honors council."

Who are the honors students? Why a council?

The honors students are members of the Arts & Science Honors Program, a program that came unofficially to Tech in the fall semester of 1961. Of the then 1,600 entering Arts & Science freshmen, about 90 were chosen because of high test scores and high I.Q.'s to participate in a special program offering "enriched" courses for a broad liberal education with "depth in breadth" rather than superficial savoring of wide fields of education. Outstanding professors teach the classes.

Of the original 90, 63 remain in the program today as sophomores. Since it was voluntary from the beginning, some students decided to follow other plans and dropped out, while others joined.

The program last year was shaky and the going rough. The theory of an honors program was clear and exciting, but hard to apply. Right from the start there were problems, loopholes in the plan and confusion among students and faculty. The program was unrecognized and went through the first semester before any improvements were made.

Spring came and some of the students stirred.

First came complaints, then discussions between two or three students and then finally meetings. The honors students desired to do something to improve their program. They got together. In small rooms of the Tech Union, on the campus lawn and over cokes they discussed, debated and argued among themselves.

They organized, then met before the faculty honors council and made a request for permission to get some projects going for themselves. The council gave its okay and during the past summer in a series of colloquies the honors students mapped out plans for a student honors council.

The going still wasn't easy. They were misunderstood. They wanted a more effective program, but weren't sure how to get it.

But the one thing they did want, they were sure about—a student honors council. It evolved this fall. Unofficial and unrecognized until a few days ago. Dr. John C. Guilds, former counselor for the students and now head of the English department, is pleased. Dr. J. T. McCullen, present counselor, is also pleased.

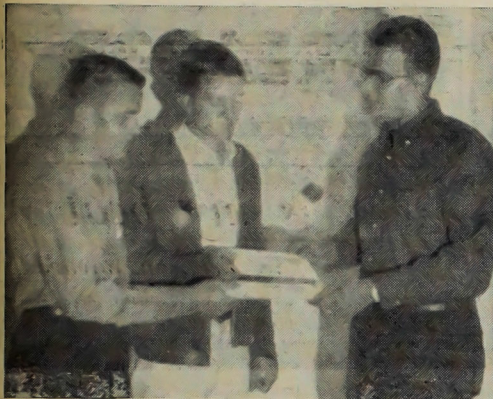

The students are still talking, debating and working. They feel they need an honors center—a room where they can coordinate their activities. They're thinking about the honors program and its future, even its distant future. They have discussed the idea of de-emphasizing the grading system, classroom motivation, extra-curricular projects in which they can get into creative work, theses and a series of colloquies and lectures.

Many problems are still present, but the honors students are eager to work on them. Some of them have worked very hard to improve the program—Steve Magee and Kay Thornton especially. I could say more about these two, but I won't. They would like it that way . . .

In Discussion, Speeches

Tech Cops Honors

Kip Glasscock, Lubbock senior, copped a superior rating in persuasive speaking and was also given the highest rating in discussion in competition with 50 other individuals. Tech received more excellent and superior ratings than any other of the 15 schools entered in the discussion division.

Jane Spencer, Lubbock senior speech major, also received superior rating in discussion. Other Tech discussion entrants, Jean Martin and Jo Tweedy, both of Lubbock, received excellent ratings in discussion.

The Tech debate teams posted a 50-50 average with six out of the seven teams participating. Linda Wallace and G. W. Bailey received excellent ratings in debate.

Of 26 teams entered in debate composition, three schools had undefeated teams and received superior ratings. They were the University of Arizona, Abilene Christian College and Texas Western College.

Odessa College was awarded first in poetry reading. Ann Moore, Lubbock, received an excellent rating in the division. She is a speech major.

After dinner speaking awards went to West Texas, Texas Western and the University of Arizona. Those speakers receiving superior ratings spoke at the banquet Saturday night at the Parrish House of the Episcopal Church.

All competition was held in the educational building of the First Baptist Church and events were judged by the local staff, visiting coaches and lawyers and ministers from the surrounding area.

Coaches Add New Stars To All-America Nominees

Seventeen new players have been cited for early season performance by the American Football Coaches Association, announced Bill Murray, AFCA president and Duke University coach.

Seven linemen and ten backs have been added to the roster of candidates for the 1962 All-America team, to be selected by the AFCA at the season's conclusion.

Started in 1889 by Walter Camp, a panel of more than 500 coaches, using evaluations based on films, will select the honor team. Final balloting will be reviewed by the All-America Board of coaches, which is lead by Murray.

Moving into contention at end is unheralded junior college transfer

Verne Burke of Oregon State. After three games, he grabbed the lead among the nation's pass receivers with 25 receptions.

Among the emerging tackle stars are Scott Appelton, 6-3, 227 pounder from the University of Texas, Daryl Sanders (6-5 and 237) of Ohio State, and Fred Miller (6-5 and 227) of Louisiana State's defensively tough Bengals.

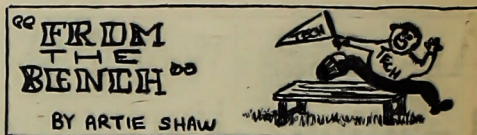

A guard, Jack Cverko, a 236-pound, 6-0 junior, has been a key lineman in the upsurge of the Northwestern Wildcats. Tom Hertz (2-2 and 5-10) of Missouri also has been cited by coaches for outstanding play.

Center Wayne Lee, a 6-2, 200-pounder from Oklahoma, has moved up to challenge for All-America recognition.

Two sophomore quarterbacks; Tom Myers of Northwestern and Joe Namath of Alabama, have been impressive with their early-season passing accuracy. Bill Lothridge of Georgia Tech, an old fashioned triple threat, has had a hand or foot in virtually every point scored by the Georgians. Directing the powerful Arkansas attack is quarterback Billy Moore.

Five halfbacks have been recognized for their early-season performances, including Eldon Fortie of Brigham Young and UCLA's Kermit Alexander, who ripped for 45 against Ohio State in the Bruins' big win.

Before we consult the horoscope charts for the upcoming tilts this weekend, let's take a glance at what happened over the weekend just passed.

Not everybody lost face last weekend, even if Nikita Khrushchev, the Washington Redskins, and the Dallas Cowboys did.

The heroine of all Tech rooters at the Homecoming game certainly didn't.

As a matter of fact, the only source of delight for the average Red Raider fan was the sudden loss of a zipper from the uniform of pretty Carole Brasher, a Tech Band twirler. She exhibited the "never-say-die" spirit of a Wheaties All-American. All the good qualities combined into one little person: the agility of a fire tailback, the finesse of a great quarterback on a bootleg play, and the come-from-behind spirit of a real champion. I hereby tip my hat (size 8) to her trouser spirit.

Some Tech supporters may feel as if we have our own Berlin wall in Lubbock. There are two major differences between ours and theirs: ours doesn't run through the middle of the city; and ours is movable. The wall in Lubbock seems to be in Jones Stadium, and it moves from one end of the field to the other, depending on which way Tech is headed.

In all fairness, however, it must be said that the interior section of the Big Red line played well. So did David Parks and little Bill Worley. When he wasn't getting the ball stolen from him, so was Richard Mahan.

This brings up the onslaught that took place in New York. Y. A. Tittle, old and balding, lead the Giants to a 49-34 victory over the league-leading Washington Redskins. I imagine it was a somber ride back to the reservation for the 'Skins. Tittle's seven TD tosses equaled Tech's season output in the way of scoring and the NFL record for one game.

The Dallas Red Raiders—excuse me, Cowboys suffered a tough defeat at the hands of the Cards of St. Louis. Trailing by only four points with less than a minute to go, the Cowboys muffed up three straight plays inside the ten yard line and lost magnificently.

Wonder if Joe Kerbel is sleeping well these nights? His Pistol seemed to have wet gunpowder this weekend. Arizona ended the Utopian existence Pedro and Company were living by an 8-3 count. Pistol Pete made something in the vicinity of 23 yards on 20 carries.

Now a glance into the much-too-clear Tech crystal ball.

I'd like very much to predict a Tech victory over Rice. But even I am not that much of a fanatic. The Raiders have several very interesting factors on their side.

The history of the Tech-Rice series has proved futile for the Red Raiders. Of a grand total of twelve games, Tech has managed to win only one. That came in 1914, when Tech triumphed 13-7. This places the law of averages on our side.

This season has provided few upsets in the SWC race. The Rice moral victory over Texas is the only one that comes to mind. Tech is the kind of team that produces upsets. They have to. It seems they are always rated underdogs.

Tech hasn't won a game. This is known all too well by a lot of people. This would lead to the conclusion that Tech is due for a win. We have a football team that is not underrated by anybody in the league except the Tech fans. Eventually we'll win a game.

No team can continue to outplay its opponents and lose. Tech outplayed WTS, A&M and SMU and lost. It's about time for a Tech win.

As you have gathered, we have nothing on our side but figures. I, personally, have never known any figures but the final score to determine the winner. We need to cross the goal line more than the other guy and quit outplaying him.

I leave you with this parting phrase . . .

Give 'em hell, Raiders!

Arkansas Leading Statistics

The Arkansas Razorbacks wore out the ground against Hardin-Simmons while limiting the Cowboys to only 258 yards total offense and easily held on to their lead in both offense and defense in the Southwest Conference.

Arkansas now has an average of 369.3 yards per game, which is almost 100 yards more than runner-up Baylor. The Razorbacks also have allowed the opposition only 224.3 yards per outing. That outdoes Texas, which has given up 124 yards more per game.

Once again statistical superiority meant nothing in the majority of the game. Rice had 319 yards total offense to 278 for Texas and could get no better than a 14-14 tie. Baylor outgained Texas A&M 249 to 179, but lost 6-3. Texas Tech had 210 yards to 199 for Southern Methodist, yet the Ponies won 14-0.

Arkansas hit the season scoring peak in its 49-7 conquest of Hardin-Simmons, and for the fourth time in six weeks the Razorbacks lead the league in total offense.

Southern Methodist embellished its second straight conference win with another expert punting performance by sophomore Danny Thomas, who averaged 44.7 yards on six kicks against Texas Tech. His performance enabled Southern Methodist to move ahead of Texas in punting for the season, 41.1 to 40.8.

Women's 'Murals Participation Soars

Women's intramurals at Texas Tech have reached an all-time participation peak. According to files most entries have doubled from last year. With a total of 544 girls active in sports, Margot Purdy, director of women's intramurals, termed the participation "excellent," saying she was very pleased with it.

Sports presently underway for the fall program include badminton, tennis, archery and volleyball. Table tennis will get underway next week, leaving only one other sport in the fall program still to begin competition. A one-day bowling tournament is planned for a Saturday afternoon in December and will be the last sport to open for the fall season.

Archery single eliminations were held Tuesday between Donna Kroning, representing West, and Pris Totten, Sigma Kappa representative. Results will be announced Wednesday.

Independent volleyball league is finished except for play-offs, and most sorority teams have three more games each before play-offs.

Tennis is going into the third round, and badminton competition began Monday.

A tournament traveling trophy is awarded to the group that wins each tournament. If a group wins the tournament three times, the trophy remains with that group permanently.

Points are given to groups on the basis of participation and winning. The team which accumulates the most number of points within the year is awarded the Women's Intramural All-College Winner Trophy.

Those organizations having an average of 90 per cent of their membership participating in some activity each semester and has been represented in at least four activities receive a participation award.

Sports included in the spring program are tennis doubles, badminton doubles, basketball, archery and swimming.

Picadors Get ROTC Boost

All cadets attending the game with the corps will be given a walk from one future drill, according to Capt. Bill J. Williams, assistant professor of air science.

Officials Announce New Phone Numbers

The Texas Tech PBX, automatic switchboard for the Tech telephone system, has approximately 20 telephone number changes for Tech students and a new counting system to record the number of calls originating at Tech.

"Telephone numbers ending in the digits '90' were intended for testing purposes, but they were accidentally assigned to dormitory rooms," said Don Howard, head electrician at the PBX. "As a result, students trying to call these numbers could not reach their parties," he continued.

However, corrections have been made and new numbers have been assigned to the dormitories. Students whose numbers are listed in the Texas Tech directory and end in the digits '90' should notify their friends of their new number. A list of the old and new numbers appears below.

The new counting system is being installed this week by Western Electric Co. and it is expected that the system will be completed by the end of the week. It will probably go into operation sometime next week, according to Howard. The purpose of the system is to record the number of calls coming through the PBX each day.

Changes in numbers are listed as follows:

General Assembly Vetoes China's Membership Bid

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP) —The General Assembly turned thumbs down Tuesday on Red China's latest bid for U.N. membership as African nations helped block admission by a wider margin than last year.

The vote on the Soviet resolution to expel Nationalist China from the world organization and to seat the Peiping regime in its place was 42 in favor, 56 against and 12 abstaining.

Last year, the first time the United States was unable to put off a floor vote, the same resolution was rejected in closer balloting—36 for, 48 against and 20 abstaining. Both votes fell far short of the required two-thirds majority.

Voting followed an appeal by African nations to seat both Peiping and the Chinese Nationalists. They drew a stern rebuttal from the Soviet Union, declined to press the so-called "two-China plan" and rallied behind the United States in opposition to the Soviet resolution.

Although Britain and the Scandinavian nations again voted for the resolution, the result was seen as a big victory for the United States and its allies. They strongly opposed seating Red China, citing Peiping's military thrust into India as proof of its defiance of the U.N. charter.

India, the champion of Red

China's admission in past years, again supported the resolution as expected, despite its charges that the Chinese Communists are carrying out a premeditated aggression against India.

Indian spokesmen had argued that the only effective way to halt Chinese "military adventurism" is to seat Peiping in the United Nations.

The Soviet delegate, Valerian A. Zorin, said after the vote that the setback was only temporary. He said the Red Chinese-Indian fighting "was dargged before the assembly" in a maneuver to block admission.
