

Ethics committee hears case oath violations

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Senate Ethics Committee said Wednesday it believes one or more witnesses lied under oath during testimony in the investigation of Sen. Herman Talmadge.

Other violations of law, including making false claims against the government and conspiring to defraud the government, also may have occurred, the committee said in its final report on the 14-month investigation of Talmadge.

But the panel did not single out anyone who it believed lied or committed any criminal violation. Its report said only that it had turned over its files on the Talmadge case to the Justice Department, which has jurisdiction over criminal matters.

"Should the Department of Justice find evidence leading to the indictment or conviction of any member, officer or employee of the Senate, the committee will take such additional action as is appropriate," it said.

The investigation had earlier led the panel to recommend that the Senate denounce the Georgia Democrat's conduct as "reprehensible" and as a "gross neglect of his duty."

The committee also recommended the Senate require Talmadge to repay $12,895 plus interest for overcharges made by his office of his official expenses. And it recommended he pay the interest on $43,436, which the committee said his office improperly collected through expense overcharges.

Talmadge said he considers the committee's final report "a personal victory" for him because "there is no finding of willful or intentional misconduct on my part." He said he has no reservations whatsoever to the Justice Department examining the committee's files and testimony presented to the panel.

But Talmadge also said he has not decided whether to fight the committee's recommendations on the Senate floor. The senator had contended earlier that the recommendation to "denounce" him rather than to "censure" him was a personal victory.

Although the term "censure" carries no automatic loss of privileges, the Senate has traditionally considered it the severest punishment it can give to members.

There also was no indication when the Senate might act on the committee's recommendations.

The panel's report asserted that the testimony of some witnesses "conflicted in material respects" with the testimony of others.

Among possible violations listed by the committee were:

-The making of false statements to the government.

-The making of false, fictitious or fraudulent claims against the government.

-Willful evasion of income and gift taxes.

-Failure to keep adequate records as required by the Internal Revenue Code.

-Failure to comply with the requirements of federal election laws.

-Receiving campaign contributions in a federal building in violation of federal law.

Ticket draw for the Tech-A&M game was held Wednesday and will continue today in the University Center Well. Students may draw tickets from 1 to 6 p.m. Students who are dissatisfied with their tickets may draw again tonight at 6:30. Reported ticketscaling prices have ranged from $10 to $40, with averages around $20 per ticket.

Student Senate to discuss groups

By JOEL BRANDENBERGER
UD Reporter

Four items are scheduled for discussion during the meeting of the Tech Student Senate tonight.

Jim Halpert, SA internal vice president, expressed displeasure about the small number of bills and resolutions that are being discussed at the Student Senate meetings.

"We're doing quite a bit of work in the committees," Halpert said. "Unfortunately, all the students see is the number of bills and resolutions that come out on the senate floor."

Halpert added that something would have to be done about the situation. "I'm going to be talking to the senators tonight about the situation. We've just got to start having more bills and resolutions printed. I would like to see at least three or four new items each meeting in addition to all of the old business."

Halpert said he didn't want to see any poorly planned resolutions, though. At the last senate meeting he urged strong consideration of all bills, not only during writing, but in committee meetings and in discussion on the floor of the senate.

"Once we pass any resolution or bill, we've got to stand behind it," Halpert said. "I don't want to see us looking like fools after we've passed one of these bills."

The four items scheduled are all bills and resolutions that have had previous readings on the floor of the senate.

One of the items is Senate Resolution 15:5, which concerns the transfer of the pharmacy from Thompson Hall to the Health Sciences Center.

Sen. Paula Holmgren states in the resolution that a majority of students will be so inconvenienced by the move that they won't bother to buy the medicine they need.

Holmgren contended that the needs of Tech students should be considered "instead of cutting budgetary corners."

Bill Hatherhill, executive director of the ambulatory clinic, which runs the pharmacy, told The University Daily that it would be difficult to solve the problem any other way.

Hatherhill also said students would be able to receive transportation to the Health Sciences Center on the shuttle buses that make deliveries to Thompson Hall.

Hatherhill did not have schedule of the times of the shuttle trips. Another item to be discussed deals with the appropriations of money to various campus organizations.

During the last meeting, no debate was generated over the allocations as had been the case last year. Halpert doesn't expect any real problems at tonight's meeting.

The reading tonight will be the final reading of the bill before a vote is taken on the allocations.

One other resolution will be discussed, and it deals with the General Store, Tech's student food cooperative.

The resolution calls for the General Store to be abolished at the end of this school year if it loses money again. Earlier, the senate had approved $3,406 to cover the deficit created from last year's losses.

The final item for discussion deals with appointments to the Tech Supreme Court.

Four people currently are being considered as possible associate justices. They are Law School students Pam Harvey and Mark White, and Graduate School students John Collins and Bill Brown.

Energy plan passes lobbyists

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter's proposal for a powerful new agency to speed construction of new energy projects survived a concerted challenge from Senate environmentalists and states rights advocates Tuesday.

The Senate voted 58-39 to table, and thus kill, a proposed Energy Mobilization Board with much weaker powers than those urged by Carter.

Other efforts to weaken the critical piece of the president's energy plan were expected over the next few days.

In opposing Carter's version of the board, Sen. Gary Hart, D-Colo., said, "Our energy needs are great."

"But they are not so great we have to abandon all other national goals in a single-minded pursuit of new energy plants."

Hart supported a version of the board proposed by Sens. Edmund S. Muskie, D-Maine, and Abraham Ribicoff, D-Conn., and backed by environmental organizations and associations of city, county and state governments.

Under Carter's version approved by the Senate Energy Committee, the mobilization board would be empowered to force local and state agencies to meet deadlines for approval or disapproval of a wide range of energy projects.

If work on a project had already begun, local agencies and state governments would be prohibited from retroactively blocking it.

Ribicoff's proposal would have required court approval for most actions by the board. It would also have been limited to selecting 24 priority projects, compared to the president's proposal which set no ceiling.

At stake are billions of dollars proposed for the construction of oil refineries, synthetic fuel plants and gas and oil pipelines, which are often delayed by regulations at all levels of government.

Sculptor rebuilds face

DENTON, Texas AP - A Denton County artist and a sculptor will try to recreate the face of an elderly woman while sheriff's officers search for the person who killed her and hacked her body to bits.

Capt. Dwight Crawford of the Denton County Sheriff's Department said the artist and sculptor were recruited from nearby Texas Woman's University. He said they would be working with pathologists trying to identify the woman.

Texas Highway Department mowing crews initially found several body parts on Highway 380 near Krum, about four miles from here.

They called Denton County Sheriff's deputies, who scoured the area for seven hours Tuesday afternoon. Highway Patrolmen and deputies found body parts scattered along 17 miles of Highway 380 between Denton and Decatur.

Harvard man to speak

Dean K. Whitla, visiting lecturer from Harvard University, will discuss the topic "Texas Tech versus Harvard: Personal Growth, Intellectual Mastery, Football—Who is the Winner?" today at 2 p.m. in the University Center Coronado Room.

In addition, Whitla is collecting data for his "Value Added Project" in conjunction with the College of Education and the College of Arts and Sciences. The project consists of a study of both freshmen and senior students in the area of personal growth and development at college. Tech is one of seven colleges participating in the project.

Other schools participating include Harvard, Radcliffe, Brown University, Boston State College, the University of Georgia, and the University of California at Irvine.

According to Robert H. Anderson, dean of the College of Education, 65 freshmen each from the College of Arts and Sciences and the College of Education will be used for the project. Seniors will be evaluated at the end of the spring semester.

Whitla is the director of the Office of Instructional Research and Evaluation at Harvard. He also serves as director of the Harvard-Danforth Center for Teaching and Learning, associate director of Admissions at Harvard and Radcliffe College and a lecturer on education, psychology and social relations.

He has written papers on education, including the effects of testing on student, admissions to colleges and encounters with learning. He has also written handbooks dealing with introducing, improving and maintaining innovative science activities at the elementary level, social studies tests and the role of the college board.

Whitla received his bachelor's, master's and doctorate degrees from the University of Nebraska.

In addition to his talk, Whitla will meet with the Jones Fellows, doctoral candidates in the College of Education, in a seminar. After the seminar, Whitla will discuss his research project with the College of Education faculty.

Anderson added that through the research project it will become clear what happens to young people in the area of personality growth while they are away at college.

Teen-agers greet Pope Paul II

NEW YORK (AP) — About 19,000 teen-agers in Madison Square Garden gave the pope a guitar, a "Big Apple" T-shirt, a pair of blue jeans and a rising, roaring welcome Wednesday at a youth celebration that was a combination rock concert and basketball pep rally.

They greeted him with the pulsating jungle drums that usually bring the home team hustling out of the locker room in a big basketball tournament.

Then the rafters exploded in an air-splitting thunder of shouts and whistles as the pope circled the arena in his popemobile - to the rock beat of "Space Shuttle" and "Battle Star Galactica" themes, played by the 100-piece band of Brooklyn's St. Francis Prep.

When Pope John Paul II lifted a tiny blonde girl from a box seat in his strong arms and placed her on top of the vehicle's cab, the young people from 200 Roman Catholic high schools in the metropolitan area commenced the rhythmic chant: "Long live the pope, Long live the pope."

"The Theme from Superman," delivered with blaring, brassy gusto by the almost all-black Cardinal Spellman High School band serenaded the pope on his way to the throne set up on the pedestal just below the basketball scoreboard that was lit up with the words:

"Holy Father, we welcome you to our city in your pursuit of human dignity for all."

In the foot-stomping, cheering crowd, many young people had tears of ecstasy running down their faces. Several were carried out in a faint.

When Pope John Paul II lifted a tiny blonde girl from a box seat in his strong that the youth concert had to begin without him, the 59-year-old pontiff tried several times to start his short speech but was continually interrupted by still another burst of cheering from still another high school far up in the balcony.

One refrain came over loud and clear. "Wrack 'em up, stack 'em up, bust 'em in two. Holy Father, we're for you."

The pope seemed to enjoy these impromptu outbursts more than the scheduled folk songs and a brief slide show of Catholic youth activities which was projected on a giant screen in front of him.

He kept making a cooing, siren-like noise into his microphone, "Woo... Woo..." This perplexed the radio and TV commentators until a Polish priest explained that this was the Polish equivalent of "Wow!"

Techsans co-author book

Two Tech faculty members are co-authors of a textbook that will be translated and published in Russian and in Japanese.

Marion O. Hagler and Magne Kristiansen, of the electrical engineering faculty, wrote "An Introduction to Controlled Thermonuclear Fusion," which is used as a supplementary text in several universities in the United States.

The book is useful for students taking an introductory plasma course, and engineers and physical scientists moving into the fusion field, the authors said.

House leader to speak

U.S. Rep. Jim Wright, House majority leader, will speak to the South Plains Democratic Council tonight at the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center in Room 107. Rep. Kent Hance from the 19th Congressional district and Rep. Charles Stenholm from the 17th Congressional District will also attend the meeting. The public is invited.

Wright is in his second term as House Majority Leader. The Fort Worth Democrat is now serving his 13th term in Congress. Before becoming a congressman, Wright was the mayor of Weatherford. At age 23, Wright was a Texas state representative.

WEATHER

Skies will be partly cloudy today. Temperatures will range in the mid-70s with lows in the mid-50s.

Nuclear power: safe, efficient, necessary

Dennis Garza

EDITOR'S NOTE: Dennis Garza is a freshman political science major and chairman of the University Center University Forum, an audience participation debate. He expresses his opinions about nuclear energy in the following column.

If the fate of nuclear power in this country were left to journalists, environmentalists, and dramatists, then the United States would certainly get rid of nukes tomorrow.

I read in The University Daily the well-written, but somewhat erroneous column by Doug Nurse on nuclear power.

My advice is to let the scientists and politicians make the decisions concerning nukes, instead of the Jane Fondas and Ralph Naders.

Nuclear power is now and will remain the most efficient and safe means of producing electricity for the U.S. We have to face the reality that there is an energy shortage.

Nuclear power is one of the few alternatives the United States has to foreign oil. To forego nuclear power would mean disaster for the United States.

Economically, the trade deficit, the dollar, and inflation would be worsened because of the increased reliance on foreign oil.

According to the House Committee on Science and Technology, 180 new nuclear plants could provide the equivalent of our entire oil imports. The loss of the nuclear industry would mean a loss of more than one million jobs, according to the Department of Labor.

The loss of nukes also would hurt our national security and heighten nuclear proliferation in the world.

The United States is the undisputed leader in the manufacturing and exporting of nuclear reactors and equipment. This is why the United States can control the spread of nuclear weapons and material in the world.

If we lose this control, the Russians or any other major country can allow Third World countries and terrorist organizations to get hold of bomb grade material. This would certainly greatly increase the chance for nuclear war.

Some people, like Doug Nurse, cry about the risks with nukes. I agree, there is some risk.

First of all, these people forget about the risks with other energy sources. Coal has been proven to kill hundreds of miners each year through accidents and black lung disease. Coal also causes pollution, which the National Academy of Sciences claims 21,000 people die from each year.

Oil has proven harmful through oil rig accidents and hundreds of oil spills.

Above all, we don't live in a risk-free society. Our lives are filled with risks every single day. We do however live in a society in which energy is our life's blood.

Finally, in response to the specific problems of nuclear waste, accidents, and security. The nuclear waste waste problem is not unsolvable. It is mainly a political problem, not a technical problem.

No matter how safe the containment, governors will haggle about which state should take the wastes. Nuclear waste can be stored in steel spent containers in solid form and buried deep beneath the earth in salt formations. Salt formations are the most stable geologic region known to man.

The steel spent containers were tested by running a locomotive into them at 80 mph and they didn't leak!

Nuclear accidents are highly unlikely and, nevertheless, preventable. Three Mile Island was about as bad a situation as one can think of. Still, safety systems worked to prevent a disaster.

Safety systems are being improved further because of Three Mile Island. Still, not a single life has been lost because of nuclear power use.

Nurse spoke of the possibility of theft and sabotage of nuclear materials. The twenty pounds of plutonium at the Tennessee is obviously missing, but doubtfully stolen.

Plutonium is a quite toxic material, just pick up and walk off with. Unless a group of terrorists came in while everyone had their eyes closed, I doubt anyone could have stolen the plutonium.

The safety systems at nuclear power plants are very good and getting better. We will just have to learn from our mistakes and reduce the chances of another.

'Good man' blamed for young resignation

William Safire

(c) 1979 N.Y. Times News Service

"The only thing necessary for the triumph of evil," wrote Edmund Burke, "is for good men to do nothing."

Secretary of State Cyrus Vance is generally considered a good man. No great shakes as a foreign policy expert, perhaps, but cool-headed, loyal to his boss, discreet, honorable.

Yet at the moment of truth in his tenure at State, he put loyalty and discretion ahead of honor and decided to do nothing about stopping the evil of racial-religious hatred from spreading through our body politic.

WHEN AMBASSADOR Andrew Young was forced to resign, the question that swept through the black leadership was: "Who got Andy? Was he fired because he offended the Israelis by meeting with the PLO, or was he fired because he lied to the State Department and made a fool out of the Secretary of State?"

If that question had been answered truthfully and promptly, much of the animosity that has developed between black leaders and Jews since that time would have been nipped in the bud.

The central facts are not in dispute. Mr. Young asserted he did not tell "The whole truth" to his superiors about his planned contravention of an American commitment. Shortly after that admission, Mr. Vance spoke to President Carter, with a State Department note-taker on an extension. Then Mr. Young's resignation was accepted.

The simple truth: Mr. Vance coolly pointed out that our government had been placed in an impossible situation, putting out an untrue story supplied to it by an ambassador operating on his own; unless Mr. Young did "the proper thing," Mr. Vance could never again be trusted to speak for the United States.

WHEN ASKED ABOUT this, the departmental spokesman denied that there had been any "him or me ultimatum," adding that "the Secretary behaved in a gentlemanly fashion."

That was surely factual — Mr. Vance is not the sort to bang his hoe on the table — but surely misleading. What really happened is that with great dignity and deference, Mr. Vance let the president know that he could not continue to serve along with Mr. Young.

When a few White House aides realized the damage being done to American society, they urged Mr. Carter to set the record straight.

That left it to Secretary Vance.

Exercising great lawyerly care, he absolved Jews in America but not Jews in Israel: "It was not the result of actions by the Jewish community." By selection, he seemed to be blaming both the Israelis and Mr. Young.

THAT STUNNED THE Israelis, who had not sought the Young resignation; worse, it did not deter any black leader from believing that the Israelis "got" their Andy, which in turn encouraged the pilgrimages to Yasir Arafat.

Mr. Vance's refusal to speak the whole truth means that an ambassador, fired for lying, has been treated to a free tour of Africa to help establish his private import-export business. It set up the media events of Jesse Jackson in Jerusalem, and of Mr. Young's meeting Wednesday with an ill and seriously debilitated Israeli Foreign Minister.

Sometimes, "for reasons of state," a U.S. official must button his lip. But when the reason for misleading Americans is purely political, and when the consequence of silence causes lasting harm, a good man will tell the whole truth.

MR. VANCE—long known as "the man who leaves no footprints"—has decided to let the racial hatred spread. Long after the "Georgia-Texas gang" joins the Harding "Ohio gang" in the pages of perfidy, the decision of this good man to do nothing will be remembered.

Letters:

Painting 'assault'

To the Editor:

Within these hallowed halls of learning, a college student sometimes finds himself on a Holy Quest involving lots of adventure.

I was involved in just such an adventure.

It started with a frontal assault on the job of painting my room. The first step in my adventure required a journey to the Sneed Hall office to acquire my weapons. (paint brush, paint, roller, etc.)

I received a stack of paper in which my declaration of intentions already had been outlined. I found my assault limited to the walls below the woodwork and including the ceiling, not including doors, furniture, floors, etc.

I did not mind this limit since methods of assault must be planned in order to prevent an atrocity of tragic appearance.

The next item on my planning sheet involved a visit by the seige engineer (the janitor) to the field of battle, and his Honor the Head Resident. These high ranking officers determine the need of a room for assault.

I did not mind this either since supervision and planning are needed to prevent waste.

Last, certainly not least, the area one could assault was limited to a few choices of flat colors. The area a foot above the woodwork and including the ceiling was limited to off-white. I did not mind this since the biggest mess an assault commander could make involves the ceiling.

What I did mind was all the "do's", "don't's", and "if's" limiting my total effort. Plus, the time needed to acquire my weapons and conduct a successful assault was too much.

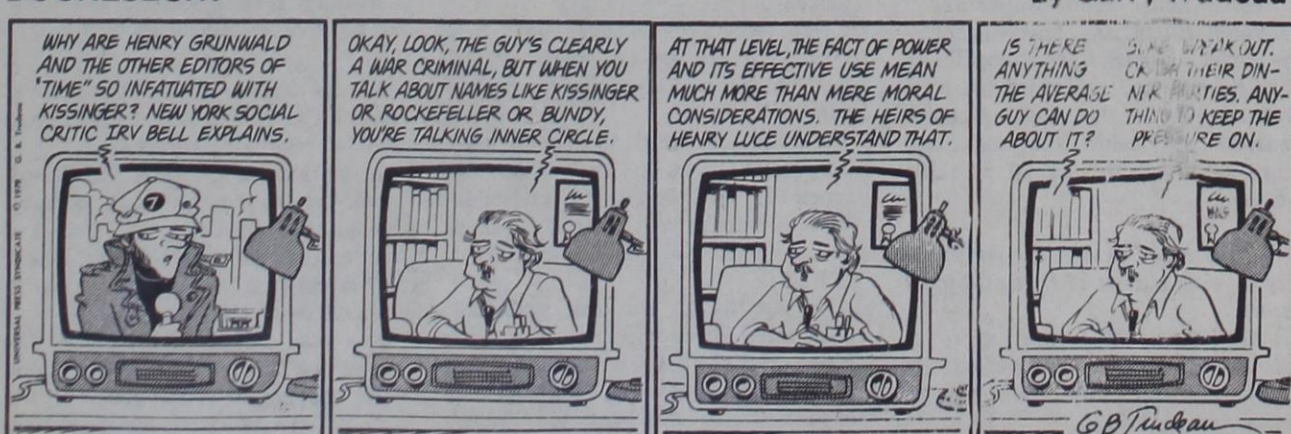

In the end, I bought my own paint brush, paint, roller, and masking tape. I painted my own room in a color of my choice.

The head honcho's might call what I did with several shades of blue tragic and disgraceful, but if they can't take a joke...

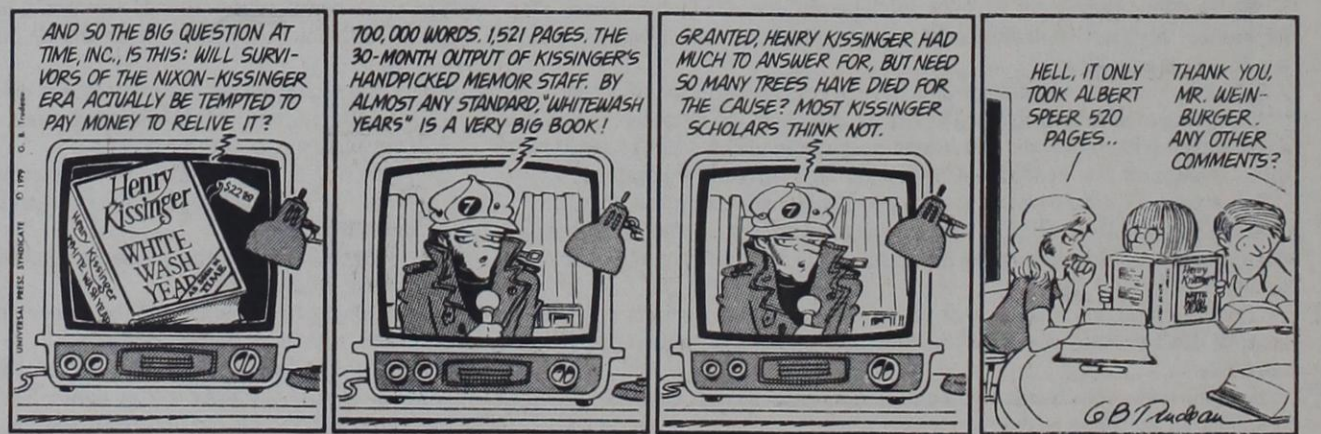

When I finished my room, I threw the permission slips in the garbage.

Society grants scholarships

By KEELY COGHLAN
UD Staff

The Nuclear and Plasma Sciences Society of the Institute of Electrical and Electronics Engineers recently granted a scholarship to Chuck Harjes, a Tech electrical engineering graduate student.

The $500 IEEE award is one of only three in the nation, said Magne Kristiansen, Horn professor of electrical engineering. Kristiansen nominated Harjes for the award.

Harjes was nominated for the award because "he is one of the top graduate students in the engineering department," Kristiansen said.

The award was based on grades and recommendation, Harjes said. Harjes had a 3.9 grade-point average as an undergraduate. Besides grade-point average, other factors considered in selecting Harjes were his independent work and contributions to plasma study, and his promise of success in his career.

Currently, Harjes is working with Lynn L. Hatfield, professor of physics, on laser triggered spark gaps in plasma switches. In other words, Harjes is using lasers to close very high-powered, high voltage switches, Kristiansen said. The lasers generate a plasma medium, which is the non-mechanical switch, he said.

Harjes also has presented two papers at international energy conferences. One conference was the Tech-sponsored International Pulsed Power Conference held this summer. The other was an international pulse power conference in Geneva.

The scholarship was presented to Harjes for his personal use as long as he continues his studies, he said. Harjes is currently working on his master's degree and will most probably continue his studies for his doctorate on an extension of the same project, he said.

Harjes previously received the C. C. Perryman Award for engineering, a Texas Tech University Scholarship, an Alcoa Scholarship and an Achievement Rewards for College Scientists Award as an undergraduate.

Harjes is also a member of the engineering honor society, Eta Kappa Nu, Phi Eta Sigma and Phi Kappa Phi.

Campus Girl Scouts
Everyone is invited to meet with the Campus Girl Scouts at 6:30 p.m. today in Room 108 in the Plant Science Building to discuss the Palo Duro trip and the dinner theater. Members should bring $6 semester dues.

Polo Club
The Polo Club will practice at 9:30 a.m. Saturday at the new polo field across from the Law School.

SA Committee
SA Student Service Committee will meet at 7 p.m. today in the SA Conference Room. If any member is unable to attend this mandatory meeting, contact Paula at 742-7064.

Angel Flight
New cherub pledges and actives should attend the meeting at 4:30 p.m. today in Room 4 of Holden Hall.

AE Rho
The National Honorary Broadcasting Society will meet with new members at 7:30 p.m. today in Room 108 of the Mass Communications Building to discuss fund raisers and other plans for the semester.

SCEC
Student Council for Exceptional Children will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in Room 301 of the Administration Building. Officers will be elected. All old and new members are urged to attend!

The Continuum
The Continuum for students over 25 will meet 12 p.m. to 1 p.m. Oct. 9 in the Conference Room across from 163 Administration Building. Second Tuesday luncheon featuring Guest speaker Dr. Morrow on "Careers in Home Economics." Bring your Lunch!

American Institute of Industrial Engineers

American Institute of Industrial Engineers will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in Room 110 of the Engineering Center Building for their Oct. meeting. Details for the field trip Oct. 10-13 will be discussed. Truman Bell will be the speaker. Reminder: You must pay for the field trip by today. All IE majors invited.

WOW
The Tech History Club will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in Room 74 of Holden Hall. Plans for this semester will be discussed.

ESC
The Engineering Student Council will meet at 6 p.m. Monday in Room 110 of the Engineering Center Building. All members must attend.

The Society of Professional Journalists
The Society of Professional Journalists will meet at 5:15 p.m. today in Room 209 of the Journalism Building. Money for national dues at $22.50 will be collected.

Political Science Exam
Credit by examination for Political Science 231 and 232 will be administered on Oct. 20 in Room 76 of Holden Hall. The exam for 231 will begin at 8:30 a.m. and the exam for 232 will begin at 10:30 a.m. Applications are available in the Political Science Department in Room 113 of Holden Hall. Deadline for application is Friday.

Women's Service Organization
WSO is selling "Beat A&M" buttons in the UC from 9 a.m. to 3 p.m. through Friday for $5.00 each.

Sailing Club
Anyone interested in joining the Sailing Club is urged to attend a meeting at 5:30 p.m. today in Room 112 of the Math Building. Future Activities will be planned.

Monterey High School (Lubbock) Homecoming Activities
Attention MHS exes: A Homecoming pep rally will be at 9:15 a.m. Friday in the Men's Gym. An all day reception will follow in the Homemaking Lounge. Visitors should park in the Monterey Shopping Center parking lot. The game against Hobbs will begin at 8 p.m. at Lowrey Field.

Anthropology Society
The Anthropology Society will meet at 8 p.m. today in Room 129 of Holden Hall. Speaker will be Dr. Phil Dennis.

Rape Crisis Center
Lubbock Rape Crisis Center will be having a volunteer training program. Call 763-RAPE if interested.

University Sierra Club
All Tech students are welcome to meet with the University Sierra Club at 7 p.m. Monday in Room 202 of the Law School.

South Plains Democratic Council
The South Plains Democratic Council will meet at 7 p.m. today in Room 107 of the Lubbock Memorial Civic Center. All Tech Young Democrats are urged to attend elections at 6:30 p.m. and other special activities. The guest speaker will be Rep. Jim Wright, House Majority Leader. The public is invited.

Student Organization Registration
All student organizations must register with the Student Life Office by 5 p.m. today in Room 163 of the Administration Building. Registration is required for display of posters, solicitation privileges and use of campus facilities. Contact Glenna at Student Life 742-2192.

UMAS
The United Mexican-American Students will meet at 7 p.m. Friday in the Blue Room of the UC. Everyone welcome, bring money for T-shirts and dues.

AICHE
The American Institute of Chemical Engineers will meet at 7:30 p.m. today in Room 101 of the Chemical Engineering Building. David Fahle from DuPont will speak.

Rodeo Assoc.
Rodeo Association will have a general membership meeting at 8 p.m. today in the Ag Auditorium. Everyone needs to attend. Enter for Sul Ross Rodeo by tomorrow evening.

Corpsdettes
The Corpsdettes will have a second coke party at 7:30 p.m. today in the Blue Room of the UC. All women interested are invited to attend.

Homecoming
Applications for Homecoming queen and Homecoming parade floats are now available in the Saddle Tramps Office, second floor of the UC, for any organizations or dorms interested. Deadlines for entries is 5 p.m. Oct. 26.

Courtyard Concert
A small presentation from the Opera Faust will be given at 11 a.m.-1 p.m. by the Music dept. and Programs Council in the UC Courtyard on Oct. 10.

Alpha Epsilon Delta
Alpha Epsilon Delta, the honorary pre-med society will meet at 7 p.m. today in Room 101 of the Biology Building. Annual dues will be collected. Glenn Yarbrough, at Tech Med School, will speak.

ASAE
The Texas Tech Branch of ASAE will sponsor the Texas Sanction of ASAE Thursday and Friday and will also have a hamburger social with beer at 6 p.m. Friday in the American Legion Hall on Ave. Q and 24th street. All interested members are invited.

COE Student Council
The COE Student Council will meet at 2 p.m. today in the Coronado room of the UC. Dr. Whitla of Harvard University will speak, and a reception sponsored by COE will follow.

Alaskan gold rush declines

ANCHORAGE, Alaska (AP) — Alaska is a gold-proud state where the nugget is as much a symbol as the Northern Lights and your next door neighbor may spend his summers working on a claim.

But even with today's skyrocketing prices, Alaska's gold production has dwindled to a trickle. This year's estimated output is only about one-tenth of the amount mined in 1941.

J.P. Tangen, president of the Alaska Mining Association, said the price increase has only "given miners an opportunity to sell off some of the gold they have accumulated in the past several years at a reasonable profit for a change."

There is no denying there has been an upswing in production since the lean years of Alaska's "gold depression."

Mining experts estimate gold production in the early 1970s had dropped to barely 10,000 to 12,000 ounces per year. This year, Dr. Ernest Wolff of the University of Alaska's Mineral Industry Research Lab said production could be as high as 100,000 ounces, worth roughly $40 million at today's prices.

"I'd say 20 percent of the miners out there struck it rich," Wolff said. "Another 40 percent are making a real good living."

Some Alaskans look hopefully at the increase for signs of a new gold rush. But others rate it as strictly bush league - a far cry from the days when 20,000 miners and adventurers swarmed Nome's beaches at the turn of the century, and fortunes were made in a matter of days.

"There is a tremendous interest in gold in Alaska as there is anywhere else," said Tuckey Hayes, who has been involved in gold mining for the past six years. "But the expertise of the large mining companies is not present due to the federal lands situation. They're reluctant to make large investments."

As for smaller operations, Hayes said, the price increase has put some miners back to work and made their work more profitable "but there are mines falling every day." He said this frequently happens because miners can't get financing for their operations. There are only 300 to 400 heavy equipment operations in Alaska, many run by families or individuals with a handful of partners.

Center ground work begins

Groundwork has begun on an "open-air" learning center that was designed by a team of Tech architecture students for Roscoe Wilson Elementary School in the Tech Terrace area.

The learning center design encompasses about 12,000 square feet of space. The center includes an open air theater with terraced seating; a stream that re-uses its own water to teach children the difference between a waterfall, rapids, fountain and pool. The center also features a small garden and greenhouse to teach children how plants are grown; an arbor for grapes and other vines; a picnic area; flag plaza and a small zoological garden where children can learn the care of animals. The design was initiated by a request from a Parent Teacher Association committee headed by Mrs. Durward Mahon. The project unanimously was approved by Lubbock School Board members, Wilson Elementary's PTA and the UNIT (University-Nineteenth-Indiana-Thirty-Fourth Street) Neighborhood Association, according to Robert Venn, architecture professor, who also serves with the students on the project.

The architecture team includes Venn; Tom Stewart, architecture professor, and students: Tom Redmond, Kim Bailey, Kerry Elder, James Reggen, Sergio Moran and Mark Bailey. The work will be done by the architectural students and volunteers recruited from the community, Venn said. Completion date for the project depends on how much support is given, he said.

The Lubbock school system has offered to replace some of the gas lines and do some of the earth work. "Much of the work was designed not to be difficult," Venn said. "but requires a lot of patience and care. The project involves a lot of little work that also is time-consuming."

The PTA has raised about $38,000 in funding to support the project, Venn said.

"The learning center will benefit the community as well as the school," Venn said. The picnic area and the amphitheater are designed for adult use also, he added.

Venn said he hopes the project will do something about creating a "sense of community spirit."

"We hope the community will get some idea of what is going on as we start work," Venn said.

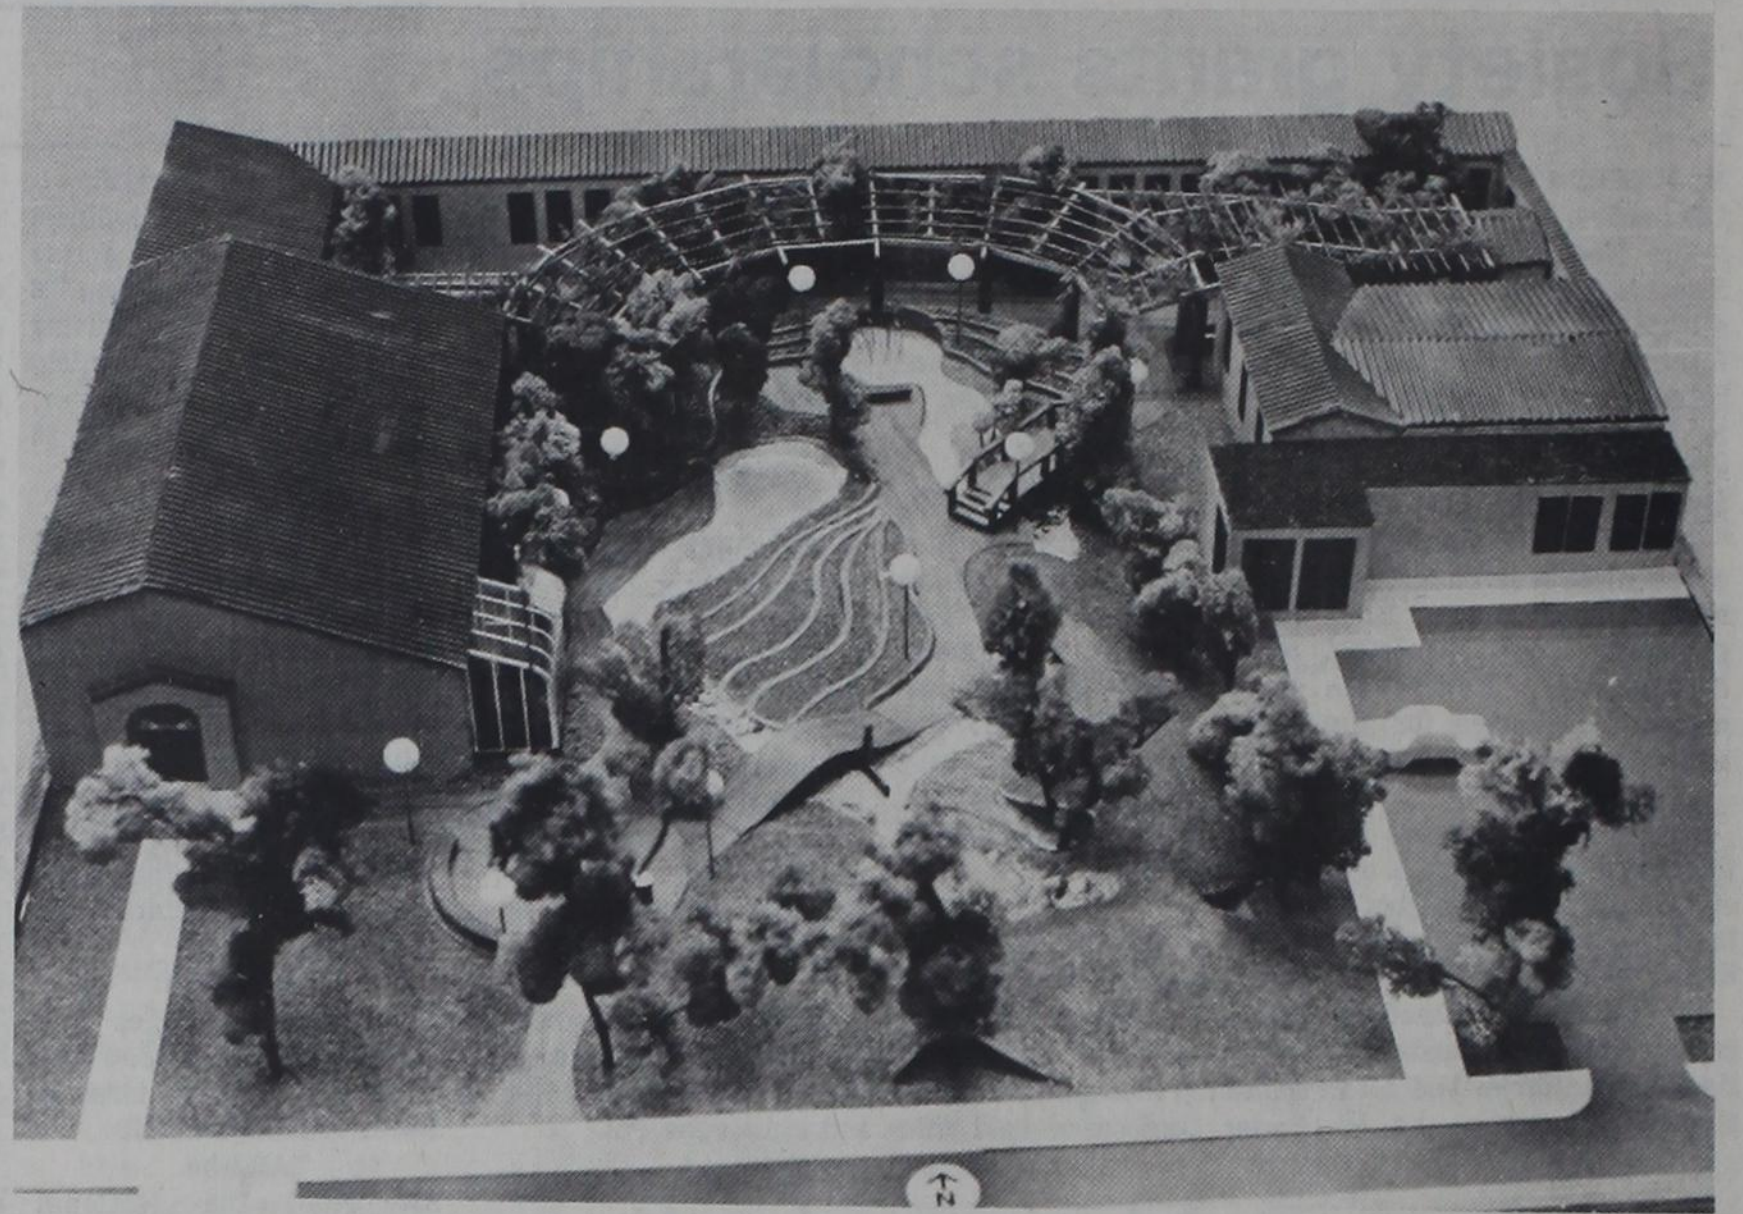

The area designated for the learning center was not set aside for any other specific use and the landscaped area will be separate from the school's playground.

Ornamental and shade trees will be placed on the landscaped area as well as earthen berms, raised dirt mounds, to provide a sense of enclosure and separate the area from a parking lot. The picnic area will have access to the school cafeteria and contain tables and benches.

The center also includes lighted walkways with bridges which cross the shallow stream. The stream will have stepping stones to cross from the theater stage to the terraced seating, which can accommodate about 200. Dressing rooms for production casts would be school classrooms directly behind the stage.

The greenhouse will connect to a classroom which could be used as a science room.

Venn said the Lubbock Child Development Center is also considering the same type of design for a comparable learning center.

Tech architectural students have designed this open-air learning center, which is currently being constructed for the Roscoe-Wilson Elementary School in Lubbock. Last week, stakes were laid out and earth moving began on the project that contains an amphitheater, seating, picnic area, stream, waterfall and arbor.

Balloonists plans burst over Ohio

LIMA, Ohio (AP) — The owners of the balloon DaVinci Trans-America have been given permission to remove the craft from the Ohio meadow where it was forced down by a storm, ending an attempt at the first transcontinental balloon flight.

Ray Storn, a Federal Aviation Administration investigator, Tuesday said the balloon could be removed from the site near Spencerville, but said he wanted to talk to crew members before they left Ohio.

The crew planned to call a helicopter to lift the two-ton gondola from the field to a flatbed truck for its return to the West Coast.

Vera Simons, of McLean, Va., was the only one of the four persons inside the gondola to be badly injured when the balloon went down. She was hospitalized with a fractured leg.

Rudolph Engelmann of Boulder, Colo.; Fred Hyde, an eye surgeon from Prairie Village, Kan., and NBC-TV cameraman Randy Birch, sustained only bruises.

Victory had appeared certain for the DaVinci and its four adventurers, who took off from Tillamook, Ore., last Wednesday. It was just four hours from surpassing the distance record for helium-filled balloons of 139 hours and six minutes.

"I'm not sure I want to recreate" the landing, said Engelmann at the Allen County airport early Tuesday before being flown to Chicago for a national television appearance.

"It was a fluke storm. Completely unexpected," he said. "We had just outrun severe squall lines associated with tornadoes out of Indiana and Illinois."

Just when the worst appeared to be over, the crew was surprised by a severe thunderstorm near the western border of Ohio.

Ag-engineers meet

More than 100 agricultural engineers will meet in Lubbock Thursday and Friday to discuss the latest engineering aspects of food production and distribution.

Delegates attending the 15th annual meeting of the Texas Section of the American Society of Agricultural Engineers (ASAE) will represent federal and state agencies, universities and private industry.

The meetings will be held at the South Park Inn. Registration fee is $8 and delegates can register at 10 a.m. Thursday. Students will be admitted at no charge.

A wide variety of topics covering energy and structural disasters through fires, explosions and tornadoes will be featured during the two-day event.

Topics discussed include wind energy generators for irrigation power; causes and prevention of tornado wind damage; land treatment of municipal waste water; and ground water injection of cold water for energy recovery.

Supreme court rules on mental cases

AUSTIN (AP) — The Texas Supreme Court today adopted a "clear and convincing evidence" rule to commit a person to a mental institution. "This is an intermediate standard," the Supreme Court said, "falling between the preponderance standard of ordinary civil proceedings and the reasonable doubt standard of criminal proceedings."

The state filed a petition in probate court to commit Addington indefinitely, and the jury found by "clear, unequivocal and convincing evidence" that Addington was mentally ill and required hospitalization for his own welfare and the protection of others. An appeals court reversed the judgment of the probate court and remanded the case for trial. It held that the proper standard of proof was "beyond a reasonable doubt."

The Supreme Court reversed the appeals court and held that "preponderance of the evidence" was the proper standard in civil commitment cases. It said, however, the probate court had committed Addington under an even stricter standard. It upheld the probate court decision. Addington then appealed to the U.S. Supreme Court, and it vacated the decision of the Texas Supreme Court. The U.S. Supreme Court instructed the Texas Supreme Court to define the precise burden to be assumed by the state.

"At this time we adopt the 'clear and convincing evidence' standard of proof," the Texas Supreme Court said. "It shall henceforth be employed in those civil proceedings brought under state law to commit an individual for an indefinite period to a state mental hospital. 'Clear and convincing evidence is defined as that measure or degree of proof which will produce in the mind of the trier of fact a firm belief or conviction as to the truth of the allegations sought to be proved.'"

Troopers withdraw from town

JOURDANTON, Texas (AP) — Complying with local political pressure, the Department of Public Safety's six-man state trooper contingent beat a strategic withdrawal from an Atascosa County-owned office today, taking their "Texas Highway Patrol" sign with them. County Judge O.B. Gates dismissed reporters seeking details on the move with a gruff, "No comment," and Sheriff Tommy Williams was unavailable. County officials gave the DPS a "get out of town" deadline because they said two of the troopers were "harassing" local residents. Williams said he would not accept prisoners from the two troopers without an order from a justice of the peace. Patrolmen Albert Rodriguez, 26, and Earl Conaway, 32, are at the center of the squabble. The pair are credited by superiors with cutting the county's traffic death rate in half by cracking down on drunken drivers. The crackdown has led to drunken driving charges against the sons of two local politicians. Last week, county officials ordered the DPS to transfer the two troopers or be evicted from the office in a "log cabin" replica of the first county courthouse. DPS Sgt. Bobby Harpole delivered the keys to the office to county officials this morning as the troopers withdrew. DPS officials have said the two troopers will not be transferred, but will continue to work from their homes, as will the other four troopers assigned to the county.

Album erupts with sensitivity

By DONNA RIVERA
UD Entertainment Writer

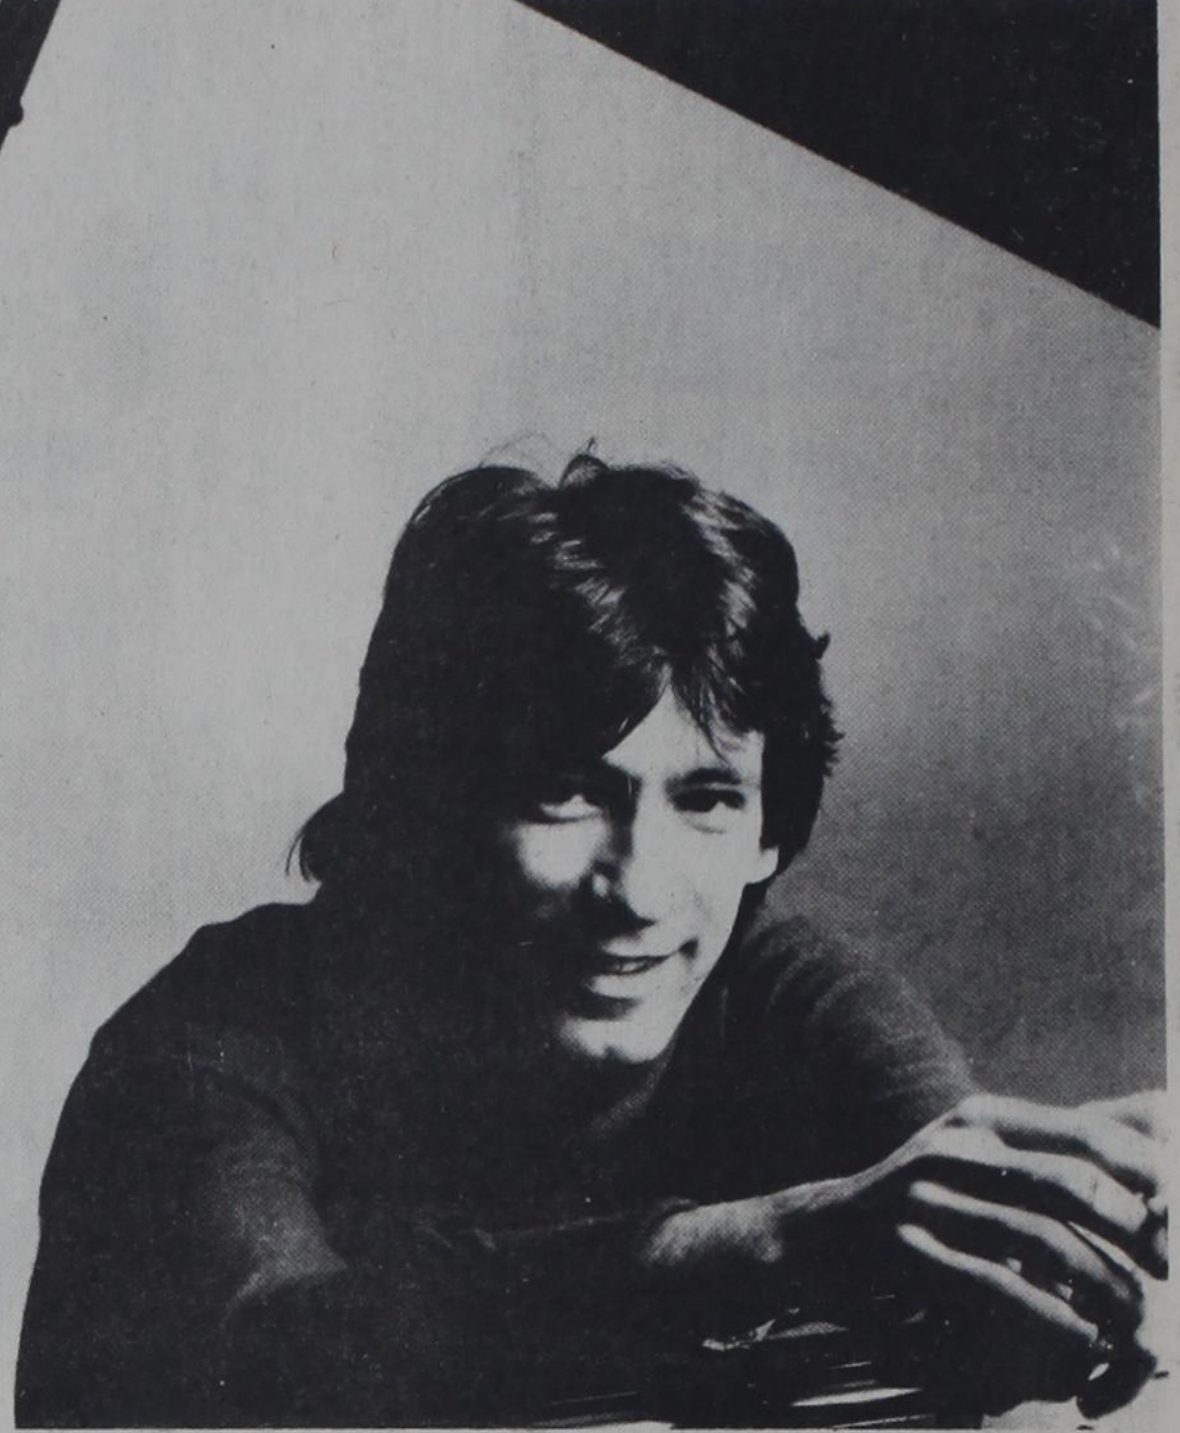

Imagine a glistening white beach, complete with a cool gentle breeze and a hot sun sending warm rays. Such is the setting for Jimmy Buffett's latest album, "Volcano." (MCA Records). "Volcano" lives up to previous Buffett works—it offers good listening music and enjoyable lyrics. It is as wild and nonsensical as Buffett's other LPs. Yet "Volcano" has many songs which express Buffett's emotional sensitivity. One such song is "Survive," a tune about a long distance love affair, which epitomizes the agonies of being far from a loved one.

"Sometimes I kinda get real ill when I receive my monthly telephone bill, But you say it, and I'll pay it, 'cause it helps me to survive, stay alive; 'til I see you again." Mellow piano playing and soft harmonica blending accompany "Survive." Another song using Buffett's emotional songwriting is "Treat Her Like A Lady." The title is misleading since the song is not about a girl, but about an island. "Treat Her Like A Lady" mixes guitars and piano, resulting in an acoustically pleasing melody. The vocals are amply harmonized by James Taylor and Dave Loggins. Much of "Volcano" concentrates on the liveliness and vivaciousness of the West Indies. Title cut "Volcano" represents the reggae sound found on the islands. "I don't know where I'm a gonna go when the Volcano blow...where I go I hope there's rum(sic)," Buffett sings. And "Don't want to land on no Three Mile Island, don't want to see my skin aglow..." is an example of Buffett's satirical manner in his music. "Volcano" is enhanced by various instruments used to give the song its tropically native sound. Shakers, congas, banjo-uke and the bass pipe create a sensation of being on a tropical island drinking rum-laced drinks without a care in the world. "Fins" is a whimsical tune concerning the land sharks a girl may encounter on the beach. The comical song is reminiscent of "Cheeseburger in Paradise" off the "Son of a Son of a Sailor" album.

"Fins" has a cheer-type chorus lending to the song's zaniness. "Fins to the right, and fins to the left, and you're the only bait in town..." Buffett sings. "Dreamsicle" offers release for Buffett. The song is a montage of a writer-performer's experiences. It is a self-description of Buffett. "Boat Drinks" has been released as a single. The southern rhythm describes a man's wish to permanently migrate to a warm climate. "Waitress, I need two more boat drinks, I'm heading south 'fore my dream shrinks," Buffett sings. Another interesting song on the "Volcano" album is "Chanson Pour Les Petits Enfants," which translates from French into "A Song For All The Little Children." The legend song involves Young Mister Moon and his best friend Magnus. While flying through the Milky Way, they spot an island and fall back to Earth. Moon and Mangus discover the love and beauty that surrounds the natives of the island. "Buffett's french accent in the song is amazingly believable. The song creates an honest reflection of Buffett's versatility and imagination as a songwriter. "Volcano" provides an exceptional combination of Buffett's songwriting. The album was recorded last May at Montserrat, British West Indies. Some of the photographs featured in the album jacket were taken by Buffett.

Yuri Egorov

Russian pianist Yuri Egorov gave a brilliant performance at Tech, according to reviewer Robin Kral. Only minor flaws detracted from the performance. The music he played was both technically and emotionally demanding. And Egorov met the challenge. Egorov was the first artist to appear as part of the UC Artist series.

Egorov offers versatility

By ROBIN KRAL
UD Staff

Versatility is one of the most important qualities an artist can possess. The ability to master strongly contrasting musical styles is essential if a musician is to be considered well-rounded. Saturday night in the UC Theatre, Russian-born pianist Yuri Egorov displayed impressive versatility by performing a wide range of styles with fine technical ability and musicianship. His performance was received enthusiastically by a large audience.

Egorov's performance Saturday showed that such tributes are well-deserved. The program covered baroque, romantic and contemporary styles, providing something for every taste. The program began with Bach's "Partita No. 6 in E minor." The "Partita" consists of seven fairly short movements, each demanding in its own way. Egorov's only noticeable mistakes of the night were made during the "Partita," but they were very slight. Egorov recovered beautifully each time. As a result, these few mistakes hardly detracted from his performance.

to bring out the best in Bach's music. The second piece on the program, Chopin's "Fantasy in F minor," was included in Egorov's Carnegie Hall recording. This piece was the highlight of the concert. The "Fantasy" is extremely challenging for the pianist, both technically and expressively. Egorov's performance was little short of awesome. His playing contained all the passion and intensity vital to Chopin's music, and was technically flawless. Egorov closed the concert with a contemporary selection, Prokofiev's "Sonata No. 8 in B-flat major," probably the most difficult piece in the concert. Prokofiev's style is very hard to interpret and mold into a coherent whole, but Egorov met the challenge admirably. He knew just how to make the development of each movement seem logical rather than confusing. Key changes, modulations and thematic variations all fell into place perfectly. The last section of the third movement is tremendously hard, and Egorov's performance of it was stunning. The audience gave Egorov a well-deserved standing ovation, bringing him back for two curtain calls. It was encouraging to see the concert so well-attended and enthusiastically received. If this trend of attendance continues, perhaps Tech will attract artists of Egorov's caliber more often in the future.

Egorov's reputation preceded him to Lubbock. His recent recording, "Yuri Egorov at Carnegie Hall," has been praised highly by critics nationwide. In addition, he was the winner of an unprecedented cash award in the quadrennial Van Cliburn International Piano Competition which was equal to the first prize.

Indeed, considering the difficulty of the piece, it would have been surprising had he not committed a few errors. Egorov's grasp of Bach's compositional style was very impressive. He played with the near-metronomic tempo, methodical development and precise expression necessary of great importance to rhythm and blues artists, and Lubbock audiences will be able to see some of the best R&B bands as the clubs become even more renowned. Doyle Bramhall is both the drummer and vocalist for the Millionaires. Bramhall has playing experience with some of the better blues bands, such as Jimmy Vaughan and the Chessmen, Mark Benno and the Nightcrawlers and Austin band Storm.

his guitar experience has come from his time spent with the Austin band Cracker Jack. Alex Napier is the bassist for the group, playing formerly with Southern Feeling and with the Cobras, a R&B band which will also be in Lubbock this weekend. Each of the Millionaires members is from Dallas, but went on to the Austin area to join up with popular blues bands. Lubbock is gaining popularity on the rhythm and blues circuit, and the Millionaires will have the distinction of playing at the Cotton Club, already a legend in blues music.

Cosmic cowboy to perform at Cold Water Country

Making a comeback in the music world can be as hard if not harder than breaking into the business to begin with.

Michael Murphey, self-directed "progressive country" artist, has faded on and off the public stage since his early albums, "Geronimo's Cadillac" and "Cosmic Cowboy Souvenir," and his last, a gold album called "Blue Sky, Night Thunder," which was successful with critics.

Murphey's latest album, "Peaks, Valleys, Honky-Tonks & Alleys," is catapulting his career into the nation's musical spotlight once again, and giving Murphey's old fans and new acquaintances a realistic view of the "Cosmic Cowboy" who's been rocking the progressive country music scene for the past six or more years.

In the company of such notables as Willie Nelson, Jerry Jeff Walker and other Armadillo World

Headquarters regulars, Murphey has helped evolve a certain trend of music with an Austin flavor all its own.

Even though Murphey is a native Texan, he moved his family to the relative isolation of the ski country around Taos, N.M. Natural surroundings and love for the stories he tells through his music have done much to shape Murphey's style. His free flowing music and lyrics sometimes—autobiographical ballads make his style interesting as well as unique.

Presently, Murphey is being managed by the Tulsa-based Jim Halsey Company and records on the Epic label.

The performer's time is not only concentrated on his recording and his current tour.

Murphey's latest project is the cinema arts, a field in which he has already received recognition. "The Divided Trail," a documentary centering on the plight of the American Indian in urban areas, has received an Academy Award nomination. Murphey composed the music for the film.

Murphey has always shown a great concern for the native Americans. He has championed Indian rights, and played benefits for "The Longest Walk," an event organized to educate Americans of the situation facing the Indian in the United States.

Now on tour, Murphey will be playing at Coldwater Country tonight. Tickets will be $4 per person.

Michael Murphey

Dylan cancels

Bob Dylan was scheduled to perform Oct. 21 in the Lubbock Coliseum, but the show was canceled yesterday, even though tickets already had gone on sale Tuesday.

Box office officials said the show was canceled because Dylan had booked previous television engagements. Tickets were selling well before the cancellation was announced, officials said.

The Dylan concert was the third last-minute cancellation in the past month. In unrelated incidences, Ronnie Milsap and the Beach Boys canceled after the shows were announced.

Bob Dylan currently has released an album "Slow Train Coming." The train will be even slower on its way to Lubbock, in fact it may never arrive.

A new suit for $35?

You bet!

I'm talking about my birthday suit of course. A month ago I was pale and white. Now everyone thinks I just got back from the Caribbean. But I didn't. (Cheated!)

I spent about 15 to 20 minutes of my lunch hour at Sundance Tanning Salon a couple of times a week. And their tanning booths are safe, comfortable and totally private. So I can get an all-over tan. It was only about $35 for 20 visits— that's about $1.75 per session.

This new suit is like a whole new wardrobe. And now I feel better and look better. What do you think?

Goodbye regular season, hello playoffs!

Sept. 25, baseball season ended as far as I'm concerned. The Houston Astros, baseball's cinderella team, was officially eliminated from the West Division race of the National League when it lost to the Los Angeles Dodgers on that fateful day.

Jeff Rembert

There's no reason to complain about the Astros' season. After all, they did better than anyone expected. The Dodgers and the New York Yankees, the 1978 World Series participants, were both theoretically eliminated from contention by mid-May.

Texans' dreams of an all-Texas World Series almost became a reality. Unfortunately, the Texas Rangers fell out of real contention in early August though they were mathematically still in the race until late September.

Now it's playoff time in the National and American Leagues.

Hopefully, the Pittsburgh Pirates will make short work of the Reds in the NL playoffs. The Bucs have already won the first two games. Apparently the Reds burned themselves out fighting it out with Houston in the west.

True, the Pirates and the Montreal Expos had a tight race in the NL East Division but their race didn't have the same furor the Houston-Cincinnati race had.

The California Angels did exactly what they were supposed to do by winning the AL West Division title. They couldn't help but win with Don Baylor, Bobby Grich and a few other millionaire free agents.

The Kansas City Royals put up a fair fight but KC has had basically the same team for three years. The KC management has been too conservative.

The Royals did win the West title three straight years, but they also lost to the Yankees three straight years in the AL playoffs, and the past helps only in trivia contests.

KC should have improved its lineup. Now manager Whitey Herzog is looking for a job. The management should have fired itself.

It wasn't even funny what the Baltimore Orioles did to the AL East teams. I followed the standings all season, and I can't remember a day when the Birds weren't in first place. Milwaukee and Boston gave it a valiant try, but the Orioles practically clinched the division title at the All-Star break.

Yours truly will now make the prediction that Mom stands by and Dad always bets against. Baltimore will whip the Angels and proceed to defeat the Pirates in the World Series.

Once the Series is over, sportswriters, broadcasters and anyone else with money to give an award will hold banquets to bestow baseball's elite with titles and trophies.

We will only concern ourselves with the traditional awards that Hall of Famers usually place in their trophy cases.

The first award we will consider is the Cy Young Award. This award is given to one pitcher in each league for pitching excellence.

In the American League, Mike Flanagan, left-handed pitching sensation for Baltimore, should win. His 23-9 record was the best the league had to offer and he was third with 190 strikeouts.

The National League award will go to one of three pitchers, Brude Sutter, J.R. Richard and or Joe Niekro.

Sutter had a phenomenal year as the relief specialist for the Chicago Cubs leading the league in saves. Richard of the Astros, led the league with 313 strikeouts and a 2.68 earned run average. Niekro, also of Houston, collected 21 wins to pace the NL along with his brother Phil Niekro of the Atlanta Braves.

Don Baylor will certainly win the AL Most Valuable Player Award. As the Angels designated hitter, Baylor slammed 36 home runs and knocked in 139 runs to pace the circuit.

Keigh Hernandez of the St. Louis Cardinals should garner the NL's MVP award after leading the league with a .344 batting average and finishing fourth with 105 rbis.

Cincinnati's George Foster belted 30 home runs and he should draw a lot of votes.

However you view the situation, baseball season is over for most of America. The remaining games are mainly for barroom betting purposes.

Tech soccer team to face Longhorns

The Tech Soccer team, after a slow start, is back to its winning ways again currently with a four-game winning streak. This weekend, The University of Texas comes to Lubbock to battle the red hot Red Raiders at 2 p.m. on Saturday at the Fuller Track Field.

"Enthusiasm and crowd response could be the difference in the game," said Jim Messermer, Tech goal keeper. Last weekend, in the Hardin Simmons Invitational Tournament in Abilene, Tech took first place honors by defeating the 14th ranked Hardin Simmons Cowboys.

"This is a big football weekend," said Messermer, "I hope the fans will come out and get fired up for the A&M game early by watching us beat UT in the afternoon."

Tech will try to avenge their loss to the Horns 2-1 in Austin last year. Admission is free and open to the public.

Bucs nudge Reds in extra innings

CINCINNATI (AP) — Slugger Dave Parker drove home Omar Moreno with a 10th-inning single and gave the Pittsburgh Pirates a 3-2 victory over the Cincinnati Reds in Wednesday's second game of the National League championship series.

The triumph, coming after a dramatic rally by the Reds tied the game in the ninth, gave the Pirates their second consecutive extra-inning victory in this best-of-five series.

The Pirates, driving for their first NL pennant since 1971, will try to finish off the Reds when this playoff resumes Friday at Pittsburgh.

Sophomore to receive starting nod Saturday

By JON MARK BEILUE
UD Sportswriter

It's tough enough when a defense runs up against a back like Texas A&M Heisman trophy candidate Curtis Dickey, but when a defense is forced to play against him without one of its top performers, things can really get hairy.

Tech outside linebacker Roger Jones was felled with a knee injury last week in practice, which will sideline the Spearman junior for the remainder of the year.

"Not only was Roger an excellent player," said Tech coach Rex Dockery, "but he was one of the leaders of the team. He had all the qualities you look for in a player. He was disciplined and tough. Roger meant a lot to our team."

speed at the Raider defense. "He's just an excellent runner," Dockery said. "He's as physically tough a runner as anyone will see. You don't find many backs that can carry the ball 20-30 times a game and take the licks he can. He's sure to go in the first round of the draft."

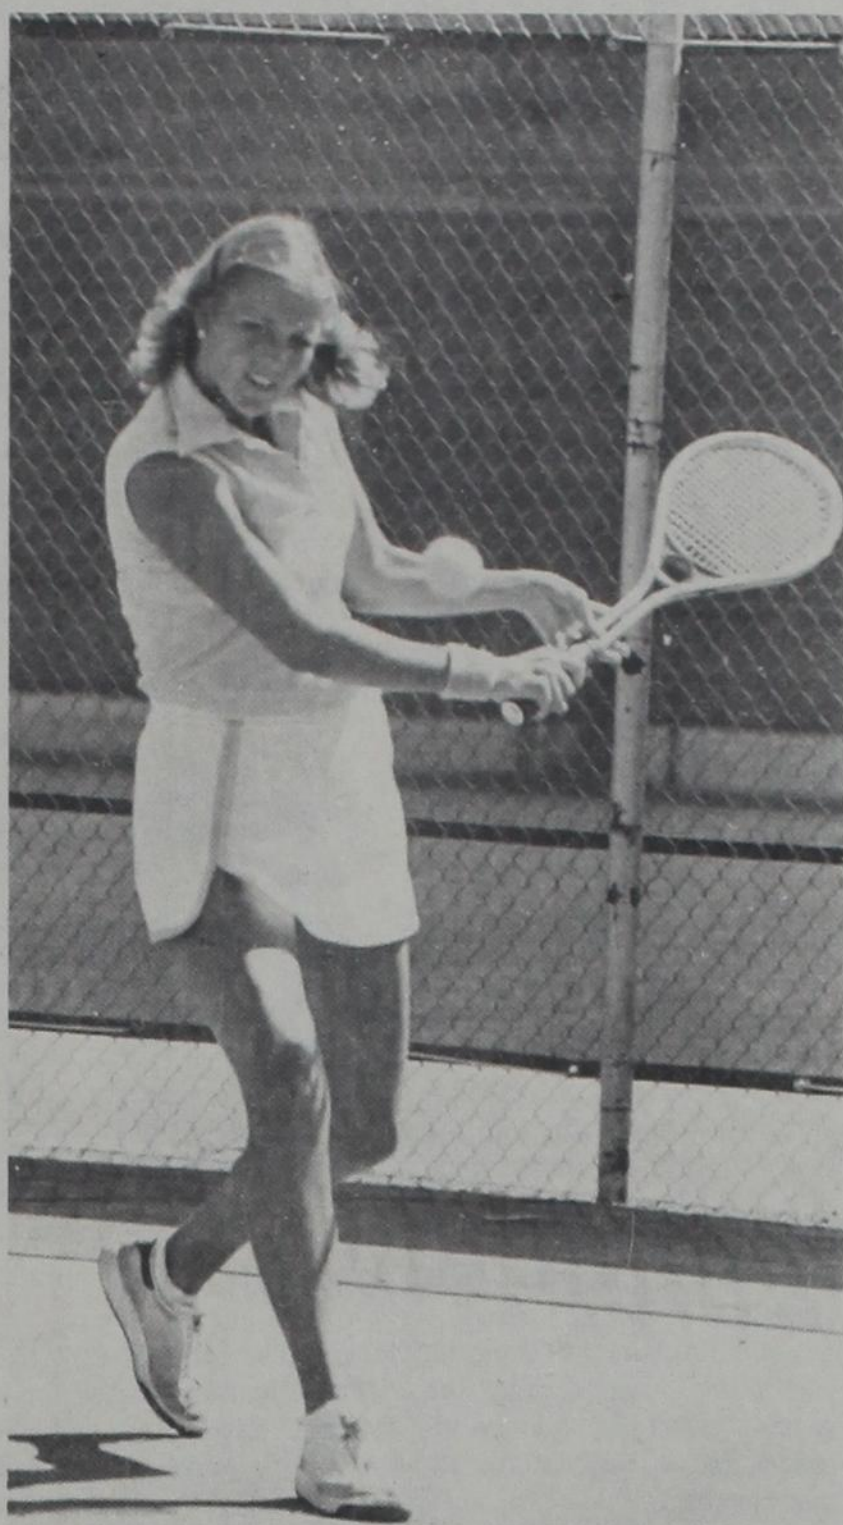

Washington said that his main responsibility will be to turn the A&M speedy backs to the inside. If Dickey gets to the outside, the party may well be over.

Aggies. "We've had two really good days of practice, probably the best we've had this year," said Dockery. "The Aggies tend to make us better."

It's no secret that the Raiders have had a slower start than what many had believed, including the Raiders themselves. Dockery said that errors are still costing the team.

"We're a better team than we've shown. Mistakes are just hurting us right now, like the blocked punt against Baylor." That error was a coaching error.

Then sounding like Oral Roberts, Dockery said, "Our players are still working hard and having a good attitude. Something good will happen to us."

Raider spikers down ACC, 3-0

After back-to-back weekend tournaments in San Diego, Calif., and Provo, Utah, the Raider Spikers found West Texas competition to their liking Tuesday night as they swept Abilene Christian University 15-6, 15-11, 15-9 on the Wildcats' home court.

The Spikers held a 15-9 season record going into Wednesday night's encounter with Sul Ross State in Monahans.

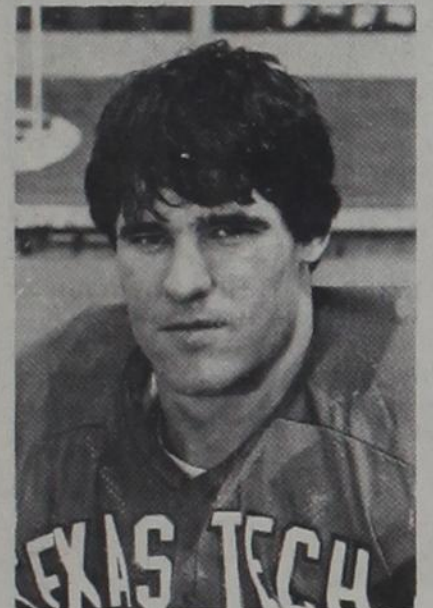

The ACU match was a quick one as Tech dominated the first and third games with a stingy defense led by middle blockers Rhonda Farley and Carolyn Tubbs.

The second game saw ACU jump out to a 10-4 lead, but Tech outscored its opponents 11-1 for the come-from-behind victory.

"We were able to work on our attack, and we showed more concentration," said Coach Janice Hudson. "We were able to use our bench again, and Rhonda Hubbard, Christa White and Teresa Stafford all looked good in relief."

Tech's offensive attack had been suspect in the early stages of the BYU tournament last weekend, but it turned things around with victories over Idaho State, Utah and Ohio State.

After Wednesday's Sul Ross match, the Raiders will take the weekend off, their first without a tournament since the season began. Tuesday the Raiders return to the Women's Gym for a 7 p.m. match with Eastern New Mexico.

Netters promote spirit

A student organization designed to promote spirit for both men's and women's tennis teams is now accepting applications at the Student Life Office, 163 Administration Building.

According to Tech netter Gregg Davis, the "Forty Loves" will have three functions: (1) to assist with home matches; (2) to promote Tech tennis by informing the student body when and where matches will be played, and (3) to support Tech tennis and promote spirit.

The first organizational meeting will be Oct. 14 at the Mesa Room of the University Center.

In fall competition, the men's squad, under coach Mark Hamilton, has defeated Midland College in a dual match 10-0.

In an individual tourney in Midland, the doubles teams of Zahid Maniya and Chow Wah and Gregg Davis and Jose Rivera reached the quarterfinals. In singles play Maniya and Mark Thompson qualified for the third round.

Women's coach Harrison "Mickey" Bowes has seen his netters jump to a 3-1 slate. The Raiders have defeated South Plains, Midland College and New Mexico State. The team tied the University of New Mexico and Oklahoma.

The Tech women are young, returning only four from last year: Sandra Carillo, Cary Garton, Becca Fritz and Terri Moore.

The Raider's next official match will be Tuesday at West Texas State.

Game to carry on long Raider-Aggie rivalry

By DOUG SIMPSON
UD Sportswriter

When Tech and Texas A&M meet for the 39th time Saturday night at Jones Stadium, football fans will be witnessing one of the bitterest and most colorful rivalries in the history of the Southwest Conference.

Yet Saturday's game will mean more to the teams involved than just the chance to "sock it to" the other. There is always a certain amount of pride involved when the Raiders and Aggies get together. And that pride has been evident over the years as Tech and A&M have somehow survived an exciting history of hard-fought games and controversial incidents.

Perhaps Rex Dockery, head coach of the Raiders, expressed it best when he spoke of the Tech-A&M rivalry.

"It doesn't matter what the season records are when we play A&M," Dockery said. "It doesn't matter how many games we've lost. It's always going to be a tough football game. Both teams know this, and they'll both be playing their hardest Saturday night."

But there's more to Saturday's showdown that pride and tradition. The two schools will be fighting for their lives, as Tech and A&M each have one loss on their Southwest Conference records. No team has ever won the SWC with more than one loss on its league record.

Both teams have to win And that should make this year's battle even more intense.

The 39-year history of the series has had its share of cliffhangers. But it wasn't until the 1960's that Tech finally began to compete successfully with the tradition-rich Aggies.

In one of the biggest wins in Raider history, Tech defeated A&M 20-16 in 1965 on a razzle-dazzle, unplanned play in the closing seconds. All-America running back Donny Anderson, who is still a familiar name in Tech football circles, provided the push the Raiders needed by taking a lateral 37 yards for a touchdown with 1:20 to play.

The annual game took on even greater meaning in 1967. Had Tech beaten the Aggies, it would have eventually reigned as SWC co-champs that season. But Ed Hargett dived over the goal-line as time expired to beat the Raiders, 28-24.

In 1968, Tech embarked on an eight-game winning streak over the Aggies with a surprise 21-16 win. A&M destroyed the Raiders 28-7 in 1974, and captured a 38-9 win in 1975.

Tech opened the door to its SWC co-championship in 1976 with a 27-16 triumph in College Station. A&M has won the last two meetings between the schools.

The rivalry may have lacked lustre during certain periods of its history. But few rivalries have been as intense as Tech's and A&M's.

One thing that makes the rivalry so intense is head coach Tom Wilson. Wilson was quarterback in Tech's 20-16 win over the Aggies in 1965. He was an assistant here for nine years before accepting the job as head man at A&M in 1978.

Jess Stiles, a long-time assistant at Tech, is now on Wilson's staff. Charles Napper, quarterback for the Raiders in the early 70's, is also an A&M assistant coach.

But this year's game will involve more than just opposing coaches trying to break old ties. The game will feature two of the greatest running backs in the country in A&M's Curtis Dickey and Tech's James Hadnot.

Dickey will enter the game as the SWC's leading rusher and the third-leading rusher in conference history. He is averaging 135.5 yards a game through four games this fall and has 3,392 career yards.

Hadnot is ranked third in the SWC in rushing, averaging 128.8 yards in four games. Hadnot claims that he became a running back in last year's game against A&M.

"Some people will tell you that I became a running back during the New Mexico game, but that isn't true," Hadnot said. "It was during the A&M game that I realized I could be a good fullback. Something came over me during the game. It was like a voice inside of me saying, 'Go ahead, you can do it.'"

And so the story goes. Hadnot isn't the only Tech athlete who has claimed to have been affected by the rivalry with A&M. Donny Anderson is reported to have cried after he scored the touchdown that beat A&M in the classic game of '65. Tech fans were disheartened (and many of them may have felt like crying) when quarterback Rodney Allison went down with a knee injury in the un-

But football seems to be the sport in which the most incidents have occurred.

Dockery has already started talking about the strength of this year's Aggie team.

"Texas A&M is a good football team," Dockery said. "They have shown a lot of improvement during the last couple of weeks and seem to have things working again. Curtis Dickey and (quarterback) Mike Moseley have the ability to score from anywhere on the field. On defense, they are aggressive and execute well."

"Jacob Green is as good a defensive lineman as there is in the conference.

Tech and Texas A&M, obviously, are filled with respect for each other's many dangerous weapons. Both teams are aware that they need a win badly this Saturday. But they know that they must overcome a intriguing phenomena which has made the last 39 years an integral part of Tech's heritage and history.

Saturday night, the Raiders and Aggies will only be writing the 39th chapter in a long and dramatic rivalry that has truly characterized football in the Southwest Conference.

Tech-Aggie action

The Raiders last met Texas A&M at home in 1977, in which the Aggies defeated the Techsans 33-17 at Jones Stadium before the largest crowd in Raider history (55,008). Tech will take on A&M again this Saturday before another expected capacity crowd. The Tech-Aggie rivalry has been characterized in the past by overflowing crowds.

Jacob Green

Jacob Green is the leader of the ferocious Texas A&M defense. On Saturday night, Green and his defensive cohorts will be challenging Tech at Jones Stadium in what is being billed as an offensive showdown. Green has helped to carry on the tradition of tough Aggie defenses.

Moseley

forgettable game of 1977.

These and other other such incidents have helped to make the rivalry as colorful as it is.

The rivalry doesn't end with football. Tech and A&M have been known to express negative feelings toward one another in such sports as basketball, tennis and baseball.
