World hunger

Shift in foreign aid urged

WASHINGTON (AP) - President Carter endorsed on Monday shifting the focus of U.S. foreign aid from supplying arms to reducing world hunger, which he was told would become more serious than the energy crisis.

Carter said he was "very excited and pleased" by a commission report which urged a doubling of U.S. aid to help avoid a probable world food crisis.

The president told members of the Presidential Commission on World Hunger that "this is an opportunity for our nation . . . to embark upon a longrange, exciting, challenging, principled effort to alleviate the problem of world hunger over the next two decades."

One commission member told reporters later that "we don't believe we'd have all of our embassies burned" if people overseas felt the United States was helping with food production rather than supplying arms.

The commission warned that a global food shortage "of even more serious dimensions than the present energy crisis" is likely in the next 20 years unless the United States and other nations act now.

Two straight years of bad harvest in any major grain-exporting nation, the report said, would produce not only rising food prices in wealthy nations such as the United States, but "widespread famine and political disorder" to poor nations and would "disrupt a fragile world economy already weakened by energy shortages and rampant inflation."

The commission said the earth appears physically capable of feeding its expanding population at least through the year 2000, provided knotty political and social problems can be overcome. The panel said the hunger problem is getting worse and that one of every eight persons now suffers from a lack of food serious enough to stunt growth or dull mental abilities.

It said curing the problem will require efforts not only to help poor nations grow more of their own food, but to raise overall income levels so the poor can afford to buy food when it is

The panel said such efforts, if successful, would cause some economic harm to U.S. farmers and factory workers, but said a healthy world economy will in the long run benefit

Cambodian asks for food

COLLEGE STATION, Texas (AP) - The former president of Cambodia pleaded Monday for Americans to take up the cause of human rights abuses among his people.

He said as many as 2,000,000 Cambodians are expected to die of starvation in the next few months unless vast mounts of food are made available.

"The needs for this emergency relief can come only from civilized people around the globe, and from the American people in general," Cheng Heng Texas A&M University students.

Criticizing the use of food relief supplies as a political weapon, Heng said emergency food supplies have not been reaching starving Cambodians because Communist factions "are using it in their war to take control of the country."

Heng served as president of Cambodia prior to the Lon Nol regime and now represents the YMCA Indochinese Refugee Program in Houston. An spokesman for that program said about 16,000 refugees from Southeast Asia are now in the Houston area and almost 11,000 are elsewhere in Texas.

"Communists don't respect human rights, and that is why Cambodia is having such problems and America is not," Heng said. Cambodia has become a nation of ghost towns, where people are driven from their homes to work as slaves in labor camps and where people are deliberately massacred because of their wealth or education, he said.

"There is no monetary system, no health care, no doctor, no medicine, no education, no religious freedom, no family life. On the average, people work 16 hours a day with a daily ration of less than a cup of rice per person," Heng

House Speaker says State may be eligible for two more congressmen

By Joel Brandenberger UD Reporter

Texas' future power in national government and the continuance of the state's economic prosperity were among the topics disucssed Monday by Texas Speaker of the House Bill Clayton.

Clayton was speaking to the Governmental Affairs Committee of the Lubbock Chamber of Commerce.

Clayton said the upcoming 1980 census would be one of the most inportant in the history of the state.

"We've got to make sure that everyone in the state gets counted," Clayton said. "If they do, Texas could pick up two new congressmen, and that would help the state quite a bit in Washington."

In the past, Clayton said the balance of power in the House has belonged to the Northeastern states.

"I think the new census could reflect the growing population of the Sunbelt states," Clayton said. "I think it would be good to see the representation of the south and southwest grow stronger." Clayton did caution that the job of redistricting Texas after the census would not be an easy one. He said all states must have their districting plans approved by the Justice Department to ensure that all major political parties, as well as minorities, receive fair representation.

On the subject of economic growth, Clayton said everyone in the state must strive to keep up the incentives that have lured businesses to Texas during the last decade.

"We've got to watch spending in government so we can continue to be one of four or five states that doesn't have a personal or corparate income tax. This is one of the major reasons we have been able to lure good businesses

However, Clayton said there are other things that prospective residents look for in moving to a new state.

"Most people in other parts of the country are satisfied with our economic base," Clayton said. "But businessmen want to know about the crime rate in Texas. They don't want to move their families to an area with a high crime rate.

"Frankly, I think this is an area that needs improving. In the past, we've done pretty good when it comes to crime, but we've got to give law enforcement officials more to work with with if we want to be effective in rural and urban areas is an area Clayton related to both national politics and economic growth.

Clayton said people from the rural areas are going to have to draw closer together because the 1980 census probably will show a large shift in the population from the rural areas to the

Such a shift would lessen the number of representatives rural areas have in both the Texas Legislature and promote their economic advantages if they want to get a share of the new immigrants moving into the state, according to Clayton.

Clayton gave some cautious optimism for farmers, saying there soon would be an increased demand for their products.

"Sometime in the next 20 years the supply curve will finally meet the demand curve, and we can get better prices for the crops," Clayton said.

He added there would be some new responsibilities, such as land management, to go with the increased

Finally, Clayton spoke briefly about two topics concerning Tech.

First, he said the legislature would try again in 1981 to get funding for the nursing school at Tech. Clayton said he had no idea whether Gov. Bill Clements would approve the school.

Clements vetoes a bill last spring to fund the nursing school.

Clayton also said there is a chance the state could become "sympathetic" to helping the troubled Lubbock County Hospital District.

He said reasons for renewed interest in the district were other hospital districts such as the one in Bexar County, that are also in financial

Special interest courses offered to women

While there are no courses for "women only" at Tech, a group of Tech professors has compiled a list of courses that may be of special interest to

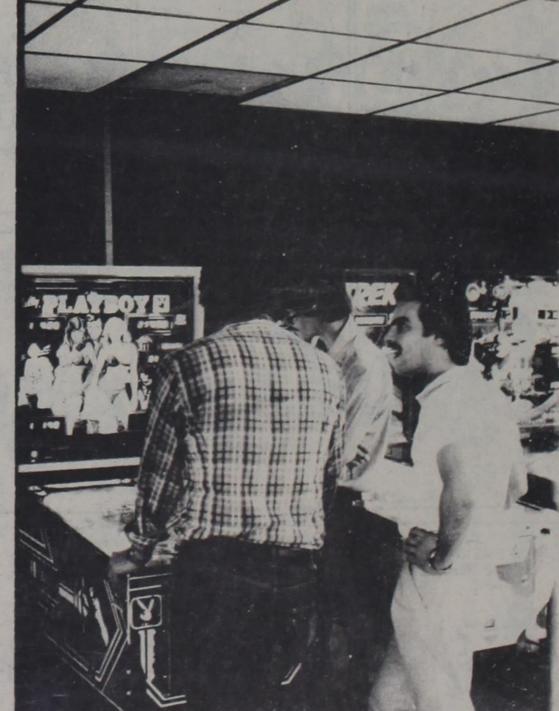

The Committee on the Status of Women, composed of Tech faculty members, has conducted a survey of departments at Tech to determine courses about women that will be offered during the spring semester of 1980.

"We decided that women would like to know about courses that will be of specific interest to them," said Edna Gott, chairperson of the committee and assistant professor of economics. "Many of the older students returning to school aren't used to looking these things up for themselves."

To identify specific courses, Jackie Reinier, assistant professor history, called the chairpersons of various departments to ask about courses that may have a special interest to women at Tech. A printed list of the courses will be available in the office of the dean of Student Life. The list also will be distributed to residence assistants in residence halls.

Gott said this is the first time the committee has attempted to distribute information about courses of interest for women. She said the committee plans to continue the program each semester.

Courses that are recommended by the committee include: biblical literature 233 and 431, dance 3313, education 2317 and 3333, health 225 and 227, zoology 243 and 434. A list of recommended graduate and law courses also is available

Official endorsement is expected Wednesday, the third day of the con-

WASHINGTON (AP) - The Supreme Court said Monday it will decide whether the federal government owes the Sloux Indian Nation more than $100 million for land taken 102 years ago after the Battle of Little Big Horn.

The justices thus jeopardized the whopping award won by the Sioux last June in a lower court. Government lawyers argue in the appeal accepted for review that the Indian nation is entitled to only $17.5 million.

NEW YORK (AP) - Gold and casino issues provided much of the glamor in an otherwise listless stock trading session Monday.

The Dow Jones average of 30 industrials, down by about 3 points in the morning, closed with a gain of .68 to 833.87.

Gainers outnumbered losers by an 8-7 margin on the New York Stock Exchange.

Big Board volume totaled 32.27 million shares, down sharply from 42.37 million in the previous session. The NYSE's composite index rose .10 to 61.66.

At the American Stock Exchange, the market value index was up 1.25 to

The balance of power between the U.S. pleas in World Court

THE HAGUE, Netherlands (A) -The United States told the International Court of Justice on Monday that Iran's "barbaric" detention of 50 American hostages should be ended swiftly to save human lives and restore the rule of international law.

"This imprisonment is illegal and inhuman," U.S. Attorney General Benejamin R. Civiletti told the 15 blackrobed justices. "I ask you to save their lives and set those human beings free."

The opening of the case in the world court, as the U.S. judicial body is commonly known, was the latest step in a U.S. diplomatic and legal offensive aimed at winning freedom for the imprisoned Americans and an end to the U.S.-Iranian crisis. Iran insists the Americans will not be released until the deposed Shah of Iran is extradited and the United States refuses to do so.

The U.S. representatives based their case on four international treaties and agreements, signed by the United States and Iran.

Iran boycotted the proceedings. A row of seats reserved for the Iranian delegation remained empty throughout the two-hour hearing.

A telegram sent by Iranian Foreign Minister Sadegh Ghotbzadeh claimed the court "cannot and should not take cognizance" of the U.S. suit, and that his country could not agree with the court's jurisdiction.

Civiletti asked the court to order the release of the hostages and their safe conduct from Iran. To deny the request, he said, would be a serious blow to international law and would provide a precedent for other states to seize hostages with impunity.

"I ask you to take the quickest possible action to end this barbaric activity and save human lives," the attorney general said.

The United States demanded Iran be told to clear the U.S. Embassy of nondiplomatic personnel, and refrain from placing the American captives on trial, which it has threatened to do. The United States also asked the court to assess unspecified damages against Iran.

Rationing: alcohol, tobacco, sex

not want - for much," saith the Gospel according to Raider

Though the university services students with rent-a-cops and institutional chow, the Board of Regents doesn't pay so much as lip service to providing Techsans with the essentials of life: alcohol, tobacco and sex.

All three commodities abound on the campus, but cigarette machine in every their distribution is far from democratic.

Those without money can't get tobacco or alcohol, and those lacking both greenbacks and looks can't get sex.

The solution to the dilemma is rationing. If you think it's impossible to ration sex, stick around, faithless ones. The best comes last, but liquor makes a nice lead-in.

History has proven heavy smoking and drinking make for a long life, regardless of what the surgeon general says.

Winston Churchill smoked a dozen cigars and drank a quart to trade among themselves to of brandy every day for nearly 70 years. He lived to age 90.

NOTE: The don't say much about his undercover activities, but since he was prime minister, he could have had strumpets with his crumpets as easily as tea.

The administration won't "Tech is my shepherd; I shall settle for subtley dissenting Churchill's example, and Churchill retained people smarter than some regents just to uncork his bottles and notch his stogies.

> No, Tech's governors tend to the ridiculous, barring liquor and smoking in classrooms from a campus that has enough booze to float the Battleship Texas out of drydock, and a

Some have even gone so far as to say that beer indirectly causes communism.

Phooey.

The Russians drink vodka. And if my peers can make communism out of mere Lone Star beer, God forbid they should ever get hold of, say, Wild Turkey 101.

Rations of tobacco and alcohol should be distributed to all students at registration. Everyone has different tastes, but issuing various and sundry products would allow Techsans their satisfaction.

For instance, Jim Bob hands in his computer cards and receives a half-gallon of Jim Beam and 10 cartons of unfiltered Camels. Now Jim Bob's a beer-guzzling Skoal brother, so he's rather disgruntled as he lumbers away from the Coliseum, but he bumps into Lawrence.

Lawrence is ticked too, because he's never tasted the high country or crammed anything between his cheek and gum, and doesn't intend to. He's packing a case of Coors and a dozen rolls of snuff.

Lo and behold, they swap their loads on the side of the road and travel on contented.

The rationing of sex, however, would call for the formation of the Student Sex Senate. The Triple S will stage a sort of Triple X bingo every Saturday night, drawing cards bearing participants' Sexual Security Numbers from hampers segregated by sex and matching them up.

No one's under pressure to go through with it, if they find their prospective partner unsatisfactory, but refusals would be rare. Folks wouldn't toss their numbers into the pot if they didn't want to make whoopee.

If the system works, it could be upgraded through computerization to the pairing off of persons sharing mutual perversions such as sadomasochism, discipline and bondage, and so on.

I don't care for it, but many Americans get off to whips and leather. On that basis, either the University Center or the new gym should sport a torture dungeon festooned with stocks, flogging tables, racks, riding crops and whatever else the student body needs to make it "hurt so good."

The chamber could also accomodate campus voyeurs at no extra cost. Instead of having the Sex Senate issue the bugeyes Peeping Tom permits, two-way mirrors could be installed in the dungeon for their enjoyment.

Carter's popularity rising; Iran key to re-election

Tom Wicker

(c) 1979 N.Y. Times News Service

The campaign for the Democratic presidential nomination has been reshaped, primarily by the crisis in Iran and Jimmy Carter's handling of it, but also by Sen. Edward Kennedy's slow and uncertain

A Lou Harris-ABC Hews poll this week confirmed that Carter had gained on Kennedy. but poll findings the main point. Of far greater importance are the changes in issue" - particularly after his public attitudes that have taken place in the past month.

MOST IMPORTANT among these is that the issue of Carter's "leadership" has been blunted, probably permanently, by widespread public approval of his conduct during the Iranian crisis. Almost as significant is the tarnishing of the aura of invicibility with which Kennedy entered the campaign.

These two developments, taken together, produce a third - Carter is no longer perceived as a candidate who cannot win. That means that money and support and attention that would have been denied a sure loser will flow to him again.

On the other hand, the new perception that Carter will give Kennedy a tough race, perhaps beat him, removes the best rationale for the insurgent Kennedy candidacy - that a Carter-led ticket was bound to be a disaster for the entire Democratic Party, perhaps even bringing the loss of the Senate majority.

CARTER'S NEW public standing also raises the question whether Kennedy has a real issue to run on, other than "leadership."

Remarkably enough, Kennedy does not seem even to have an alternative economic program with which to emphasize what probably is Carter's gravest weakness - a mismanaged economy suffering high inflation and rising unemployment. Instead, Kennedy has let himself become more nearly "the unfortunate remarks about the shah added questions about his political judgement to those already being asked about his personal life.

None of these developments necessarily means that Carter will be renominated, or that Kennedy will not pull his campaign together. They mean, rather, that the contest is being seen in clearer and more realistic perspective that of a strong contender challenging a sitting president, with all the presidency's inherent advantages. A close race was almost bound to ensue, perhaps to be decided nnally by events

WHEN THE IRANIAN crisis ends, for example, even if favorably, the attention of the nation will quickly focus again on the economy, as inflation continues to rise and unemployment makes itself felt.

With these problems converging on him, Carter will have ample opportunities to show that his leadership in the Iran crisis can be sustained in other areas. If he fails to take advantage of them, Kennedy could return to the attack on the leadership issue, perhaps with some innovative programs of his own.

So if Iran and Kennedy's erratic beginning have given the president new standing in the campaign, they also challenge him to show that he knows what to do with opportunity. His response, once Iran need no longer be his exhaustive concern, is likely to shape the race next year.

King of angels

To the Editor:

I wonder what thoughts are in our minds as we sing again our traditional Christmas songs? There are many astounding statements in the carols we are so accustomed to.

What I heard at the Carol of Lights ceremony reminded me too often remembered only for its frivolity.

Jesus, I was told, was "born the King of angels;" another carol commanded, "Let earth receive her King." He appeared to claim the kingship of this world! This was in the minds of those song writers who chose to call him their "King". It is important to remember and mild" grew to be him of whom it was said, "But who can endure the day of his coming? Who can stand when he appears? For he will be like a refiner's fire . . . " (Mal. 3.2). This is that same Lord and God, born in Bethlehem.

time, to deal with his rebellious creation in a final way. "Behold, I am coming soon! My reward is with me, and I will give to everyone according to what he has done" (Rev. 22.12). We should be wary of taking his name easily upon our lips at this season if we are not willing to recognize that he is far more than a baby in a manger. He is Jesus Christ, offering free mercy and forgiveness to sinners, but decreeing an unchangeable corollary: namely, that those thus received by him shall have their lives given over to the service of him and not of themselves.

Is it not to be feared that he is being rejected by most people even now? As the carols said, "Let every heart prepare him room." "Gloria in excelsis Deo!"

MADISON, Wis. - Greeneyed Katie has bright red hair and lots of freckles. When children see her, they laugh. "Why are you laughing?" Katie asks. "You have silly freckles and silly hair, like a carrot top," the children titter. "I know why you're really laughing," Katie says, undaunted. "You don't understand hair and skin differences. Would you like to know more about them?"

AND THUS BEGINS A LIVELY exchange between Katie, a 12-inch puppet, and an audience of eager children. Katie explains that a darkbrown pigment called melanin is responsible for skin color. She also gives simple scientific explanations for freckles and hair colors.

Katie's friendly voice belongs to Marlene Cummings, a human relations expert who has designed a program to help children overcome prejudices. Christmas: time of depression

By REAGAN WHITE UD Reporter

Christmas is a time of hap- shopping," Clopton said. piness and celebration, many people find Christmas an especially depressing time. James R. Clopton, Tech assistant professor psychology, said, "Although depression is a common, serious year-round problem Christmas is an especially troubling time for some."

Clopton said several things can account for the strong depression many people feel during the holiday season. "Family difficulties can be a factor in Christmas depression," Clopton said. "Television advertisements depicting husbands buying gifts for wives, parents buying gifts for children, and children opening gifts on Christmas morning can create feelings of depression among people who cannot participate in these activities." Clopton said many things that prevent people from participating in holiday traditions contribute to intense depression. "Being separated from the family by divorce or distance often create stress during these family-oriented holidays. Christmas also can be a very difficult time for those who just don't have money for gifts or Christmas trees."

Different people react in different ways to the stress of Christmas, Clopton said. "Mental health specialists get more calls during Christmas than any other time of the year. There are more suicides during these holidays than at any other time of the year."

The stress of Christmas shopping causes problems for many people. "I was Christmas shopping this weekend when I saw two people, who had been waiting for the light to change at an intersection, climb out of their cars and proceed to beat each other to a pulp. I wondered if While for most people they had been Christmas

> Clopton observed that this Christmas not only marked the end of a year, but the end of a decade. "People are particularly aware of the passage of time. While the news media wraps up the last decade, many people become depressed as they review their personal lack of achievement in the last 10 years," Clopton

Clopton said depressed people often cannot find the energy to Christmas shop, or to buy a Christmas tree or to send Christmas cards. "The hassel of getting out of the house and fighting the crowds in the mall simply intensify the apathy felt by many depressed people."

He said the symptoms of depression are faily easy to identify. "Moodiness, a tendency to snap at people one would not ordinarily snap at and an apathetic lack of energy are common indicators of depression."

"A person who is experiencing any of these emotions should sit down and By J'LANE HUNDLEY look for a logical explanation UD Staff for the way he is feeling. PHILADELPHIA (AP) -File those premature obituaries, boys. The Dallas Cowboys ain't dead yet.

football team and we're still capable of having a fine year," said quarterback Roger Staubach.

The Cowboys proved it Saturday, relying on a pair of little-used reserves - rookie running back Ron Springs and wide receiver Butch Johnson and beating the Philadelphia Eagles 24-17 to clinch their 13th playoff berth in the National Football League's past 14 seasons. When 1,000-yard gainer Tony Dorsett went out of the game with a separated shoulder, Springs took over and gained 62 yards on 12 carries, second only to Robert Newhouse's 68 yards for the Cowboys and Wilbert Montgomery's 65 yards that constituted the bulk of the Eagles' ground game. Springs' carries helped position Dallas Newhouse's 17-yard right-side sweep for a third-period touchdown which broke a 10-10 halftime tie, and also helped set up the Cowboys' winning touchdown, a 17-yard diving catch by Johnson of a Roger Staubach pass intended for Tony Hill and deflected into the end zone by linebacker

Frank LeMaster. Johnson was in the starting lineup because of Drew Pearson's antics a week ago. After one of his three TD catches in a 28-7 rout of the New York Giants, he leaped into the air, flung the football into the stands and came down hard on his right leg, twisting it and robbing the Cowboys of one of their most potent

"The last weeks we've been playing very good football," Staubach said, looking back at Dallas' 30-24 Thanksgiving Day loss to Houston and the romp over the Giants. "We're a very confident

In 1980, I resolve to. . .

Doug Simpson

There exists among us a great paradox. Oh, it isn't your ordianry paradox. What we have here is a very special paradox.

It has to do with a phenomenon which has plagued the rational man for centuries. I'm talking about those New Year's resolutions you draw up around Dec. 28 or 29 of each year and add to your wastebasket shooting percentage by tossing the list into the trash around Jan. 10 or 11.

You see, the trouble with New Year's resolutions is that they are made to be broken. No matter how hard we try, we never can seem to lose 10 pounds or go through an entire semester without flunking a test, and New Year's resolutions wind up lining our garbage cans instead of turning our lives

There was no point in making the stupid list in the first place. Right?

Well, this year is going to be different. I'm going to make out my list and stick to it.

It won't be that easy. I've had some difficulty in the past. Like the time I decided not to hate the Cowboys anymore. That lasted a long time. Two weeks later, Dallas trounced the Denver Broncos in the Super Bowl, and I was right back where I started.

Then there was the time I vowed never to fight with Jeff Rembert again. That was a hot one. The "Houston Ham" and I have been brawling ever since the day we met.

This year I'm going to change all that. I'm going to make up a set of resolutions and try so hard to stick to them that, no matter what, I will truly succeed.

But there's no sense wasting any more time. As they say in show biz, let's get on with the show.

(1) not to put any more cute leads in my stories.

(2) to read the Avalanche-Journal religiously (every Easter and Christmas)

(3) not to make any predictions on the 1980 Southwest Conference race.

(4) to attend at least one Tech baseball game.

(5) to go to class at least half of the time.

(6) to be more careful when tampering with Gerald Myers'

(7) to loosen my widely-known "hate" feelings toward Reggie Jackson, Hollywood Henderson and Shelby Metcalf. (8) not to allow the outcome of the 1979 NFL playoffs spoil my Christmas holidays (toughest one of all).

(9) not to let Jon Mark Beilue's clever cliches and anecdotes rub off on my own writing. (10) to steal John Eubanks' press pass to the 1980 Southwest Conference Basketball Tournament. (11) to go on a diet - so that I won't wind up looking like A-

J sports editor Norval Pollard. (12) to find a new fullback for Tech coach Rex Dockery to replace the one he lost. (13) not to nod off while watching 20,000 fans cheer for Houston and Nebraska in the Cotton Bowl. (14) not to let the UD news staff get the better of sports.

(15) to buy Joel Brandenberger a set of bumper stickers bearing the names of every professional team for the many times when he changes his loyalty.

(16) to give the following gifts at Christmas: Darrel Billy Allen - says a lot of so far against non-conference Dawkins - a stainless steel backboard; Coach Dockery and work must be done before opponents. Texas, 3-0, will be his staff - a big bottle of aspirin to get them through the put to the test Monday night recruiting season; O.J. Simpson - a salute - for his many
