Washington syndicated columnist Jack Anderson was in Lubbock Tuesday to speak on "News Behind the Headlines." Anderson had a busy schedule that included a press conference, a taped interview with KTXM-FM and a speech at the University Center Theatre sponsored by UC Programs.

Anderson: covering news' shady side

By PAM WEIGER
UD Reporter

While other reporters cover the news, it is the job of the investigative reporter to uncover the news, according to Jack Anderson, a self-proclaimed muckraker and investigative journalist.

"It disturbs me how many people think the press distorts the news and takes things out of context," Anderson told an audience at the University Center Theatre Tuesday. "Our peculiar function as investigative reporters is to cover the shady side of the news."

"The president is not your sovereign, he's your employee and you're entitled to know what he's doing. You own the country and you have a right to know," Anderson said.

Anderson, who has reported on several government activities, including the Watergate scandal, has spent more than 20 years in Washington cultivating his sources. Government officials, such as Press Secretary Jody Powell, are not reliable sources, he said.

"Most reporters in Washington rely on the authorized spokesman," Anderson said. "But we don't ask them what's happening. We tell them what's happening and ask for their reactions. I tell my reporters I want to know what's happening, not what the government says is happening."

Anderson sharply criticized President Carter in the area of world affairs. He said the United States is in a time of world crisis that will determine whether the American way of life survives.

"I come before you as a dove and I come before you to tell you how to avoid World War III," he said. "I was against Vietnam, but the Persian Gulf is not Vietnam. It's our jugular vein. If the Soviet Union gains control of the Persian Gulf, they'll have us on our knees."

Anderson said that he believes America must draw the line and Carter has failed to do so.

"It's not enough to draw the line rhetorically," he said. "The Joint Chiefs of Staff don't believe him, so how can we expect the Russians to believe him?"

"This fellow Carter is a bungler. He is a disaster and he's become the hero of his own catastrophes. It's very frustrating to report this because every time I do he seems to go up in the polls," Anderson said.

At a press conference earlier Tuesday, Anderson said he and his reporters follow moral and ethical standards and strive for fairness. He said he tends to avoid the private lives of individuals unless it affects their public conduct.

For Soviet withdrawal

Carter reinforces deadline

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Carter refused to back away from his demand that the Soviet Union get out of Afghanistan by Wednesday or risk U.S. refusal to participate in the summer Olympics.

The "deadline is tomorrow—and it will not be changed," Carter told a loudly cheering convention of the American Legion. The president also told the organization's annual conference that as many as 100,000 Russian troops were occupying Afghanistan.

The Soviet Union has given no signal that it would remove its forces during month that has elapsed since Carter first issued the demand on Jan. 20.

One White House source, asking not to be named publicly, said: "There's nothing new. No one expected the Soviets would be out by the 20th. I don't think the day has any particular significance."

The source, who has been involved in the international effort to round up support for Carter's Olympic stand, said "about 50 governments publicly and privately seem to be in favor."

He said discussions are under way with other nations to pick sites for an alternative sports competition this summer.

titude toward those who hold public office and abuse it," Anderson said. "I believe in the eternal struggle of force versus freedom."

Taking a strong stand against illegal means of gaining information, Anderson said he instructs his staff never to resort to such tactics. He said he gets his information from the same intelligence sources that Carter uses.

Anderson said he never prints anything that will endanger national security. Responding to a question about breaking a story too early, he said that it was impossible.

"It's our responsibility to inform the public, and all our information comes from government people. It's their responsibility not to let it out," Anderson said. "We're supposed to seek out the secrets of government and report it to the owners of government."

"We are no longer talking about a single site for all events," the source said. He said the administration would prefer that alternative games be held outside of the United States, "for reasons of international policy," meaning that Carter did not want to set up a sports fete in direct competition with the Olympics to be held in Moscow.

The International Olympic Committee awarded the 1980 Summer

Olympics to Moscow in 1974. Since then, the Kremlin has attempted to portray that decision as an indication of international approval of the Soviet government and its policies.

The IOC recently reaffirmed its decision to hold the competition in Moscow, beginning in July, thus rejecting Carter's suggestion that the games be postponed, canceled or moved from Moscow.

Med school problems may transfer control

By ANN GRAFF AND DOUG NURSE

Financial problems may force the Health Sciences Center Hospital to transfer control of its School of Medical Technology to Tech, according to several administrators.

The School of Medical Technology is funded and operated by the hospital and is a separate institution from the Tech Medical School. The HSCH school budget is about $29,000 - $30,000, said HSCH executive administrator Jake Henry, Jr.

"The hospital's been having some problems with keeping the Medical Technological School since they're trying to cut costs," said Dr. Richard Lockwood, Tech Medical School vice-president.

Lockwood said Henry had contacted Lockwood about negotiating the transfer of the Med-Tech School from the hospital's jurisdiction to that of the Medical School.

Before negotiations can begin, the Medical School must discuss the transfer with administrators of Tech, who will discuss the transfer with administrators of the biology department, he said.

"We first want to talk to the people at Tech," Lockwood said. "We need to see how they want to handle it before we do anything."

A conference with the biology department is necessary because it and HSCH jointly offer the Med-Tech program, according to Dr. Sam Richards, Med School associate vice-president.

The first three years of the program are supported by the biology department, Richards said. The fourth year is sponsored by the hospital, he said.

According to Richards, the alternatives available are 1) the biology department could pick up the tab for the Med-Tech school; 2) the Med school could pick up the tab; 3) either the Med School or the biology department could pay for part of the cost of operating the Med-Tech School.

None of the alternatives would jeopardize the existence of the school, Richards said.

"The Med School would like to pick it up but we have to receive approval from the Texas Coordinating Board and then get funding from the legislature," Richards said. "If we did pick it up, then someone might start yelling about our not being authorized."

"The issue is not resolved, but it shouldn't take long," Richards said. "It's just a question of getting the appropriate people together when we have time."

Henry said he began negotiations in early February. "The Med-Tech School is basically a teaching function and I felt it would be most suitable placed with the Med School," Henry said. "And it would help our financial situation."

The Med School originally asked for the programs complementing the training of physicians, Richards said. The coordinating board approved the programs, but no money was appropriated for the program, so they failed to materialize, he said.

The former Executive Director of HSCH, Gerald Bosworth, recognized the need for medical technicians and the hospital adopted the School of Medical Technology in 1978, Richards said.

The Med School, while not directly involved with the Medical Technology School, does participate in the teaching of the students.

The Med-Tech school is primarily experience-oriented, although the students have little responsibility, according to Dr. Dale Rector of the pathology department of the Med School.

Rector said the clinical training is supplemented with lectures provided by Rector.

The curriculum is designed to help the students pass the national medical technicians examination necessary to practice as a registered medical technologist, he said.

"The students perform some of the various tests ordered by the doctors," Rector said. "The students are under the supervision of the medical technologists."

Students are trained in chemistry, urinalysis, hematology, microbiology and immunology (the study of viruses and how to combat them), according to Dr. Donald MacNair, medical director of the school.

"We're analysts," said Bob Swindle, Med-Tech program director. The students help test blood counts, and glucose levels, and they help monitor the effects of drugs on patients, he said.

Seven students are currently enrolled in the tuition-free Med-Tech School, MacNair said. He said he expects 10 students to attend next year.

MacNair said he anticipated the school will grow because of the pressing need for medical technologists. Swindle cited a study showing the need for medical technologists growing at a rate of 30 percent per year.

Med-Tech schools exist in Amarillo, Abilene, Wichita Falls and Lubbock's Methodist Hospital, but the West Texas area still needs medical technicians, he said.

"West Texas is a wasteland when it comes to medical technologists," Richards said. "There is an absolute need for them."

NEWS BRIEFS

Anderson correction

The University Daily had planned a warm welcome Tuesday for two professional journalists visiting the Tech campus during Mass Communications Week: Jack Anderson, syndicated columnist who spoke Tuesday night; and Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Sr., editor-publisher of The Tribune of Tulsa, Okla., who will speak at a session today.

Unfortunately, the pictures and outlines of the two journalists were confused in Tuesday's paper. A picture of Jones was printed with a outline about Jack Anderson.

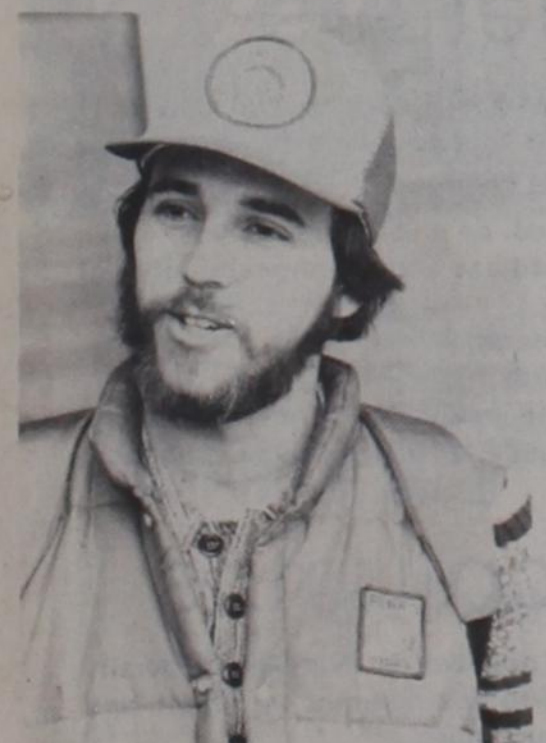

The University Daily apologizes for the error and any embarrassment the error may have caused.

Red Raider sought

Tech juniors and seniors seeking the job of Red Raider should file applications by 5 p.m. Feb. 29 in Room 101 of the Animal Science Building. Application forms may be obtained from the same room.

Lan Kelly, architectural major, "Everyone here at college is supposed to be an adult and is capable of making his or her own decisions, including whether they want to pose for Playboy."

Terrie Rice, psychology major, "I'm not sure the school should support it. The girls who want to pose should do it on their own...Tech's reputation shouldn't enter into it."

Jack Suggs, civil engineering major, "There isn't enough oil in the state of Texas to pay my girlfriend to do it."

Cheryl White, advertising-public relations major, "This is the first time Playboy has come to Lubbock and people are not used to this. He came to San Antonio a year ago and there was a large turnout."

Tech not easy nude; choice is woman's

Shauna Hill

Tech is a hard school to do in the nude. I mean, where do you pose the lithe young coeds?

In Playboy's Ivy League issue, they could have their bodies around the lake or in the snow or in some upper crust setting, but what do you do with them at Tech?

Other Southwest Conference Schools also are being featured, but at least they have an image to deal with.

The A&M nudes can pose with the pseudo whip and chains image of the corps or the gawky image of the dumb Aggie.

Baylor can rely on their cute little bear and the University of Texas can pose them around the capitol because everybody knows UT wealth and influence make it the only quality institution in Texas.

But what about Tech? "Cow college" is the first image that comes to mind since that concept is so well popularized by those who think Tech is the heart of conservatism, old time religion and the good old West Texas rural way of life.

But the people who pose nude likely won't want that image to go with their nude carcasses. It's not very glamorous to be featured nude at a church or by a tractor.

But what other image is there? Tech is growing academically and culturally, but that image is not easy to feature.

The photographers simply may resort to picturing the women at locations around Tech. Can't you just see a seductive woman in black lace at the Ranching Heritage Center?

Or maybe in the Tech locker room at the stadium or in the bell tower of the administration or curled flesh-to-metal around Will Rogers?

The possibilities are limitless. Women could be posed in a simple dorm room or in the steam tunnels under the university. Even the campus media could be used. Nudes at KTXT or in the University Daily newsroom!

Some people concerned with morality, Tech's image or the sexist nature of pornographic publications object to the women posing anywhere at Tech.

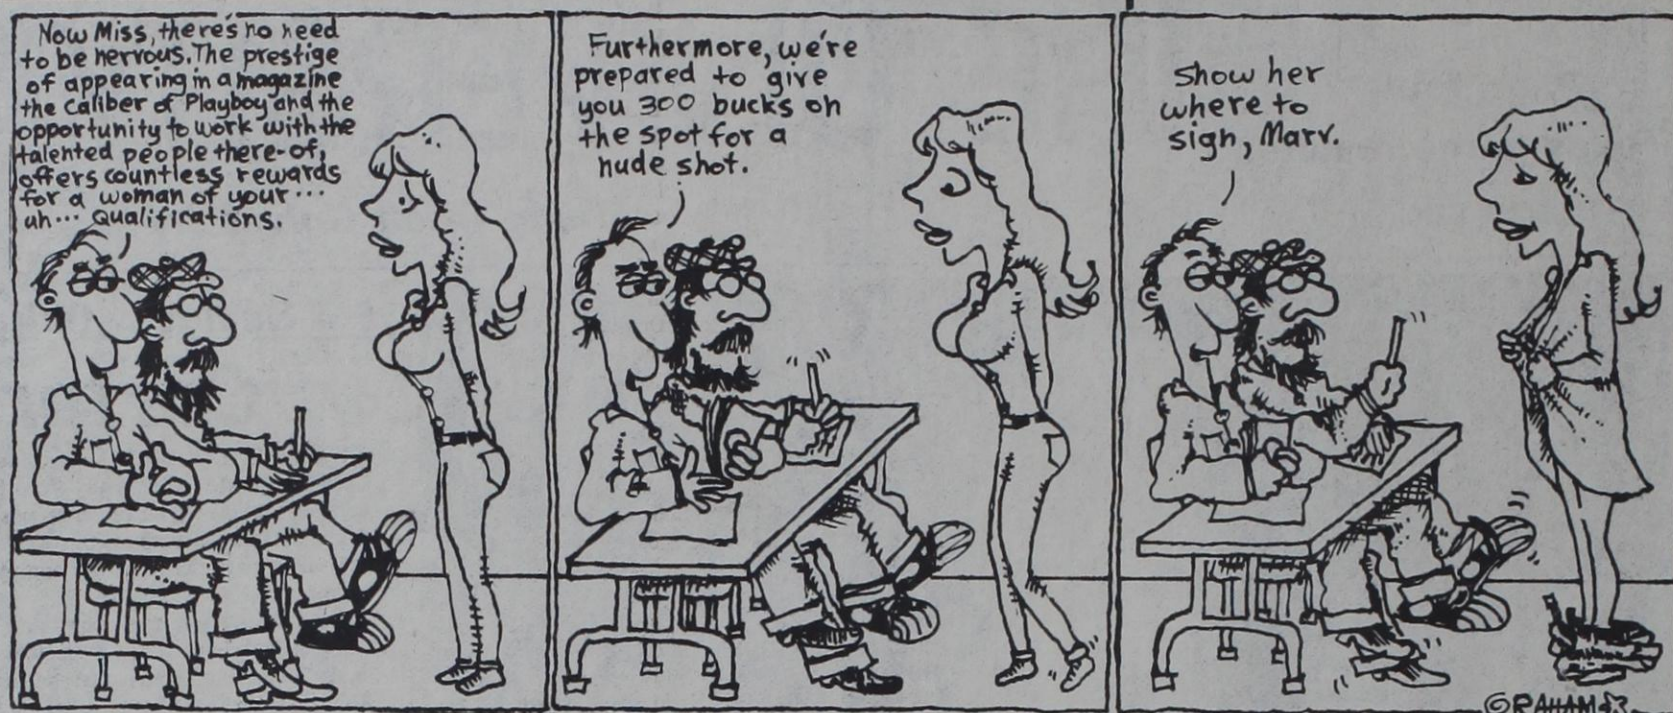

They even object to Tech being featured as a school which attracts women who would pose nude.

All the women won't be featured completely nude, but that is a minor detail to those who object to the concept of women, especially Tech women, posing for Playboy.

The key to the situation is who decides what is right. Is it the university's responsibility to decide what it and its students image should be? Should someone decide what is right for Tech women?

No to both questions. Tech's image should be a composite of all its students and quite a lot of Tech students read Playboy and like publications. And the decision whether to pose and what to take off should be left to individual Tech women.

Part of freedom of religion and the liberation advocated by the women's movement is freedom of choice. In instances like the Playboy situation, those concerned with religion or feminism should have the courage to let the people they care for decide what is "moral" or what is "liberated" for themselves.

U.N. outshines Kennedy - Carter

James Reston

If there is more hope now for the release of the American prisoners in Iran—and there is—the people we should probably be talking about are not President Carter or Sen. Kennedy, but the secretary general of the United Nations, Kurt Waldheim, and the new Iranian president, Abolhassan Bani-Sadr.

They are the key figures who have changed the question and raised the hope. It was Waldheim who, last November, took the lead in suggesting that maybe the hostages could be liberated if a U.N. commission could be established to consider the charges against the shah. And it was Bani-Sadr, who finally emerged out of the political chaos in Tehran as the one man who might be able to work out the intricate details of this compromise.

CARTER AND KENNEDY really had nothing to do with the emergence of these two men. In fact, Carter was opposed to the idea of an international commission to hear the charges against the shah. His message to Waldheim was that he would "consider" the question of an international commission, but only after the hostages were back home.

The Carter administration was even doubtful about the wisdom of Waldheim going to Tehran on the last day of 1979, when the secretary general tried to negotiate, at some risk to his own life, the compromise of a commission on the shah for the release of the hostages.

FOR WEEKS, Waldheim and Bani-Sadr have been in almost daily communication with each other and with U.S. representatives at the U.N., and in Washington about how this compromise was to be arranged.

As I understand it, there were several critical stages. First, Waldheim, when he went to Tehran, suggested that as soon as a U.N. commission of inquiry on the shah arrived in Iran, the hostages should be released.

Second, the Iranian officials—whoever they were at that time—suggested that the hostages should be held until the commission finished its inquiry and made its report.

IT WAS THEN proposed that the hostages should be released simultaneously with the release of the findings of the international commission, whatever the findings were, but that also was rejected in Tehran, which brings us to what Carter has now called the present "delicate" stage in the negotiations.

These involve the possibility of sending a U.N. commission of six members to Tehran, releasing the hostages from the embassy into the custody of the Red Cross or some other international organization, either in Iran or in Switzerland or some other third country.

That is what Kennedy proposed the other day, as if it were his own idea, though he had been informed by Waldheim and by the Carter administration, that this was what was being negotiated.

IT IS RATHER odd that the senator chose this particular issue at this particular time, just after his modest success in the Maine caucuses, and before his critical test in the New Hampshire primary election.

Jimmy Carter may not know much about Iran or Afghanistan or the revolution of Islam, but he knows quite a lot about political warfare in this country and the power of television. Finding Kennedy on weak ground, he called for his first national TV news conference in almost three months and attacked Kennedy for damaging the interests of the nation, and maybe even jeopardizing the peace process in the world.

Meanwhile, somebody probably should say a good word for Waldheim of the U.N., who, under the most difficult circumstances, has used the world organization to help us over this rocky passage. It is popular to sneer at the U.N. these days, and most of the time it is helpless, but on Iran it has been faithful to the principles of its charter.

Letters:

To the Editor:

Pertaining to the Who's Who selection: It is not clear what satisfaction the selection committee got from electing themselves to Who's Who.

As our illustrious Student Association President Gary Hanson pointed out, he "tried" to send letters about the selection to most campus organizations, but he realized most did not receive these letters. But Mr. Hanson was somehow selected for the Who's Who list. I wonder who told him?

This letter in no way accuses Mr. Hanson of total incompetence or card dealing off of the bottom of the deck. But it did seem suspicious that seven of the eight members of the selection committee were selected for the list.

I wonder if they all closed their eyes when their names were voted on? Maybe they put their heads down and didn't peek.

It (the selection) was not equally available to every student; therefore, to call the process democratic would be far from the direction the evidence points to.

Neither of us would even be considered for Who's Who, so what is our reason for writing this letter?

The reason we wrote this letter was to express our disgust with the Student Association's follow-through of the selections. A plastic process results in plastic awards. By plastic, we mean artificial.

The artificial selection process does not fool many and we hope the members of the committee can find a way to break out of their illusion-filled, pat-myself-on-the-back, self-planned glory trail to success view they seem to have towards deciding which students are the best students.

But what do we know? Possibly the members of this committee have some special ability of insight that allows them to feel the opinions of student organizations without really receiving feedback.

Our point is — why have the selection of students for the Who's Who list at all, when it (the selection process) isn't equally available to the whole student population, but depends on a person's seating position on a committee?

And this brings us back to the question of Gary Hanson's competence. After all, the selection process was his responsibility. To delegate powers from his office to deal with the problem, as he said, that was "dropped on" him by David Nail. (See front page story of Feb. 15.)

We realize that one such incident does not indicate incompetence or competence. But we feel that Mr. Hanson's weak attempt to excuse his "lack of action" is a reflection on the matter of how seriously he takes his office.

To delegate powers from his office that carry out a "mock" selection is worse than not having a selection for the Who's Who list at all.

Once again the question is raised. Is the SA and its procedures beneficial in any way to the total student population? We already know it takes care of its own members.

Sex olympics

To the Editor:

In regard to the recruitment of our young ladies to pose for the Southwest Conference issue of Playboy, I would discourage any representation on our part.

This is one sport that we don't need to be competing in with the other SWC schools. Boycott the sex olympics. Nuke immorality.

For the girls who have yet to interview, I would ask you to reconsider. If you already have, please withdraw. It is my hope to show Playboy readers — maybe some of you — that there is still some regard for God's commandments.

Cartoon error

To the Editor:

The wisdom of some of the cartoonists at the UD sometimes eludes me. I direct your attention to the cartoon in the Feb. 14 issue.

The cartoon attempts to show certain Texas schools, namely Texas and A&M, are given special treatment financially.

The cartoon notes how Rice, SMU, Baylor and Tech are all cheated by the financial treatment.

It's quite obvious that Rice, SMU and Baylor are all Private institutions. They receive no money (that means $0.00) in state funding.

The cartoonist has really missed the boat on this one. The most interesting thing about the report on higher education, was that it was compiled, written, and researched in Austin.

Guess what School in Texas (hint, hint) was rated highest in the report? Guess where that school is located.

Enough said.

Students support pub idea in poll

By GARY L. WARREN
UD Staff

In a smaller-than-expected turnout, students overwhelmingly voted for the establishment of a pub on campus in Tuesday's University Center Programs poll.

Out of the 106 people who answered the questionnaire, 94 said they drank alcoholic beverages. Twelve were non-drinkers.

A large majority of 92 students said there should be a pub on campus. Thirteen students were against the idea and two students were undecided.

Eighty-eight of the drinkers said there should be alcohol sold at Tech. Six students who said they drank said no, alcohol should not be allowed on campus.

Pam Sanders agreed with selling drinks on campus. "We're old enough to vote, go to war and yet they think we're not old enough to drink on campus. I don't get it." Brad Reed disagreed. "If a student wants to drink he can go off campus. Plus, students already bring alcohol on campus. So the ones that want to drink, drink already."

Ninety-four people said they felt there should be no restrictions on the types of drinks sold if a pub were added at Tech. Thirteen students disagreed and two students were undecided.

Out of those who drink, 90 they drink alcoholic beverages said they felt a pub restricting the beverages sold on campus. Five students said there should be limitations, and one student gave no opinion.

Ninety-four respondents said a campus pub would not increase the quantity of alcohol consumed by Tech students. Thirteen students disagreed and two students said they were uncertain.

Ninety-two of those who said they drink alcoholic beverages said they felt a pub on the Tech premises would not lessen the quality of education. Two answered it would.

"If there were a place to drink on campus, then why should there be a restriction on the drinking of beverages in the classroom?" asked Clouche Leon Walters.

George L. Marcotte disagreed. "People (students) are going to drink regardless of their situation."

There is a definite difference between education and drinking — and I don't see how they could possible meet."

Math department sponsors series

Tech's mathematics department is sponsoring a series of seminars in set-theoretic topology through Thursday.

Professor Istavan Juhasz of the Hungarian Academy of Sciences will visit the university to present two lectures of special interest to topologists and logicians. He also will participate in the seminar series organized around his visit. Topology is a segment of higher mathematics related to the study of geometric configurations.

Juhasz's visit is supported by a grant from Tech Ex-Students Association.

Other visitors to Tech, in conjunction with Juhasz's visit, will present reports on research in theoretic topology in the seminars.

Speakers to address journalistic topics

Speakers for today's Mass Communications Week sessions will be addressing topics in journalism.

Travis Linn, southwest bureau manager of Columbia Broadcasting System, will speak at 9:35 a.m. in Room 101 in the Mass Communications Building.

At 10:35 a.m., Jenkin Lloyd Jones, Sr., editor-publisher of the Tribune in Tulsa, Okla., will speak.

An ex-students panel discussion at 1:35 p.m. will address job opportunities and current journalism topics in Room 101. Members of the panel will include Charles Reinken of The Houston Post; Sandy Martin of Texas Instruments of Lubbock; and Terry Leonard of the Associated Press in Dallas.

Dog learns to leap

By REAGAN WHITE
UD Reporter

Big, black dogs are, as a general rule of thumb, intimidating. And while Buffalo Beano Co. manager Gary King's black Labrador is no exception, there is more to Baxter than his booming bark.

Baxter can jump eight feet high to catch a frisbee, and some of his jumps have been measured at more than 16 feet long, King said.

When Baxter is ordered to sit, he sits. When he is told to get down, he lies down.

"A disciplined dog is happier than a dog who doesn't have a boss to respect. An undisciplined dog is worse than an undisciplined child," said King.

King, a former Tech student, said he first took Baxter with him to the store as a six week old puppy about one year ago.

"Baxter has grown up in this store. I didn't want to leave him at home by himself, and so he came with me to work."

"Now the only time he gets a day off is when I get a day off," said King.

King mentioned having Baxter in the store had some real advantages. "Baxter is very intimidating. Shoplifting has really declined since Baxter came."

King explained that groups of kids often come into the store and disperse to different parts of the building, which can make keeping an eye on all of them difficult.

"Big black dogs are intimidating, and I am a little intimidating myself. Once when I knew a girl had taken some blouses, I called Baxter and we both stood in the doorway."

"When the girl saw us as she moved toward the door, she circled back to the rear of the store, and the blouses reappeared. I did not have to confront her," said King.

King mentioned Baxter is good with children. "Once a little kid had his arms wrapped around Baxter's neck, and Baxter walked all around the store dragging the kid with him. Baxter didn't mind in the least."

King said he had began training Baxter to catch frisbees by getting the dog to chase a rubber ball.

King said Baxter soon discovered he could catch the ball on the bounce if he could gauge his jump accurately enough to catch the ball in the air.

Baxter had little trouble associating a rolling frisbee with a rolling ball, and he soon chased rolling frisbees with enthusiasm, King said.

Soon Baxter discovered a frisbee could fly, and catching a frisbee in the air is now Baxter's chief joy in life.

"Now when Baxter hears the word 'frisbee' he gets excited," King said.

Mardis Gras fills French Quarter

NEW ORLEANS (AP) — A born-again Mardi Gras filled the French Quarter with hard-drinking revelers and packed parade routes with people Tuesday — just like the good old bashes before the 1979 police strike.

Instead of bitter tensions and National Guard troops on every downtown corner, this Mardi Gras was sun-kissed and laid-back.

Once again Rex, king of Carnival, led his splendidly glittering procession through hundreds of thousands of people shrieking for the necklaces and doubloons flung from the floats.

Zulu, chieftain of the blacks, loomed majestically over his parade, blessing chosen folk with gilded coconuts. No accurate crowd count was possible but an estimated one million people were out for the great day, the climax of Carnival, in New Orleans and suburbs.

Fischer begins couples study

Do you react with your spouse in the same ways your parents react with each other?

Research by Judith L. Fischer, Tech associate professor of home and family life, will focus on the theory that persons behave toward their spouses as their parents act toward each other.

"We'd like to find out to what extent this generalization is true and what factors in the couples' family backgrounds contribute to the appearance of similarity across generations," said Fischer.

Fischer and Jeffrey Larson, doctoral students in family studies, are undertaking a survey of young Lubbock married couples and their parents to find answers. Parents of the couples do not necessarily have to live in Lubbock.

"It is important to have information from her parents and his parents because each spouse brings his or her own situation into the marriage. How the couple works out potentially differing ways of relating is particularly interesting," said Fischer.

Persons between ages 18 and 27, who have been married for at least 18 months, are eligible to participate in the survey. Fischer will mail announcements of her research project asking for participation of the couple and parents.

The researchers hope to find 100 couples and their parents. Volunteers will receive individual questionnaires to be filled out and returned. When results are analyzed, Fischer will mail each couple and their parents a summary of the study.

Couples interested in more information may call Fischer at (806) 742-2877 or leave a message at (806) 742-3000.

Call the RA!

By Joel Brandenberger
UD Reporter

A loud crash is heard. Then, loud voices and another crash. "It's a fight," someone yells. "Call the RA!"

Sound like fun? That's just one of the things the average RA will have to face during the school year, according to Betty Hamilton, a counselor for the Housing Office at Tech.

"We have to train our RAs to handle situations like fights," Hamilton said. "There are also things like roommate disagreements and actual violations of Tech rules that the RAs will have to deal with."

Hamilton will discuss various RA duties at a recruitment meeting at 8 p.m. today in the Carpenter-Wells Cafeteria.

A second meeting will be at 8 p.m. Thursday also in the Carpenter-Wells Cafeteria.

Persons interested in being an RA after the meetings, need to make final applications to their residence hall office by Feb. 27, Hamilton said.

Selection of RAs will be made by March 31, and letters of acceptance will be sent out April 4.

Hamilton said the Housing Office looks for various things in an RA.

"Basically, they've got to be interested in working with people," Hamilton said. "There are other basic requirements, such as living in a Tech dorm for at least one semester and being in college for two semesters."

"But if an applicant can't work well with people, they won't be seriously considered."

Hamilton said that rule violations of one type or another could be the most serious problem for RAs. Problems may range from a drunk resident coming in and hurting themselves to an outright violation such as alcohol in the dorms, she said.

Hamilton said that Housing expects the RAs to uphold all university rules.

Bureau warns of solicitations

By MICHAEL CROOK
UD Reporter

Lubbock residents should be on the lookout for mail solicitations and phone call solicitations from Vegas International Travel and Tours, according to the Lubbock's Better Business Bureau.

The company, Vegas International, does not meet Better Business Bureau standards because of its advertising practices, a spokesperson said. The company has contacted hundreds of residents stating that the person has won a vacation in Las Vegas. Actually, the "winner" must pay a "service charge" which often exceeds the amount of the same vacation booked through a local travel agency.

The spokesperson warned that the company is asking for residents' credit card numbers.

The Better Business Bureau has received several complaints and inquiries lately concerning bills received people for unordered vacation packets.

Vegas International's most recent written promotional material mailed to South Plains residents states, "V.I.T. is registered...and has an excellent reputation with the Better Business Bureau." This, according to the bureau spokesperson, is "an absolutely false statement. The Las Vegas BBB has reported 'great difficulty' with the company."

For further information, consumers are urged to contact the BBB-South Plains at its toll-free number 1-800-692-4466. For Lubbock consumers, the phone number is 763-0459.

Director views changes at theater

By MARY FITZGERALD
UD Staff

In 1952, a young man came to Tech to teach theater arts. "I was the only professor teaching that particular class and at that time it was part of the speech department," director Ronald Schulz said. "I accepted the position because I felt it would be intriguing and challenging to develop a theater program."

Twenty-eight years and over one hundred productions later, Schulz now is a respected professor in the department of theater at Tech.

Schulz, a native of Minnesota, became interested in theater at an early age. "When I was growing up, the big stars used to tour with their plays, I remember seeing Tallulah Bankhead and Helen Hayes on stage." But Schulz didn't emulate his early idols. Instead, he became a director.

"I don't think I'd be a very good actor. I enjoy working with the over-all concept of a production and not with just one aspect," he said about his decision to choose directing. Schulz attended Northwestern University in Illinois, with such classmates as Cloris Leachman, Patricia Neal and Paul Lynde.

But even after attending school with such famous actors, Schulz doesn't advocate students going into what they want to dedicate their lives to.

Schulz said, "Students shouldn't major in drama if they could be happy in any other field. Acting takes extreme dedication and is full of many disappointments. Competition is tough and more actors are unemployed than employed."

Schulz has seen many changes in Tech students over the past 28 years.

"Today, the students seem to be more mature and serious about why they are here at college and what they want to do with their lives," he said.

"I try to keep in touch with most of my students after they leave and it's always nice to hear how they are doing. I have taught the children of students I taught over 20 years ago, and that's always interesting. Many of my students became teachers and some of their students came to Tech and have become my students. It's all very rewarding."

In regard to Tech theater, Schulz wants to see more experimental theater for the advanced students.

"The present type of theater at Tech is fundamental prosenium and I would like to see an intimate type of theater with more of an actor-audience relationship included," Schulz said.

Schulz currently is working on the production of "The Visit" a play written by Friedrich Durrenmatt.

"The Visit" will be performed in the University Theater Feb. 22 through 27.

Harpist to give concert

Mildred Dilling has performed for presidents and kings.

And the celebrated harpist will be at Tech today and Thursday for a workshop and concert.

Dilling will hold a workshop at 4:30 p.m. today at the Tech music department. She will perform at 4:30 p.m. Thursday in the Hemmle Recital Hall.

Dilling began her music career at the age of six when she began playing the piano. She was given a harp for her 12th birthday, and has devoted her life to playing the instrument since then.

Dilling was the first musician sent by the British Broadcasting Corporation to tour its stations. She also was the first harpist to play over the radio in Ireland.

Dilling has two regular radio programs on the NBC network. She plays the harp on one program, and on the other show, performs with George Rasely, an opera singer, on "Songs of the Harp."

Dilling recently produced two records, "Clair de Lune" and "Evening at Town Hall with Mildred Dilling and Her Harp," a record taped live during a 1969 New York recital.

Dilling also owns the largest privately collected harp collection in the world. She owns a Marie Antoinette harp, a Scottish clarsac and a sixteenth century Scandinavian minnersinger's harp.

Because of her life-long concentration on playing the harp, Dilling has become known world-wide for her proficiency.

She has played at Radio City Music Hall, seven concerts in the White House, and toured Europe.

Longhorns diminish Raiders' hopes

By JOHN EUBANKS
UD Sports Editor

If the Texas Longhorns had not showed up Tuesday night for their bout with the Raiders, about the only good shooting in the Coliseum would have been by three blindfolded fans.

While six blindfolded fans made 50 percent of their shots during halftime festivities, the unmasked Raiders could only manage 37 percent shooting during the halves.

As the result of Tech's poor shooting, the Raiders dropped a 76-63 loss to Texas.

Prior to the game, Tech, Texas and Houston were all deadlocked in third place of the Southwest Conference standings. But the win by Texas, coupled by an 81-74 Houston loss to Rice Tuesday, gave the Longhorns sole possession of third place.

Texas is now 9-6 in conference play, while the Raiders and Houston are 8-7. Tech is 14-11 on the year.

The win by the Longhorns virtually gives them a bye into the conference tournament Feb. 28 in San Antonio. The top three teams in the conference standings are awarded a bye into the tournament.

The Raiders can only gain the bye if they defeat

Arkansas this weekend, while Texas loses to Rice.

If the Longhorns do make it to San Antonio with a bye, they can thank forward Jon Danks. Danks' 72 percent shooting performance from the field against Tech helped jack up the Longhorns overall shooting percentage to 51 percent.

His 20 points, best on the Texas squad Tuesday, didn't hurt, either.

Danks hit six of eight shots in the first half to lead the Longhorns to a 33-26 halftime lead.

If the Raiders 44 percent shooting performance in the first half was bad, their 32 percent mark in the second half was devastating.

The Raiders constantly whittled at the Longhorns led in the second half. But the closest Tech could come to Texas was 49-41 with 8:58 left in the game.

But during the next four minutes the Raiders could only manage six points while Texas doubled that figure to 12.

With 4:46 left in the game, the Raiders trailed by 14, 61-47. Many of the 8,016 fans began filing out of the Coliseum.

But before they left, the fans were treated to one exciting moment at 15:13 of the first half, and Texas leading 41-28.

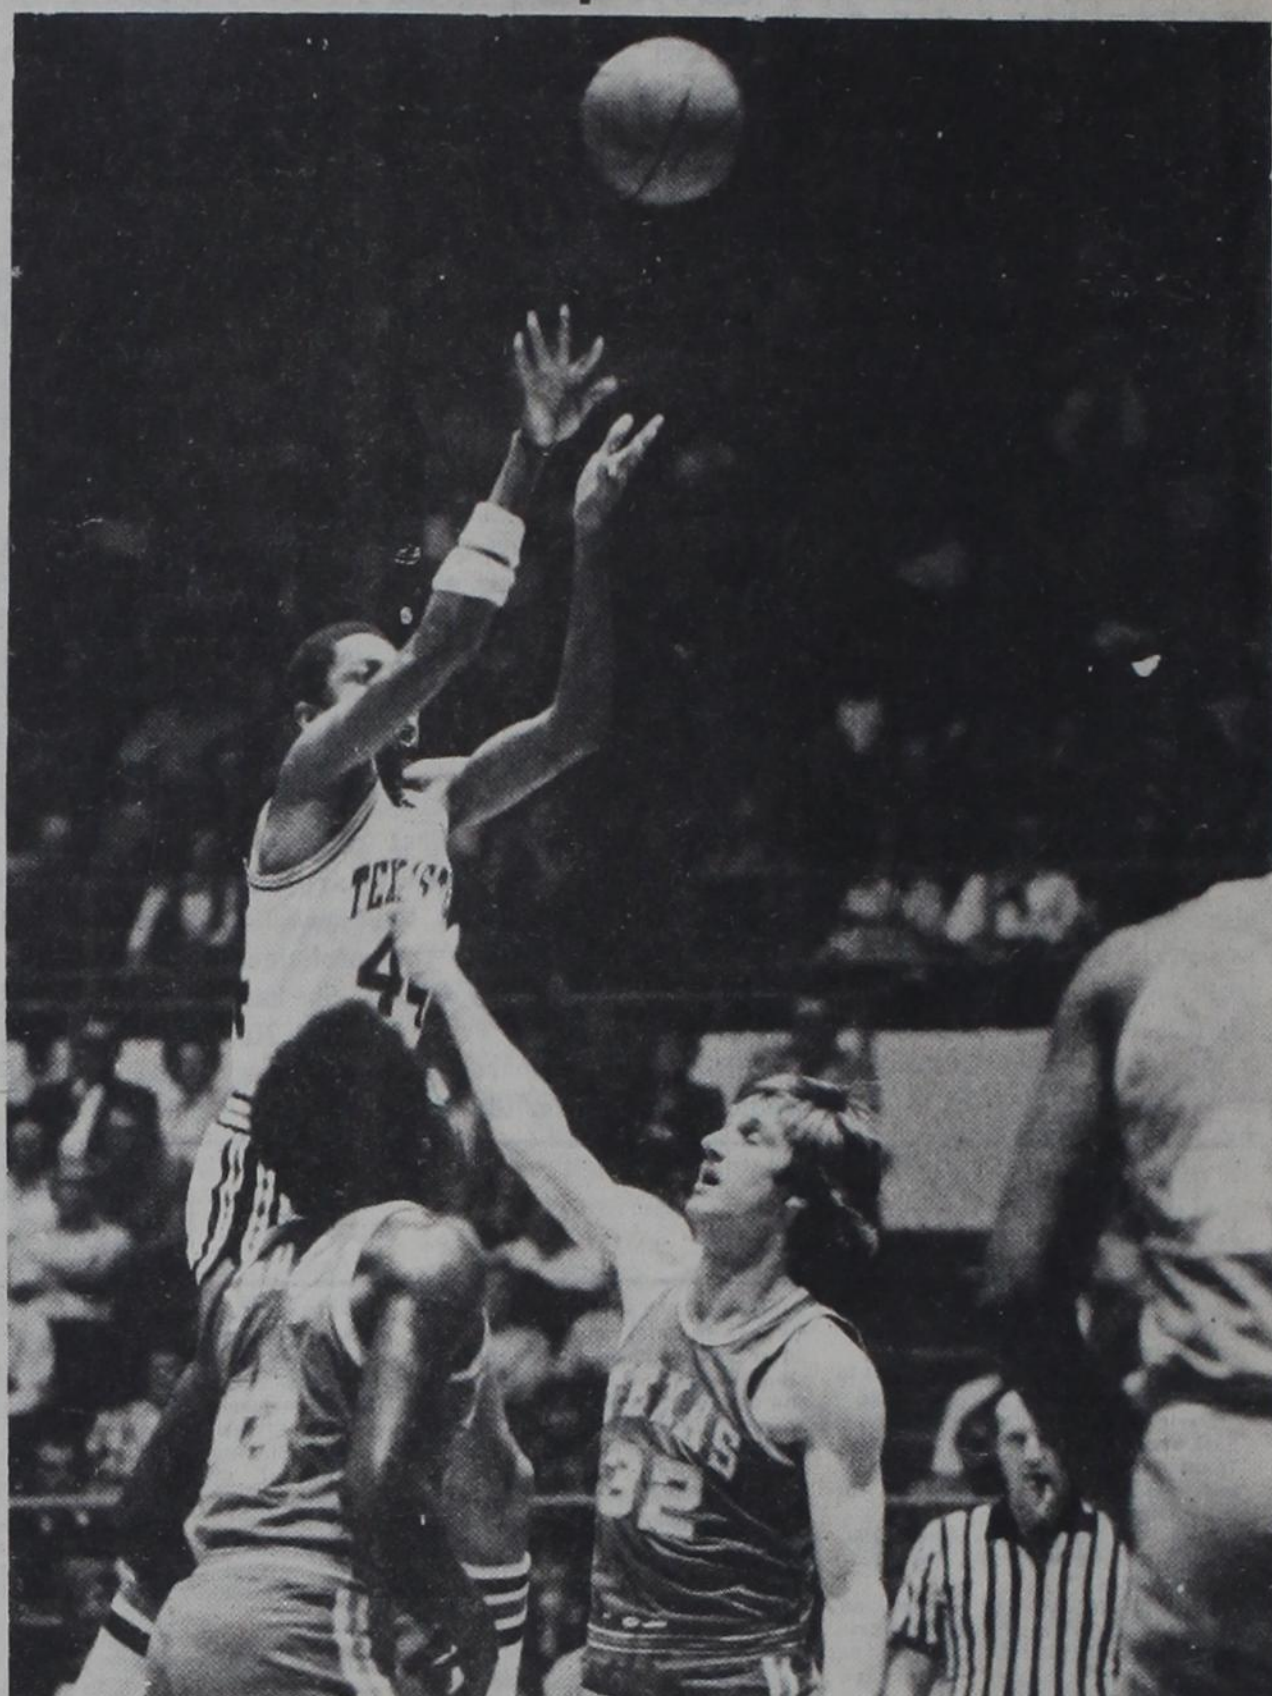

After Danks drew his fourth foul against Tech's David Little, Texas Coach Abe Lemons argued about the call. Tech Coach Gerald Myers, feeling the call was a good one, argued his point.

Teh shouting match began. For the next five minutes, play was halted to let the tempers of both coaches calm down.

"He (Lemons) said the call wasn't good, I said it was," Myers said after the game. "We were just standing up for our teams. It wasn't a very pleasant thing to happen. It was just the heat of the battle."

Jeff Taylor got hot for the Raiders Tuesday, scoring 25 points to lead the Raiders. The only other Raider to score in double figures was Ralph Brewster. He scored 11.

Following Danks in scoring for Texas was LaSalle Thompson with 13, Ron Baxter and Fred Carson with 12 and Henry Johnson with 11. The 6-10 Thompson, a freshman, led both squads in rebounding with 14.

Jump shot

Tech's Jeff Taylor lets go of a jump shot over a grounded John Danks (32) and Henry Johnson (43), in the Raiders' 76-63 loss to Texas. Taylor was one of the few bright spots of the night for Tech. The Hobbs sophomore pumped in 25 points, a collegiate high. With the loss Tech drops to 8-7 and fourth place in the SWC.

Slumbering Tech recovers to trounce Tulsa, 72-49

After a traveling day and overtime victory Monday night, Coach Gay Benson let her Raider basketball team sleep in Tuesday, but it took the slumbering cagers one half of basketball to wake up before they bombed Tulsa University 72-49.

Tech trailed a weak Golden Hurricane squad 33-28 at halftime but outscored its opponent 44-16 in the final 20 minutes to win its 23rd game of the season. The Raiders will now enter the quarterfinals of the Texas AIAW Tournament Thursday against Wayland Baptist.

A three-quarter court press installed at halftime proved to be the difference as Tech overtook Tulsa at 14:06 of the second half, 38-36. The Raiders amassed 23 steals for the game with most coming after halftime. Louise Davis had 10 of those steals.

Pam Stone led the Raider cause with 26 points but only had nine at the intermission. Vicki Lee started off slowly as well, scoring only three points at the half, but she finished the night with 13. Other women in double figures with 10 were Gwen McCray and Lynn Webb.

In the rebounding department, McCray tallied 14 caroms with Stone adding 12.

"We played as if we were tired in the first half but our intensity picked up when we started pressing," said Benson. "We played aggressive defense throughout the second half, but we still didn't allow them (Tulsa) a single free throw."

Still, Benson expressed concern over the effects of this road trip, which is so close to the State Tournament.

Recruits to sign national letters

High school football players all over the state and nation today will sign national recruiting letters of intent with their respective college choices.

The Southwest Conference letter-of-intent day was last Wednesday. Tech coaches bagged 25 prospects, including Norman Hill, an All-State running back-defensive back from Nashville, Tenn., and Donnie Green, a blue-chip linebacker from Caldwell.

Those recruits must sign national letters of intent with Tech if they intend to play football in the SWC, but they still sign with schools outside the league today.

Baxter's presence ignites 'Horns to clutch victory

By JEFF REMBERT
UD Sports Writer

Texas forward Ron Baxter entered the 1979-80 basketball season with two goals in mind. The senior, three-year letterman had to take over as the Longhorns' floor leader, and he had to lose 30 pounds.

Baxter proved to the 8,016 partisan fans, in the Coliseum Tuesday, that he had attained both goals by helping his Texas teammates past Tech 76-63, in a key Southwest Conference match-up.

Graduation had cost the Longhorns the services of 1979 Co-Most Valuable Player, guard John Moore, their floor leader. With his departure, Baxter had to assume Texas' leadership role.

Baxter also lost the necessary 30 pounds. By slimming down from 245 pounds to 215 pounds this season, Baxter played with the same ability and intensity he had during his freshman and sophomore years.

His attainment of both goals helped the Longhorns change from a team rebuilding to a team contending. Texas' win Tuesday put it in excellent position to walk into the SWC tournament in San Antonio with a third-place bye. A win against Rice Friday will secure the bye.

"He's tough, no doubt, and he'll still be known long after he's gone," Tech forward Ben Hillsaid.

Hill should know. He spent most of the night trying to neutralize Baxter. Hill's blanket defense held Baxter to 12 points, 6.2 points behind his team leading average.

Baxter said nobody had controlled him throughout a game like Hill had Tuesday. Hill forced Baxter inside when he wanted to stay outside and outside when the Longhorn wanted to go inside.

Baxter was still able to haul down 10 rebounds and provide the young Longhorns the leadership needed in this pressure-packed game. Baxter attributes his leadership qualities to his past participation in NIT and NCAA tournament action.

"It helped me out as an individual, and I hope it helped the team," Baxter said. "I knew I wasn't contributing offensively, so I had to help out in other ways."

The 1977 Longhorn Most-Valuable Player's ability will be appreciated more by opponents and fans when they realize he played Tuesday's game with an injured ankle and knee. He suffered the injuries during the final play of Texas' game against Texas A&M Saturday.

Recreational Sports

Trekking trips slated

The Department of Recreational Sports has scheduled a series of adventure trekking trips for the 1980 spring semester.

A canoeing outing is planned for spring break (March 15-22). The trip will take place at Big Bend National Park. This is a once-in-a-lifetime opportunity to view the canyons of the Rio Grande River. An adventure-filled week of canoeing and camping through a remote part of the world is in store for participants.

River canoeing experience is required. Canoes, transportation, and food will be furnished.

The group will depart at 9 a.m. March 15 and return to Lubbock on March 22. The sign-up deadline is March 5.

All participants must attend one of the pre-outing meetings scheduled for March 5 and 12 in the Recreational Aquatic Center. The time for each of the meetings will be 7:30 p.m. Rec Sports officials note that this is not a beginning canoe trip. The cost is $80.

A second adventure trip is scheduled for April. This outing contains two different dates. A trip is planned for April 5-6, and a second outing is scheduled for April 19-20.

Choose your weekend and canoe down the scenic Concho River, located near San Angelo. It is the closest beginning river to Lubbock. Plan now to experience this pleasant river trip while you learn the basics of the art of canoeing.

The departure time will be 7 a.m. for both the April 5 trip and the April 19 outing. The sign-up deadline for the April 5 trip is April 2, and the deadline for the April 19 outing is April 16.

Pre-outing meetings are scheduled for 7:30 p.m., April 2, for the April 5 trip, and for 7:30 p.m., April 16, for the April 19 trip.

Both meetings will take place in the Recreational Aquatic Center.

The cost, including transportation and equipment, is $17.50.

Adventure trekking trips provide a means by which students can get into the outdoors and experience different activities for a reasonable price. All trips are led by a member of the Tech faculty or staff. Transportation and equipment are always provided.

Persons interested in going on an adventure trip must sign up in the Outdoor Shop, located in Room 101 of the Intramural Gym. The shop is open from 12-1 p.m. and from 3-6 p.m. Mondays and Fridays and from 3-5 p.m. Tuesdays-Thursdays.

IM Sports seeks softball umpires

The Department of Recreational Sports is in need of young men and women who would like to work as softball umpires for the 1980 spring semester.

These umpires will be selected from a group of persons attending a series of training clinics.

The schedule for the clinics is as follows:

Feb. 25-6-7 p.m., Room 207, Men's Gym
Feb. 26-6-8 p.m., Room 207, Men's Gym
Feb. 27-6-8 p.m., Room 207, Men's Gym
Feb. 28-6-8 p.m., Room 207, Men's Gym

All prospective umpires will be paid for attending the clinics, providing they attend at least three of the sessions and prove themselves to be qualified umpires. In order to be paid, an umpire must pass a written test on softball rules.

Currently, softball umpires are paid $4.35 per game. The number of assignments an umpire receives each week is dependent upon his availability and ability.

MOSHTAGHI WINS TOURNEY

Hamid Moshtaghi defeated Ron Hardman 15-6, 15-2 in the finals to capture the championship of the "Saturday Morning Live" singles badminton tournament last weekend.

Moshtaghi downed Mohamid Ali in the semi-finals to earn the right to compete in the championship. Meanwhile, Hardman eliminated Tien Ngyer in his semi-final match. Fourteen persons competed in the tournament.

CLUB BEING FORMED

For those students interested in the art of handling unarmed weapons, a new club is being formed on campus called T'Al. The purpose of the club is to trade and learn weapon techniques and to develop interest in various weapons.

To join the club or sponsor the activity, contact William Himes at 742-7764. More information is also available for the Rec Sports Department.

BACKGAMMON BEGINS

Backgammon players are reminded to bring their playing boards to Room 204 of the University Center tonight. Women's competition begins at 7 p.m., and men's competition gets underway at 7:345 p.m.

EIGHT-BALL POOL BEGINS

Men in the upper bracket of eight-ball pool will begin their competition at 7 p.m. tonight in the University Center Games Room.

SCHEDULES READY

Men and women racquetball players may pick up their schedules in the Rec Sports Office.

Tennis players, table tennis players, handball and horseshoes participants are reminded that unless their matches are played, the matches will be forfeited.
