

Committee to deal with hostages Carter sees no resolution of situation

By The Associated Press

The Iranian Parliament delayed a full debate Tuesday on the American hostages and in a raucous session voted to select a special committee to deal with the fate of the 52 Americans in their 318th day of captivity.

President Carter, campaigning in Atlanta, said "there is no prospect at this time for an early resolution" of the hostage stalemate. Carter's remarks appeared aimed at clarifying earlier statements that had been taken as optimistic and at variance with the cautious assessments of Secretary of State Edmund S. Muskie.

The Iranian decision to turn the hostage issue over to a special committee was taken over the objection of some deputies amid calls for the execution of "spy-hostages." The action, in effect, postponed the awaited parliamentary debate that was to decide how Iran will deal with the hostages.

Tehran Radio said the Majlis, or parliament, voted by a "decisive majority" to refer the hostage issue to a special committee and discussed the number, qualifications and authority of the panel members. No vote count was given.

Speaker Hashemi Rafsanjani, who cut off deputies who tried to debate the hostage issue, said discussions on the new committee will continue when Parliament meets Thursday.

But in line with revolutionary leader Ayatollah Ruhollah Khomeini's pledge that the parliament would decide the fate of the hostages, Rafsanjani assured deputies that "the final decision will be by the Majlis itself."

The parliament session quickly turned into a shouting match as some members demanded a closed session on the issue. Hardline deputy Sayyed Fakhroddin Rahimi declared, "we do not need any special committee or a secret session." He said "the spy-hostages must be tried and executed and the nonspy hostages released on conditions."

Rahimi echoed a call by the Islamic fundamentalist Tehran newspaper Ehtelaat that the hostages be tried as spies.

Candidates' stands appear similar

By INEZ RUSSELL
 UD Staff Writer

Despite campaign rhetoric, the major presidential candidates share more similarities than differences on foreign and defense issues, said Sabe Kennedy, political science professor at Tech.

Kennedy's speech Tuesday in the UC Senate Room was the second in a series of speeches on the 1980 presidential election.

"There are a great many similarities in the positions of the candidates than there are differences. The perceptions of the stands are different," Kennedy said.

But he added that voters' perceptions of the candidates' stands on issues could be more important than "what people will do (if elected) and what the Constitution will allow them to do."

In discussing foreign affairs and defense stands, Kennedy said the Republican and Democratic platforms share one major similarity.

Carter wants the United States to "be second to none," while Reagan believes the country cannot accept "second place," Kennedy said. Both want to accept any Soviet challenge and keep the peace as well.

Party platforms share many similarities, he said. In contrast to doctrinaire political party platforms in other countries, the American party platforms are designed to attract as many voters as possible and repel as few as possible, Kennedy said.

To attract voters, many candidates use alarm tactics in their political pronouncements.

"When you're out of power, you point with alarm. The popular thing to do is to point to the huge gap between us and the Soviets," Kennedy said.

The same tactics being employed by Reagan were used by John Kennedy in the 1960 elections, Kennedy said. Two months after he was elected president, John Kennedy said the missile gap had been closed.

Strong similarities exist among candidate stands on specific issues, Kennedy said.

For instance, all three major candidates want a better Navy, he said. Concerning NATO, Reagan says he wants no moratorium on the deployment of nuclear weapons. Carter says he will not stop the deployment of weapons.

Of the three candidates, John Anderson is most specific about foreign policy stands, but, Kennedy said, "it's easier to be much more forthright on reform when there's no way you're going to be responsible for it."

Another important factor in determining foreign policy is rarely thought about during the campaign, but often determines the success or failure of policies once a candidate is elected.

That factor, Kennedy said, is Congress. He said the Constitution is very specific about the powers Congress has in determining foreign policy.

Congress can declare war, raise and support armies and provide and maintain a navy. Kennedy said people should listen to a candidate's policy pronouncements and see if he adds the kicker, "I will do this if and as the Congress supports."

In order for a party's platform to be effective, the party needs to have a majority in Congress, Kennedy said.

In the third speech of the series, Barry Price will discuss economic issues in the campaign. The speech begins at 7 p.m. Tuesday in the UC Senate Room.

The series is sponsored by the department of political science and Psi Sigma Alpha, the political science honorary. The purpose of the election discussions is to give all interested students, faculty and community members insight into the 1980 elections. There is no charge to those attending the discussions.

Officials say medical school, hospital relationship legal

By JOEL BRANDENBERGER
 UD Staff Writer

Tech officials said Tuesday they believe there is no illegal relationship between the Health Sciences Center and Lubbock General Hospital.

The denial came in the official reply to the state auditor's report that said Tech illegally had contributed financial support to Lubbock General Hospital.

In the state auditor's report of Aug. 12, Tech was accused of allowing the Lubbock County Hospital District and Lubbock General Hospital the use of Tech facilities and Tech equipment without requiring compensation.

Compensation for use of state property by a non-state agency is required in the Texas Education Code.

Tech officials, in the reply, said another section of the Texas Education Code gives the Board of Regents the authority to carry out affiliations with other state agencies in the Lubbock area, when such agreements are "in the best interest of medical education."

Dan Williams, interim vice president for finance and administration, said Tech's reply was crucial.

"The reply to the hospital question was most pressing," Williams said. "The relationship the auditors were challenging has existed for years, and we thought we needed to straighten the situation out quickly."

Williams said the relationship between the hospital and Tech is invaluable.

"The relationship between the university and the hospital is unique - there is no other like it in the state of Texas," Williams said.

"This is the only situation where two separate entities (state and non-state) provide each other with valuable services and share facilities within the same building," Williams said.

In the reply, Tech officials said the arrangement between Tech and the hospital district had been organized in a shared services agreement whereby some costs would be borne by Tech and other costs by the hospital.

Williams said unless the auditors disagree with Tech's response, Tech will continue its operations with the hospital in the same manner as before.

About $15 million of Tech facilities and services was used by the hospital during the report period.

The auditor's report was for fiscal year 1979 (Sept. 1, 1978 to Aug. 31, 1979).

Tech's reply also said it disagreed with the auditors on the university's payment of Medical Licensing Board fees for Medical School faculty.

The auditors said in their report that a 1972 attorney general's opinion prohibited the payment of such fees.

Tech officials said in the reply the bylaws of Tech and the School of Medicine, approved by the legislature, allow for the payment of "necessary business expenses incurred by a (faculty) member in generating professional income."

Tech officials said the payment of the license board fees followed the guidelines set up in the bylaws.

Auditors also said Tech was careless in its property responsibility because equipment valued at $2,376 was missing.

The auditors attributed the missing equipment to a terminated employee, but said no report of the missing equipment was filed.

In the reply, Tech officials said new procedures had been instituted to assure reports would be filed when equipment was missing.

The officials also said all employees in the Health Sciences Center had been given a copy of the state senate bill pertaining to the legal responsibilities of employees issued state equipment.

Williams said the university had complied, or is in the process of complying with the auditors in reported violations.

"Most of the things cited in the report were minor," Williams said. "But we felt we needed to let the state know where we stood on the items."

"In a lot of the cases, we didn't even know there was a problem with our procedures," Williams said. "Once the report called the problem to our attention, we proceeded to correct the problem."

Williams said Tech's reply to the auditor's report would probably be the last formal step in the audit process.

"Unless they really take issue with something in our reply, we believe there will be no more formal contact between the university and the auditor's office," Williams said.

Williams said there might be some informal discussions in the near future to resolve any remaining problems.

"I've got to be in Austin Sept. 30 and Oct. 1 anyway, so I'll talk with someone in the auditor's office informally just to make sure everything's all right," Williams said.

Reagan tries for Hispanic vote

SAN ANTONIO (AP) - Republican presidential candidate Ronald Reagan made a major pitch for the Hispanic vote Tuesday, promising to slash taxes for low and middle income workers and restore values of family, neighborhood and work.

Accompanied by all the state's top Republicans and former Dallas Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach, Reagan donned a Mexican sombrero, rode a river boat and was serenaded by mariachis in a Mexican Independence Day event sponsored by the National Hispanic Assembly.

In a Diez Y Seis de Septiembre (Sept. 16) speech at the convention center, the former California governor noted that former Los Angeles Rams kicker Danny Villanueva had been a part of his administration.

"Hispanics, I know, believe in the value of family, neighborhood and work and this has helped build San Antonio and Texas and our country," said Reagan, greeted by shouts of "viva" and "ole."

"These values are threatened now by our current problems. What this country needs are some solutions."

Reagan promised to slash individual income taxes 10 percent each of his first three years in office, and to tie income tax brackets to inflation to eliminate what he termed "bracket creep."

"Jimmy Carter has become the greatest taxer in the history of the Republic and our economy is close to the breaking point. America needs a tax rate cut, not a little tax cut, but a significant across-the-board cut in tax rates to restore incentives to work and produce."

Accusing Carter of "a litany of despair, of broken promises, of sacred trusts abandoned and forgotten," Reagan attacked what he called the president's record of "8 million out of work, inflation running 18 percent the first quarter of this year, and the highest interest rates since the War Between the States."

Military spending increases, public suffers expense

By KIM LEMONS
 UD Staff Writer

Between 1980 and 1985, every American family will contribute $2000 per year in taxes so the United States can militarily equip itself for a nuclear war, according to Pauline Frederick, former United Nations correspondent for NBC.

Speaking to a small UC audience Tuesday night, the veteran newswoman cited a number of statistics and quoted authorities from Douglas MacArthur to Henry Kissinger to illustrate the inherent faults in the United States' foreign policy.

Foreign policy, Frederick said, is overly concerned with military build-up, which results in the disregard of human needs.

"America seems convinced that military power is the answer to all problems," Frederick said. "The government would rather throw bombs instead of bread, especially at the Soviet Union."

"Human needs seem to be the lowest priority on the American foreign policy agenda, and our tax dollar reflects this," she said.

"Fifty-eight cents is spent on social problems at home, 24 cents on direct defense, and one penny on foreign aid. Furthermore, part of this penny is spent to monitor the recipient, to see if he is spending too much on his own military build-up."

Frederick gave a number of statistics to demonstrate the magnitude of the defense build-ups of the United States and its adversaries.

"One-half trillion dollars will be spent throughout the world this year on the development of military power. The United States alone will spend one trillion in the next five years; in fact, the United States is spending 20 times more to improve weapons than to improve health," she said.

The newswoman, who has almost 40 years experience as a political reporter, said it is the politicians, and not the people, who are pushing for this build-up.

"Eisenhower said the people want peace so much, that the time will come when the government will have to get out of the way and let them have it," Frederick said.

"But the greatest vote-getter for politicians is promising to throw money, in the form of military weapons, at foreign problems. No candidate will support peace efforts for fear of losing votes."

Frederick, who spent several minutes prior to her comments explaining that she is non-partisan, had a negative opinion of actions of the current presidential candidates in the area of foreign policy.

"Presidential candidates used to pay a call on the UN secretary to demonstrate their commitment to a peaceful foreign policy. But Carter hasn't made a visit in two years, and neither Anderson nor Reagan has yet done so."

Frederick quoted Bush as saying in an interview that the United States could survive a nuclear holocaust. However, there were, according to Bush, certain limitations on exactly who would survive.

Bush said about 5 percent of Americans would be chosen to survive, including the 'command' consisting of the president and other influential, 'important' persons.

"You can bet that the 5 percent of Americans chosen to survive wouldn't include any of us in this room," she said.

Ronald Reagan: no friend of the people

Dennis Garza

Ronald Reagan has a bad habit of exposing his true intelligence whenever he drifts away from his staff-written notes. This is why he has managed to insult the most populous nation in the world (China), revive the Vietnam issue, misquote everyone from Lincoln to Franklin Roosevelt, and offer military solutions to at least five different situations all in the past year of campaigning. I get nauseous imagining what kind of shape this country would be in if Reagan were put in position to turn his talk into action.

Let's put aside all of the times Reagan has had both feet firmly planted and focus on the firm stands on issues he has taken. For one, he says ERA is a waste of time and ink. That's a slap to all women of this country. Nothing to be jumpy about, says Reagan, ERA is a state's issue and besides he went as far as to name a woman to his campaign organization. Why, hell, every American woman should be just as grateful as Anne Armstrong, even if they are exploited as a cheap labor force in this country.

Reagan is a very real threat to the gains that minorities have made in the past 20 years. Reagan didn't think it was important enough to address the conventions of the two largest ethnic minority organizations in the country, NAACP and LULAC. Nor does he think it's important enough to place any minorities on his election campaign staff. But then, all this coincides with his years as governor of California - appointing 12 blacks and eight Hispanics out of 1,000 executive appointments.

If this isn't enough, Reagan has some new ideas of cutting CETA funds, which bolster minority employment, and eliminating minority set aside contracts by the federal government.

Reagan is no friend of labor, the environment, the uneducated youth or the consumer. He has consistently stood against all major labor legislation including minimum wage laws and collective bargaining. He also is at the forefront of the movement to slash funds and power of O.S.H.A., which has always provided a meaningful safeguard against shoddy working conditions and bad business practices.

Reagan doesn't know or care about the importance of protecting the environment from blatant degradation. Any person who treasures the future, from the most ardent environmentalist to the profit-hungry businessman, realizes that short term gain can never be made at the expense of environmental deterioration and long term productivity. Ronald Reagan doesn't know this. He is the same person who has said things like, "we don't need another forest park in California. If you've seen one redwood tree, you've seen them all. Ninety percent of all pollution in this country is produced by plants and trees." I wouldn't trust this man with so much as a potted plant!

Reagan doesn't believe in the promotion of higher education. He might say that he believes in education, but he doesn't think the government should help needy students pay their tuition. In other words, Reagan believes in education for those who can afford it and those whose parents and family are higher educated. Reagan would do nothing to promote the education of the truly needy youth who are likely to become strong candidates for welfare without education. In fact, the only idea Reagan has in the area of education is abolishing the newly formed Department of Education, which is the result of many years of hard work by ardent believers in education. And, teachers can forget about support from Reagan in terms of higher pay or greater benefits - that's "waste", according to Reagan.

If you periodically find yourself purchasing goods, like every other American, then you had better start worrying about more than the phony or greedy businessman. Ronald Reagan has made a point out of blocking every effort to curtail bad business practices in defense of the consumer. In California, Reagan pulled the plug on a consumer commission that was so successful in court that it put hundreds of crooks out of business and placed stiff fines on many other profit-hungry businessmen. This didn't set well with Reagan's window.

Reagan, today, still believes nuclear power generation is more important than the public's safety, oil profits are more important than the hardships forced upon American workers who have to drive to work and free enterprise is more important than a ripped-off consumer who has nowhere to turn but the government.

Reagan isn't against everyone - he respects the big businessman. If you are just another plain person, like me, you will understand why I say Reagan is no friend of the people.

Thanks, UC Programs for enlightenment

We were walking across the Tech lawn along University Avenue (which has a lawn that may be doomed thanks to impatient Lubbock drivers and politicians) on our way to the Chicago Symphony String Quartet when a young man came up and walked along with us. He looked stiff in an oversized blue suit, and while pulling at a large green and blue satin tie, he said that he really didn't like wearing ties.

"Well, why are you wearing one, then?" I asked.

"Because my mother would want me to wear one."

I asked if his mother were here and he said that she lives in Dallas, but that he tries "to do things she would like me to do."

I said, "That's fine, but I'm sure your mother wouldn't want you to be uncomfortable."

"Yes and no, there are just some things you have to do in life to honor your father and mother," he said.

"Like wearing a tie," I said, and he nodded. I said, "Why don't you loosen up a bit. How can you enjoy a concert if you can't breathe?"

He said something about pride and honor, politely opened the door for us and walked off. I wonder if those parents of the freshmen who have been labeled "functionally illiterate" by SAT scores taught the kids to wear ties, but forgot to teach them how to read, much less how to reason.

Then I got to thinking about suits. Who invented them, anyway? Were suits invented as a form of bondage or penitence, for it must take a great personal sacrifice to wear a suit all day. Of course, the same can be said of high heels and girdles, "but that's another story," to use one of Kipling's favorite lines.

I can't understand how a person could be comfortable in a suit unless he or she had been conditioned to enjoy that tightness around the elbows, having to pull the trouser legs up before sitting down to avoid groin pain, or having to worry about matching socks and what colors go with what-green goes with black but not with blue; brown goes with brown or beige; black never goes with brown, etc. I'd rather have a noose around my neck than a tie, almost.

I suppose I get my opinions from my childhood, during which I thought that the only men who wore suits were preachers or men lying in a coffin, and they really looked stiff (pun intended). My dad, a farmer, has worn the same suit to weddings and funerals for the last 20 years. When asked why he doesn't buy a new one, he says, "Why? This suit is practically new; only been worn six times."

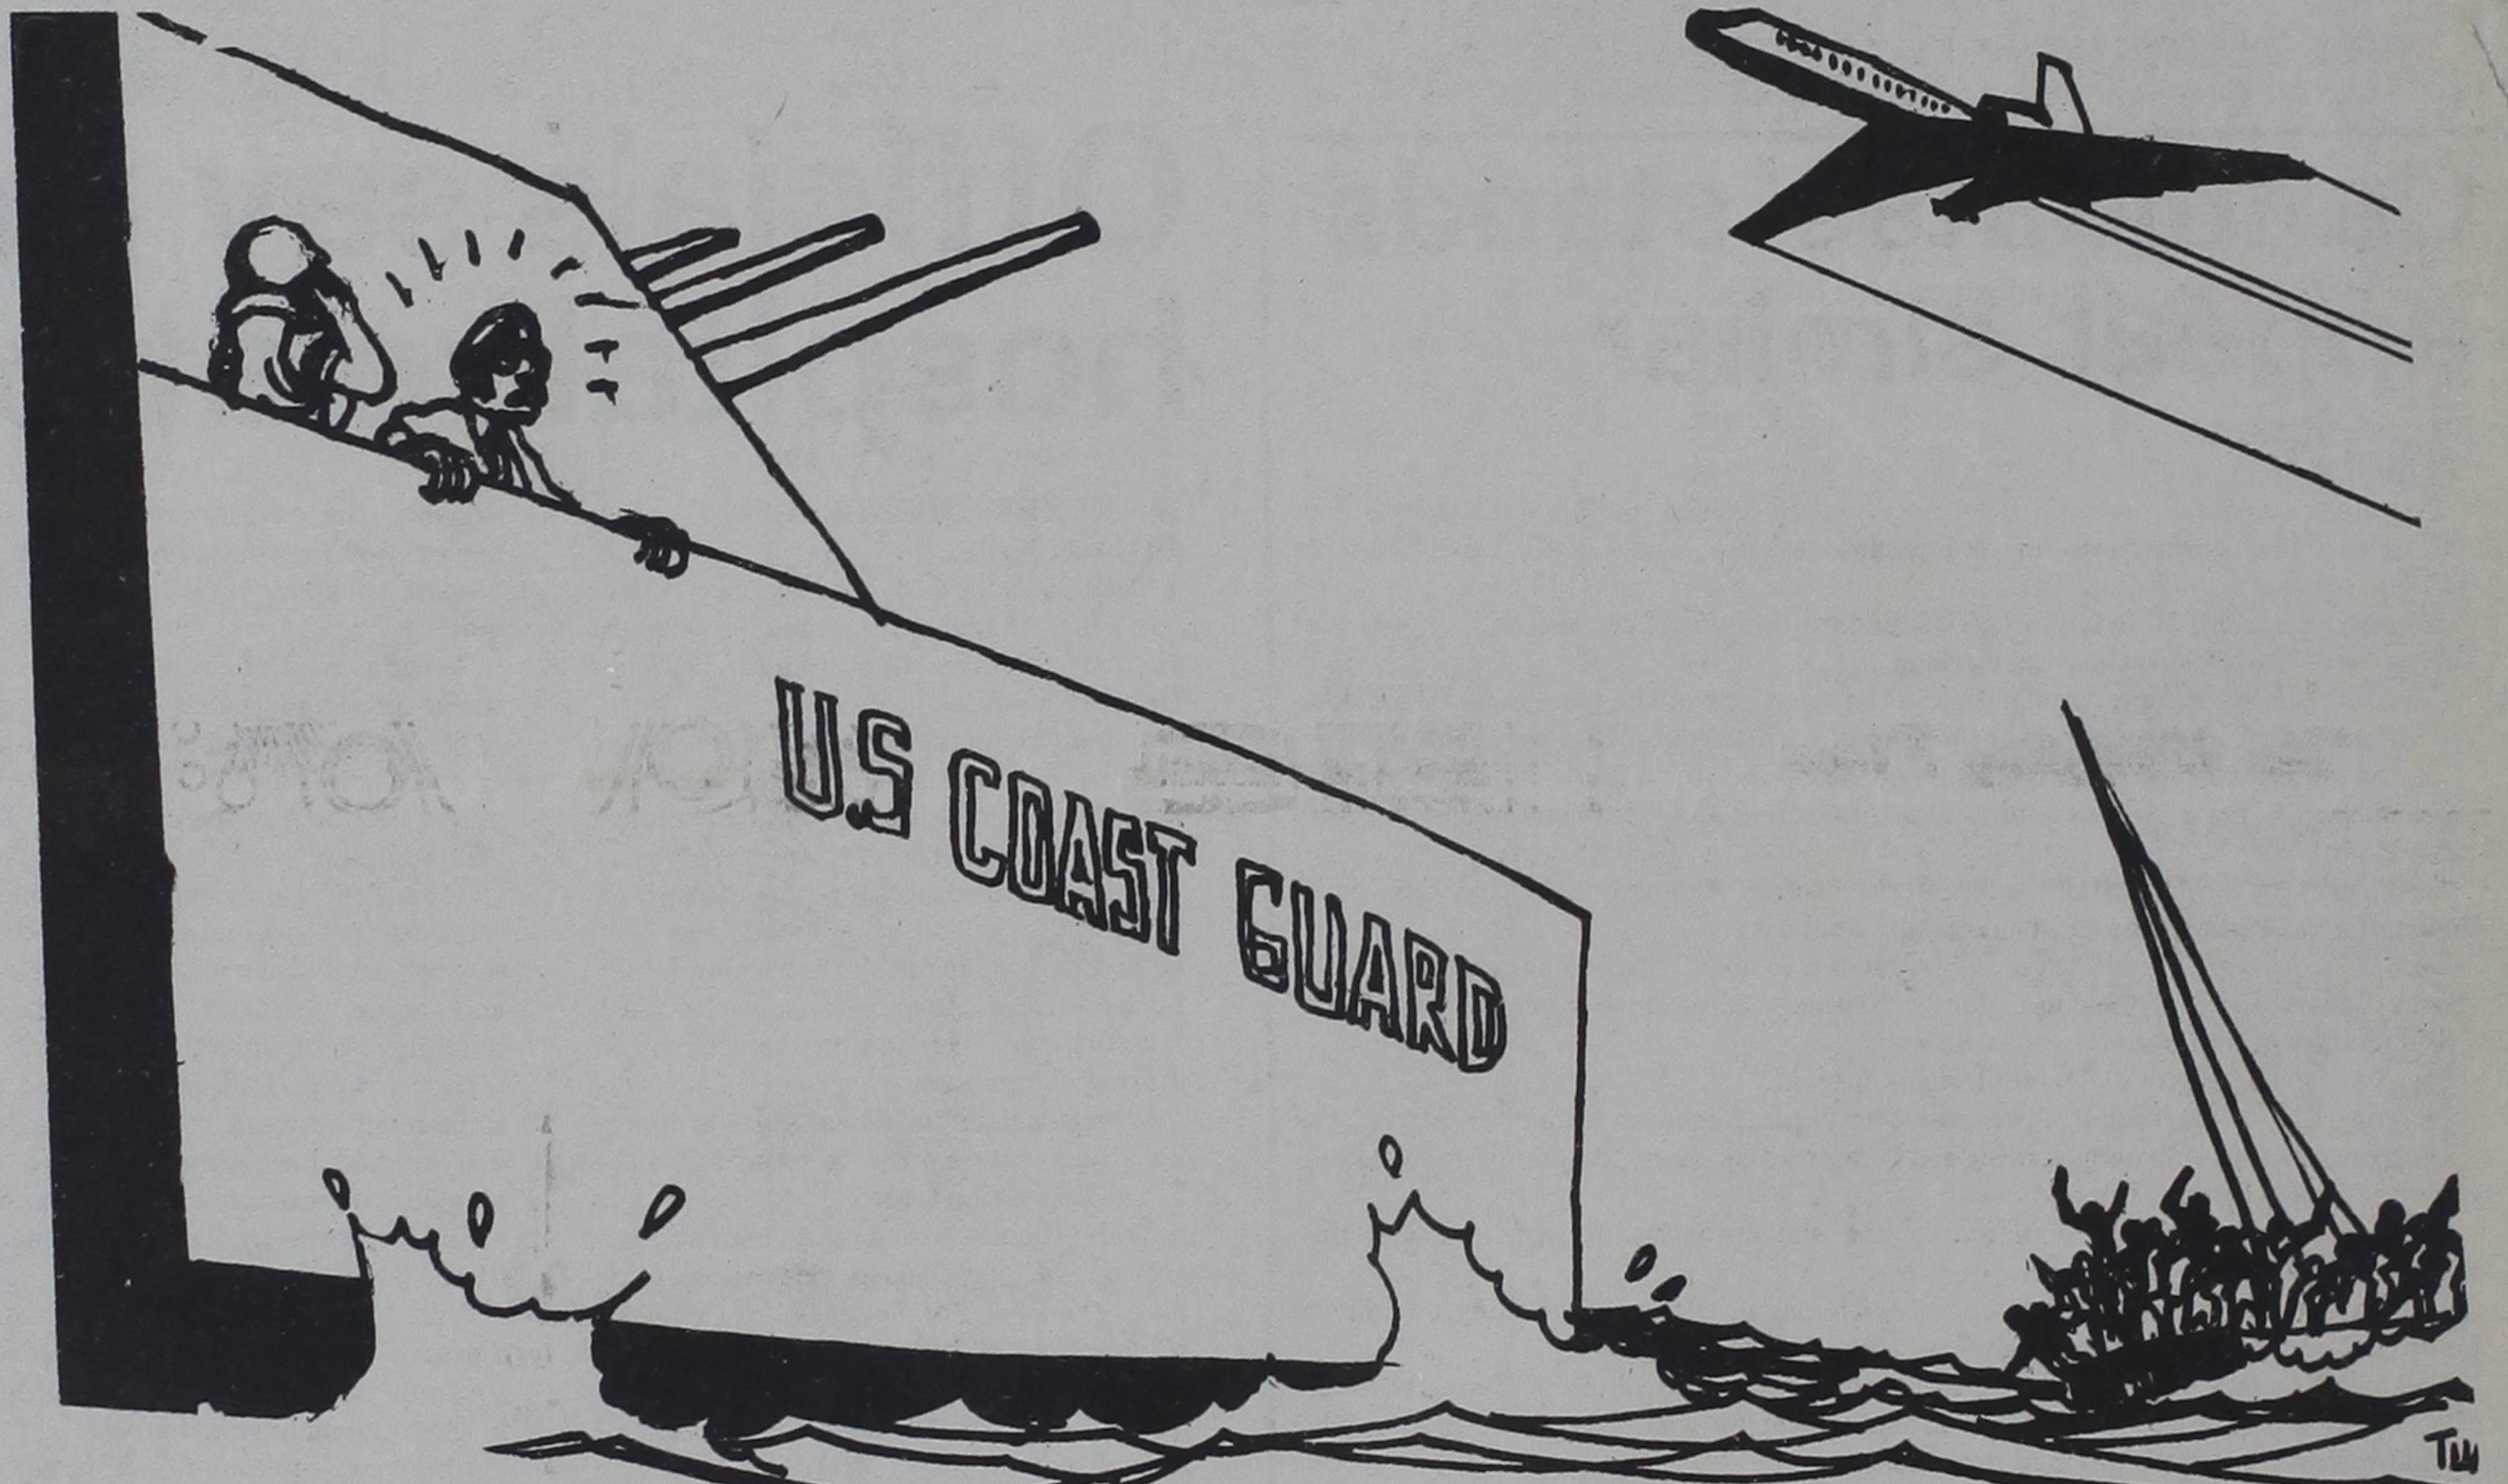

There were many suits and little fur caps at the concert, but, most importantly, there was music.

Robert Henri, a great 20th Century American painter, once wrote of brush strokes the following lines that may be applied to many kinds of strokes in art, including the musical stroke of a bow upon a string instrument.

There are the attenuated strokes
There are rich, fluent, abundant strokes
Strokes which mount, carry up, rise
Strokes which are placid
Strokes which carry the observer with exact degrees of speed
Strokes which end too soon.
(Oh, the power of ambiguity)
from The Art Spirit by Robert Henri

One last thing. As my friend and I were leaving the U.C. after the members of The Chicago Symphony String Quartet took two well-deserved bows, we overheard a tall, handsome gentleman, dressed in a Western-cut shirt with a pull-string tie, say to his wife, "Well, they ain't Rickey Skaggs, but they're pretty good, for classical musicians." I wonder if the Chicago Symphony does renditions of "You Gotta Marry an Ugly Girl."

Thanks U.C. Programs for an enlightening evening.

Captain, which one would you like for me to stop... the Cuban boat people or the hijackers!

The Anthony Lewis editorial on the John Anderson candidacy in the Sept. 4 The University Daily was most disturbing. The flawed and convoluted logic has more than a ring of cynicism about it - accepting the inevitable and letting the country go to hell seems to be his attitude and recommendation.

The political process is not working well. President Jimmy Carter has neither the respect nor the power to effectively guide the ship of state. As for the chance that Ronald Reagan, the geriatric candidate, reaches the White House - that is a horrid nightmare beyond description or visualization.

Mr. Lewis may really believe that John Anderson's candidacy will result in political fragmentation. However, it is illogical to advise against Anderson's efforts on the grounds that he might deprive the candidate elected from either of the two major parties of a solid mandate.

Polls have shown Anderson garnering 15 to 20 percent in a three-way race. That an almost totally obscure Illinois congressman could cut a wide swath into the public consciousness lends a great deal of credibility to his campaign. After all, he is running against a sitting president and a former California governor who has been running for president since 1968.

Many people have not yet had the opportunity to become acquainted with Anderson's ideas. Further exposure will no doubt, boost his percentages.

Many people believe that an independent candidate could never receive support for his program. John Anderson has been in the House for more than 20 years and has a good sense of rapport with congress. Even Anderson's staunchest critics concede that he possessed a keen mind and dazzling oratorical skills. I cannot recall anyone attributing either of these skills to Reagan or Carter, though perhaps Reagan's creeping senility could serve as a fair excuse for his notable lapses of memory.

Great men have a habit of rising to the forefront at moments crucial to our nation's continued growth and health. Such a man is needed now.

Anderson has the vision and foresight to tackle the burden some problems with which we are now faced, without resorting to wild promises or miracle panacea. Anderson will help focus the campaign on issues of substance rather than style. He'll remind Carter of his obligations to traditional elements of the Democratic party. These two factors alone make an Anderson candidacy worthwhile.

It is rather obvious that Anthony Lewis basks in the luxury of fair weather liberalism and is not prepared to travel the rough and rocky road that liberal principles now demand of their adherents.

John Anderson true presidential candidate

Anderson topic of Forum debates

By DOUG SIMPSON
UD Staff Writer

People who believe they would be "throwing their vote away" by voting for John Anderson are keeping the Independent Party candidate from being the frontrunner in the presidential election race, Tech Law School Professor Gary Ahrens said.

Ahrens spoke out in favor of Anderson at Tuesday's University Forum in the University Center Ballroom. The debate on "Who Should Be the Next President of the U.S.?" kicked off this year's University Forum program.

"Why vote for Anderson? He can't win. Too many voters have this attitude," Ahrens said. "This is the only thing keeping Anderson from being the leading candidate in this year's election."

Ruth Schiermeyer, Lubbock County Republican Party chairwoman, spoke in support of Ronald Reagan. She said the programs the Republican presidential nominee has proposed could be the solution to America's economic problems.

"Republicans have proposed a three-year tax-cut program," Schiermeyer said. "There would be an immediate 10 percent tax cut. This would stimulate the economy and solve our unemployment problem. We can't solve the job problem through the public job program. We must solve it through the private sector."

County Democratic Party Chairman Madison Sowder, speaking in favor of President Carter, said Carter should not be blamed for America's economic problems.

"The economy is a problem but the president cannot always deal with these problems himself," Sowder said. "Hard problems do not have simple solutions. You have to take a hard-nosed look at things. That's what Carter has done."

Ahrens said Americans ought to return some politics to politicians.

"Anderson is the only real politician running," Ahrens said. "Carter is asking us to buy the same promises he proposed in 1976. Reagan's attitude is that we can go back to the 1950's style of living. Only Anderson has experience in the real business of government. He is all the things we've been asked to believe about other candidates."

Schiermeyer said inflation cannot be solved unless government spending is reduced.

"Inflation is caused by overindulgence and overspending by the government," Schiermeyer said. "Raising taxes is not the answer. Republicans can reduce inflation and government spending. Energy also is an economic problem. Carter's solutions aren't the only solutions."

"The employment situation is better than when Gerald Ford was in office," Sowder said. "We have seen civil service reforms, airline deregulation and many other improvements."

Following the speeches by Ahrens, Schiermeyer and Sowder, the floor was opened to the audience. About 40 people attended the forum, and a number of Tech students spoke out in favor of their candidates.

"Reagan talks of increasing production to solve inflation. At the same time, he talks of increasing interest rates. He's contradicting himself," said Tim Walker, junior political science major from Lubbock.

"We have seen tangible evidence that Carter's energy plan is working," Walker said. "We have no proof that any of Reagan's ideas would work."

"Reagan is trying to feed us a free lunch," said Tech student Dennis Garza, Anderson supporter and co-chairman of the University Forum program. "Reagan's tax cut would create more inflation. He's a destructive maniac and should not be running for president."

"Republicans can work with Americans to solve inflation by cutting taxes," said Ron Miller, political science major from Lake Charles, La. "A tax cut would put more money into businesses and result in higher productivity. Unemployment would go down."

University Forum is sponsored by the department of speech communications and UC Programs. John Deedhardt, professor of speech communications, is co-chairman of the program along with Garza.

IFC admits Kappa Alpha Psi as Tech member

By PETE McNABB
UD Staff Writer

Kappa Alpha Psi became the first black fraternity to be admitted to an interfraternity council on a Texas campus last spring.

But the IFC that admitted the black fraternity was not at the University of Houston or the University of Texas.

The IFC was at a medium-sized, conservative, WASPdominated school in West Texas called Texas Tech.

The black fraternity has been at Tech since October 1978, but its leaders did not make a bid for IFC membership until last spring.

When Kappa Alpha Psi made its bid, it was voted in unanimously by the 14 other IFC fraternities, IFC President Taylor Clark said.

"I was in charge of expansion last year and there was no opposition at all to Kappa Alpha Psi's being admitted," Clark said.

Even the Kappa Alpha Order, a fraternity noted for its ties to confederate tradition, voted for the black fraternity to be admitted in what Kappa Alpha President Jeff Barker said is a move to "shake" the fraternity's racial image.

Another national fraternity tried to join Tech's IFC last spring also, but was not accepted. Clark cited a presentation the black fraternity made to the IFC as the reason for the fraternity's unanimous acceptance.

"Kappa Alpha Psi's presentation just really impressed us," Clark said.

Kappa Alpha Psi President Micheal Gray said his fraternity told the IFC it wanted to join IFC so it could better serve the student body. The members also wanted to work with and compete against other IFC fraternities in all areas.

Clark and Gray said this year would be a transitional year for Kappa Alpha Psi as it joins IFC.

"The IFC is new to them and this year is going to be a kind of them getting used to us," Clark said.

Gray said Kappa Alpha Psi will try to build membership this year, but he is not expecting a large number of rushees because many people do not know the black fraternity exists.

Kappa Alpha Psi has worked with IFC before in its two years at Tech. The fraternity worked and competed in the IFC basketball tournament last year and it has competed athletically in other areas also.

Since being admitted to the IFC, Kappa Alpha Psi has successfully competed against other fraternities in another area - scholarship. The black fraternity's 21 members last year combined for the highest IFC fraternity grade point average - 2.77 - and were awarded the Scholarship Award.

"Our earning the Scholarship Award should relieve any doubts that we can compete in areas other than intramurals," said Gray, a senior engineering technology major.

Gray said his fraternity will do volunteer work at the Buckner Baptist Children's Home, open a voter registration booth and host an all-university racquetball tournament.

Socially, Kappa Alpha Psi has not made any definite plans for mixers with sororities. There are two black sororities on campus, but neither is associated with Tech's association of sororities, Panhellenic.

Gray said Kappa Alpha Psi would not object to attending mixers with white sororities, but the fraternity has not been invited to any mixers yet.

"If a white sorority asked us to a mixer, we'd probably attend," Gray said. "I don't see that as a problem."

FRYE
Frye boots have been bench-crafted since 1863, which makes them America's oldest boots. Yet Frye's Classic, Western, and Casual styles look anything but old. In fact, boots like this are the very latest look in fashion. Probably because Frye boots wear their heritage so well.

Change artist magical

The performance of quick-change artist Michael McGivney has been described as theatrical, magical and traditional.

The theatrical McGivney is an actor playing a variety of characters within sketches and monologues. The magical McGivney creates illusions by disappearing and re-appearing in totally different costumes and make-up. The traditional McGivney is the son of Owen McGivney, vaudeville headliner of almost 75 years ago. McGivney uses his quick-change skills in a tribute to the movies, including Superman and Dr. Jekyll and Mr. Hyde, and in a presentation of Lon Chaney's monsters. The performance also includes an introduction to characters of the frontier days in an original sketch called "The Shoot-Out at Belle's Saloon," which features McGivney in a gun fight with himself. The LA Times said, "McGivney literally meets himself coming and going every time he works." McGivney's one-man show will be at 8:15 p.m. Thursday in the UC Theatre. Tickets are $2.50 for students with Tech ID, $3.50 for faculty and staff and $5 for others. For more information call 742-3610.

Short shorts

The rating system for Lifestyles' Short Shorts is the same as Tech's GPA grading system with 4.0 being excellent and 0.0 deserving no credit whatsoever. The movies are rated by members of the UD staff. Initials of the reviewer appear following the short. MCM.W. Clark; JH: John Hardwick; LM/Laurie Massingill.

AIRPLANE (UA Cinema 4) is like MAD magazine come to life. It is silly, ridiculous, slapstick and chock full of sight gags, and it still comes off entertaining. "Otto" deserves an Oscar in his movie debut. Lifestyles GPA: 3.6 MC CHECH AND CHONG'S NEXT MOVIE (UA Cinema 4) "Same song, second verse, only worse, man" as the saying goes. A lot of the same head jokes, sight gags and sexual conversations, man. Pointless but has some amusing moments if you enjoy this sort of humor, man. Lifestyles GPA: 1.5, man LM

DRESSED TO KILL (Mann 4) Brian DePalma's newest release stars Angie Dickinson and Michael Caine. Several surprises, including Dickinson's steamy shower scene, highlight this suspense film. Michael Caine offers a strong performance as a psychiatrist and DePalma's wife Nancy Allen is better as a call girl. The plot is not quite surprising and goes downhill after the scary beginning. Lifestyles GPA: 2.9 JH HONEYSUCKLE ROSE (Mann 4) To hell with Urban Cowboy. This is the real thing. The soundtrack from Honeysuckle Rose, Willie Nelson's first featured movie, is what Texas music is all about. Nelson makes an impressive starring debut. Honeysuckle Rose has just enough concert footage to let you know this is Nelson's film, but not so much you feel like you are watching a country version of The Last Waltz. Lifestyles GPA: 3.5 LM MIDDLE AGE CRAZY (Winchester) Bruce Dern experiences the dilemma of turning 40 in this off-beat middle-age comedy. Remember 10? Dern feels the same tugs of responsibility and seeks an affair with a lovely Dallas Cowboy Cheerleader. Overall, the movie lacks pizzazz but the day-dream/fantasy sequences are hilarious. Ann-Margaret has a good role as Dern's "loving" wife. Set in Dallas and Houston. Lifestyles GPA: 3.0 MC

MY BODYGUARD (Cinema West) Refreshing. One of the first words to come to mind in describing My Bodyguard. The film isn't violent, contrived, corny or trendy - a definite change from the latest Hollywood fare. All in all, the happiest film of the year. Lifestyles GPA: 3.8 LM

TWINKLE TWINKLE "KILLER" KANE (UA Cinema 4) William Peter Blatty, of THE EXORCIST fame, brings us a new movie that deals with religion in a different way. The movie is a search for God by crazy Vietnam dropouts. Stacy Keach walks through his role as the psycho psychiatrist like a zombie, and it is never apparent what he or any of the other resident loonies in a government-controlled asylum are up to. Blatty's script is ridiculous, contrived, obscure and sometimes interesting. Lifestyles GPA: 1.9 JH
BLUE LAGOON (Showplace 6) Disappointingly, this film falls short of its goal - to show the innocence of two shipwrecked children growing to maturation together. The plot just doesn't gel. The innocence comes off as ignorance. Despite some loose ends and forced dialogue, newcomer

Lloyd Bridges stars as Chief Dispatcher in the comedy spoof "Airplane!," which receives a 3.6 rating in this week's Short Shorts.

Cougar's Yeoman upset by season-opener loss

HOUSTON (AP) - After losing five of seven fumbles in a season-opening loss to Arizona State, University of Houston Coach Bill Yeoman said Tuesday he's planning something innovative in the Cougar offense for Saturday's home opener against Miami.

"The outside was open to us, we just couldn't get it there. But we're going to get it. We just have to go to work."

"We just didn't have the right rhythm to the offense," Yeoman said. "We were in the key of G and we should have been in C. There is a certain flow that makes the offense go smoothly and we just didn't have it."

Yeoman praised the Cougars' offensive line, which included a revamped right side.

"We've decided to install the handoff this week and hope we can get it ready," Yeoman said. "We were all sitting around trying to decide what to put in for Miami and we think that will help us the most."

The Cougars lost nine turnovers to the aroused Sun Devils, including five fumbles and four pass interceptions. Arizona State turned Houston's mistakes into 19 points.

Despite the disappointing opener, Yeoman said he thinks the Cougars' offensive problems can be solved.

"All we need to do is execute," Yeoman said.

"The offensive line blocked better than we've ever had in an opening game," Yeoman said. "But our backfield didn't function like it can. If we had been able to punt we'd have been in good shape."

But nine turnovers hampered Houston's punting and first game jitters affected quarterback Terry Elston.

Jeffrey

Jeffrey's wait pays off at last

By The Associated Press

The long wait became worthwhile for Jay Jeffrey in the second quarter of Saturday night's football game against pumped up Lamar University. Jeffrey, who had become disenchanted at Missouri as the second-string quarterback behind Phil Bradley, sat out the 1979 season as the rules require after he transferred to Baylor.

Starting his first game for Coach Grant Teaff's Bears, Jeffrey was battling a hard case of the butterflies as well as a swarming Cardinal team playing before a hometown crowd.

Then he took all the heart out of the Cardinals on a simple option play.

Jeffrey slid down the line, broke a tackle, cut back, shook another tackler then raced down the sideline behind a covey of blockers. Eighty-three yards later Jeffrey had scored on the longest run from scrimmage in the school's history.

The run, a touchdown pass, and quality leadership earned Jeffrey The Associated Press Southwest Conference Offensive Player of the Week award.

"My brother (Neal) was in the stands and, boy, did he get excited," said Jay.

Neal Jeffrey owns the career passing records at Baylor when he played from 1972 to 1974.

"Neal had some great games but he never had anything like that happen to him" said Jay, speaking of his cross-country run.

Jay Jeffrey, now nicknamed "Legs" by his teammates, was part of a Baylor offense that gained a school-record: 656 yards total offense against the Cardinals.

Netters victorious

The Tech women netters opened the 1980-81 season Tuesday with a dual match with South Plains Junior College on the Tech campus.

Tech won five of the seven matches played to record its first team victory of the early season.

Coach Harold Bowes' women captured singles wins in the second, third, fourth and fifth seeds while top seed Peggy O'Neil was defeated by South Plains number one player Karen Bryd by the score of 6-4 and 6-3. Number two seed Jill Crutchfield of Tech fared a little better defeating her opponent, Suzanne Mills, by scores of 6-1 and 6-0.

In doubles action the Raiders lost only once with that being with the number one doubles team of Crutchfield-Lawson.

The women netter's next match will be at 2:30 p.m. Thursday against Midland College at home.

Hart ready for Wright assault

By JON MARK BEILUE
UD Sports Editor
Last year Jim Hart had little concern over what New Mexico quarterback Brad Wright did with the football. Sure, it would be nice if the Raider defense held the pass-happy Wright in check, but Hart was Tech's backup quarterback and his attention was riveted with the offense.

However, Hart has since moved to defensive cornerback for the Raiders, and Saturday he will be acutely aware of every move Wright makes.

"We haven't played any quarterback like the caliber of Wright," Hart said. "Our entire defense will have to play a near perfect game to stop him."

The Tech defense did just that a year ago. The Raiders limited Wright to 96 yards passing and 200 yards total offense. This was quite a contrast compared to 1978 when Wright burned the Tech defense for 452 yards through the air, a New Mexico record.

But Hart was not a part of the stingy Tech defense of last year and he knows he is in for an eventful evening.

"This will be my first big test in defending the pass," he said. "I thought UTEP would throw the ball more in my direction but they didn't."

"New Mexico runs a variety of offensive patterns and they try to mentally confuse a defense by sending out a number of receivers. Their offense is very wide-open. What we have to work on is adjusting our defense to their offense."

Which is exactly what the Raiders did Tuesday. Tech spent much time defending the Lobo passing game.

"We had a good practice," said Tech coach Rex Dockery. "Wright is an excellent player. He had a great game against us two years ago. Last year, though, our defense got after them early and shut them down.

"He had two fine receivers to throw to in Ricky Martin and William Owens. The ball will be thrown everywhere. It will be a great test for our secondary."

ENDING NOTE: Tech defensive tackle Jim Verden will miss the upcoming game with New Mexico. He injured his arch against North Carolina and Dockery said he should be ready for Baylor.

Sailing clinic begins Sept. 18

Students and faculty interested in learning the fine points of sailing will have the chance this week. The Tech Sailing Club, in cooperation with the Aquatic center, will present a free sailing clinic beginning Sept. 18.

Dave Palmgren, president of the sailing club, will be one of the instructors of the clinic. Palmgren has three years of teaching experience in sailing.

The course will offer the basic techniques of sailing, including rigging, boat control, capsizing and tying knots.

Registration is limited to 20 persons. Sailboats will be furnished.

Classes will begin at 8 p.m. Sept. 18. The hour-long classes will meet twice after the initial meeting, with one class being on Sept. 25 and the other Oct. 2. These two meetings will commence at 8:30 p.m.

For more information, call 742-3351.

Techsans get off to running start

Running seems to be the most simple form of exercise, but after getting involved in running, many find that there is a lot more to the exercise than what they may have expected.

To guide beginning and experienced runners alike, Rec Sports will offer a jogging clinic beginning at 7 p.m. Thursday in Room 201 of the Rec Center.

The clinic instructors include Michael Bobo, professor of Health, Physical Education and Recreation, Dr. Bud Yost, medical school orthopedic surgeon, Jackie Lambert, instructor of HPER and Jim McWhorter, owner of The Swift Foot.

Clinic topics will cover beginning jogging and physiological benefits, warm-up and stretching, nutrition and proper health foods, where to run on campus, running injuries and the proper running apparel.

For more information, call 742-3351.

Handball Association meeting tonight

Tech's handball team will meet at 9 p.m. today in Room 208 of the University Center.

Men and women interested in joining the handball team are encouraged to attend.

Bill Arencibia, captain of the handball team, said to join the team, new members should have some experience or at least be taking a beginning handball course.

The hour-long meeting will focus on workout sessions, tournaments and memberships.

Arencibia said that this year's team will have 12 returning members.

He said that there are not many college level tournaments around, for handball is not as popular as it used to be.

"We do travel to open division tournaments," Arencibia said.
