

Senate seat Texans hope to fill spot

AUSTIN (AP) — Speculation about Sen. John Tower, R-Texas, being named secretary of defense ignited hopes of some Texas Democrats they might regain the Senate seat lost 16 years ago.

However, most Democratic leaders, and some Republicans, said they wouldn't believe it until it happened.

"It would be a glorious opportunity for Democrats, if it is true," said former Sen. Ralph Yarborough, Democrat, who lost to Sen. Lloyd Bentsen, D-Texas, in 1971.

"I just don't see how it could happen," said a prominent Republican campaigner who did not want to be quoted, "but it will be a hell of a race if it does happen."

The Texas speculation started after published reports that President-elect Ronald Reagan might select Tower to be secretary of defense and Texas Gov. Bill Clements might name former Gov. John B. Connally to replace Tower until a special election could be held.

"That's the nuttiest thing I've ever heard," Clements said of the report.

"I have not been offered the job of secretary of defense," said Tower. "I understand that several names are going to be presented to President-elect Reagan."

Some close Tower associates in Texas predicted he would take the cabinet job if offered.

The most likely Democrats to oppose Connally, if he is appointed, would be Robert Krueger, ambassador-at-large to Mexico who lost a hot race to Tower in 1978, former Attorney General John Hill, who lost to Clements in 1978, and National Democratic Chairman John White, who is considering a race against Clements in 1982.

Under state law, Clements would name a temporary successor to Tower if Congress is in session to be sure Texas is represented. He must call a special election within five days after a vacancy occurs for the next 60 to 90 days to fill the remaining four years of Tower's term.

After Lyndon B. Johnson was elected vice president in 1960, he resigned as a Texas senator and Tower won a "high man" special election in 1961. Later, the Texas Legislature changed state law to require that U.S. Senate races must be won by a majority vote, with a runoff if necessary.

Tower won the 1961 special election and was re-elected in 1962 with considerable help from liberal Democrats unhappy with the conservative faction of the party, particularly Connally. He was re-elected in 1972, defeating Barefoot Sanders, Dallas, now a federal judge. Connally was head of Texas Democrats for Nixon that year but did not support Tower.

Bingo amendment

Only non-profit groups may sponsor games

By PETE McNABB
UD Staff Writer

Lubbock voters favored a proposition to allow non-profit organizations to legally play bingo for money by a 3 to 2 margin Nov. 4. But many groups that the amendment was designed for have no plans to push for a local election to legalize such games.

The amendment, Proposition No. 4, allows local municipalities to hold elections authorizing bingo games.

However, the bingo games must be sponsored by non-profit organizations, such as churches or fraternal organizations. Also, proceeds from the games must be spent in Texas for charitable purposes.

But, before any legal bingo games can be played with money, a barrage of legislation has to be approved by state and local officials.

The first step in the litigation process is for the state legislature to approve bills to establish the avenues cities and counties can take to approve bingo games in their areas, said Mary Hardesty of the Texas Attorney General's office in Austin. A similar bill was introduced in the 66th legislative session in 1979. While that amendment was approved in the Senate, it died in the House, Hardesty said.

A spokesman in the legislative library in Austin said the bill will probably be brought up again when the legislature convenes in January. However, it is not clear who will bring up a similar bill. Sen.

Babe Schwartz (D-Galveston) introduced the bill in 1979, but he lost his re-election bid two weeks ago.

The 1979 bill, if passed, would have required local elections to be held to allow for bingo games.

Lubbock County Clerk Frank Guess said there is a remote chance that individual precincts could hold elections on the issue, but he said it would be unlikely. If individual precincts could hold such elections, the two Tech campus precincts could hold their own bingo elections.

Residence Halls Association Treasurer Steve McKee said the RHA would study this possibility and see if Tech could have its own election.

"This could change a lot of things,"

McKee said. "It would really help out Casino Night a lot."

The RHA-sponsored Casino Night presently does not allow for students to win any monetary prizes.

Sixty-three percent of the voters in Lubbock County voted for the amendment. But getting the signatures required to call for a special election may not be very easy, because only one group The University Daily contacted said it was interested in pushing for local ordinances to allow bingo.

American Legion posts around Lubbock appear to be the major groups that support bingo in Lubbock extensively, while the majority of the churches contacted were not necessarily in favor of pushing for local bingo ordinances.

Bingo Chairman L.R. Jolly, of George S. Berry Post No. 575 on the Brownfield Highway, said his post will push for a petition to hold a bingo election as soon as possible.

The bingo chairman for the biggest American Legion in the county said his post already has bingo games twice a week, "but we give all the money away," Jolly said local authorities "overlook" their bingo games, which are played at their lodge outside the city limits. Bingo pots as large as $1,500 are "given away" at each meeting to various charities.

While a petition for an election may be pushed for by the American Legion, the religious community is not necessarily in favor of bingo.

One minister at a large church said legalized bingo could bring in large amount of organized crime—a repercussion that many opponents of the bill voiced before the election.

Many church ministers said their congregations probably did not care whether there was bingo, because they did not have bingo games in the first place.

Ray Woodard, the university minister at First Baptist Church, said he could not recall a bingo game ever being played at First Baptist.

Richard Grubb, of the University Parish, said college students do not usually play bingo at the church. But he said he thought most students voted for the amendment.

Station hears complaints about absent professors

By DOUG SIMPSON
and JOEL BRANDENBERGER
UD Staff Writers

A radio "call in" survey conducted by a local radio station Tuesday has revealed that a number of Tech students are upset over the absence of their instructors from classes Monday.

Richard Griffing, news director of radio station KLLL, said he has received about 40 calls from students who said their professors missed classes Monday. He said the station compiled a list of the names of more than 15 instructors who did not show up.

"I've never seen anything like it," Griffing said. "I've never seen so many angry people."

"We are going to pursue this," he said. "We are going to call each individual teacher and ask where he was Monday morning. Many students went through all kinds of trouble to get to school. We want to see if this can be avoided in the future."

The majority of the professors students reported as being absent are in the Colleges of Arts and Sciences and Business Administration.

No accurate record on instructors' absences could be obtained from Tech.

Professors' absences are recorded only with the department chairmen, and no further action is taken unless a student wants to pursue the complaint.

One university spokesman said an accurate figure would eventually be obtained from the Office of Academic Affairs.

Interim Vice President for Academic Affairs Len Ainsworth and most of his office staff were in meetings Tuesday afternoon.

The university spokesman said many of the students might have been calling KLLL rather than make a formal complaint to their college deans.

Melissa Marshall, a Tech freshman who called KLLL, said her class was very upset about the absence of the instructor.

"Everyone was perturbed because we felt that if we had to get up and go through the snow, he should have done it, too," she said. "I live off campus, so it was an effort for me to get to class."

Information compiled by The UD from a spot check of students contradicts the station's information. Students interviewed outside the University Center Tuesday afternoon said none of their professors missed class Monday.

Diana Combs, senior advertising-photography major from Dallas, said she thinks classes should have been called off Monday.

"All of my professors made it to school," she said. "I live on campus, so it wouldn't have made me mad if they hadn't showed up. If school hadn't been held Monday, no one would have had to get mad."

"I pay for professors to teach my classes, so they should be there if I take the time to come," said Nancy Davis, senior education major from Wichita Falls.

"It would have made me mad if my professors didn't show up," said Tanya Copelin, junior housing interiors major from Lubbock. "I live off campus, and it was pretty rough getting to class."

One Tech professor said he had no difficulty in getting to school and that he knew of no professors who did not show up Monday.

"I had no trouble getting here and most of my students were in class, too," said Telecommunications Professor Mark Norman. "Every professor has the freedom to do what he wants. But if he can't make it to class, he should call in and explain why. He also owes it to the students to give them advance notice if he can."

Soviets considered superior

HOUSTON (AP) — Dr. Edward Teller says a military attack threatening the flow of Persian Gulf oil has been scheduled and could develop before Ronald Reagan becomes president in January.

"If the Soviets decide to do that, the possibility for the United States to resist does not exist," the noted nuclear physicist said.

"And to send our boys into the area already surrounded by the Soviets is certain death."

"An attack has already been set by our adversary," he said.

Teller, who contends the Soviet Union is superior to the United States in both military strength and technology, spoke Monday night before the South Texas Section of the American Association of Mechanical Engineers.

He said the invasion of Afghanistan by the Soviets was not for its scenery, horses, or women in that their moves so far in the Persian Gulf area have been calculated and the results will be radical changes.

"We are heading into truly enormous difficulties, and by 'we' I do not mean the United States but the entire free world," he said.

Americans, he said, should be conserving crude oil drastically by reducing driving and the use of air conditioning.

Preacher's case may affect churches

AUSTIN (AP) — Lester Roloff's lawyer, a veteran of battles with several states, said Tuesday the outcome of the preacher's struggle here could determine how much control the state will have over churches.

"Comprehensive, suffocating, minute surveillance is a very, very dangerous thing where First Amendment liberties

Roloff has refused to get the state license officials say he needs to run his homes for wayward youth. He testified the state should not license what the Lord called him to do. The courts previously ruled he needs the license.

However, he since has shifted the homes under Kiooff Evangelistic Enterprises to his People's Baptist Church of Corpus Christi. Separation of church and state prevents the state from requiring the license, he claimed.

Ball, defending Roloff, said Tuesday, "This is a very important case. However it goes."

Opinion

Reagan must find way to join Capitol Hill

James Reston

(c) New York Times Service

WASHINGTON - After the celebrations over Ronald Reagan's spectacular victory, come the hangovers. It would be pleasant to think that everybody would now close ranks and get on with the nation's business. But the sad thing about this election is that it has not clarified the nation's problems, but deepened them; not unified the people but divided them.

At the presidential level, it was too personal and negative. Despite the long months of fierce campaigning and Reagan's sweep of the major states all across the Union, it has not produced any general agreement, even within his own party, about the policies that should guide the American people through the first half of the 1980s.

Instead, it has left Gov. Reagan with no clear policy mandate, and President Carter, despite his overwhelming defeat, without much public regret. And it has also left our allies and adversaries with profound doubts about the future of Reagan's leadership.

There are some consolations despite these gloomy reflections. The campaign, with its preposterous assumption that somehow Carter or Reagan would personally determine the future of the Republic, is finally over.

So we will now have a one-term president, without fear that Reagan, at his age, will try for a second term. And this campaign has been such a disappointment, not only to the American people but to the leaders of both parties, that there is now a chance for a reappraisal of our political life, and particularly for reform of the election process.

When this campaign started - if you can remember that far back - there was considerable anxiety in both parties about the rise of special interest politics, and the loss of national purpose.

It was recognized that the decade of the '70s had been time of drastic change both at home and abroad. At home, all relationships were changing: between management and labor, between the races and regions of the nation; even in relations between men and women, parents and children.

Abroad, the economic competition among the industrial nations was changing, to the detriment of the United States, adding to the unemployment and inflation. And the military challenge of the Soviet Union and its threat to the essential oil supplies of the Middle East created a host of intricate problems within the free world.

It was hoped that maybe one of the justifications of a long presidential campaign was that it would make clear this revolution in the economic and military balance of power in the world, and help the parties and the people adjust to the dangers of economic anarchy and the threat of nuclear weapons. Despite Reagan's victory, the campaign did no such thing. In general it was fought out by slogans, personal attacks, and appeals to special interest groups of the right and left: to blacks, Hispanics, Jews, big unions' big business, etc. Roosevelt complained 50 years ago about the Forgotten Man. The problem now is the Forgotten Nation.

It will take some time even to think about all this. Reagan is undoubtedly exhausted and stunned by the struggle and magnitude of his victory and will need time to rest and reflect on the consequences of the vote, and the implications his promises.

Meanwhile, there is much unfinished business that must be faced before the inauguration of President Reagan on Jan. 20. The Congress will have to deal with the appropriations bills it avoided for political reasons before the election. Carter will now have to deal, as a defeated candidate, with the release of the hostages in Tehran, and how this can be done in the face of the Iraq-Iran war without damaging this nation's interests in the Arab world and with Israel.

One thing is fairly clear about all this and has been dramatized by Reagan's victory. None of these problems can be resolved in ideological, personal or partisan terms. Certainly not by the argument Reagan made in the campaign. Now that the election battle is over, the parties will have to unite to deal with the nation's problems.

Reagan himself put the issue quite starkly at the end of the campaign: He insisted that the nation was in more serious difficulties now, at home and abroad, than it was four years ago, and that the American people had lost confidence in the leadership of the nation.

What Reagan did not agree to however - and this is the critical difference - is that the problems of this revolution in the lives of nations, political parties and alliances could not really be resolved by the victory of one man or one party alone.

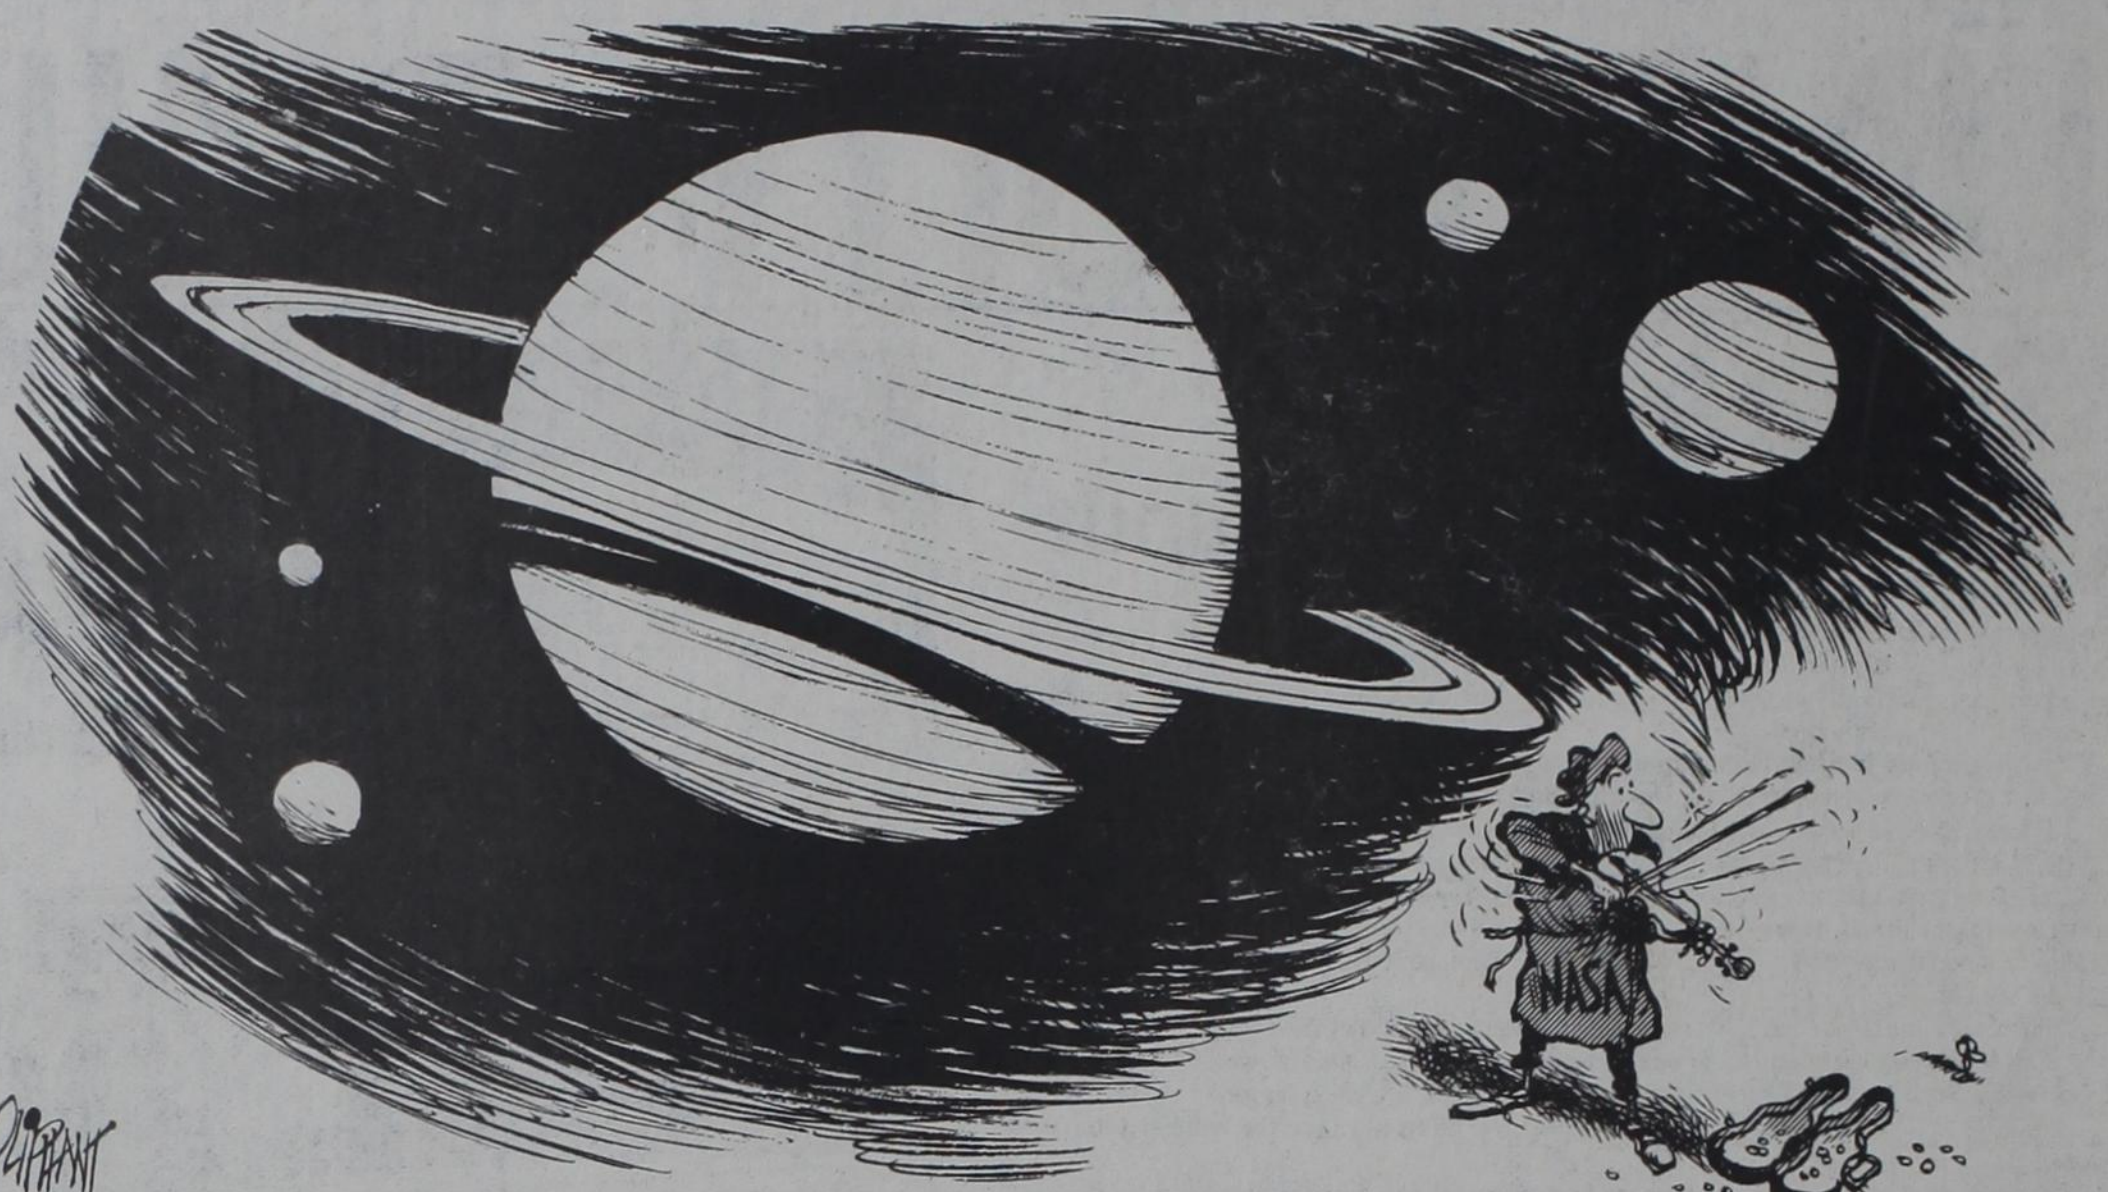

It is clear that the problems now facing Reagan require a philosophy of cooperation rather than confrontation between the contending forces at home and abroad, and a change in the attitudes of the people toward the irresistible changes brought about by science, machinery, and the turbulent shifts of population in the industrial world and the rise of power in the oil-producing nations.

Fortunately, Reagan's victory has at least produced a pause for reappraisal of all these relationships: where we are and where we're going and who's going with us.

It will be surprising if Reagan and his supporters, after their celebrations, will try to insist on the policies they pronounced during the campaign or assume that they can govern without the help of the people they defeated.

Obviously there has been a conservative sweep of opinion in the nation - not only against Carter but in the Congress with the defeat of such liberals as George McGovern of South Dakota and Birch Bayh of Indiana, but it does not follow from this that a Reagan administration can impose a dramatic conservative set of policies on a Congress still dominated by the Democrats.

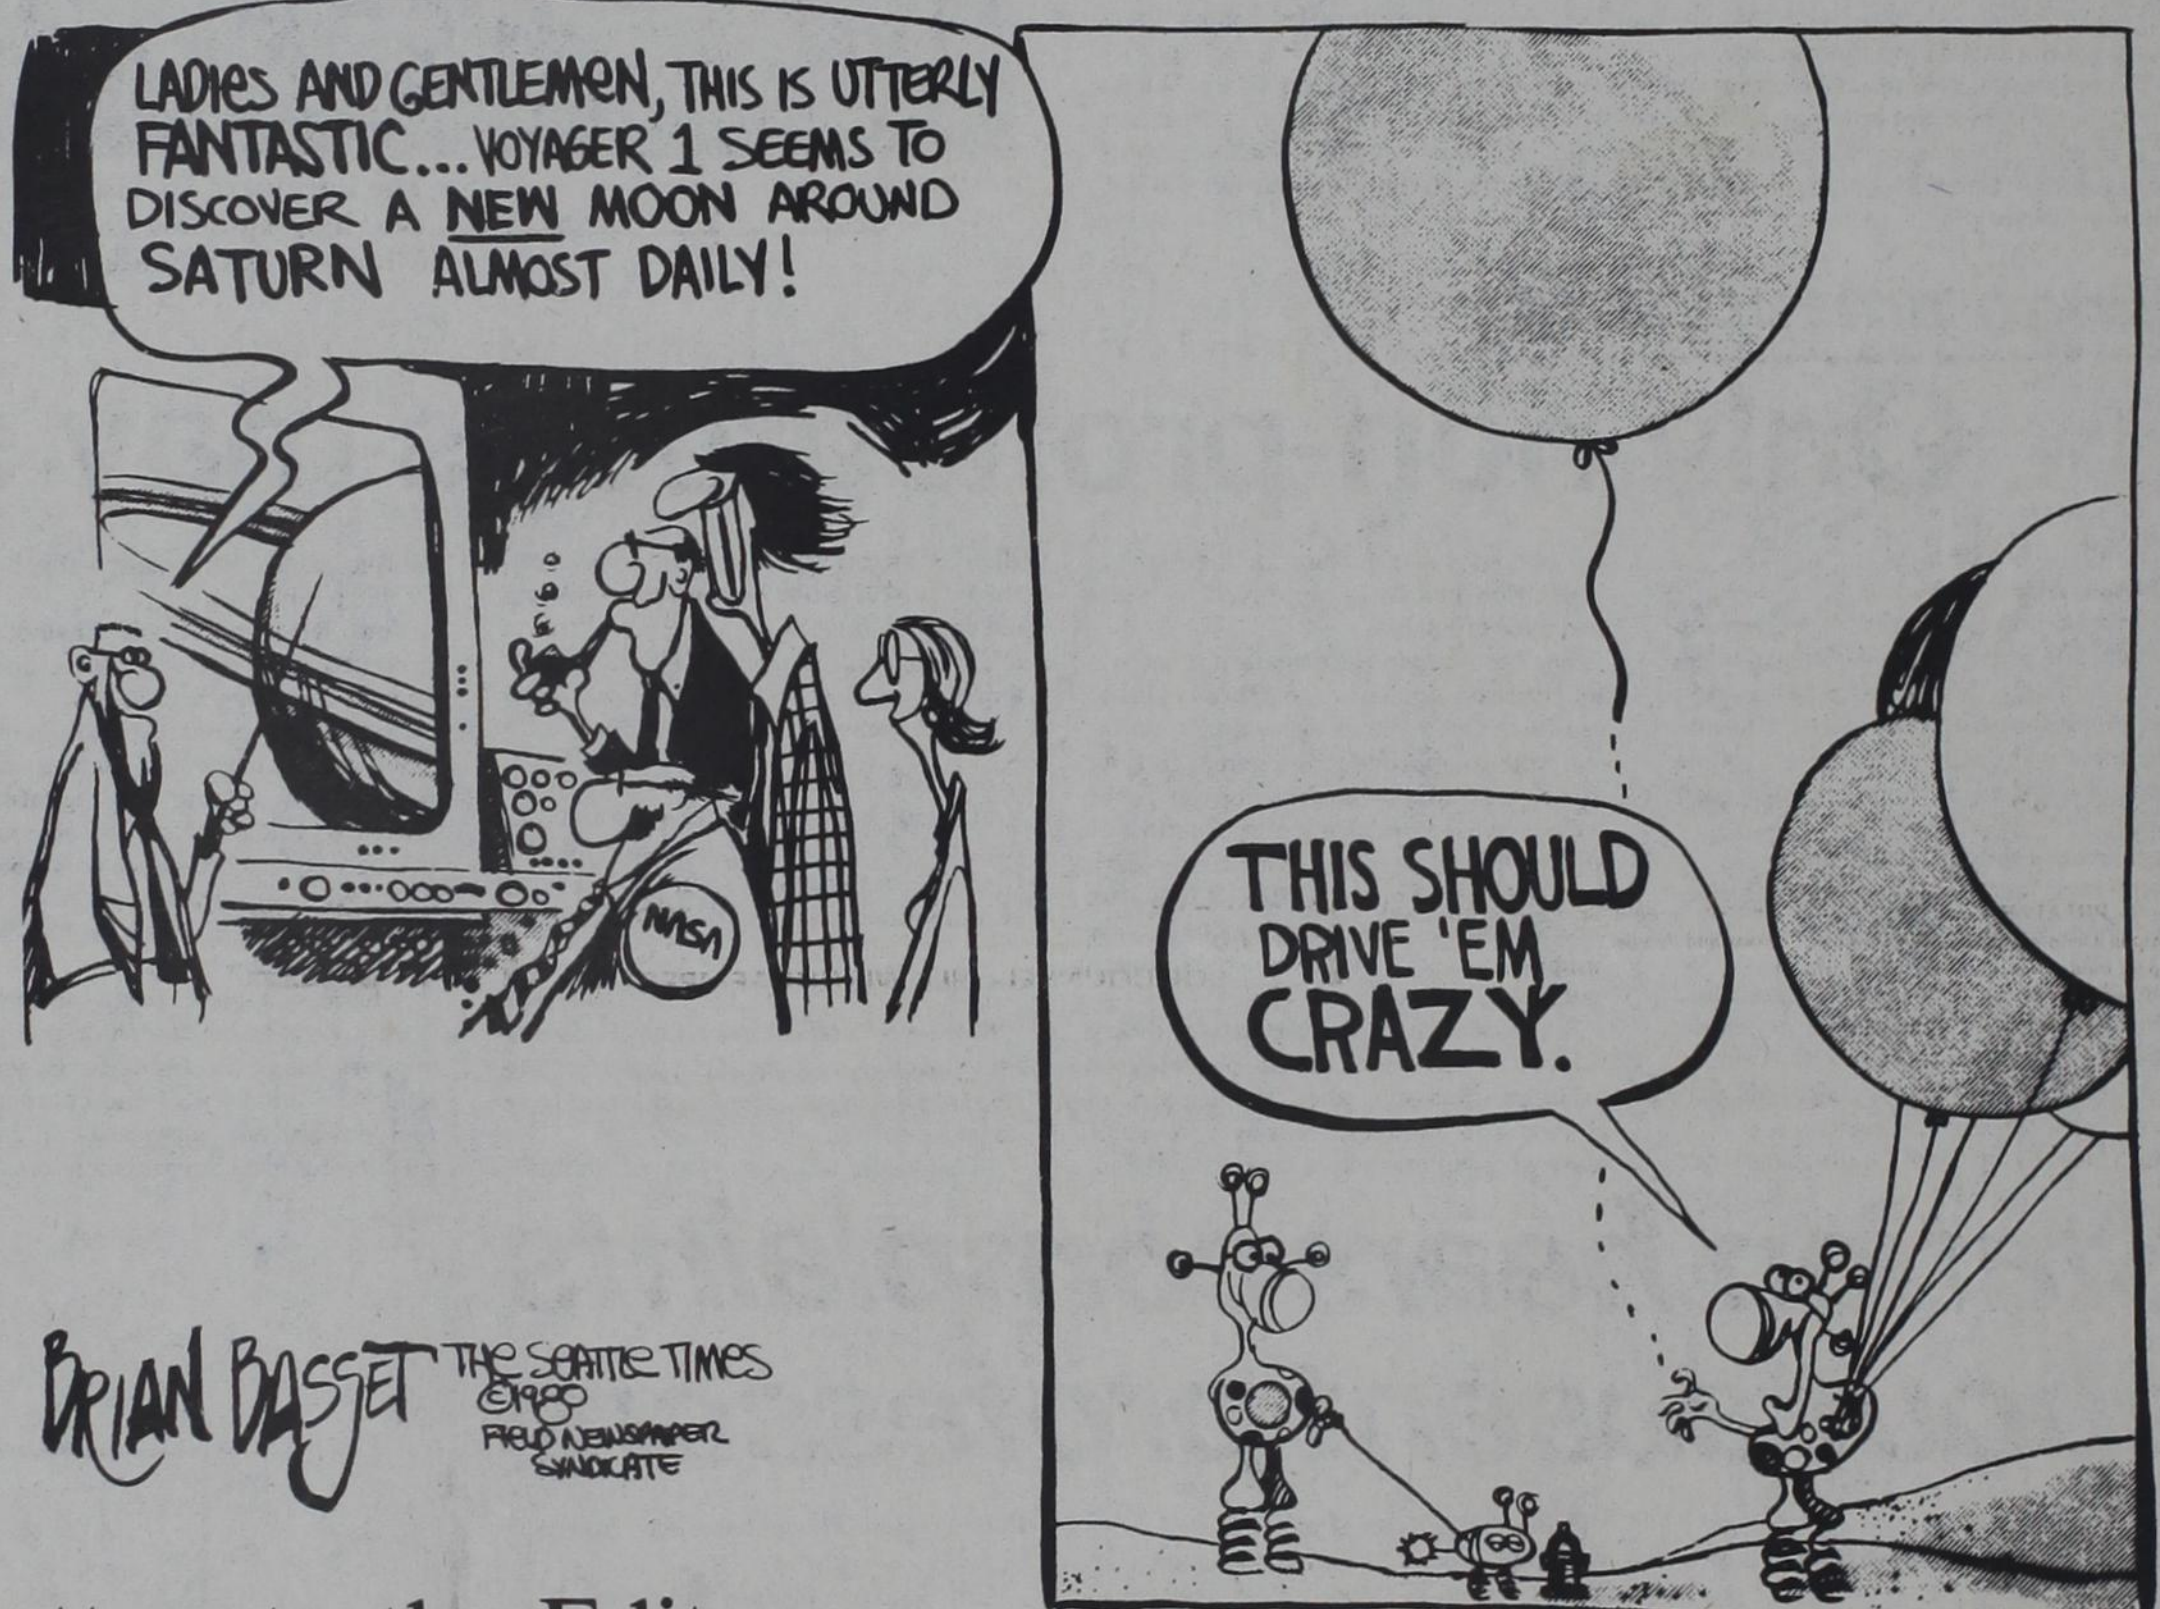

Indeed, Reagan and his supporters may be terrified by the promises they have made in this campaign and after they get over their justified jubilation, be looking around for some way to bring the White House, the Congress, and the other separated principalities of the nation into some kind of an agreement on how to cooperate in the coming four years.

Letters to the Editor

Situation inexcusable

To the Editor:
This letter shall concern itself with a most inexcusable and infuriating situation which has been brewing with me and others for a long time. One would think the millions of dollars that are pumped into the Student Rec Center by the students, should benefit the students.

It is readily apparent, however, that many of the Rec Center staff members feel differently. Being a little grumpy at the end of the day is one thing, but the downright rude and uppity attitudes and mannerisms of the staff is quite another. While it surely is necessary to enforce the rules of the Rec Center, it is just as easy to do it with a smile as a frown.

Aside from common courtesy, I should warn fellow students of the equipment policy. Should anyone check out a racquetball racquet for instance the slightest dint, scrape or wear from normal play brings an $18 flat rate charge which must be cleared by the equipment manager, Denise Capriva, who has made students wait for hours, even days to explain the policy.

Little do the staffers realize their salaries are paid by the students. For the few staffers who do extend common courtesy to Tech students, congratulations, you are bright spots in a dismal day. To the others, your rudeness and ingratitude will someday pay off.

Signed,

Tech Biology professor recognized for work

Northington

Mortar Board and Omicron Delta Kappa today recognized David Northington as part of Faculty Recognition Week. Northington is the third of five faculty members to be recognized this week for significant contributions in the areas of teaching excellence, research and involvement with student organizations.

Northington, an associate professor of biological sciences, sponsors the Tech Pom Girls and is a member of the Athletic Council. He is also a former sponsor for the Saddle Tramps and an ex-University of Texas cheerleader. Delta Gamma Sorority members, who nominated Northington, believe that he "brings the lecture topics to life."

"Further, he is a good model for us to follow because he is a well-rounded person: He has many interests and is involved in them all, plus has a close family life," the sorority members said.

In the classroom, his philosophy is "personalizing courses and putting them on a student level," the nomination stated.

Computer error holds up money

A computer error in Austin has delayed delivery of approximately $4,000 in student grant money, said Ronny Barnes, director of financial aid at Tech.

However, the money should be arriving at Tech "almost any day now," Barnes said. The State Student Incentive Grants, which were held up, are funded federally, Barnes said. State legislatures then pass legislation allocating monies to match the federal funds.

There was a delay in passing the state legislation, which delayed the funds somewhat, Barnes said. The grants were awarded anyway, he said, because the Financial Aid Office knew the money was coming. The legislation finally was approved in late October, but a computer error meant students receiving the money would have to wait even longer to receive their grants.

Approximately $100,000 is administered through the program, Barnes said. Only about $4,000 is being held up, though. Six or seven students are affected by the delay, he said.

"It's nothing out of the ordinary," Barnes said. "If it really causes any problems with students needing money, I'll see if we can get them some money through short-term loans."

Gold inflation hedge

DALLAS (AP) — Want a hedge against inflation? Gold dealer Otto E. Roethenmund suggests that Americans take a cue from the Arabs.

Thousands of Arabs line up daily to buy gold as a hedge against a 20 percent annual inflation rate, says Roethenmund, a precious metals dealer who recently returned from a trip to Saudi Arabia.

"The bulk of their savings goes into small gold bars or 18 karat jewelry sold by weight," said Roethenmund, president of Deak-Perera, said to be the oldest and largest foreign currency exchange and precious metals dealer in the United States.

Here to open Deak-Perera's second currency exchange and precious metals office in Dallas, Roethenmund predicted an ounce of gold will eventually cost "thousands" of dollars, with silver following at a ratio of about 20 to one.

Roethenmund promotes gold and silver like a realtor promotes condominiums and second liens. He points to the Middle East as proof that the demand for precious metals in Arab nations, he said.

Inflation is rampant in Saudi Arabia, he said, adding that a haircut in Dhahran costs $33.

So to protect their savings, Roethenmund said, Saudis — especially women — are buying gold daily.

"The Moslem religion allows a man to have four wives, and he can divorce one by telling her to leave," he said. "When she goes, she can keep all she can carry. So they load themselves down with jewelry."

Roethenmund said Saudi Arabia's inflation is part of a booming economy as the country pours its oil wealth into construction projects that mean high-paying jobs for its people.

He added that real estate is also generating revenue as a housing shortage fuels prices.

"You can pay $5,000 a month for a place to live," he said.

Political instability in the Middle East — especially the Iraq-Iran war — has also fueled the demand for precious metals in Arab nations, he said.

In the United States, he said, less than five percent of Americans own gold as an investment.

Everybody, he advised, should have 10 to 30 percent of savings in precious metals as a long-term investment.

"Bullion coins such as the Kruggerand are an excellent way for a small investor to own gold," he said, adding that the coins are now available in sizes as small as one-tenth of a troy ounce. Such a coin could cost about $75.

He added: "...Large investors should consider buying bars and storing them in a safe place, such as Switzerland."

Tech not liable for TSS cases

By KEELY COGHLAN
UD Staff Writer

Tech's practice of distributing free samples of various company-provided products to residence hall residents ran into a potential problem this year when a possible link between Rely tampons and toxic shock syndrome was discovered.

Rely tampons, pulled from the market in September, were among the samples handed out to Tech women residents this fall.

If a woman resident at Tech were to develop TSS from the sample, could Tech be held liable? Probably not, university officials and legal counsels said.

"We accept the samples on good faith as being good products," said Jim Burkhalter, director of housing.

The samples were distributed before Tech was informed of the high coincidence between the use of Rely and the development of Toxic Shock Syndrome, Burkhalter said.

The tampon was distributed as part of a sample box containing razors, soap and other articles. The boxes were assembled by the 1330 Corp., an advertising agency, and delivered free of charge to Tech. The boxes are distributed regularly each fall semester.

Two days after the Housing Office received a letter from the advertising agency informing it of the problem, the office distributed letters to the residents who received the sample, he said.

The letter, delivered to residents' mailboxes and posted on restroom doors, informed students of the possible dangers of using Rely. The letter also listed the phone number for Proctor & Gamble and the Center for Disease Control in Atlanta where residents could call for more information.

"The prompt response of the university to the situation would lessen the amount of damages or liability," said Jean Wallace, Office for Student Legal Aid. "It would show that the university was not intentionally negligent."

Also, because Tech officials did not know of the situation, it would be hard to collect damages for negligence, Wallace said.

The amount of liability of a state agency is limited by the tort claims act. The largest amount of damages a court could award would be $100,000 per person for death or bodily injury.

"The university probably would not be sued because of the limited amount of damages the claimants could collect, Wallace said.

But University Legal Counsel Marilyn Phelan said Tech cannot be held liable for any injuries that might result from the Housing Office's practice.

The lack of causal relationship between Rely and TSS and the function of the Housing Office as a distributing agent only, exempts the university from the applicable clause of the Torts act, Phelan said.

Tech would also receive some protection from a lawsuit because it was only the distributing agent of free material and did not advertise or endorse the product, Burkhalter said.

"Suing us would be similar to suing a grocery store because the items were on the shelf and it was selling the product," he said.

Wallace, however, said there is a flaw in the analogy.

"The grocery store has more than one brand on the shelves," she said, while Tech only distributed the one brand.

TSS has occurred with high frequency among users of Rely. No one has found the logical connection between the disease and the product, although research indicates that an absorbent chemical scattered in bundles throughout the tampon, as opposed to other brands that have the chemical in a single layer, could be a factor. The chemical is thought to be a fertile growing ground for the bacteria suspected of causing TSS.

Out of a total of 582 cases of TSS, 56 persons have died according to reports received by the Center for Disease Control, CDC spokesman Bob Alden said.

The CDC said 23 cases of TSS were reported in Texas, State Health Department spokesman Debbie Martin said.

No cases were reported in Lubbock, she said.

Betting odds set on J.R. shooting

LAS VEGAS (AP) — The sports book at a Strip resort has set up a betting line on the culprit in the shooting of J.R. Ewing, the popular villain on the CBS-TV series "Dallas." A lot of the early bettors felt it was a self-inflicted wound.

The odds on J.R. shooting himself were set at 20-1 Monday when the line was posted in the sports book at the Castaways Hotel and many of the early bettors put their money on J.R., said hotel spokesman Duke Hoover.

Sports book manager Sonny Reizner established Ewing's series wife Sue Ellen and her boyfriend Dusty Farlow as the favorites at 3-1. As a joke, Reizner set Dallas Cowboys coach Tom Landry at 500-1, and former Cowboys quarterback Roger Staubach at 1,000-1. Hoover said the whole thing started as "a gag," but added, "people are going bananas."

"We know we could take a loss on all this," Hoover said, "so we've limited the size of the bets to $100."

Raiders working for Coogs despite cold

By JON MARK BEILUE
UD Sports Editor

It looked Tuesday like a scene from the front of a Currier and Ives Christmas card, except instead of sleighs and snowmen, there were flying footballs and shivering players in pads.

Cold biting air, scattered piles of snow, and a chilled wet artificial turf prompted defensive tackle Jamie Giles, a Corpus Christi native, to remark to tongue-in-cheek, "Man, I should have gone to Grambling."

But despite the uncooperative weather the Raiders went through a two-hour-plus workout that did not end until after the Jones Stadium lights

"We're having a heckuva practice," defensive coordinator Jim Bates shouted to no one in particular. "We can intercept four passes Saturday, you can book it.

"We had good spirit today," said coach Rex Dockery. "Tuesday is normally a day where we try to get a lot done. It takes quite a bit of concentration and the players need to have a good attitude. Today we showed both."

Stopping Houston quarterback Terry Elston will take all the concentration and proper attitude the Raiders can muster. Elston was the Cougar saviour last year, rallying Houston several times to victory when defeat seemed a foregone conclusion. After an injury early in the year, the Alabama senior is returning to form.

Against Tech Elston broke on a 72-yard jaunt to give the Cougars a go-ahead touchdown as Houston won, 14-10. So Dockery is well acquainted with Elston's heroics.

"We've got to contain Elston and make sure he doesn't make the big play on us," Dockery said. "He's big, fast, and has a great arm. He won three games for them last year in the last quarter. He has a great knack for throwing well under pressure."

Dockery, who last week said Tech would play very well against SMU, did not commit himself to that same feeling, saying "it's too early to tell."

"We should be ready to play — and we will play hard. When playing Houston, a team can't help but be ready. We have a lot of confidence and momentum. It should be a heckuva game," he said.

I love to sit down with a classic.

Little's big day wins honor

AUSTIN (AP) — Quarterback Donnie Little of Texas had a sensational offensive day against Texas Christian on Saturday but Coach Fred Akers says "one of his better plays came on defense."

Little ran for three touchdowns and passed for another as Texas belted Texas Christian, 51-26, to gain a spot in the Bluebonnet Bowl at Houston on Dec. 31.

Little's 334 yards running and passing — a personal record 119 on the ground and 215 in the air — was second in school history only to the 390 yards he had earlier this season against Rice.

His performance was so impressive he was chosen by the Associated Press as the offensive player of the week in the Southwest Conference.

Yet, it was a defensive play by Little that may have won the game for Texas.

With Texas leading 30-20, Longhorn halfback John Walker fumbled into the Texas Christian end zone, and cornerback Reginald Cottingham grabbed the ball in the air and sprinted for the Texas goal line.

Little avoided a block and chased Cottingham out of bounds at the Texas 45-yardline, preventing a touchdown that could have cut Texas' margin to three points.

Three plays later, Texas defensive back Mike Hatchett intercepted a pass, and the Longhorns marched 44 yards for the clinching touchdown.

"Donnie took the correct cutoff angle and didn't waste an inch of the field in getting to him (Cottingham)," said Akers. "And the main thing was he didn't give up. It would have been easy for a lot of guys to give up and say there was no way they could catch a defensive back."

"It was the best all-around game Donnie has had since he's been here," Akers said of the 200-pound junior from Dickinson.

"His leadership was excellent, and his alertness was just as good," Akers said. "He checked off several times on key plays and picked them apart."

Tech travels to tourney hoping for national bid

The Tech women's volleyball team travels to Baton Rouge, La. today to compete in the Southwest Regional AIAW Volleyball Tournament at Louisiana State University.

The three-day event features some of the top volleyball teams from Oklahoma, Texas and Louisiana.

The top four seeded teams in the tournament all hail from Texas. The top seed of the tournament is the University of Houston, followed by the University of Texas-Arlington, the University of Texas and Tech.

Tournament play will consist of three pools with four teams each. Tech will compete in pool III which features an all-Texas lineup with North Texas State University, Texas A&M and Texas.

Pool I consists of Houston, Tulane, sixth seeded Oral Roberts University and Texas Woman's University. Pool II will match up UT-Arlington, Lamar, LSU and fifth seeded Oklahoma University.

The Raiders are pleased with the selection of pools and assistant Raider coach Michael Denardo said the Raiders "couldn't have planned a better schedule."

"We play progressively tougher teams to lead up to the University of Texas match," Denardo said. "We have had three good practices this week so I think we're ready."

The top two teams from each region in the country will advance to the National AIAW tournament at the University of California-Santa Barbara Dec. 11-13.

At-large bids will be sent to four teams who did not qualify through their regional tournaments.

Sports Elston to start against Raiders

HOUSTON (AP) — Houston quarterback Terry Elston, who missed five games with a wrist injury, will start for the bowl-bound Cougars Saturday in a game at Lubbock against Tech.

Elston, a relief specialist who engineered Houston's drive to the Cotton Bowl last year, was injured Sept. 27 against North Texas State and had not played until Nov. 8 when he came on in the fourth quarter in a 15-13 loss to Texas.

Elston, the hero of Houston's Cotton Bowl victory over Nebraska, drove the Cougars 62 yards in five plays against the Longhorns for the final score of the game but Terald Clark dropped a pass for the two point conversion that would have tied the game.

Sophomore Brent Chinn, who guided the Cougars to victories over Texas A&M, Southern Methodist, Arkansas and Texas

Christian prior to the Texas loss, will play a backup role to Elston.

The Raiders suffered from Elston's fourth-quarter magic last year when the Alabama native ran 72 yards for a fourth-quarter touchdown en route to a 14-10 UH victory.

Freshman Lionel Wilson, pressed into duty earlier this season when Chinn was hurt, will be the second backup for Houston.

Tech and Houston go into the game with identical 5-4 season records. The Raiders have posted upset victories over Texas 24-20 and SMU 14-0.

"They just stuff people on defense and then they go out and score some points," Coach Bill Yeoman said. "They are very large and they play very aggressively."

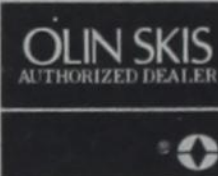

Ron Reeves, left, watches as an unidentified Tech runner and SMU outside linebacker Gary Moten meet head on in the Tech SMU game last Saturday. Reeves established himself as the all-time passing leader at Tech. His 143 yards through the air against the Mustangs gave the junior 2,949 yards in his three-year career to eclipse Tom Wilson's record of 2,932 yards.

Recreational Sports

Records broken at swim meet

Down by 12 points going into the final event, Phi Kappa Psi captured the men's swimming meet championship with a second place in the 100-yard freestyle relay. It amassed 80 points to beat its closest competitors, FAST, by a slim margin of just four points.

In the women's division, the Landsharks ran up 128 points to outdistance its closest competitors by 40 points.

Several individual meet records were broken. FAST set a new record in the men's 100-yard medley relay with a 50.01. The old record was 51.0, set by the Rough Riders in 1974.

Brian Bean's 49.49 for the 100-yard freestyle broke another 1974 record.

FAST's Curt Buthman broke a 50-yard backstroke record set in 1969. Buthman's time was 27.54. This was .16 seconds faster than the old record.

Jim Amick, swimming for the Volunteers, broke the 50-yard freestyle record that had also stood since 1974.

In the women's diving event, Bobby Bobrowski gained 125.80 points for a new record.

Total points for the men's teams were Phi Kappa Psi, 80; FAST, 76; KSS, 67; and the Volunteers with 32.

The total points for the women's division were the Landsharks with 128; GDI's, 88; and the Tri Deltas with 44.

'Turkey Trot' nearing

Deadline to enter Rec Sport's "Turkey Trot" is Thursday. The winning men's and women's teams will receive a gobble for the dinner table. Team participation requires a minimum of five runners, although individual entries will also be taken.

The meet will take place at Mae Simmons Park Nov. 22. The race will begin at 10 a.m.

Anyone needing a ride should contact the Rec Sports office.

Renewal dates slated

Locker and towel renewal forms have been posted in the Rec Center for persons wishing to renew these services.

Renewal for spring only or spring through summer will begin Dec. 1 and last through Dec. 19.

Persons wishing to renew may do so at the Equipment Issue room between 8 a.m. and 4 p.m. Monday through Friday.

For further information regarding renewals, come by the Equipment Issue room or call 742-1995.

Persons desiring new rentals or a change of locker size should come by beginning Jan. 13.

The Rec Center will be closed for the Thanksgiving break beginning at 3 p.m. Nov. 26.

It is scheduled to reopen for use at 4 p.m. Nov. 30.

KTXT personalities familiar faces in Tech intramural program

David O'Neal is a telecommunications major, but one might think he is an intramural sports major, since he and Archie Greer, his KTXT partner, are so heavily involved in the IM program.

O'Neal has worked for KTXT radio for two years. This year, he and Greer are broadcasting Rec Sports news at 4 p.m. Monday through Thursday.

O'Neal said that it was Greer's idea to start the IM broadcasts. He also added that the coverage of the all-university football finals was a first-time thing. Since the live broadcast was a success, he said that live coverage of basketball and softball may follow.

In addition to broadcasting Rec Sports information, both O'Neal and Greer are IM officials.

"If you don't have nerves, you can't make it as an official," O'Neal said. He said that IM participants are usually former high school athletes, and they take their sports seriously.

"This is my third year of officiating," he said.

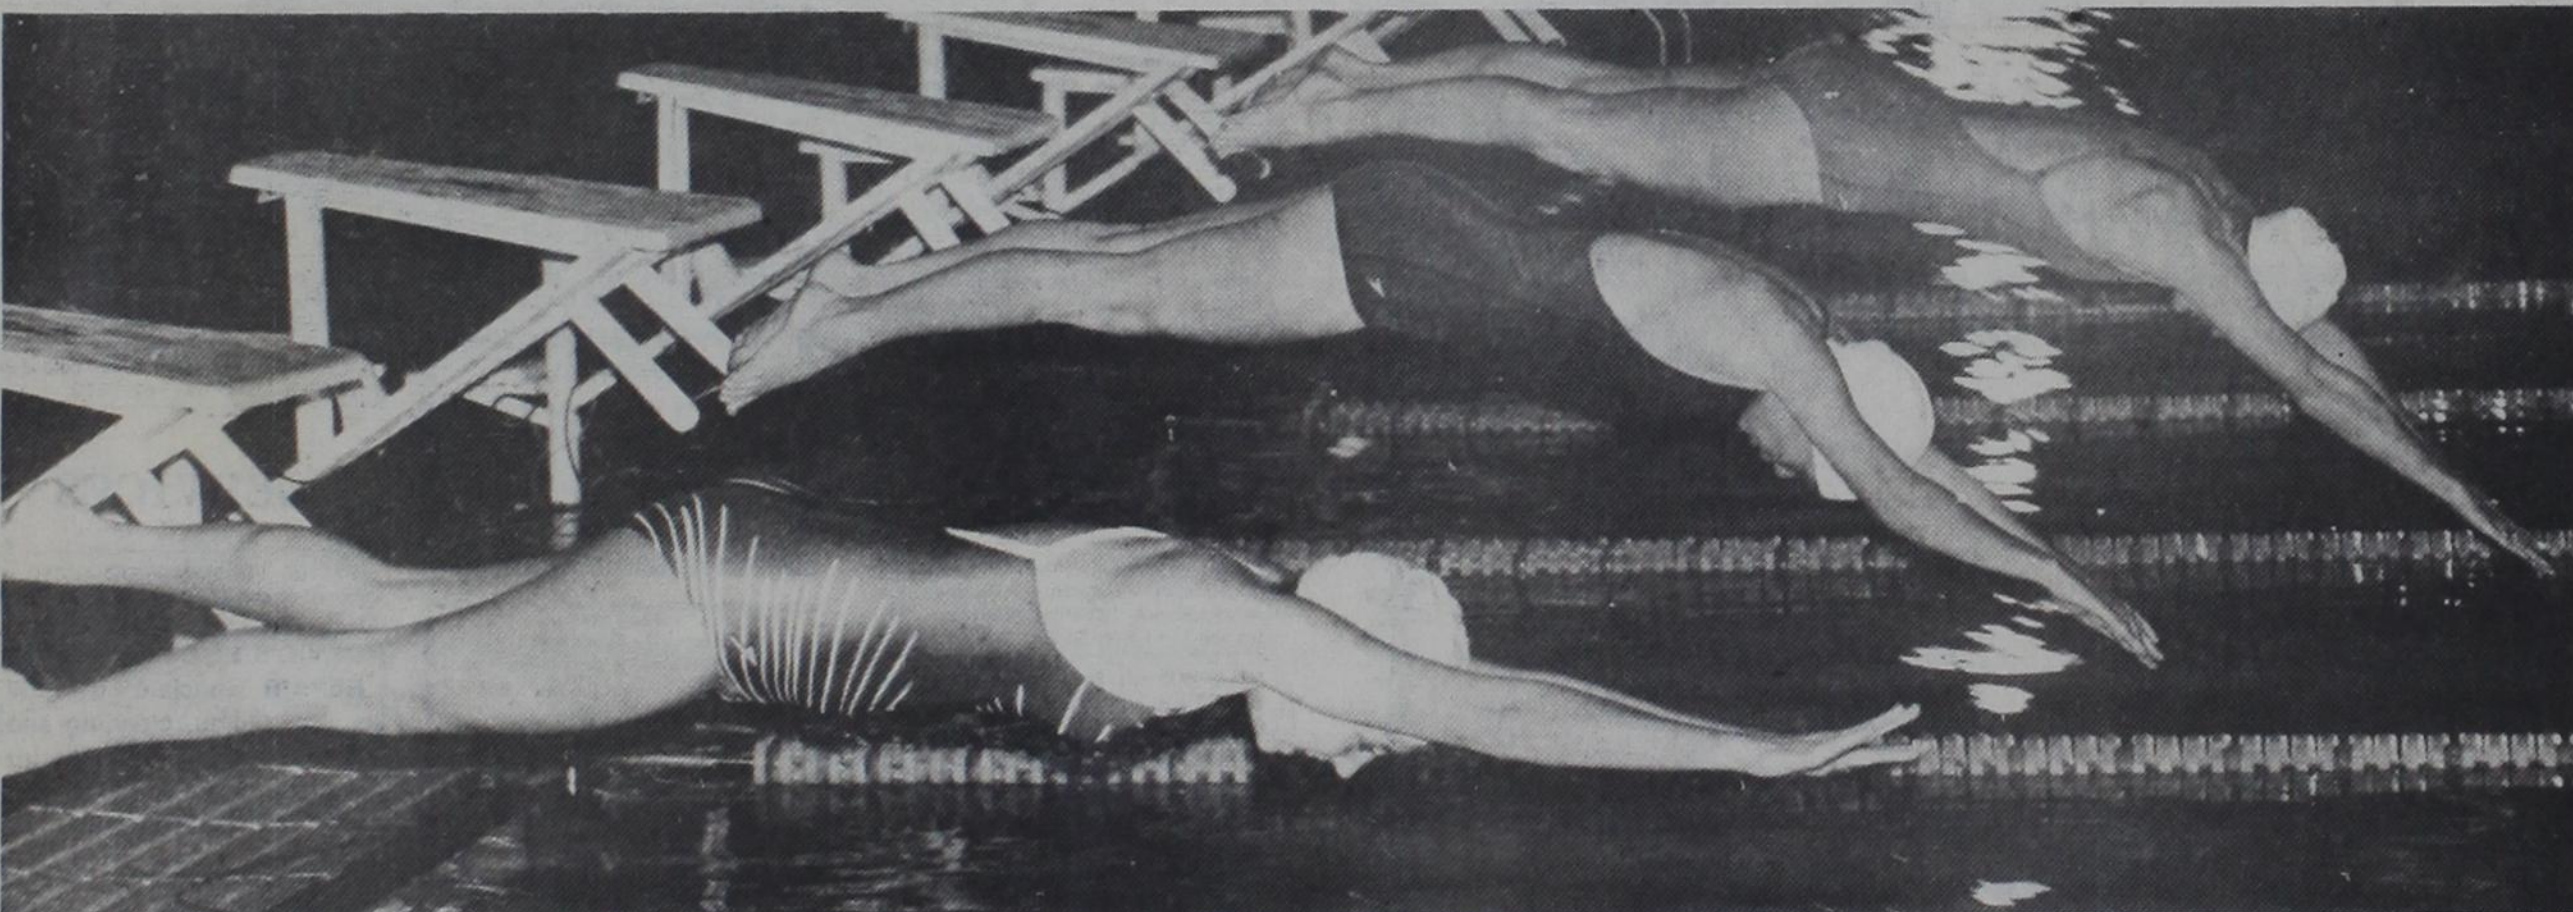

He also said that officiating is a good job, because "it's an on-campus job, and you get a good amount of games each week. "It doesn't interfere with your studying either."

He said that officiating will make a person much more familiar with rules of the different sports also.

"Playing is better, because you get more into a game," he said. He also said that sometimes playing is better than officiating since the "officials can catch a lot of heat."

O'Neal said that he plays flag football every year. He started out playing for Gordon Hall, and has now been playing for North Dallas 40 for two years.

"Rec Sports all together is a lot of fun, and you get to meet a lot of great people," O'Neal said. "Tech has the finest IM program in the state."

Debbie Marchbanks (near swimmer) and two other members of the Landsharks hit the water during the intramural swim meet. The Landsharks took the women's division crown with a total of 128 points. Phi Kappa Psi was the victor in the men's division by four points over FAST. During the meet, three six-year-old records were broken, and Curt Buthman set a new record for the 50-yard backstroke. The old record was set in 1969. (Photo by Mark Rogers)
