Local Educators To Try Out Pay Hike Proposal

tive measure designed to increase teachers' salaries, will soon known by Ic--1 educators.

Delegates to an area school administrator's meeting held Wednes-day evening in Lamesa decided to give the provisions of the bill a try in local school systems.

It was announced by the Asso ciated Press /cdnesday that school administrators in general did not favor the bill. However, local educators do not wish to go on record until a test is made.

The bill is in general a financing plan, and it completely changes the school financing program set up by the Gilmer-Aikin bill of 1949.

Purpose of the bill is to increase teachers salaries. It is also designe to provide a method to pay educators that in 90 per cent of school districts the burden of the increase—und the bill—will be heavier on a local level.

However, they are not sure. The area tests will give the educators concrete evidence on which to base

Those from Howard County attending the Wednesday night ses-sion were Walker Bailey, W. C. Brankenship, J. W. King Jr., all of Big Spring; Joe Holliday of Forsan, James Lowe of Knott, H. L. Miller and W. A. Wilson of Coahoma.

The area meeting was held following an earlier meeting in Austin in which the bill was discussed. Educators say the test must be run quickly, as the bill might come before the legislature any time. The bill was introduced by Representative Kilgore of Fort Worth

Defense Calls Medical Experts To Show Mrs. Parsons Insane

By ARNO ADAMS

WICHITA FALLS IN — Defense counsel hopes to place medical experts on the witness stand today to prove their contention Mary Jean Parsons, pretty Tulsa, Okla., socialite, was insane when she shot her bridegicom to death.

A housewife friend of Mrs Parsons testified yesterday how the 22 - year - old blonde visited her twice after Army Lt. Richard O. Parsons, 24, had been killed.

"She knew he was over there, yet she was talking to me about curtains for her apartment," Mrs. Tom Fields, 22, wife of a Fort Bliss lieutenant, said.

Parsons, Pleasantville, N. Y., and some of a Naw York City.

As the defense built up its side of the story, Mrs. Parsons sat imboth of Dallas and Dr. Joe Tyler, Duties.

Mrs. Fields said the Parsons had played canasta in their apartment the night before the shooting and returned to the Parsons apartment—just across a patio—between 11 and 11:30 p.m.

She said Mary Jean had offered to loan her a vacuum cleaner and about 10:30 the next morning brought it over to her.

"I told her to sit down and we talked about a number of things, mostly about making curtains for her apartment," Mrs. Fields testified.

New System Can Be Effective But It Also Can Be Open To Abuses government will be under a new system of security checks as soon as the new administration can set up the machinery already ordered into effect by President Eisenhower, under his promise to weed out "the disloyal and dangerous."

The new system junks the Truman method of hiring and firing, and the touchstone will be "a reasonable doubt as to security." Under the old plan the test was on "a reasonable doubt as to loyalty." There is a considerable differobviously. Whereas the old plan made patriotism almost the sole yardstick, the new would permit the discharge of an employe because of personal habits-alcoholism, homosexuality, or just plain talkativeness.

The old plan operated under a 30-man federal loyalty board, which might fiddle around for months or years before reaching a final disposition of the case. Attorney General Brownell, who will be the virtual czar of the new system, will throw out the loyalty board and leave it up to each agency head to be the sole arbiter

The 2,500,000 civilian employes of the in discharging an employe found undestrable, as well as in the hiring of new employes. There is an appeal provided, but since the agency head will also be designated to hear and rule on the appeal, it doesn't mean anything.

Each agency will appoint a security officer, whose duty it will be to ride herd on all employes and bring whatever charges may be developed.

The old method was often slow, cumbersome and ineffective. The new has the virtue of being direct, swift and brutally effective.

At the same time it sets the stage for the possibility of grave abuses which must be guarded against. The security officer could become an American version of political commisars or gauleiters so repugnant to us. His power would be such as he might rule or ruin according to whim, thus creating a sense of insecurity as devastating to ranks of government servants as that of questio able personnel would be to the country. Surely some safeguards will be fixed before the opportunity for abuse eventually breeds

Catastrophe Greater Than Man Can Produce, A Test For Man To Bear

They had to go back in history 500 years to find a storm that did more famage to the British Isles and the cross-Channel ports in the Low Countries than that which swept the region last week end. The toll of dead was estimated as high as 1,800 by Wednesday, may grow much larger before a final accounting is

The disaster was so widespread and aplete that Prime Minister Churchill called for public relief measures. Thirtyfive thousand people were homeless in Britain alone at last account, and 250,000 acres of land had been flooded. Property damage was beyond computation.

The storm waters of the sea swept inland as far as 30 miles over low-lying Holland. The work of reclaiming the land from the sea by that industrious people was given a severe backset, and the soil inundated by sea water probably will be taken out of production for some time Americans are accustomed to thinking of the Invincible Spanish Armada in conjunction with storms over England, the popular belief being that an unprecedented storm which virtually destroyed the Spanish fleet was all that saved England. That is rather unfair to the puissance of the fleet England mustered against King Philip's invaders, for the storm came after the Spaniards and their allies had been pretty well outmaneuvered trimmed down. But high winds did drive many an enemy ship ashore to its destruc-tion, and only a remnant of the great fleet got back to Spain. That was 365 years ago.

It was a bitter blow to Britain, which had already seen about as much trouble as one small country could stand. Tribulation will lay euqully heavily upon the Low Countries, especially Holland.

Washington Calling-Marquis Childs

A Start Is Made As Eisenhower The General Becomes President

WASHINGTON-Traditionally the State of the Union message is a grab bag with something for everybody, and President Eisenhower's first speech to Congress was ne exception. There was something with a particular emphasis for Chairman iel A. Reed of the House Ways and Means Committee and the other Republicans who have announced that taxes will be cut no matter what else happens. That part of the message dealing with fiscal policy was perhaps the strongest and most explicit of any section in the speech. It shows the clear determination of the President to pursue a sane and careful line with the balancing of the budget as the No. 1 priority. This should restrain even the irrepressible Reed cently announced that regardless of what nyone might want, the House would vote tax reduction at once to apply on Jur

The paragraphs dealing with debt and taxes reflect the mature thinking of perhaps the strongest element in the Eisennower administration. The team at the Treasury Department, with George A. Humphrey as secretary, brings brains, experience and reasonableness to a formidable task.

How formidable that task is the President suggested when he said with classic understatement that it was "clear that too great part of the national debt comes due in too short a time." Under the policy of recent years most of the vast national debt has been kept on a short-term basis in order to keep interest rates down. The consequence has been that it has hovered over the economy like a vastly swollen balloon filled with explosive hydrogen. In this situation emphasis on the need for a careful, cautious fiscal policy is important to any mature approach to world affairs. No foreign policy can be anything than a form of words unless it is based on something sounder than the inevitability of a continuing deficit.

Since the intention to remove the restraint of the 7th Fleet from the possible action of the Chinese Nationalists on For-mosa against the Chinese mainland had been leaked in advance, the message contained nothing startlingly new in the for-eign field. The implied promise to send up ment entered into by Roosevelt, Stalin and Churchill will please some members of Congress. Valta was a campaign word used to belabor the Truman administration last fall. But the practical effect of such a resolution will be small.

The President's recommendation to extend the Reciprocal Trade Agreements Act will be welcome news in Western Europe. Along with this the President recommended government encouragement of foreign investment abroad, offshore purchases of defense items in Europe when possible, and buying greater quantities of raw materials not available in this

These recommendations are the carrot to offset the stick which is the warning to Europe of the need to move faster toward unification, The warning was repeated by Eisenhower but in more tactual language than that used last week by his Secretary of State, John Foster Dulles. When comes to extension of the Reciprocal Trade Act without emasculating amendments, the President will have to stand up those in his own party who, as on taxes, favor a cut-and-run policy.

In many areas the message resorts to generalizations that can mean a great deal or nothing at all. In a half-dozen fields commissions are supposed to come up with recommendations for the guidance of Congress. But Congress has given short shrift in recent years to the fine procouncements of Presidential commissions. They have been filed in the congressional wastebasket if they did not happen to fit the political expediencies of the moment.

The President, if language means what it seems to mean, has finally clarified the White House position on governmental powers for reorganization. He says that in order to achieve the greater efficiency and economy shown to be possible by the Hoover Commission he wants the Congress to "extend the present government reorganization act for a period of 18 months to two years beyond its expiration date of April 1, 1953." Committees of House and Senate recently voted to curtail that power by making it possible for a simple instead of a constitutional majority in House or Senate to kill a reorganization

And at the bottom of the grab bag is something for Mrs. Oveta Culp Hobby, the new Federal Security Administrator. The message promises a "plan defining new status for all federal activities in health, education and social security," and that means Cabinet status for Mrs. Hobby if Congress agrees.

a start is made. Eisenhower, the hero, the five-star general, is becoming Eisenhower, the President.

Figuring Out Locality Of Radio Call Letters Is A Good Bit Of Fun

The opinions contained in this and other articles in this column are solely those of the writers who sign them. They are not to be interpreted as necessarily reflecting the opinions of The Herald.—Editor's Note.

tion call letters, and where they come from?

It can be a lot of fun, still, to fiddle with a radio dial, even though it's been years since wireless owners kept fancy charts of the stations and frequencies they picked up, or bragged about the immense distance they covered.

Call letters can tell you a lot of things, if you care to listen. They indicate the general geographic location of the broad-casting station; sometimes they're pretty specific about source of the signal. For instance, Station WACO couldn't very well be anywhere but at Waco. And a station's name that starts with a "W" or "K" is bound to be located somewhere in the United States. That's by international arrangement that assigned certain initial letters to the various Of the stations you're likely to tune in, those starting with an "X" will be broad-casting from Mexico. Canadian stations have a "C" as the first character in their In the United States, with a few exceptions stations situated west of the Mississippi River start their names with a "K." Those on the other side of the stream commence with a "W." These exceptions are the very old stations, as radio goes. So call letters in some cases may tell you something about the age of a broadcastiing setup, as well as its location. Prior to an arrangement made about 20 years ago, when the east-and-west-sidesof-the-Mississippi designations were started, all American stations had a "W" for Ever pay any attention to radio sta- the first of their call series. So now when you bear WMAQ, WFAA, or WRR broadcasting from the western half of the nation, you can be assured it was established more than two decades ago. Radio broadcasting in the United States is regulated by the Federal Communications Commission which allocates frequencies, approves call names, and keeps the programs cleaned up. It also represents the American radio industry in negotiating broadcast arrangements with other countries so they won't pile up on their frequen-cies, turn on unlimited power, and jam each other out of existence.

That's how "clear channel" stations come about. No one else is allowed to use their frequency, so there's not supposed to be any fading and interference due to other broadcasters.

The smaller stations, and the big ones not on clear channels, often use the same frequency another operator is broadcasting over. The FCC tries to keep them far enough apart, with low enough power, that they won't cut in on one another's territory.

I like to listen for those stations like WACO, with names that mean something I can understand. Like KBST, with the last three letters standing for Big

These Days-George Sokolsky

Chiang Is Freed From Bondage Of Enforced Inactivity By Ike

I have sometimes felt like a wheezing roice shricking from a manaret, repeating over and over that if we forget China, we forget our own country. When Harry Truman and Dean Acheson gave to the Korean War the shameful twist of imprisoning Formosa and making Chiang Kai-Shek helpless, I wrote article after article denouncing the betrayal not of China but of America.

When the Communist army of General Lin Plao was freed by our perfidy to march from South China to Manchuria, a distance of about 1,000 miles, I wrote the story and asked why Chiang Kai-Shek was not being permitted to bomb that army. When these crack troops marched into Korea and faced General Douglas Mac Arthur with a new war, after he had actually won the war in Korea, the betrayal was complete.

It was not necessary to be a military strategist to recognize what was happen-ing and to stand appalled before the betrayal of our sons who were being maimed and murdered by these errors. There has never been an explanation for the decision stop Chiang from bombing the mainland of China. Before the Truman-Acheson decision had been made to imprison him on Formosa and to use the American Seventh Fleet to prevent him from bombing an army that was moving forward to kill our sons, Chiang was actually conducting a brilliant guerrilla war that was pinning down *erack Chinese Communist troops in the south where they could do us no harm.

Up to the Korean War, it was the Marshall-Acheson policy to eliminate Chiang Kai-Shek and to find a means of recognizing Soviet China. The final device hit upon was to have Soviet China recognized and seated in the United Nations by a majority vote. The United States did not propose to use its right of veto, but rather to submit to the will of the majority.

The British had already recognized Soviet China and were pledged to a policy of the elimination of Chiang Kai-Shek. The State Department was seeking a way of coordinating American with British policy without violating American public

This policy was reversed on June 25. 1950 when the Korean War started. The United Stater assumed responsibility the defense of Formosa, but with the proviso that Chiang Kai-Shek would cease his raids on the mainland. In effect, ti was the Chinese Communists and not the Chinese Nationalists who were being protected. Eisenhower has now said so In his statement on the subject, President Truman put it on a quid pro quo basis. The American Seventh Fleet would defend Formosa in return for which the Chinese Nationalists would cease all sea and air operations against the mainland. However, he said that the future status of Formosa must await the restoration of security in the Pacific, a peace settle-ment with Japan, or consideration by the United Nations. In a word, Chiang not only had his hands tied behind his back, but he was left hanging in the air. The eventual climination of Formosa remained a central point of the Marshall-Acheson policy pursued by President Truman. It was because General MacArthur rejected this policy that he was dismissed. In his letter to the Veterans of Foreign Wars (August 29, 1950) which so angered

President Truman, he said: "Formosa in the hands of such a hostile power could be compared to an unsinkable aircraft carrier and submarine tender ideally located to accomplish offensive strategy and at the same time checkmate defensive or counteroffensive operations by friendly forces based on Okinawa and the

"Should Formosa fall and bases thereafter came into the hands of a potential enemy of the United States, the latter which will have been obtained and can be maintained at an incomparably lower cost than could its equivalent in aircraft carriers and submarine tenders.

"Current estimates of air and submarine resources in the Far East indicate the capability of such a potential enemy to extend his forces southward and still main-tain an imposing degree of military strength for employment elsewhere in the Pacific area.

This has always been true because the condition was made by geography and not by politics. Yet, in spite of our enormous American casuakies, Truman and Acheson refused to recognize facts and proceeded with their fantastic program in Korea. Until they left office, this policy of imprisoning Chiang Kat-Shek on Formosa and the eventual recognition of Soviet China remained Ameri-
