Williams' refusal to commit causes cancellation of debate

By The Associated Press

AUSTIN — The League of Women Voters on Monday formally canceled plans for an Oct. 30 debate between gubernatorial candidates Clayton Williams and Ann Richards, saying Williams wouldn't commit to it.

"It takes two to debate, and without his cooperation the show cannot go on," said Diane Sheridan, head of the league's Texas Education Fund.

Williams, the Republican nominee, has said he won't debate Richards unless the Democrat signs a pledge to stop all negative television advertising.

Richards spokesman Bill Cryer said Williams first should agree to debate. He also said Richards doesn't trust Williams to keep his side of a pledge against negative TV ads.

As an example, Cryer pointed to a Monday news release from Williams' campaign that compared Richards to unsuccessful Democratic presidential candidate Mike Dukakis.

"Like Dukakis, Richards is a captive of liberals and special interest groups," the release charged.

Among others, it says Richards is supported by "left-wing Hollywood liberals," the Gay and Lesbian Caucus, Wall Street brokerage houses, National Organization for Women President Molly Yard and death row inmates.

"The average person is who they're missing on that list — the average Texan earning an average wage, doing a good job keeping home and family together, as opposed to Clayton Williams and his big money friends, his insurance pals," Cryer said.

He called the comparison with Dukakis "ridiculous" and the news release "completely negative. It shows the complete hypocrisy of their campaign."

Williams spokesman Gordon Hensley said, "We don't view this as negative. We view this as truth in advertising."

In other political developments Monday:

• Republican lieutenant governor candidate Rob Mosbacher asked rival

“ It takes two to debate, and without his (Williams) cooperation the show cannot go on. ”

—Diane Sheridan

Bob Bullock to specifically outline an income tax plan, saying the Democrat left the door open to such a levy in a Saturday debate.

"Not only will I close the door on an income tax, I'll nail it shut," Mosbacher said.

Rafe Greenlee, Bullock's press secretary, said Bullock has consistently said he's opposed to a state income tax.

However, he said, "Bullock doesn't want to start ruling things out before we've had a chance to study everything ... He's not making any stupid, rhetorical campaign promises."

• Republican attorney general candidate J.E. "Buster" Brown charged that his Democratic opponent, Dan Morales, apparently violated an ethics rule of the State Bar of Texas by allowing his name to be listed on the letterhead of a law firm.

Morales lists no income from the law firm, with which he holds the title of "Counsel." Morales, of San Antonio, says he's provided free legal services to his constituents since being elected to the Texas House.

Brown, of Lake Jackson, cited an ethics rule forbidding a lawmaker to list his name on a law firm's communications "during any substantial period of time in which the lawyer is not actively and regularly practicing with the firm."

Morales spokeswoman Robin Rorapugh said there's no ethical problem. She said if Brown thinks there is one, he should file a complaint with the State Bar. Brown said he had no immediate plans to do so.

• Republican state treasurer candidate Kay Bailey Hutchison picked up the backing of the ATTACK PAC, the Dallas-based Anti-Crime Political Action Committee. "As we move into the 1990s and we look for creative ways to finance and pay for more prison capacity and efficient drug and alcohol programs, I know that Kay Hutchison is going to be a key leader," said Richard Collins, the group's chairman.

• Democratic gubernatorial nominee Ann Richards denounced a federal proposal that would override the homestead protection in the state constitution by taking away protections for those who have had debts with federal agencies or failed financial institutions. "No government agency has the right to take a family's home away," she said.

Fuentes: U.S., Latin America will need bond of mutual consent

By FRANCISCO RODRIGUEZ
The University Daily

The United States and Latin America are destined to live as neighbors, therefore there should be a bond of mutual consent and respect between the two, said Carlos Fuentes in a lecture last Tuesday at the Allen Theatre.

Fuentes, a former Mexican ambassador to France and author of the best-selling Old Gringo, among others, said the 3,000-mile border dividing the United States and Mexico also is the border dividing it from the rest of Latin America.

The border is a division between two cultures as well as a physical frontier separating the industrial power from developing countries, he said.

"Mexican dictator Porfirio Diaz said it best: 'Poor Mexico, so far from God and so close to the United States,'" Fuentes said. "Every country in the world has a border with the United States."

Fuentes said there will always be problems between the United States and Latin America because of cultural differences.

"Even if we become you, or you become us, there will be a difference," he said. "There will always be a challenge to compare you to the other side."

The United States and Latin America share a number of challenges, primarily facing the year 2000, Fuentes said.

"We live at the edge of the 21st century. We will need a new context of relations," he said. "There will be a need for a multi-polar world."

Fuentes said the disintegration of communism in the world has destroyed the pretext of American intervention in Latin America.

"Latin America has a choice. Either become part of the multi-polar world, or just simply stay watching in the sidelines," he said. "We have to take into account the nature of the relationship between the United States and Latin America as well as the rapidly changing world south of the border."

Because the United States shares the hemisphere with Latin America, the two are destined to live together, he said.

"Perhaps the United States would like to see Latin America move to Polynesia; at the same time, Latin America would like to see the United States drift to Antarctica," Fuentes said. "Obviously, our relationship has not been good in part. This is owed in part to the expansionist policy of the United States."

Fuentes said the relationship between the two factions has been so difficult in part because of arrogance and in part because of ignorance.

"Woodrow Wilson said the United States should teach Latin America how to elect public officials; Calvin Coolidge suggested Mexico was a source of Bolshevism," he said. "It wasn't until Franklin Delano Roosevelt that an American president understood that since Latin America was different from the United States then Latin American countries should deal with their own problems since they were better familiar with them."

Fuentes said the United States has always needed a "villain" to attack. With the fall of communism at hand, the Soviet Union is fading as the familiar villain.

"The continent is not for bashing," he said. "We hope the United States will stop fighting and instead join the rest of the world. We shouldn't let Latin America become the next villain."

Fuentes said he hopes the new villain — Saddam Hussein — will gear towards the upholding of international law — mainly the fact that countries invading other countries should be criticized, including the United States for invading Panama.

The upcoming 400th anniversary of the discovery of the Americas presents several questions to American countries, Fuentes said.

"Have we got any reason to celebrate?" Fuentes asked. "Would anyone care to bet as for the stability of our governments? Our crisis is a crisis of government. It is part of achieving maturity."

Fuentes said the Latin American population has more than doubled in the last 20 years, and it is destined to double again by the year 2000. Half of that population, he said, will be under the age of 15.

"Every person who will have a job by the year 2000 has already been born," he said. "Presently, Brazil is the eighth largest economy in the world; Mexico the 13th. We are more and more becoming an urban society. Unfortunately, by the 21st century, every Latin American child born will be born owing $1,000 to a foreign bank."

Although progress is present in Latin American countries, culture still remains on its feet, he said. It is a culture "where burros and jets co-exist."

"A reminder: Latin America is a polycultural, multi-racial area," Fuentes said. "Beyond debts, earthquakes and everything else, culture remains."

HSC official: marijuana not harmless drug

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

According to the National Institute on Drug Abuse, marijuana is by far the most extensively used illicit drug. The latest survey done in 1985 showed almost 62 million Americans have tried marijuana in their lifetime.

Marijuana has become a gateway drug for many people, said James Griggs, Associate Programs Director for the Texas Tech University Health Sciences Center's Southwest Institute for Addictive Diseases. Once someone tries marijuana, their chances of experimenting with other drugs increases considerably.

"Marijuana is like an ice-breaker for people wanting to experiment with drugs," he said.

Because marijuana seems so mild and the after-effects seem so minimal, people get trapped into thinking the drug is not bad for them and that is the trap of this drug, said Griggs.

"Users can get high, have a good time, go to sleep and wake up feeling fine. Since there are no apparent after-effects, the user thinks there is no problem."

Marijuana, commonly known as pot, grass, reefer, smoke, ganja, or weed, is a common plant called Cannabis Sativa. It contains more than 400 different chemical substances, 60 of which are unique to cannabis known as cannabinoids.

The chief psychoactive ingredient in marijuana is delta-9-tetrahydrocannabinol or THC.

"The amount of THC in marijuana determines its psychoactive potential," Griggs said. "The amount of THC in today's marijuana is double the amount that was found in marijuana 10 years ago."

Marijuana that was available to consumers 10 years ago contained less than one half of one percent of THC. Today marijuana is 10 to 15 times as strong and can contain as much as 7 percent THC.

"People are going to greater lengths these days to grow better pot," he said.

Griggs said that by smoking marijuana regularly, the amount of THC in one's body builds up so that even when not smoking, a user is still under the effects of the drug.

"Regular pot smokers get so used to the effects of the drug, they don't even feel the subtle effects it is having on them," he said.

Some of the immediate effects of marijuana use include increased heart rate, reddening of the eyes and dryness in the mouth and throat, said Griggs. But because marijuana is fat soluble and stays in the body longer than most drugs, it affects many parts of the body in very subtle ways.

Some of the emotional effects of marijuana use are psychological problems, personality problems, poor social skills and constant disorientation, Griggs said.

Some high risk groups consist of adolescents, pregnant women, and nursing mothers, he said. Adolescents who smoke risk interfering with critical areas of growth in physical, emotional, and mental development.

According to the NIDA, birth defects can be caused by marijuana smoking, and it is known that THC passes from the mother through the placenta into the developing baby. For nursing mothers, THC has been found in the breast milk of mothers who smoke marijuana, risking feeding a baby milk that contains THC.

The NIDA has made significant progress in determining how marijuana affects the brain. They have found that THC changes the way in which sensory information gets into, and is acted on by, the hippocampus, the major component of the brain's limbic system that is crucial for learning, memory and the integration of sensory experiences with emotions and motivation.

Griggs said heavy smokers can damage their lungs the same way cigarette smokers do. Because smokers are inhaling a non-filtered gas into their lungs, damage can occur in a relatively short time.

According to NIDA, THC affects the hormones which regulate the female reproductive system, and studies have suggested that marijuana can have adverse effects on the developing fetus.

In males, marijuana lowers the sperm count and decreases the mobility of sperm which causes a significant increase in the formation of abnormal sperm cells.

Some studies have suggested that marijuana weakens the immune system, he said.

College campuses being restricted by free speech codes

By JOHN KARL Collegiate Times

Free speech is under attack on college campuses, and even its traditionally staunchest defenders have joined in the assault.

Student journalists and free speech advocates are concerned about a proliferation of college speech codes so widespread that, according to Time magazine, "Nowhere is the First Amendment more imperiled than on college campuses." As is often the case with censorship, these codes have been adopted with the best intentions: Campus racism is on the rise and something has to be done about it. So token measures are taken which exacerbate racial tensions and ignore the First Amendment.

Speech codes drafted in response to this impotent issue are dividing the American Civil Liberties Union, which has always tended toward an "absolute" position on free speech. While the Wisconsin and Michigan ACLU affiliates have sued their respective state universities over the codes, the northern and southern California affiliates adopted a resolution in July favoring narrowly drawn policies which prohibit harassing speech.

John Powell, national legal director of the ACLU, asserts: "My concern is less with the strength of the First Amendment than with the wave of racial harassment that has swept the country. The campus is not under the threat of being silenced."

Defending their resolution, the California affiliates cite the legal need to balance the First Amendment against "conduct that interferes with the Fourteenth Amendment right of students to an equal education." They argue that the resolution only advocates a ban on speech which is clearly harassing and that "hostile, even offensive speech in classroom debates and public discourse is something students must endure or challenge with speech of their own."

Free speech proponents such as writer Nat Hentoff are not buying. Pointing out that cases brought under the codes will be heard by untrained college judicial panels, not civil libertarians or ACLU attorneys, Mr. Hentoff decries the inevitably vague nature of speech codes. "Most colleges whose 'due process' hearings I've covered are unshakably fond of the British Star Chamber model of the 17th century," he remarks sarcastically. "Just the places to deal with these broad and vague restrictions on speech."

Rules which limit speech are only as good as those who enforce them. Eleanor Holes Norton, President Carter's chair of the federal Equal Employment Opportunity Commission, explained this bitter reality: "It is technically impossible to write an anti-speech code that cannot be twisted against speech nobody means to bar. It has been tried and tried and tried."

Indeed, speech codes have been defended by voices far less moderate than those of the ACLU's California affiliates. At Stanford University, law professors provided the philosophical rationale for a new student conduct policy that one student sponsor candidly admitted "is not entirely in line with the First Amendment." ABA Journal, the publication of the American Bar Association, quotes Standard Law professor Mari Matsuda, who argues that traditional views of free speech act as a self-serving cover for continued domination by majority elites.

In Orwellian fashion, advocates of the code argue that speech limitations would actually increase free speech and "vigorous debate." Discriminatory speech, they reason, is meant to silence the victim.

Such arguments are not only clearly opposed to First Amendment principles, they also threaten to undercut the achievement of equal rights. Civil rights activists of free speech works to the detriment of minorities.

In addition to infringing on free

“ In addition to infringing on free speech, these codes may actually fuel racism. As the recent incident with the music group 2 Live Crew dramatically demonstrates, attempts to censor offensive views makes martyrs out of the censored. ” have always relied on speech as their principle weapon. In the long run, any compromise of principles speech, these codes may actually fuel racism. As the recent incident with the music group 2 Live Crew dramatically demonstrates, attempts to censor offensive views makes martyrs out of the censored. Did the censoring of the album "As Nasty As They Wanna Be" silence the misogynist lyrics of 2 Live Crew? Definitely not. It showered the band in publicity, thereby propelling them to the top of the charts.

Alan Keyes, a former assistant secretary of state, points out that the codes themselves arise out of a racist and condescending reasoning. In a debate with the professor who wrote the code adopted by Standard University this spring, Mr. Keyes argued against the "patronizing paternalistic assumptions" upon which the code is founded. He expressed surprise that "someone would actually think that I will actually sit in a chair and be told that white folks have the moral character to shrug off insults and I do not."

Racism is a problem which must be addressed with more than misguided measures like limiting offensive speech. Not only are such measures open to abuse, they also drive racism underground.

The ACLU's John Powell forcefully argues, "The primary problem is that we haven't begun to seriously discuss racial issues." He is absolutely right. But the speech-restricting policies he seems to advocate will only have a chilling effect on the needed discussion.

Ignorant bliss

To The Editor:

Texas Tech and other colleges are incredibly pleasant places to be because of the atmosphere with thousands of people who are intelligent and interested in learning. One would think that such an atmosphere would rub off on the surrounding community. A pity it didn't.

I first found out about the totalitarian repressives that formed the school board when I was inside a pleasant little books and comics shop. The owner and customers were speaking of the new policies. They told me that I wouldn't be allowed near a Lubbock public school, because I was dressed as a satanist.

Let me describe why: I was wearing my favorite shredded jeans, a Queensryche T-shirt, a pentagram on a leather thong, and an Ankh earring. One at a time, I'll tell you what they mean. Queensryche is heavy metal. They are exceedingly talented, their lyrics are comparable to the best of poets, and they sing and play with an amazing amount of depth and passion; they sing about society and individuals. The Ankh is the Egyptian symbol of LIFE. That, however, is apparently unacceptable, because the morons on the school board think that life-love is satanic; they are somewhat less than genius. The final and most damning portion of my apparel was the pentagram. It basically identifies me to other pagans and neopagans and has symbolic references to the elements and other things, depending on the individual. It has nothing to do with anything so Judeo-Christian as satanism. Satanism reversed it, just like they reversed the cross.

The school board is completely and totally ignorant about that which they condemn. They are reminiscent of such historical greats of Hitler and Stalin. They prefer extreme conformity and social stagnation to creativity, change, and growth. Their policies reflect a narrow-minded stupidity that is present in this extreme only in the mediocre and the mindless. The best way for them to achieve the results they are after is to make frontal lobotomies mandatory; then the student body will be good little puppets for them to play with, and they will not have to worry about petty little things like individual sentence.

One final thing...when they make "Thou shalt not suffer a witch to live" public policy, I really want them — no, I invite them — to try to burn me; that is what they would have to do. They have effectively outlawed freedom and intelligence in this public school system. On their heads be the consequences.

Rape happens!

To The Editor:

The issue of fraternity gang rapes was handled in a most appalling manner in the Oct. 4 issue of The UD, as Michael Telle's comments reflected both cowardice and thoughtless disregard.

"Nothing like that has ever happened at Texas Tech University," according to Telle, who emphasized the fact that videos concerning rape, hazing and alcohol abuse were being shown to all new Greeks.

This attitude is particularly insulting to women, for it perpetuates the horrid attitude of "deny it and it will go away" now surrounding rape.

There IS hazing on the Texas Tech campus. Alcohol abuse DOES occur in this college community. And, yes, although Telle appears to want it swept neatly under the proverbial carpet, rapes DO happen at this university.

I'm not saying rapes occur in fraternity houses, but neither am I denying that many do happen there.

I commend Greek society for taking time to better educate new members on this subject; but, what of the old members? What of the young men who, after reading Telle's words, see no wrong in such a crime and know that all will be kept hidden under a carpet of denial?

It is the attitude portrayed through Telle which keeps rape among the more abundant in society. Blindly refusing to see crime does not make it disappear. It does not heal the wounds of those women who are frightened, too scared to face that attitude of denial.

Tell rape's victims that it doesn't happen at Texas Tech University, Mr. Telle. Try to convince those women who have narrowly escaped the ordeal that their terror was nonexistent. Then, ask yourself why few cases are reported, and you'll see just how real is the truth of rape beneath the attitude.

Name withheld

ACLU a farce?

To The Editor:

All the controversy about the various issues that have crossed the pages of The UD reveal a great deal of confusion and duplicity in our society. The Lubbock school dress code reveals confusion on the part of both the school board and of those opposing it. It is also typical of how society has allowed the media to redefine words such as liberty and freedom.

Some of the recent editorial contributions to The UD echo the cry for license of many in our society. License, which many mistake for liberty, means that one can do what he wants when he wants to without regard for whom his actions might hurt and escape the consequences they cause in the long run. Television constantly portrays a fantasy world where extra-marital sex never results in AIDS and divorce always ends happily; however, in real life promiscuity brings disease, abortion brings grief, and divorce hurts children. Liberty, which is having the opportunity to freely make any choice which does not bring direct and immediate harm to another individual, builds a society up, but license destroys all freedom.

I have been hearing for years about religious groups being oppressed in public schools, long before this ignorant dress code was made. Recently, anyone in the Lubbock schools wearing a shirt that bears a radical message, Christian or otherwise, has been liable to in-school suspension. In a frantic effort to maintain order, the school officials have suppressed anything they do not understand. Recently, a student from Atlanta, was expelled for "possession of Christian materials." The "contraband" included a New Testament. Where was the ACLU then? I do not think that the ACLU is out to defend civil liberties. Jesus said, "By their actions you will know them."

Alarm ridicule

To The Editor:

Now I lay me down to sleep...I pray my rest to keep from being disturbed from another car alarm! It seems with clockwork regularity my slumber is disturbed by the annoying claxon of a car alarm. You people who purchase these little boogers kill me. You — or most likely your parents — went out and spent a life savings on a car, filled it with the latest electronic doodads, then promptly parked it out in the open. This

Pop hits, country spins at West LA

By KIRK BAIRD-PARKS
The University Daily

Want to experience the latest in top-40, down-home country or the latest craze in house music? Try West LA, this week's featured club.

West LA, 5203 34th Street, is open 7 p.m. to 2 a.m. Thursday through Saturday.

Pete Aleman, general manager, said business for the new club has been "totally awesome."

"We're definitely attracting a college crowd. We get a lot of Tech and South Plains people out here — but mostly Tech," he said.

One reason for the club's attendance is the diverse music the club showcases.

"We do some live shows on occasion and we like to give the public some variety to choose from. We get a lot of people from Tech who want to hear some country and we try to bring the top rising stars.

CLUB OF THE WEEK

"We only do those on nights when we don't have our regular business, like Sunday, Monday and Tuesday," Aleman said.

Many clubs are experiencing problems with Lubbock zoning laws, but Aleman said West LA will not face those problems.

"Most of the clubs that are having the problems with zoning are in the food-service-type of zoning and we're not included in that zoning," he said. "We do everything by the book. We work with the laws and not against the laws. As long as you follow the rules you don't have any problems."

Aleman said West LA's format is about 80 percent top-40 and 20 percent country and western.

"It varies on different nights. On Thursday we play about 95 percent top-40. We slip in some euro-disco and a dash of house music just to keep everybody happy.

"Friday leans a little bit to country but we still play a majority of top-40 and Saturday is about the same as Thursday."

Aleman said West LA is the club for all your social needs.

"If people are going to be anywhere, they better be right here," he said. "That's where all their friends are going to be."

Beverly Hills kids not the stuff shows are made of

By LYDIA GUAJARDO
The University Daily

Is there finally hope for the teenie-bopper of 1990? Have they found a TV show to turn to in a time of need? Is "Beverly Hills, 90210" the family show for the '90s or just a teen craze? It is none of the above. It does, however, deal with today's common teenage problems.

With its premiere on Fox Broadcasting last Thursday, the show offered a look at life in an upper-crust high school. Oddly enough, the show dealt with various teenage problems of growing up behind all the glamour of Beverly Hills.

Combined with the fear of fitting in a new environment, twin siblings Brenda and Brandon Walsh are forced to face parties, sex and new people in a totally new lifestyle. The two high school juniors, along with their ever so understanding parents, move from Minneapolis to Beverly Hills. The family finds itself in a new and higher-priced lifestyle. The premier of "Beverly Hills, 90210" concentrated on the teenagers' first weeks at school. Brandon (Jason Priestly), who was always the center of attention at school, found himself taking a backseat. He was forced to save his girlfriend's reputation at the risk of his own after a rumor starts that the two slept together. Brandon also had to earn the respect of the editor to win a spot on the newspaper staff.

It was the typical guy-chases-girl scenario with a little spice added. Of course, in the end you must come back next week to see if the apologies are genuine and if the girl will give Brandon that second chance.

Brenda (Shannen Doherty) found her fun with a 25-year-old lawyer. After faking her way into a club, she meets this lawyer and lies (or rather implies) that she is a college student and a member of a pristine sorority. Guilt from lying to her love and her family gets the best of Brenda and the problem of sleeping with him is enough to give her a bit of heartache. Brenda decides to undo all the lies and is rejected (or rather "dumped"). Brenda then tells her mom she lied and all is well again. The show ends with the two loving siblings wondering if life will get any easier and realizing all is well for now.

For a 16-year-old, "Beverly Hills, 90210" is a dream come true program. It is a chance to see the latest fashions in Beverly Hills high school.

"Beverly Hills, 90210" fits the typical Fox pattern — concentrate on the extremes of life. In reality, life is not this perfect. The show thrives on the dreams and fantasies of the average teenager. But even they will soon realize that this is not reality. It is life in the heart of Tinseltown.

Teen Dreams

"Beverly Hills, 90210" focuses on the hardships of going to high school in a posh California neighborhood. Shannen Doherty and Jason Priestly star as twin siblings, Brenda and Brandon Walsh.

Cousteau to speak on need for environmental action, concern

Producer, educator and environmentalist Jean Michel Cousteau lectures at 8:15 p.m. Wednesday in the UC Allen Theatre.

The son of ocean explorer Jacques Cousteau, Jean Michel will present a lecture entitled "Rediscover the World" which focuses on increasing public awareness of changes involving our planet.

The lecture is free for Tech students and $7 for non-students. Tickets are available at the UC ticket booth, Sears and at the door.

Cousteau, who lectures to as many as 100,000 students annually, focuses his efforts on the protection and improvement of the quality of life for present and future generations.

Dykes' Raiders refuse to abandon 1-4 ship

By MIKE PENDER
The University Daily

Saturday's 28-24 loss to Texas A&M does not mean the end of the world for Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes and the Red Raider football team.

"It all boils down to one thing — the last time they got the football they went 80 yards and scored and the last time we got the football we didn't score," Dykes said in his weekly press conference Monday.

Tech failed to score on its final drive when freshman quarterback Robert Hall threw an interception with two minutes, 12 seconds left in the game.

"That was probably the toughest loss I've been around in a long time," Dykes said. "We really had some devastation because we got so close but yet so far away."

Tech's Lin Elliott kicked a field goal to put the Raiders ahead 24-21 with 9:21 left in the game, but Texas A&M went on to score a touchdown four minutes later to make the final score 28-24.

Dykes said the 1-4 record is frustrating, but he does not think Tech is ready to throw in the towel.

"We signed up for 11 games this season," Dykes said. "Any time things aren't going good, that's when the food doesn't taste very good, that's when we're working out too long, that's when we stress academics too much, that's when any problems you have arise.

"We got too many people that are too well committed to what's going on; there's a lot of football left."

Although the Raiders came out on the losing end of the battle against the No. 19 Aggies, Dykes said the defense rose to the occasion.

"We got some good turnovers, we really did make some nice plays," Dykes said. "Some nice interceptions allowed us to have good field position at times in the ball game."

The defense forced three fumbles and two interceptions.

Tracy Saul, Brian Dubiski and Ronald Ferguson got their first interceptions of the season.

The offense also had some bright spots. Dykes said Anthony Lynn, Shane Sears, Donald Marshall, Jason Duvall and Whataburger Player of the Game Rodney Blackshear had outstanding performances.

Blackshear caught three passes for 52 yards. He also returned a kickoff 92 yards for a touchdown.

Dykes said, "Anthony played his best game Saturday. He did a great job blocking."

Dykes said Tech has come a long way by making improvements, and the Raiders have to come to a point where they need to learn how to win.

Tech came away from the game with a few minor injuries, Dykes said, speaking of Leric Eaton and Charles Rowe, but they both are expected to play Saturday against Arkansas.

Quarterback Jamie Gill was used sparingly against A&M Saturday because of his recent battle with the flu. Dykes said he should return to practice this week.

The Raiders take their 1-4 record (0-3 in Southwest Conference play) to Fayetteville, Ark. this Saturday when they face the 2-2, 0-1 Razorbacks.

Dykes said, "We've got our work cut out for us in Fayetteville — They got a tiger by the tail last Saturday night themselves. I guess TCU took out many long years of frustration because they hadn't won up there, gosh, since before the war."

SPIKE'S QUOTE OF THE WEEK

"I turned the radio on and they said 34-10. I said I knew it was goin' to be that way. I thought ole TCU would play better than that though. Sharon said, I believe you are wrong Albert, Einstein of course, and I was wrong."

Raider wrestlers grapple to gain campus notoriety

By BILL WHIPKEY
Contributing Writer

To wrestling fans around the world, nothing brings more enjoyment than seeing Hulk Hogan pile-drive Jessie "The Body" Ventura.

But to members of the Texas Tech wrestling club, wrestling is more than just head-locks and half-nelsons; it is somewhat of an art form.

The club's members said wrestling teaches them how to be individually stronger but still have team support.

"You have to depend more on yourself than you do someone else," said co-captain Paul Alder. "You have to push yourself, unlike team sports where others help you along."

Participating in wrestling develops a sense of "heart." Members can use this courage and can apply it to the difficulties of everyday life.

The Tech captains said a good wrestler has the ability to balance emotions, use quickness, strength and endurance and be able to draw from his "heart," or desire.

"The ability to put yourself mentally or physically beyond what you're capable of doing, and be able to balance your emotions and logical thinking makes a good wrestler," Sauer said.

The wrestling club was named an Outstanding Organization by the Student Organizations Services for 1990.

John Winters, assistant director of Rec Sports, has been the club's sponsor since the fall of 1988. His duties consist of administrative responsibilities from the scheduling of tournaments to the purchasing of equipment.

The club welcomes anyone interested in the sport of wrestling. Practices are Monday, Wednesday, and Friday from 3 to 5 p.m. in the mat room of the Student Recreation Center.

Tech students will have a good chance to see the Tech club in action when Tech hosts a tournament starting at 9:30 a.m. on Nov. 17 on the recourts of the SRC. Teams from Southern Methodist, Texas A&M, Southwest Texas, New Mexico and other clubs will compete.

Raiders prepped for SWC action Hatcher, Duncan lift Reds in 6-3 win; Pirates drop second straight, trail 2-1

By BELLE MILLER
The University Daily

The No. 12 Texas Tech volleyball team prepares to take on Texas A&M this Wednesday as they begin a stretch of six consecutive Southwest Conference matches.

The Red Raiders travel to College Station to play the Aggies and then return to Lubbock to play their first home game in three weeks against No. 4 Texas Sunday.

"This is kind of our second season now," coach Mike Jones said at his weekly press conference Monday. "This is the most important part."

"Being 17-1 is nice, and it's fun, but if we fall on our faces in conference, it doesn't mean a whole lot."

Jones said the conference games are important if Tech wants to see post-season NCAA Tournament play.

"For us to continue working on a NCAA bid, we have to beat the conference teams now because that's what matters."

The Raiders' 14-1 away record is their best road record since sanctioned volleyball began at Tech in 1982. Tech ranked first in the conference and third in the nation in dig averages last week at 21.5 digs per game.

The Raiders have won 15 straight games and have been forced beyond the three game minimum only five times this season. Only one match, the 3-2 win over Arizona State on Sept. 1, has been played to the maximum five games.

A&M is presently 7-11 overall and 1-1 in the conference. The Aggies lead the series against the Raiders 23-14.

"That's a real big match for us, as it always is when you play the Aggies in anything," Jones said.

The Lady Longhorns dealt Tech its first loss on Sept. 26 in Austin in a four-game decision. The one game loss for Texas during that match-up is the only conference game lost by the Lady Longhorns so far this season.

Texas, currently 17-0, plays the Raiders on Sunday. They have won 57 straight SWC matches.

Jones said he hopes there will be a large turnout for what could be the most exciting re-match of the season against the Lady Longhorns. The match will be played at 1 p.m. Sunday in the North End of the Student Rec Center.

"We're hoping to get at least 1,000 people there. I know if we get a crowd that big, that's going to help the girls out a lot. I think they are really looking forward to playing them," Jones said.

Texas currently leads the conference in four categories, including team kills average (15.13), hitting percentage (.264), assists average (12.24) and blocks average (2.76).

Texas leads the all-time series against Tech 30-6.

Lisa Clark continues to lead the Raiders in hitting percentage at .337. Sabrina Zenon is the kill leader with an average of 3.33 kills per game.

Junior middle blocker Chris Martin is Tech's Whataburger Player of the Week. Martin had 16 kills, 17 digs and nine blocks for the weekend. Martin joins Kristen Sparks, Clark and Sheila Solomon as Tech's Whataburger Players of the Week thus far this season.

New SWC rules hit incoming athletes

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

Southwest Conference presidents enacted a policy Sunday to stiffen academic eligibility requirements for all student athletes.

The policy, which is tentatively set to take effect Aug. 19, 1991, is the stiffest in the league's 76-year history and goes beyond the current NCAA eligibility standards.

"More or less, and it is pending legal action, it is a proposed ban on all non-qualifying athletes who don't meet the criteria," said Bo Carter, director of media relations for the SWC.

The new standards affect recruits and walk-on athletes, requiring them to score at least 700 on the SAT or 18 on the ACT college entrance exams, and to have a minimum 2.0 high school grade point average in core classes.

Current SWC policy requires student athletes not meeting the college entrance exam requirements or minimum GPA standards to sit out a year of competition during his or her first year.

The new regulations state student athletes not meeting those requirements upon enrollment would be disqualified from competing in athletics for the remainder of their tenure at that institution.

"In essence, if you go right into an institution (without meeting the requirements), even under the assistance of financial aid, you are banned from ever participating in athletics at that school," Carter said.

If student athletes meet minimum exam and GPA requirements after their first year, they are then eligible to compete.

"One scenario would be if a student athlete had a 1.96 GPA and qualified every other way, and if their parents wanted to pay their way through school, that's the one legal hassle so far. They don't know how it's going to be affected," Carter said.

Carter said this proposal is something the SWC presidents have been considering for quite some time.

"The presidents have been talking about it for about a year at various functions," Carter said. "And I know that right now the Southeast Conference and the Ivy League, although it's not Division I in football, already have provisions for no partial qualifiers."

Three of the SWC's private schools, Southern Methodist, Texas Christian and Rice already have similar policies.

Texas Tech coach Spike Dykes does not agree with the SWC proposal.

"I thought they built these universities for kids," Dykes said at his weekly press conference. "I've said this a million times, I think it's terrible that you have to go through life with a brand on you because you didn't pass a stupid test."

PITTSBURGH — The Cincinnati Reds broke their hitting slump and Zane Smith's magic on Monday to take a 2-1 lead over the Pittsburgh Pirates in the National League playoffs.

Neither team did much hitting in the first two games, combining for only 10 runs and 23 hits. But the surprise was how easily the Reds got to Smith for a 6-3 victory.

In 10 starts for the Pirates after being acquired from Montreal on Aug. 8, Smith gave up nine earned runs in 75 innings. In Game 3, the Reds got five runs off Smith in five innings.

The power came from unlikely sources, too.

Former Pirate Billy Hatcher hit a two-run homer in the second inning and Mariano Duncan snapped a 2-2 tie with a three-run homer in the fifth and drove in another run in the ninth with his third hit of the game to make it 6-3.

Game 4 is scheduled for 8:18 p.m. Tuesday night as first-game starters Jose Rijo of the Reds and Bob Walk of the Pirates go at it again.

The Reds scored only 20 runs in their last nine regular-season games and showed no signs of breaking out of it in the first two games, either.

Both teams, however, got their wish in Game 3 as the skies were a steely gray and the shadows of Friday's mid-afternoon start were no problem.

Hatcher opened the fifth with a double and moved to third on winning pitcher Danny Jackson's sacrifice. Barry Larkin, in a 6-for-27 slump, reached on an infield single with Hatcher holding at third.

Duncan then hit a hanging curve over the left-field fence. The Reds second baseman was 0-for-8 in the playoffs and had only four hits in his previous 30 at-bats.

Hatcher gave the Reds a 2-0 lead when he homered to left after Joe Oliver singled with two outs in the second.

The Pirates traded Hatcher to the Reds on April 3 for minor leaguers Mike Roessler and Jeff Richardson.

Jackson was sharp in the first two innings but then appeared to lose a little velocity. The Pirates tied the score with two runs in the fourth inning and it could have been worse.

Jay Bell led off with a double, Andy

Van Slyke walked and Bobby Bonilla singled home a run. One out later, Carmelo Martinez doubled to tie the score and Don Slaught was intentionally walked to load the bases.

But Jackson struck out Jose Lind and got Smith on a bouncer back to the mound to end the inning. The Pirates had the bases loaded and two outs in the fifth inning but Martinez popped out to short. Jackson, 6-6 during the season, was replaced by Rob Dibble after Lind doubled with one out in the sixth. Dibble struck out pinch-hitter Gary Redus and Jeff King to end the threat.

Randy Myers struck out the side in the ninth for his second save of the playoffs.
