Gubernatorial race heating up

By The Associated Press

DALLAS — The race for the Texas governor's mansion heated up Thursday when Republican Clayton Williams called rival Ann Richards a liar to her face during a campaign appearance and refused to shake hands.

Appearing together before the Greater Dallas Crime Commission for an infrequent joint appearance, Williams walked over to Richards' side of the stage to greet supporters.

When the Democrat extended her hand, Williams declined to shake it, saying, "I'm here to call you a liar today."

Richards responded, "I'm sorry, Clayton."

Williams then added, "That's what you are. You've lied about me; you've lied about Mark White, and you've lied about Jim Mattox. I'm going to finish this deal today."

Richards defeated White and Mattox in a bitter Democratic primary.

Williams said he was upset that Richards was spreading rumors by trying to link him with a federal investigation into alleged drug money laundering.

When asked if he had indeed called Richards a liar, Williams responded: "Yes, I did. The truth hurts."

Asked why he refused to shake hands, Williams said, "A handshake is a sign of trust. I withdraw that trust. There is a line that she's crossed. The latest assault on my bank is so unreasonable that it's time to throw down the gauntlet."

Richards responded to Williams' comment by saying, "I think it was unkind."

But she added: "I guess I don't understand what he means that I've been lying."

"I think it's important that Clayton Williams tell the people of Texas exactly what kind of businessman he is."

At a news conference Wednesday, Richards cited a newspaper report which said federal agents were investigating allegations against a Houston loan broker, Lloyd G. Williams Jr., who has done business with ClayDesta National Bank, the Midland bank owned by the Republican nominee.

Richards suggested that the investigation may be why Williams won't debate her. She also contends that she has gained up to six points on her challenger in the latest polls.

"I think we have the momentum, and we're going to peak just right," she said Thursday.

She said Williams' campaign has not been able to "shield him as much as they would like."

"When he talks he gets in trouble," she said.

Senate approves ad hoc teaching report

By MARK LACK
The University Daily

The Faculty Senate unanimously approved a report Wednesday concerning the state of teaching at Texas Tech.

Authored by a senate ad hoc committee, the report outlined teaching at Tech and made recommendations to professors, the central administration and to colleges and departments.

The recommendations included a list of ways to improve the teaching conditions at Tech as well as how to maintain academic excellence.

The senate also approved a report from the Faculty Task Force making provisions and goals for faculty evaluation by students. The provisions allow students to use a rating scale to evaluate an instructor as well as the overall quality of the course.

Executive Vice President and Provost Donald Haragan addressed the senate about the Strategic Planning Initiative, a self-study of all departments and colleges.

"The objectives are to address the university's resources and to redistribute the funds into the programs that need them," Haragan said. The provost said that as Tech emerges into a research university, the quality of undergraduate education will not suffer.

In other business, the senate accepted a provision for affirmative action hiring policy for female faculty.

The senate amended relocation assistance from a specially established fund for the hiring of women faculty in underrepresented areas of the university.

Air Force grounds training flights in Saudi Arabia to discuss safety with pilots

By The Associated Press

Britain's foreign secretary said Thursday that the international coalition against Iraq is a vital force for world peace, and said Saddam Hussein must be told force will be used if Iraq doesn't pull out of Kuwait.

The U.S. Air Force, meanwhile, grounded all training flights in the Persian Gulf region for 24 hours to discuss air safety with pilots. The order followed separate accidents this week in which 12 U.S. servicemen have died.

The grounding was declared Wednesday at noon Saudi time and lifted at noon Thursday, said Pete Williams, the chief Pentagon spokesman.

A group of about 360 Western evacuees from Iraq and Kuwait landed in Britain on Thursday in the first such flight in nearly three weeks. Most of the passengers were Americans and many were children.

The Americans and Canadians on the flight were to leave Friday for Raleigh-Durham International Airport in North Carolina, said Andrew Varney, Gatwick airport's director of public affairs.

While Westerners continued to flee occupied Kuwait with tales of low food supplies and looting by Iraqi troops, international pressure grew against Saddam to withdraw from the oil-rich emirate he invaded and annexed.

Speaking at the annual conference of the governing Conservative Party in Bournemouth, England, British Foreign Secretary Douglas Hurd urged the world to remain united against Iraq's occupation.

"If it does not (hold), then despite the coalition, despite the leadership of the United States, despite the cooperation of the Soviet Union — then we shall be back in a world of anarchy punctuated by explosions of force," Hurd said.

"The clouds would have extinguished the light. We cannot allow this to happen."

Hurd also said Saddam should know that force will be used if Iraq does not pull out of Kuwait, which his troops invaded on Aug. 2.

"Day by day we must build in the minds of the Iraqis the certainty that they have to leave Kuwait — if not peacefully, then forced out by military action," Hurd said.

Monday's killing by Israeli police of 19 Arabs during a riot in Jerusalem brought international outcry and united Arab nations against Israel, a close ally of the United States.

Bush says he would trade tax hike for capital gains

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — President Bush said Thursday he could trade a modest increase in taxes on affluent Americans for a deep cut in capital gains rates but that it was "a waste of time" to try to push such a deal through a divided Congress.

Instead, Bush called on lawmakers to put aside that battle and come up with a $500-billion deficit-reduction plan that contains neither element.

Congressional committees were working toward that goal Thursday, eight days before the deadline for finding the half-trillion dollars in spending cuts and tax increases.

By most accounts, higher Medicare premiums and taxes on alcohol, cigarettes and gasoline are likely to be included.

"We believe we have made progress," Senate Democratic Leader George Mitchell said after a meeting with Republican Leader Bob Dole and members of the Finance Committee.

Trying to end two days of confusion surrounding the president's position on taxes, the White House laid out — but said it wouldn't push — a plan that would combine higher taxes on the 500,000 or so wealthiest Americans with lower capital gains rates for people who profit from sales of stocks, real estate and other investments.

Bush, trying to put the pressure on lawmakers, said, "The meter is running, but look, I can't dictate to Congress."

Correction

A story in Wednesday's issue of The University Daily concerning the possibility of a local law firm filing a lawsuit against LISD over the school district's dress code gave an incorrect date for the deadline imposed on LISD for a response. The correct date is Oct. 17.

Kasparov now leads 1½ points to ½ point in the best-of-24-game match.

Countries worldwide approaching ag department for disease studies

By TARA MULDRON
The University Daily

Countries worldwide have approached researchers in Texas Tech's College of Agricultural Sciences for studies on ecosystems and disease. Conclusions of research such as studies conducted in agriculture at Tech continue to be analyzed on an international scale.

"I have had a broad look at animal nutrition and grazing in the United States, Mexico, North Africa and South America," said Fred Bryant, professor of range and wildlife management.

"My students and I are looking at management, production and nutrition on sheep, llamas and alpacas in the High Andes of South America," Bryant said.

"The government of Bolivia is requesting for us to discover means of increasing the number of alpacas simply for financial reasons," he said.

Alpacas are animals similar to llamas but possessing expensive fur, with fibers resembling cashmere.

The llamas are valuable to the Indians of Peru who share an ecosystem with the animals.

"My students and I study domestic animals. In wildlife, we focus mainly on habitat management and the relationships between man's activities and how animals respond to them," he said.

The frequency of contagious diseases such as Lyme disease and bubonic plague is a focus of many of the professor's studies, he said.

In studies dealing with highly contagious diseases, an unwanted danger is contracting a disease being studied. Contractions are recurrent, but researchers such as Bryant work closely with student researchers to try and prevent disease afflictions.

In other research, Bryant and his students have established that extensive foliage removal in a natural habitat has an adverse impact on white-tailed deer.

The United States Agency for International Development funds the department for much of its research.

Bryant said the students who assist him have played an important role in compiling and analyzing information for the research the professor oversees.

"Graduate students make you famous," he said. "They do all the work while we (professors) get all the credit."

Arlington dry cleaner announces candidacy for Texas governor

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

Tyler Pierson, an Arlington dry cleaner, announced his candidacy for governor because he is fed up with over-spending and over-taxing, he said Wednesday.

Pierson said in a phone interview that a vote for him is a vote for "none of the above." Pierson made his announcement on the premise that election officials will not count write-in votes on ballots unless an individual has publicly announced his or her candidacy.

Pierson's campaign proposals range from dealing with civil rights questions to changing methods of incarcerating criminals.

Pierson said he opposes Texas Tech professor John Orem's research of Sudden Infant Death Syndrome.

CAMPAIGN

Orem's use of cats in his research is cruelty, he said.

"I do not see the sense of using animals for (Orem's) research," he said. "I wouldn't cut off the funding until we found another source for the research."

Pierson, who is pro-choice, said the government should not regulate abortions. "That decision needs to be between women and God. There's not a judge, a jury or a legislature that should make that decision."

Solutions for curbing substance abuse across Texas include the state educating alcohol and drug addiction counselors, Pierson said.

"We take addicts out of society, dry them out and throw them right back in," he said. "We have to realize drug and alcohol addiction is a sickness."

Pierson said the state should use closed military bases to house non-violent criminals and reserve prisons for dangerous criminals.

Capital punishment is not an effective crime deterrent, he said. A crime-reducing measure includes increasing funds for juvenile reforms before juveniles begin careers in crime.

"We have a chance to raise our kids in a certain fashion, and parents should instill moral values in their kids before they start school," he said.

The state legislature should not determine public education policies, Pierson said. Local administrators, teachers and parents should govern the schools. Without parental involvement, the system cannot improve, he said.

"These same parents who say they don't have time to spend with their kids spend four to eight hours a week watching football, baseball, basketball and soccer," he said. "They could be checking homework or helping teachers at school."

Pierson said he supports year-round schooling because the United States is losing ground in education.

"When (students) have those three months off, they lose a good portion of what they have learned that year," he said. "(Students) forget almost everything because they are not challenged."

Along with an extended school year, Pierson said educators should stress academics more than sports. "All (educators) care about is how fast (students) can run and how fast they can throw a football," he said. "If a student carries a 4.0, they ask how fast he can run a 40."

School athletics should be publicly supported because tremendous amounts of state money fund the programs, he said.

Pierson proposed tax incentives to companies that use alternate energy sources. "We don't cater to those sources because we have so much tied up in oil," he said. "We don't need to put all of our eggs in one basket."

Pierson said his Republican opponent, Clayton Williams, will not support research of alternate energy sources. "Clayton's company is drilling oil wells as we speak," he said. "(Williams) is not going to find alternate energy sources."

Pierson said college students should vote because of the burden the next generation inherits of trying to pay off the state and national debts.

Pierson, who has not voted for eight years, said people need to take control of government by voting and participating in the political process. "I've been apathetic about voting, but I'm doing something about it now," he said. "I've got a legitimacy to complain from here on out."

U.S. hypocritical in choosing allies, fighting enemies

A.M. Rosenthal
Columnist

Consider, please, this story of two Middle Eastern presidents:

One of them murders and tortures his own people, invades his neighbors, swears death to Israel, trains terrorist gangs and dispatches them to foreign lands.

The planes, tanks, and missiles of mass destruction he commands were sold to him by the West and the Soviet Union.

The United States now recognizes him as a deadly threat, marshals a world coalition against him, threatens him with war crime trials, and debates only how to end his life and rule — quickly through war, or slowly through the hunger of his people.

The other Middle Eastern president murders and tortures his own people, invades his neighbors, swears death to Israel, trains terrorist gangs and dispatches them to foreign lands. The planes, tanks and missiles of mass destruction he commands were sold to him by the West and the Soviet Union.

The United States now sends its secretary of state to visit him, welcomes him as an important ally, and talks about him being part of the great new Middle Eastern order.

But wait — there is one difference between Saddam Hussein, our enemy, and Hafez Assad, our ally.

The dictator of Syria bears inescapable responsibility for the deaths of far more Americans — including 189 blown apart in the bombing of Pan American 103.

Relatives of Americans whose lives ended over Lockerbie see their country consort with and make an ally of Syria.

Kathleen R. Flynn, mother of John Patrick Flynn, murdered in the air at 21, wrote to John H. Kelly, an assistant secretary of state:

"Am I missing something? Is Syria not on the State Department's list of countries that sponsored terrorism? Is not President Assad the same man who has protected and supported Ahmad Jibril, the terrorists responsible for the bombing of Pan Am 103? Are not the atrocities committed by this Syrian leader well documented by our State Department?"

Kelly is the Middle Eastern expert famous for trying to quiet congressional fears of Saddam, just before the invasion of Kuwait. No reply has come yet from Kelly.

But when Secretary of State James Baker visited Assad, he did talk to him about Pan Am 103. The United States has asked before that Syria expel from Damascus the Palestinian terror gang headed by Jibril. Around the world, intelligence agents are convinced that this gang destroyed the plane with an Iranian contract and Syrian contrivance.

Straight faced, Assad said that if sufficient evidence is presented, he will take action, maybe.

The evidence is in his mirror.

For years Assad paid and trained the Jibril gang.

Someday, Assad may order the death of Jibril, to shut his mouth. But in any Western court of law, the president of Syria would be convicted as an accessory to murder, before and after the fact. Yes, I know the official answer — U.S. national interest is to gather as many Arab allies against Saddam as possible. This is the Washington version of the old Middle Eastern cynicism that the enemy of my enemy is my friend. The problem is that time after time this "pragmatism" works violently against American national interest, not for it. The reason is that the U.S. refuses to tell the world the truth — we need this particular dictator for a while, but he is no less a murderer today than yesterday, and soon will be a threat to us again.

There is a long list of American and Israeli politicians who were willing to ignore Assad's river of blood for the dream that they could pacify him. They are gone; Assad is not. Saddam and Assad are creatures of the only form of society the Arab Middle East has known — dictatorship. They hate each other because of colliding ambitions to be the biggest Arab dictator.

Dictatorships are inherently unstable. Unstable dictators with huge armies are inherently dangerous. We forget that and arm them to kill us. We learned it again with Saddam. One day, we will learn it still again, from Assad.

Pigskin support

To The Editor:

We are writing this on behalf of the Texas Tech football team. In the four years we have attended Tech, this year represents the least amount of coverage that the football team has received. It is obvious that the reason for this lack of coverage is based on your own view of the football team's success.

You have a tendency to only cover the opponent's team and how great they are; you focus on "their" outstanding players when you fail to recognize we have outstanding players of our own. For instance, Rodney Blackshear who is the ONLY player in Aggie history to score against the 12th man team. Now isn't that something to write about? Why haven't there been any articles on him?

Tech should hold their heads high in honor of that play. Another outstanding player who should be recognized is Anthony (Tony) Manyweather, who has not received enough credit for his outstanding plays. Instead, he has recently been submitted to a small amount of bad publicity, but we seem to forget this is the player who helped us win many games last year against nationally-ranked teams and helped put Tech in the top 25.

Also, we seem to have forgotten Anthony Lynn who has rushed for over 100 yards a game and has scored most of our touchdowns this year. These are just a few of the outstanding players the Red Raiders are fortunate to have.

We feel that as short as the football season is, there should be substantial weekly coverage in the paper that represents Tech.

In closing, we would like to say to ALL football players that no matter how close the game is or how far, whether you win or lose, we give our full support to a team that we feel plays to the very end, and who deserves a lot more than they are given credit for. And anyone who is a TRUE Raider will feel the same way.

Wrong idea

To The Editor:

Dear Name Withheld:
I'm writing in response to your letter in Tuesday's edition where you attacked Mike Telle's comments regarding the issue of rape. It appears to me that you were arguing the wrong point.

Telle was responding to a previous article in which a supposed authority alleged that the majority of campus rapes nationwide occurred at fraternity parties, and that women should be encouraged to stay away from these parties altogether. In rebuttal, Telle asserted that, to his knowledge, such acts had not occurred within the Tech greek system and further that precautionary steps were being taken.

Then you took exception to these remarks, citing lack of sensitivity on his behalf toward rape victims. Compassion was not the topic of the article! It is entirely possible that Telle feels the same concern for those offended as you do. But either due to the narrow scope of the article in which his comments appeared, or more likely, due to some unscrupulous editing by the interviewer, these views were not expressed.

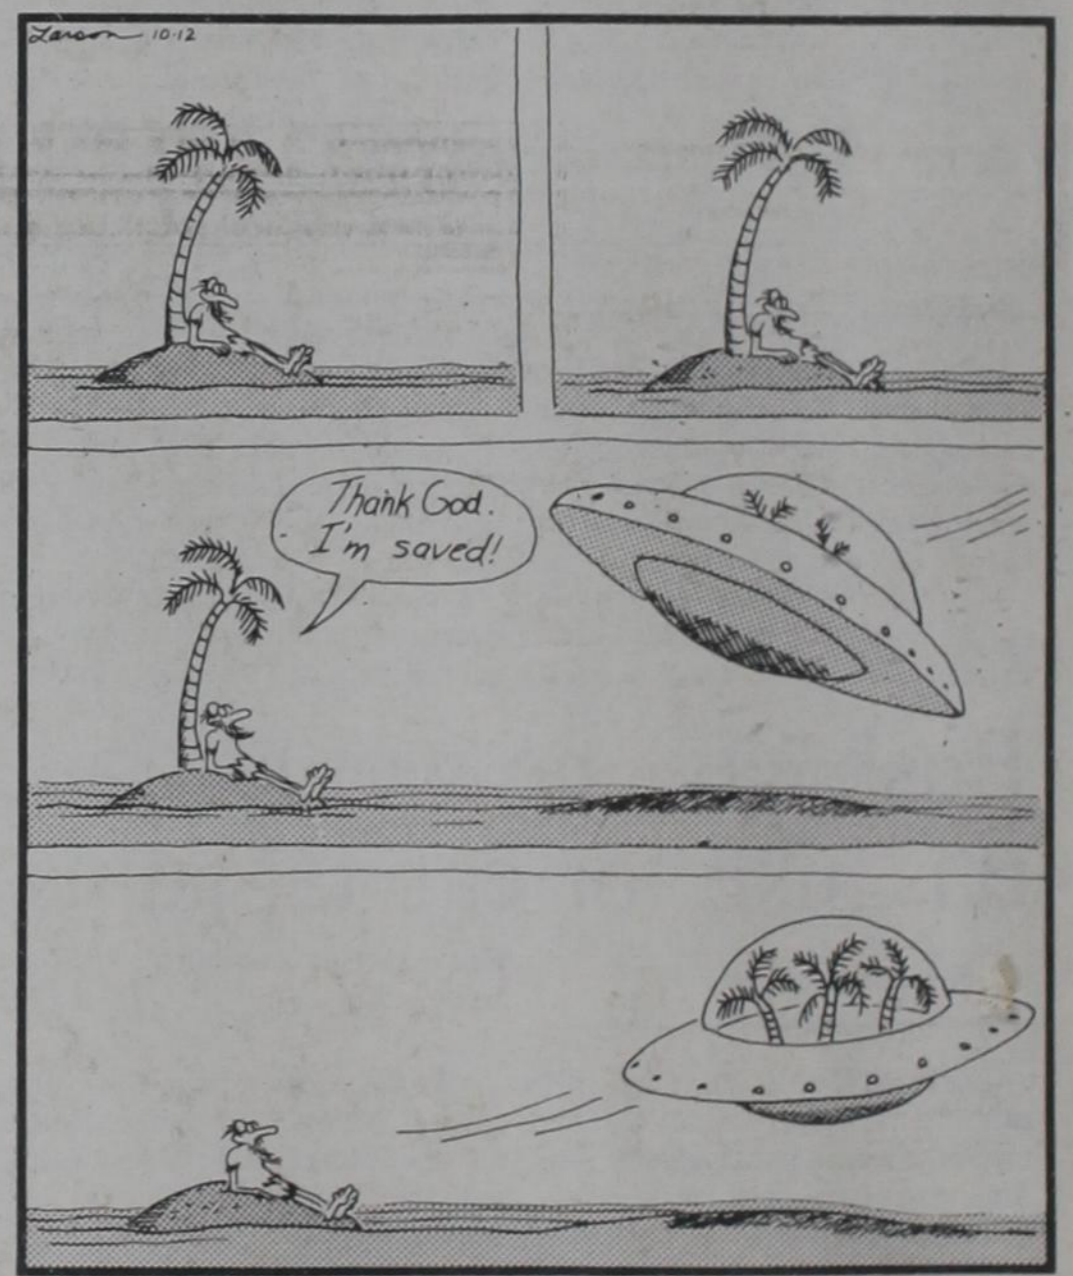

Nevertheless, you managed to construe this outlet to vent your frustration toward our society's failure to recognize the prevalence of rape and the consequences suffered; your attack was simply not warranted in this instance.

You further labeled Telle's comments as cowardice...and yet you are the anonymous writer?

Author: move if incinerator is installed

By COURTNEY CHRISTIAN
The University Daily

There are still many loopholes concerning the disposal of toxic waste and other polluting by-products of our high-tech society, said Ron Harris, a Los Angeles freelance writer and researcher of toxic waste incinerators.

Harris authored a series of public relations articles on toxic waste disposal based on author and scientist L. Ron Hubbard's book, Clear Body, Clear Mind.

"Each state has different laws about the amounts of toxic waste allowable in the environment. The loopholes that exist have to do with the quantities. There are variances (between states) as to what substances are considered toxic and what levels of toxicity are," Harris said.

Jim Crocker, the director of the combustion division of the permits program of the Texas Air Control Board, said federal regulations (Resource Conservation and Recovery Act) do not exist on the burning of toxic waste as a fuel. Each state has its own regulations for incinerating waste.

"What people are perceiving as a loophole is that there are no federal regulations concerning burning toxic waste as a fuel. A lot of toxic waste is fuel because it is derived from oil and has a high heating value," Crocker said.

National legislators have proposed sanctions on the federal level for the burning of toxic waste as a fuel, but no proposals have passed yet, he said.

Harris said burning toxic waste is not necessarily the best solution for detoxifying substances. "The European solution was to detoxify industry, and the United States' solution was to go ahead and deal with toxic materials and then try to get rid of it."

Consequently, U.S. industries produce 100 times the amount of hazardous waste per person than the average European country.

According to passages cited by Harris in Hubbard's book, millions of tons of toxic emissions enter the air, water, food and eventually all animal life.

"Every person in the United States has dioxin (a by-product of toxic waste incineration) in their system," Harris said.

Dioxin, a substance used in chemical warfare, is a man-made chemical produced by carbon, hydrogen, oxygen and chlorine combined with high heat in manufacturing and incineration.

Hubbard outlines the physical and mental health effects of toxins in the body.

Students should beware of flu season

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

College students should beware of the approaching flu season, says an official at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center.

Kae Hentges, a Certified Health Education Specialist, said students should find out if they are in a high risk group which would make having the flu a dangerous situation.

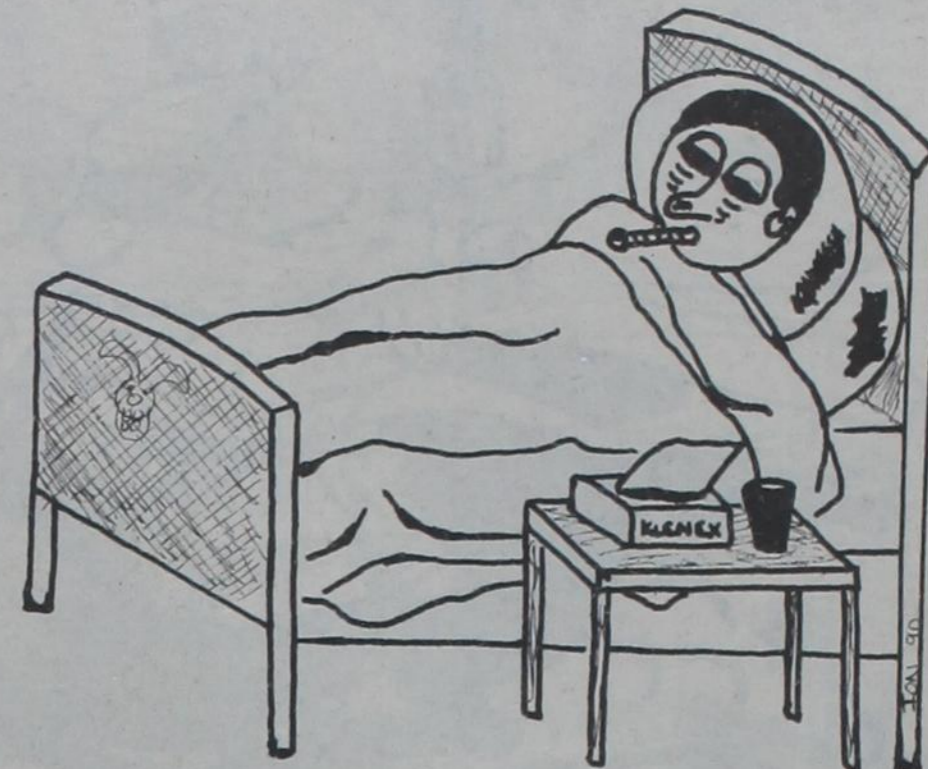

Influenza is an acute, contagious respiratory infection characterized by fever, chills, headache and an unpleasant aching feeling all over, Hentges said. Flu is caused by viruses that last for four or five days.

Each year the Center for Disease Control predicts what viruses will be around then makes a vaccine to prevent the flu, Hentges said.

"The flu vaccine is different each year because viruses change from season to season," Hentges said. "This year the flu will be caused by the Taiwan-, Shanghai- and Yamagato-like antigens."

According to Hentges, high risk groups include:

- Individuals 65 years or older.
- Those who are chronically ill.
- Children or young adults with chronic disorders such as heart conditions.
- Health care personnel.
- Children and teens who are receiving long-term aspirin therapy and therefore may be at risk of developing Reye's Syndrome after influenza.

• People infected with the human immunodeficiency virus (HIV) also may be at risk for flu complications.

Hentges said influenza kills 20,000 people in the high risk category each year.

"People should get vaccinated in September and October because a minimum of two weeks is required to develop immunity," Hentges said. "The flu season peaks in December and January, so getting a shot early can really make a difference."

Hentges said one good way to help avoid transmitting and getting the flu is to wash hands often.

Hentges said because there are more than 200 different viruses, it is very difficult to develop a vaccine.

"Each time we have the flu, we develop immunity to that particular strain," she said.

"If you visit a place that you have not been to before, you are apt to get a cold or the flu because you may run into a virus you have not been subjected to before."

Tech students in high risk groups who would like to get vaccinated can go to the Lubbock Department of Health at 19th and Texas and get a flu shot for $3.

It's a dark and stormy night. You've missed the Number 12 bus and you're stuck. Every car that passes is a glistening new Ford. Their owners have taken advantage of the Ford-Mercury College Graduate Purchase Program. They let Gene Messer Ford arrange pre-approved financing from Ford Credit, and $400 cash back from Ford Motor Company. Stop catching the bus and join us. Graduate with a Bachelor's or advanced degree between April 1, 1989 and December 31, 1990; take delivery from our stock by December 31, 1990 (or place a factory order by October 1, 1990).

To qualify for pre-approved credit, you must have verifiable employment beginning within 120 days of vehicle purchase. Your salary must be sufficient to cover living expenses as well as a car payment. A prior credit history isn't necessary, but if you have one it must be satisfactory to Ford Credit.

Supporting characters bring Tech's 'Grease' to life

By CRISSIE McMENNAMY
The University Daily

"Grease" is the word around the Texas Tech theater department these days as the essence of 1959 is brought musically to the stage.

You can catch Danny and the rest of the Rydell High crew singing and dancing in "Grease" at the University Theater at 8 p.m. Friday and Saturday, and 2 p.m. Sunday. The play will also be performed at 8 p.m. Oct. 18, 19 and 20 and at 2 p.m. on Oct. 21.

Originally a Broadway musical, and later a hit film starring John Travolta and Olivia Newton-John, "Grease" is certainly not new to the entertainment world. The musical tale of the unlikely relationship between a Greaser named Danny (Andrew Thayer) and a proper young girl named Sandy (Debbie Davis), "Grease" portrays many aspects of 1959 high school life.

Focusing on the Pink Ladies and the Greasers of Rydell High, the script allows many characters to give fine performances. Rizzo (Leigh Ann McNeil) commands the Pink Ladies, and in Tech's production, she commands the stage. With her vivid facial expressions, McNeil makes the most of her character's attitude. But even her attitude is topped by her voice in such tunes as "There are Worse Things I Could Do."

As the Greasers, Danny and Kenickie (Michael Endy) each give strong performances, despite the fact their singing is sometimes strained.

As with any production, it is often the characters of lesser importance who bring added life to the stage, and "Grease" is no exception. The school geek, Eugene (Lamar Wilson), conveys his horn-rimmed humor throughout the play while doing his best to dance.

Vince Fontaine (Steven Earl-Edwards) is the disc jockey who would much rather spin a high school girl's heart than a record in a brief but humorous performance.

As the smoke fills the stage for Frenchy's dream sequence, the Teen Angel (James Ivey) gets his chance to sing "Beauty School Dropout" in an attempt to persuade her to return to high school.

Directed by Thomas Jones, "Grease" explores many of the outlets available to enhance a stage production. For example, during the school dance, the dance-action is frozen for seconds at a time to spotlight certain couples. When the music resumes, so does the dance until another couple becomes spotlighted.

NC-17 rating fails to solve mature-audience movie controversy

MOVIE GUIDE

Once again the Motion Picture Association of America is on the edge of controversy — this time for a blunder that could have easily been avoided.

The controversy concerns the use of the MPAA's film ratings system, which on certain films tarnishes the film's image or scares people away from the film entirely.

Originally the rating scale consisted of G-, PG- and R- ratings with an X-rating for controversial films (controversy usually involving sex) like "Midnight Cowboy" and "Last Tango in Paris."

Then the adult-film or "blue movie" industry began to make a name for itself. They gladly received the controversial X-rating. As the adult-film's prominence in the movie industry grew, so did the association of an X-rating with pornographic films. As a result, mainstream films which received an X-rating were obliged to cut scenes from the film to get an R-rating and avoid the stigma of an X-rating.

Film companies eventually got wise and started to use the X-rating controversy to their advantage. Films like "Crimes of Passion," "9½ Weeks" and "Angel Heart" used their battle with the MPAA board over X-ratings to get publicity for their films. Ironically, though all three films eventually made the changes necessary to receive an R-rating for theatrical release, they have unrated versions available on video.

A new argument has recently arisen — Why do violent films almost automatically receive an R-rating whereas more risqué films receive an X-rating? This year, as in the previous years, violence won out over nudity in the battle over MPAA ratings.

Films like "Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down," "The Cook, The Thief, His Wife and Her Lover," "Wild at Heart" and "Henry and June" all have been branded with the stigma of an X-rating. Graphically violent films such as "Total Recall," "Robocop 2" and the "Nightmare on Elm Street" series received R-ratings, despite depictions of maiming, bloody gun battles and almost every human organ being ripped or blown out of victims' bodies.

In all fairness, "Henry: Portrait of a Serial Killer" received an X because of graphic violence and "Wild at Heart" had its share of maimings and blood-caked fight scenes.

Regardless of the reason for the rating, the X-rated films were not about to take the injustice of the ratings assignment without a fight. Many films appealed their cases, only to lose and be branded "X" anyway.

"Wild at Heart" was forced to make changes to receive an R-rating in the United States. This came after "Wild at Heart" won the best film award at the Cannes Film Festival — X-rating and all.

"Hearts" director David Lynch was none too pleased at having to shred bits of his film in order to get a studio to release his film. He did anyway. The studio simply refused to release the film under an X-rating and receive a "death-sentence" at the box-office.

But the MPAA had a chance to remedy this entire controversy.

Finally realizing legitimate films no longer needed to be stigmatized with an X-rating, the board decided to adopt a new ratings scale. They had a similar problem after "Indiana Jones and the Temple of Doom" came out. Parents objected to its graphic heart-removal scene, so the industry adopted the infamous PG-13 rating which the film world adopted without a fuss.

Now the MPAA gives us the NC-17 rating, meaning no children, regardless of whether they're with their parents, may attend the film.

Sounds like a great compromise — add the new NC-17, keep the X-rating and now people can differentiate between the two. People will no longer get "Tie Me Up, Tie Me Down's," risqué use of sex in an observation of the battle of the sexes confused with "Debbie Does Dallas's" story of a cheerleader who has sex with everyone in sight.

But here's where the MPAA screwed up. They have done away with the X-rating. Nice job guys.

Now what's to show the difference between the two films? One uses TV commercials and plays in obscure theaters while the other uses advertisements in pornographic magazines and plays in obscure theaters.

If the industry had kept the X-rating solely for the adult-film industry that would be one thing. Instead, they just changed the "X" to "NC-17" and kept the problem.

Simply put, there needs to be a division between risqué films where sex is incorporated into the story and hard-line adult-films where there is no story, just raw sex.

'X' disappears in new movie ratings

The Motion Picture Association of America has replaced its X rating with a new NC-17 rating.

G Suggested for general audiences. All ages admitted.

PG Parental guidance suggested; some material may not be suitable for pre-teenagers.

PG-13 Parents urged to give special guidance for attendance by children under 13; some material may be inappropriate for your children.

Buffalo Bass Classic highlights weekend

Mike Pender
Associate Sports Editor

South Plains bass anglers have their sights set on the Fourth Annual Bass Classic at Buffalo Springs Lake this Saturday.

With more than $3,000 in cash and prizes being given away, Sheila Martin, Buffalo Springs' promotions director, said she hopes to attract more fishermen than in the previous years of the tournament.

Last year, 83 people participated in the one-day tournament and Martin expects to see that number increase to 100 on Saturday.

As of Thursday, Martin said the number of pre-registered fishermen was lower than in past years. She said most of the participants have been waiting for the weather report before registering.

Fishermen can register the day of the tournament at the Buffalo Springs Lake Marina Restaurant starting at 6 a.m. The fee is $30 and there also is an optional "striper pot" for $5. The registration fee includes entrance into the park and boat fees.

During the tournament, the largest bass weighed in every hour will win $100 for the angler. At the end of the tournament the angler with the largest bass for the day will receive $500. A $1000 tagged bass has been released in the lake along with eight $100 bass.

All fish caught in the tournament, except trophy-sized lunkers, become property of Buffalo Spring Lake. Only black bass caught on artificial baits will be weighed.

The competition will begin at 7 a.m. and run through 3 p.m. Radio Station KFYO-AM 790 will update the tournament every hour.

OUTDOOR NOTES

A Deer Park fisherman won the most money ever given in freshwater tournament competition in the Big Sam Big Bass Super Derby on Lake Sam Rayburn last weekend.

DeWayne Morrison landed a 10.526-pound bass to win the first prize purse of $500,000.

The second-place angler, Rudy Gautreaux of Baker, La., received $82,500 by catching a 9.908-pound bass.

Stan Lilly of Conroe caught a 9.8-pounder to capture third place. He was awarded $75,000 for his efforts.

Vice President of Operations for the Super Derby, Mark Scheidell, told The Dallas Morning News three fishermen were disqualified from the tournament for failing to pass polygraph tests.

The questions asked in a fisherman's polygraph test pertain to the rules and regulations of the particular tournament the angler is fishing in.

A free federal permit must be obtained in addition to a regular hunting license for hunters planning to hunt sandhill cranes in any of the state's three hunting zones.

Local hunters can pick up the permit from the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department, the Buffalo Lake National Wildlife Refuge or by calling 499-3382.

The National Shooting Sports Foundation commissioned a Gallup Poll revealing that 77 percent of the Americans polled were against animal rights activists who wish to rid the U.S. of all forms of hunting.

The poll also indicated that 90 percent of those people also disagree with tormenting hunters while they are actually on a hunt.

We'll hold off one more week to run letters from The University Daily Outdoors readers.

Address any questions to: Mike Pender, Associate Sports Editor, The University Daily, Texas Tech University Journalism Building, P.O. Box 4080, Lubbock, 79409; or come by The UD, located in room 210 of the Journalism Building.

Patriots' Fryar, Dykes injured in brawl

PROVIDENCE, R.I. (AP) — A scuffle outside a nightclub Wednesday left New England Patriots wide receiver Hart Lee Dykes, of Texas, hospitalized with an eye injury and teammate Irving Fryar with a weapons charge.

It was unclear what started the early morning fracas, but Fryar filed a police report that said he was hit over the head from behind while trying to help Dykes.

Witnesses told police Fryar ran to his car, grabbed a 9mm Smith & Wesson handgun, put it in his boot and returned to the scene, according to the police report.

Fryar, who required stitches to close a gash on his head, was charged with carrying a gun without a permit, a felony.

Rockets sign rookie holdout Jamerson

HOUSTON (AP) — Guard Dave Jamerson, the Houston Rockets' first round draft pick, ended a five-day holdout Thursday and signed a four-year contract worth a reported $3.5 million.

Jamerson, the No. 15 pick overall in the June NBA draft, is expected to help the Rockets' outside shooting.

Jamerson had been seeking a contract worth $1 million per year before the Rockets took all offers off the table last week.

Jamerson led Ohio University in scoring last season, averaging 31.2 points, third best among NCAA Division I scorers. He had individual games of 60 and 52 points.

Longhorns come calling on 18-1 Raiders

By BELLE MILLER
The University Daily

After winning their second consecutive Southwest Conference match on Wednesday against Texas A&M, the Texas Tech volleyball team prepares for perhaps the most important rematch of the year as they play Texas at 1 p.m. Sunday at the Tech Student Recreation Center.

The Red Raiders were handed their first and only loss of this year's campaign when they played the Longhorns in Austin Sept. 26.

Tech lost its conference opener in a four-game match 16-14, 7-15, 4-15 and 11-15.

Coach Mike Jones said that with the home court advantage and the support of a large crowd, the Raiders have a better chance of winning the rematch.

"We're hoping for a big crowd," Jones said. "The girls get real fired up and excited playing for a capacity crowd, and that helps during the match."

Freshman middle blocker Erica Ruegg, who had a strong performance against the Aggies this week, said the team is looking forward to playing at home after a stretch of seven matches on the road.

"It's real exciting to get to play at home, especially because there is supposed to be a lot of people there," Ruegg said. "Texas is our biggest rival and we're ready for the match-up."

Texas leads the all-time series against Tech 30-6. The Longhorns are currently No. 5 in the AV-CA/Tachikara Top Twenty Coaches Poll.

In the NCAA National Volleyball Top Twenty Poll, Texas holds the No. 4 spot.

Jones said the Raiders will match up well defensively against the conference-leading Texas, but Tech will have to execute better offensively.

"We need to work on some things offensively before we play Texas on Sunday. We need to pass well and execute our offense in order to win."

"They are beatable," Ruegg said. "If we work hard and don't give up, we can beat them. They're big, but I think we can take them on."

Jones said the team will review films from the first Texas match today and Saturday and decide what changes need to be made in the Raiders' game plans.

The Longhorns lead the conference in four categories so far this season. Texas ranks first in team hitting percentage at .264, kills average at 15.13, assists average with 12.24 and blocks average at 2.76 per game.

Texas will travel to Lubbock having won 58 straight SWC matches, dating back to a 1984 setback to Houston.

The one game the Raiders did manage to take away from the Longhorns earlier in the season was the only loss of a conference game for Texas so far this season.

Texas is Tech's second of six consecutive conference matches that began with the match at College Station. After the big rematch on Sunday, the Raiders once again hit the road to take on Houston.

James Schaefer/The University Daily

Slip, slidin' away

Tech's Kristen Sparks slides between the legs of teammate Sabrina Zenon in a game of Chinese freeze tag as part of the Raiders' volleyball warm-up drills. Tech takes its No. 12 ranking and just-have-fun attitude into a 1 p.m. showdown Sunday with No. 4 Texas.

Stumbling Hogs await unlucky Tech

By ANDREW HARRIS
The University Daily

First-year coach Jack Crowe might wonder which Arkansas team will show up when his Razorbacks face Texas Tech starting at 4 p.m. Saturday at Razorback Stadium in Fayetteville, Ark.

Crowe's squad, who ran by Tulsa and Colorado St., has come up on the short end of decisions against Mississippi and Texas Christian.

Arkansas enters the game against the Red Raiders fresh off a 54-26 thrashing at the hands of the Horned Frogs. The Hogs have started the 1990 campaign with an uncharacteristic 2-2 overall record, and 0-1 record in Southwest Conference play.

Tech, 1-4 overall and 0-3 in the SWC, looks to turn things around after coming up on the short end of a 28-24 loss to Texas A&M last week.

Raider coach Spike Dykes should have the benefit of having two healthy quarterbacks for the first time in three weeks. Junior Jamie Gill is scheduled to split time with redshirt-freshman Robert Hall.

Leading the way for the Razorbacks once again will be senior quarterback Quinn Grovey.

Grovey, 5-foot-10, 183-pounds, leads the SWC in passing so far this season, completing 45 of 70 passes for 791 and a 183.6 average quarterback rating.

Grovey will be throwing to what could possibly be Arkansas' most dangerous pass-catching tandem in years, senior split end Derek Russell and true-freshman flanker Tracy Caldwell.

Russell, 6-foot-0, 185-pounds, ranks third nationally in receiving yards per game, with a 112.5 average. Caldwell has caught 8 passes for 166 yards with a 20.8 yards per catch average.

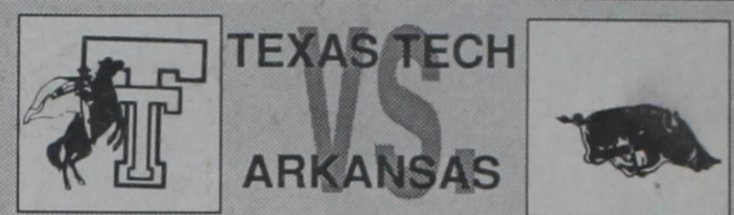

Leading the charge defensively for Arkansas will be linebacker Mick Thomas. Thomas, a 6-foot-2, 236-pound junior from Bakersfield, Calif., led the Razorback defense in tackles a year ago with 97.

Rounding out the Arkansas defensive secondary is junior cornerbacks Michael James and Curtis Banks and senior free safety Ben Floor.

Senior noseguard Chad Rolan, 6-foot-3, 266-pounds, leads a defensive front for the Razorbacks that is big but inexperienced.

One of the stronger performers for the Razorbacks is kicker Todd Wright.

Wright's 20 of 23 field goals and 38 of 40 extra points last season were good enough to earn him all-SWC and honorable mention All-American honors.
