Scuds hit Israel Patriots stop missiles at Dhahran

By The Associated Press

DHAHRAN, Saudi Arabia — A cornered Iraq lashed out at enemies east and west Tuesday with terror from the sky, firing missiles at both Saudi Arabia and Israel. One Scud slammed into homes in Tel Aviv and pushed Israel closer to joining the Persian Gulf war.

At least three people died and 70 were wounded in Tel Aviv, Israeli military officials said. The new U.S.-supplied Patriot defense system failed to stop the incoming Iraqi missiles, they said.

But the Patriot interceptor missiles did their job against Scuds falling on Dhahran, Saudi Arabia.

The oil-pumping heart of Kuwait burned through the day Tuesday, spreading black smokescreens across the sky.

On the northern Saudi front lines, Iraqi tanks have been shuttling from one hardened position to another, and Iraqi gunners have fired sporadically on U.S. lines, officers reported.

"He still has a lot of firepower," said a Marine intelligence officer, Col. Ron Richard. "... This is not an enemy that is going to go easy."

The relentless allied air war passed a new mark, 10,000 aircraft sorties.

Iraq asserted the U.S.-led coalition's warplanes struck residential areas of Baghdad and other cities in 20 attacks late Monday and early Tuesday.

Iraqi radio also claimed the Desert Storm bombers attacked two major Islamic religious sites and vowed that "holy anger" would translate into "suicide operations that will seek retribution."

The U.S. military maintains it is limiting attacks to strategic targets, and has said specifically it will avoid Islamic holy places.

Journalists who left Baghdad in recent days said the population has either fled to the countryside or settled into basement shelters. They said they saw little serious damage to civilian areas.

At Dhahran, incoming Scuds were intercepted and destroyed by Patriot defense missiles, witnesses said.

An unspecified number of Scuds rained down on Israel late Tuesday, and one that penetrated the Patriot shield landed in a residential area, hitting densely packed apartments, flattening one building and badly damaging two others.

Military officials said three elderly people suffered cardiac arrest, and at least 70 people were wounded, three seriously. Hours later, people were still trapped in the ruins.

After Tuesday's missile strike, an Israeli army spokesman said of the Patriots: "They were fired; they did not hit."

Earlier in the day, Foreign Minister David Levy suggested Israel might have to respond to another attack.

"Nobody in Israel is interested in being a sacrificial lamb," he said. After the attack, it was announced the Israeli Cabinet would meet today to decide how to respond.

Twenty or 30 of the missile's mobile launchers are believed to be on the loose in southern Iraq, apparently hiding during the day, emerging to menace Israel and Saudi Arabia at night.

Sonya Myles, a freshman pre-med major from Denison, adds a name to the banner in Chitwood/Weymouth lobby. The banner reads "I'm proud to be an American." Names of servicemen are written on the stars by Tech students. Jenny Warren and Charlene Dobbs, RAs in Chitwood, put the banner up to increase the awareness of the war.

Washington condemns attack on Tel Aviv, praises Israeli restraint

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — The White House praised Israel's restraint in the uncertain hours after an Iraqi missile attack on Tel Aviv. Some members of Congress said they could sympathize with Israel if it counterattacked.

President Bush met with his war planners at the White House shortly after a Scud missile struck a residential section of the Israeli city, with a toll of three dead and at least 70 wounded.

"We condemn this brutal act of terror against innocent victims," White House press secretary Marlin Fitzwater said.

"Israel has shown remarkable restraint in the face of this aggression. We continue to consult with the government of Israel and will continue doing so as events unfold," he said.

Francisco Rodriguez/The University Daily said.

"A nation clearly is on the firmest ground when they are defending their own people," said Sen. Phil Gramm, R-Texas.

"They have an absolute right to respond," said Sen. John Kerry, D-Mass.

At the Israeli Embassy, Ambassador Zalman Shoval declined to rule out a retaliatory strike but also said a response from Israel "would not necessarily have the character of retribution." He said "it's not necessarily an eye for an eye" but how best to protect the Israeli people.

Bush reviewed the status of the war with Vice President Dan Quayle, Secretary of State James A. Baker III, Defense Secretary Dick Cheney and his top national security advisers.

"The president expressed confidence in the military's performance," Fitzwater said.

Saddam also has fired a handful of missiles at Saudi Arabia.

U.S. officials puzzled over why Saddam's powerful military was not putting up much of a fight and expressed frustration over the lack of information about damage inflicted against his forces.

"The truth is, we don't know why Saddam has chosen to react in the way he has," Fitzwater said.

Baker twice telephoned Lawrence Eagleburger, the deputy secretary of state who has been in Israel since the weekend, to discuss the attack, a U.S. official said.

Pentagon briefers told Congress that allied bombing raids were creating large craters at Iraqi air fields and interrupting command and control systems, but that the damage was being quickly repaired. Much of Saddam's military machine remained intact.

"The early euphoria has changed into an unease that this may take longer than we thought," said Rep. Bill Richardson, D-N.M.

Rep. Les Aspin, D-Wis., chairman of the Armed Services Committee, said "the losses have been so low they may have set an unachievable standard for the rest of the war."

The White House claimed satisfaction with the course of the war but reminded Americans that "this is not a conflict that's going to be over in just a few days. ... It's going to go on; there is a long plan and a long process."

Allied forces reported flying more than 10,000 air missions. Yet, both the Pentagon and White House complained about a lack of reports on the effect of bombing attacks.

"President Bush has asked for the same kind of damage reports that you have, and it's just not there," Fitzwater told reporters. "But it will be made available to you as soon as it is there."

"Damage is obviously being inflicted, I think, because of the number of bombs that are being dropped and so forth," Fitzwater said. "You get pictures during the bombing runs that show when the bombs are being dropped but you don't always get good reports on the damage that was done afterwards," he said.

Lawmakers said the allies had targeted Iraq's broadcast operation but had been only partially successful in inflicting damage. Yet, Lt. Gen. Thomas Kelly told a Pentagon briefing, "I don't think there are many people watching television in Baghdad."

Business is business

Factories, industries may soon bid for government contracts

By JULIE COLLINS
The University Daily

Logistic factories, food industries and military weapon plants may soon bid for government military contracts now that war has ensued, a Texas Tech professor said.

"If war lasts for six or more months, needs are going to be critical and Congress will have to act," said Brian Shannon, an assistant professor of law.

The U.S. Department of Defense approaches Congress for various appropriations and authorizations concerned with military contracts, Shannon said. Congress then debates on whether the contracts are worthy of the billions of dollars that could be spent.

The Reagan administration defense budget was always very high; appropriations were enormous, Shannon said. The Bush administration levelled off defense spending after the 1990 presidential election.

With the onslaught of war, defense spending could rise once again, he said.

Having military contracts with the U.S. government does not always mean appropriation and authorization certainty. Military government contracts contain a sub-clause allowing Congress to pull appropriations out of a contract when it feels that the contract is no longer necessary, Shannon said.

General Dynamics recently lost its military contract with the U.S. Department of Defense after enormous cost overruns were discovered on the A-12 airplane contract.

The defense department might have also realized that cost overruns could prove very critical in the finance and expense of operation Desert Storm, Shannon said.

Military contracts that might ensue if chemical warfare becomes a threat could go to various medical industrial firms. Acquiring sufficient immunization vaccines against various chemical weapons could become a necessity, he said.

Keeping supply lines in the Middle East fully stocked could become an issue of regional and geographical problems for the United States and its allies, Shannon said.

The United States, from previous years of accelerated defense acquisition, is fully stocked and capable of keeping the front lines logistically full.

Allied support in the Middle East brings in ammunition and weapons almost daily to operation Desert Storm, Shannon said.

More officers train for most difficult duty of all: bring bad news

By The Associated Press

FORT HOOD — The duty is difficult and familiar.

To the family of a serviceman or woman, the appearance of two uniformed officers at the front door means the worst: a loved one has been killed or is missing in action.

The officer delivering the message has been trained for it, but it is not his or her work. Instead, the officer is called away from normal duty, chosen in a process as random as a lottery.

"It takes a little stamina. Certainly you're nervous when you go," said Lt. Col. Gary Hammonds, a personnel officer who trains others in casualty notification at Fort Hood, the nation's largest Army post.

More officers have been trained for the duty here and at other military installations since the Persian Gulf crisis began last August.

Post officials wouldn't say how many more have been trained for fears the number would be interpreted as an estimate of casualties among the 23,000 troops Fort Hood has sent to the desert.

The need for "notifiers" has grown for two reasons. Many previously trained officers have been deployed to the Gulf. And, of course, the likelihood of military casualties is higher in war.

"It's tough duty, but the Army knows that's one of its obligations to its soldiers," said Rep. Ron Coleman, D-Texas. The El Paso congressman was an Army captain during the Vietnam war 20 years ago, and was asked several times to notify families that a loved one had been killed.

"That's an extremely high priority communication. It's verified and checked. Even in the Vietnam era, it was superb to what had gone on before," Coleman said. "I imagine today, with even better communications, it's probably almost infallible."

The home base or post of a casualty verifies a death before dispatching notifiers, Hammonds said. They try to make the verification within 24 hours, but it may take longer in war, he said.

A day after notification, another officer is chosen and given leave from normal duty to become the family's "casualty assistance officer," providing whatever help they want for as long as they wish.

It becomes the full-time duty of the officer assigned to a family," said Maj. Jim Boling of the Fort Hood-based 31st Air Defense Artillery.

Boling has been a notifier only once in 19 years in the Army. He was trained as a casualty assistance officer during a daylong session last fall.

"It's a very human job. You can't approach it with a nuts and bolts approach normally associated with military actions," Boling said.

Training prepares the notifiers and casualty assistance officers for many reactions and circumstances, Hammonds said.

When dispatched as notifiers or casualty assistance officers, an officer is given basic information about a soldier's death and a recommended speech.

But they are urged to be flexible, Hammonds said. "We don't want this to be a mechanical thing," he said.

Families have "all kinds of different reactions," said Lt. Col. Dave Howard, a Fort Hood chaplain who has accompanied officers on notifications. The officers are required to deliver the message, though.

Students protest Persian Gulf war

By JULIE COLLINS
The University Daily

Approximately 30 demonstrators marched, sang and argued over United States involvement in the Persian Gulf in the free speech area on Tuesday.

Anti-war and pro-war demonstrators argued the Bush Administration's involvement in the war.

Geoff Cunfer, a Texas Tech student, said he joined the anti-demonstration vigil to express openly, his opinion against the war.

"People in Lubbock and Tech need to realize that war is appalling and the opinions of the minorities will be heard," Cunfer said. "I have no interest in undermining the morale of the United States troops stationed in the gulf, I just want them home. We should not commit 500,000 lives in the gulf without full United States support."

E.G. Barrera, a senior faculty adviser in military science, said the reason the military exists is so that demonstrations taking place on Tech's campus can continue.

"As long as the United States is involved in the war, we need to support the soldiers stationed in the gulf," Barrera said.

Leslie Evers, a junior elementary education major, said war is something nobody wants.

Right vs wrong Getting a clue

To The Editor:

War is a terrible thing. Most would even agree that it is an evil thing. However, no resident of this world should ever forget that sometimes war is a necessary thing. And right now, the United States is engaged in a necessary war.

The predominant peace cry is "No blood for oil." No one can deny that this war is about oil. The question people should ask is whether or not it is worth fighting a war over oil. In this case, the answer is a definite yes.

If Hussein is not driven from Kuwait, he will control nearly 20 percent of the world's oil supply. The United States could probably do without this oil, but what about developing nations in the Third World and Eastern Europe? Oil is not what makes the United States function, it is what makes the entire world function. With Hussein in control of that much of the world's oil supply, he will control the fate of many nations.

Another faction of war protestors claims that we are not the world's police. That is true. However, some things are so wrong, so evil, we must do something, even if it means acting as the world's police. If we do not make Hussein leave Kuwait, who will? No nation on this earth, except the United States, has the ability to liberate Kuwait.

Lastly, the citizens of the United States should realize that this war is not just about oil, but about right versus wrong. Never forget the atrocities that the army of Iraq committed against the people of Kuwait; never forget the accounts of Iraqi soldiers shooting 14-year-old children; never forget the stories of Kuwaiti citizens having their eyes burned out with cigarettes; never forget the horror the Kuwaitis must have felt as they were driven from their homes while their country was dismantled; never forget the parading of hostages on television by Hussein; never forget that Hussein used hostages as human shields, and lastly, never forget the look on the faces of the downed pilots shown on Iraqi television.

If this is not a war worth fighting, then no war ever was, and no war ever will be.

Tobey Taylor

To The Editor:

I attended the peace vigil at Memorial Circle Monday evening and was amused and bewildered by many of the comments made by pre-law student Charles Saunders. Mr. Saunders claimed that "The United States is the most racially discriminatory nation on earth." Has Mr. Saunders ever heard of South Africa? Or of the ethnic violence in the Soviet Union?

Saunders made much of the fact that he has filed a lawsuit against the U.S. Air Force for racial discrimination — yet he never explained why, if it's so awful, he stayed in for 23 years and allowed his son (currently on active duty in Saudi Arabia) to join. Although his son was not drafted and voluntarily raised his right hand and agreed to go anywhere his superiors wanted to send him, Mr. Saunders does not want his son over there. Perhaps the Saunders are conscientious objectors. If so, they do not seem to have expressed any objections to accepting Uncle Sam's money!

If, as Mr. Saunders insists, the war is being fought solely to subjugate Middle Eastern persons of color to whites, then why has the United Nations overwhelmingly approved our action? Most of the people in the United States are not white. And while Mr. Saunders is entirely correct in asserting that our Constitution reserves to Congress the power to wage war, the fact that Congress has voted to approve Mr. Bush's actions seem to make this a moot point.

What is more, in an editorial in the Jan. 22 edition of The University Daily, Charles Saunders claims that his "research has not found one single instance where the United States has used its immense economic or military power in an attempt to dominate a nation where the ruling elite is of Anglo-Saxon heritage." I seem to recall reading about a couple of world wars fought in this century against Germany and a couple of wars against England before that.

Mr. Saunders' heart bleeds for Saddam Hussein. "A man who has been oppressed by racism and colonialism all of his life," and Saunders well understands "Saddam Hussein's obsessive determination not to be intimidated" by "an obscene white supremacist imperialist abuse of economic and military power." So THAT'S why he invaded Iran and Kuwait! Don't you see? Hussein was just trying to strike a blow against racism and naked aggression. Or maybe he was just trying to impress Jodie Foster. I dunno.

While I admire the courage of the protesters who showed up for the vigil and exercised their constitutional right to peaceably assemble and protest the government's action, I got the distinct impression that Mr. Saunders' observations, as well-intentioned as they may be, clearly revealed the fact that, unfortunately, he hasn't a #&@% clue to what he's talking about!

ministrators their thoughts, ideas, and concerns about each of the 14 Student Affairs departments.

Departments represented tomorrow include: Financial Aid, Career Planning and Placement, Student Health, Dean of Students, Attorney for Students, Admissions and Records, Texas Tech Bookstore, New Student Relations, Student Publications, Counseling Center and the PASS Center.

Today from 11 a.m. to 1 p.m. in the University Center Courtyard every Texas Tech student will have the chance to participate in the University's first ever "We Think Students Day."

This special event, sponsored by the Student Association and the Student Affairs Staff Development Committee, will allow students to have one-on-one contact with department heads and top-level administrators from all of the 14 departments within the Student Affairs division.

The theme "We Think Students" was chosen because it represents the positive working relationship students have with those who provide many of the services on campus.

"We Think Students Day" has two purposes.

First, it provides a setting for students to learn more about what services the university offers and how students can affectively use these services.

The second and most unique purpose of the event is to provide students a chance to share with ad-

This event is one of a kind in the state of Texas. No other university has gone to such lengths to prove that their number one concern is service to students.

Opening up direct lines of communication between students and administrators can and will have a very positive effect on the quality of services provided to Tech students.

As students, we cannot afford to let such a unique opportunity pass us by. "We Think Students Day" will be a success only if we participate and share our honest opinions and ideas with those in the university who can make a difference.

I encourage you to come by the UC Courtyard as "We Think Students Day" becomes a new Texas Tech tradition.

The Student Senate Committee on Budget and Finance is beginning the allocation process for fiscal year 1991-1992. All student organizations which are open to all Texas Tech students regardless of race, creed, color, sex, marital status, national origin, age and handicap are eligible for funding.

Groups specifically excluded from funding include:

- organizations not registered with the SOS Office,

- religious, political, social, or recreational organizations,

- organizations significantly restricting membership,

- organizations receiving monies from Student Service fees,

- honoraries whose sole purpose is individual recognition.

Additionally, any organization that meets at least one of the following will be deemed a political organization and will not be funded:

Halls to offer cable television in fall

By TARA MULDRON
The University Daily

Texas Tech students may be able to view cable television in residence halls by the Fall Semester, 1991.

The Board of Regents is reviewing various proposals for the installation of cable television from companies throughout the country, said Robert Ewalt, vice president for student affairs.

No bids have been accepted due to necessary contract alterations, Ewalt said.

"The Board of Regents wants to accept a bid by the March meeting," he said.

Individual students or roommates would be able to decide whether to have cable and which pay channels they want to accept.

Jim Burkhalter, director of Housing and Dining Services, said housing and dining officials are working to give students better options.

"The proposal we are most interested in would be basically the same type of service in the community," Burkhalter said. "Each student who wanted it would contract with the cable company for the service."

Ewalt said the residence halls would not automatically put cable into all the rooms. Students would need to pay for systems.

Burkhalter said the Board of Regents currently is reviewing two bids from national cable companies.

Cox Cable and Pegasus Cable companies bid for placement at Tech in response to Tech's national request for bids. Members of the Board of Regents are negotiating with the companies.

Pegasus currently provides cable for other universities in the county.

Ewalt said Tech would be able to use a system other than Cox Cable, the local company, due to the availability of satellite systems.

"Other colleges use cable systems outside of the local companies," Ewalt said.

Students across campus have requested solutions to poor television reception in the residence halls, Burkhalter said.

"Because of the geo-frame construction of the buildings, the students cannot get good reception. The students have requested cable," he said.

Alcohol withdrawal causes hangovers

By STEPHEN PHILLIPS
The University Daily

For many college students who party on the weekends, the morning after usually brings a pounding headache, an aching body or a nauseated stomach. These symptoms usually indicate the party is over, and the hangover is just beginning.

Why do we do this to ourselves, and just what is a hangover anyway? James Griggs, a certified drug and alcohol counselor, said a hangover is actually a result of the body's withdrawal from high levels of alcohol.

Griggs, who counsels at the Texas Tech Health Sciences Center's Southwest Institute for Addictive Diseases, said the blood alcohol level is the main factor that contributes to a hangover.

But along with the alcohol, Griggs said, much of the problem lies in the drinks "cogener level."

Cogeners are the natural products used in the fermentation of alcoholic beverages. In addition to hangover potential, cogeners also are responsible for the differences in smell, taste and color of any particular drink.

The hangover potential is greater from drinking too much wine than it is from drinking the same amount of beer.

Another factor that can determine whether someone will suffer a hangover in the morning is the tolerance the drinker has established, Griggs said.

Some people are born with a natural tolerance to alcohol, Griggs said, while others develop the tolerance due to increased drinking of alcoholic beverages during their lives.

"Tolerance can be built in, or built up," Griggs said.

Some drinkers believe that if they do not suffer from hangovers, then they are not doing any harm to themselves, he said.

"Drinkers should not use the severity of a hangover as a means of deciding whether they drank too much the night before," Griggs said. "Just because a drinker does not suffer from a hangover, damage is still being done to the body."

Along with the alcohol, Griggs said, heavy smoking and poor eating can contribute to the severity of the hangover.

"The increased levels of nicotine in the body combined with alcohol and many of the rich snacks often eaten in conjunction with drinking are a big factor in the common gastrointestinal problems suffered on the morning after," he said.

Griggs said that hangovers also can result in slight to severe dehydration. One of the effects of alcohol on the brain is to decrease the output of the antidiuretic hormone responsible for retaining fluid in the body.

This effect means that the body excretes more fluid than is taken in with the alcoholic beverage. Thus, the body can easily become overly dehydrated, resulting in that pounding headache and dry mouth.

Griggs said that despite all the hangover cures, both over-the-counter and at home, the only true relief is time — that is, for the body to stabilize and return to a normal non-alcoholic state.

Plaintiffs in school finance lawsuit cheer latest Texas Supreme Court ruling at start of session

By The Associated Press

SAN ANTONIO — Plaintiffs in a school finance lawsuit Tuesday cheered the latest Texas Supreme Court ruling in their favor and praised its timing, at the beginning of a new legislative session.

"I'm very elated," said James Vasquez, superintendent of Edgewood School District, lead plaintiff in the Edgewood vs. Kirby lawsuit. "Believe it or not, I'm short of words right now."

Vasquez and others linked to the lawsuit quickly congregated at Edgewood High School for an afternoon celebration and news conference. Hugs, handshakes and smiles abounded in what has become a familiar scene in the ongoing legal saga.

"I hope this is the last time I'll have to come before the press, and the last time we have to put up with waiting all these years," said Demetrio Rodriguez, 65, who started the legal battle more than 20 years ago.

The ruling is the Texas Supreme Court's second on school finance. It agreed in October 1989 with the plaintiff school districts that challenged the state's old finance system as inequitable.

The plaintiffs claimed funding public schools through property taxation discriminates against property-poor districts.

Tuesday's unanimous opinion, said state lawmakers who last year overhauled the system and pumped $500 million a year more into school spending, still did not solve the problem.

"I'm very, very optimistic that this time we'll get it right," Vasquez said, adding that he expects Democratic Gov. Ann Richards and Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock to help with quick passage of another plan.

The Supreme Court ruling did not tell lawmakers how to fix the system.

Vasquez said he was overjoyed the ruling was unanimous, as was the 1989 opinion declaring the state's system unconstitutional.

"It just puts a little cherry on the top of the ice cream. It's fantastic," Vasquez said.

Al Kauffman, the attorney for the Mexican American Legal Defense and Educational Fund who has argued the case in court, also praised the ruling.

"It's a unanimous opinion — we're very pleased about that," he said. "It appears to be very strong."

Kauffman said that while the court's ruling, written by Chief Justice Tom Phillips, does not give specifics on correcting the finance system, it gives some "strong hints," such as stating it will not allow the Legislature to exclude the wealthiest school districts from equalization.

"In other words, they (the justices) will not allow these havens of wealth that have unfair advantages over the rest of the state," Kauffman said.

Kauffman said an April 1 deadline set out in the ruling would help ensure passage of a new school finance plan by the Texas Legislature in time for the next school year.

"The Supreme Court ordered a deadline, and now it has to be respected," he said.

Legislators will be able to meet that deadline only because of school finance studies that already have been done, Kauffman said.

Several lawmakers also were quick to respond to the court's ruling.

"The Supreme Court told the Legislature that all of the excuses used in the past to justify the inequitable distribution of funds for public education won't fly any more," said state Sen. Carlos Truan, D-Corpus Christi. "The time for excuses is over, period."

Bush exhorts foes of abortion at annual march

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — About 25,000 right-to-life demonstrators, exhorted by President Bush "to keep this issue alive," made their annual march upon the Supreme Court on Tuesday to decry the decision 18 years ago that legalized abortion.

Bush took time out from monitoring developments in the Persian Gulf war at the White House to speak by telephone hookup to the gathering, which assembled on the capital's Mall in sub-freezing temperatures.

"I'm pleased that my voice is part of the growing chorus that simply says: Choose life," said Bush, who has addressed the anti-abortion marchers by telephone hookup in each of the three years of his presidency.

"I'm encouraged by the progress which has taken place," he said. "Attempts by Congress to expand federal funding for abortion have been defeated and the Supreme Court has taken welcome steps toward reversing its Roe vs. Wade decision."

However, despite the successes, "abortion on demand continues unabated in this country," Bush said.

He urged more work to promote alternatives to abortion, including adoption.

"You, the volunteers ... must make it your goal to keep this issue alive and predominate in the halls of Congress, the courts and in the minds of the American people," Bush said.

The march drew far fewer supporters than last year, and leaders said it was because of concerns about the war and possible terrorism.

Officer Dan Nichols of the U.S. Capitol Police estimated the crowd at 25,000. The National Park Service and the city police department concurred in that figure, compared with an estimate of 75,000 at last year's march.

"Many people are concerned about the war and threats that have been made" by Iraq's Saddam Hussein regarding terrorist activity, said Nancy Myers, spokeswoman for the National Right to Life Committee.

The Missouri delegations canceled their participation, as did many from Ohio and Pennsylvania, she said.

March leader Nellie Gray said the message this year is to politicians, urging them to stand firm against abortion. In the wake of the election, she said, "Many of those who did waffle are not in Congress again."

"We are indeed going to impose our morality on Americans to save the babies," she said from the stage where speaker after speaker urged renewed commitment to "stop the killing" and "take a bold stand for life."

Sen. Jesse Helms, R-N.C., an ardent abortion foe, referred to his re-election last November: "If the price of staying in the Senate was turning my back on those innocent unborn babies, that price was just too high." Outlawing abortion, he said, was "basic to America's moral survival."

Album features environmental messages

By LYDIA GUAJARDO
The University Daily

Alternative music has introduced music lovers to many new bands in the past. The Samples, one of the newest bands to surface in the music world, will release their self-titled album this fall.

The quintet from Boulder, Colo., came together after two of the members placed an ad in the newspaper for the remaining positions. It was three years ago when the band formed and began composing tunes. Their music uses an earthy, soft beat and models itself after various groups and artists of the past.

The band's music can be closely compared to and was inspired by the music of The Police. However, the band's focus is on the earth and its environmental problems.

Also inspired by Bob Dylan and his music from the '60s, the band is attempting to send out an urgent message to save the earth. Titles such as "Close to the Fires", "Ocean of War", "African Ivory" and "Nature" deal with various social problems throughout the world. However, the album does contain two love songs to add a little diversity to the listening ear.

"Close to the Fires" speaks out against the oil spills on the coast of California and the wasting of land.

The Samples

"African Ivory" calls attention to the unnecessary slaughters of endangered animals such as elephants and rhinoceroses in Africa. Both songs use a soft beat with a slow tempo.

With all lyrics written by lead singer and songwriter Sean Kelly, the band adds a gentle reggae beat to the songs. The band's desire to convey powerful messages reflects in the seductive but relaxed performance exhibited in each song.

A glorious and idealistic picture of the earth is not the musical portrait painted by this band. Somber and stained images are projected from the various songs. The Samples' attempt to address volatile social matters is yet another method of stimulating a movement toward a better world and environment.

The Samples' music reflects the popular and powerful folk music from the movements of the '60s. For those who enjoy alternative and folk music, this is a refreshing but constructive new sound to catch.

The odd-looking albatross is the largest flying creature on Earth. Because of its flying ability (its wing span may reach 12 feet), the albatross can stay away from land for months at a time.

The official record for the largest largemouth bass ever caught is more than 22 pounds.

According to researchers, the smallest mammal has the biggest appetite. The tiny shrew eats nearly its own weight in food every day.

ABC anchor to address world events in lecture

Carole Simpson, anchor of ABC's "World News Saturday," will speak at 8:15 p.m. Thursday Jan. 24 in the University Center Allen Theatre. Simpson, a broadcast journalist for more than 20 years, will address the issues making the headlines in the world today. Tickets are free for students, $8 for others and are available in the UC Ticket Booth between 8:30 a.m. and 4:30 p.m. Monday through Friday.

Simpson received an Emmy nomination for her report on kids with AIDS in 1988 which appeared as part of the "American Agenda" section of "World News Tonight with Peter Jennings."

In addition, she was a substitute anchor for the weekend edition of "NBC Nightly News" and the host of "Her-Rah" a woman's public affairs program on WRC-TV, NBC's Washington affiliate, between the years of 1974 to 1978.

Reporting on President Bush since 1980, Simpson traveled with the president on domestic and foreign business and covered the Republican National Convention in 1988.

Simpson has received the Milestone Award in Broadcasting from the National Commission of Working Women and the Silver Bell Award from the AD Council.

Longhorns streak past Raiders 83-65 Second-half surge proves too much for Tech

By MIKE PENDER
The University Daily

The Texas Longhorns used a late second-half surge to hold off the Texas Tech Red Raiders 83-65 Tuesday in front of 4,120 at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

After an official timeout with 6:20 remaining, Texas went on a 15-1 streak which began with a Benford Williams 14-footer with 6:05 left in the contest.

With the win the Longhorns upped their record to 11-5 overall and 5-1 in the Southwest Conference, while Tech fell to 5-14 overall and 2-5 in league play.

"Texas came in here and did what they had to do," Raider coach Gerald Myers said after Tech's fifth-straight SWC loss. "They're strong inside and they played hard on the boards."

Tech stayed within reach until the Longhorns' went on the 15-1 run. The game was tied nine times before Texas pulled away.

With 15:37 remaining in the game, Tech center Steve Miles hit an eight-foot jumper from the baseline to tie the score at 43-43.

After the tie, the Raiders kept within six points, but never led.

Tech's only lead of the game came at the 10:04 mark of the first-half when Miles hit a layup to put the Raiders on top 17-15.

Leading the upset-minded Raiders was Miles, who ended the game with 22 points and pulled down a team-high eight rebounds.

The Longhorns out-rebounded Tech 38-29, led by senior forward Locksley Collie, who had a game-high 26 points and also led all rebounders with 13 boards.

Texas guard Courtney Jeans added 22 points and guard Benford Williams added 14.

Tech was without the services of Will Flemons, who suffered a season-ending foot injury in the Raiders' 73-70 loss to Houston four days ago.

Freshmen Allen Austin and Brad Dale platooned in place of Flemons, and Myers said the younger players stepped in and did a good job.

performance," Myers said. "He came in and showed great poise and confidence."

Dale finished the game with three points, all of which came at the free-throw line.

Also scoring in double figures for the Raiders was senior guard Derex Butts, who finished the contest with 10 points, while junior-transfer Stacey Bailey added 11 points for Tech.

Tech braces for showdown with Texas

By LEN HAYWARD
The University Daily

You would think a team that has won 10 of its last 11 games would have a definite psychological advantage over its upcoming opponent, right? Think again.

Not when that team is the Texas Tech women and that upcoming opponent is the Texas Lady Longhorns.

The Red Raiders are mired in a 35-game losing streak against Texas, dating back to the 1982-83 season.

But Tech will try to change things as the Raiders face-off against the Lady 'Horns at 7:37 p.m. tonight at Lubbock's Municipal Coliseum.

The game will be shown on tape delay at 10:00 p.m. on HSE, cable channel 46 in Lubbock.

The closest the Raiders have come to beating Texas was in the championship game of last year's Southwest Conference Postseason Tournament. Tech lost by three points, 63-60.

The No. 18 Lady Longhorns enter the game with a record of 10-5 overall and 4-1 in SWC play.

Seniors Amy Claborn and Edna Campbell lead the Lady 'Horns attack this season. Claborn, a 5-foot-8 guard from Amarillo, is averaging 6.5 points per game and 5.8 assists per contest so far in 1990-91.

Raider forward Teresa McMillan and post Jennifer Buck, the mainstays of the Tech inside game, have both scored in double-figures the last two games against Rice and Houston.

Buck and McMillan have hit double-figures 14 times and 12 times respectively this season.

INTRAMURAL BRIEFS

Super Bowl Sunday Fun Run this Sunday

Don't forget the annual Super Bowl Fun Run which will be held this Sunday at 2 p.m. Enter in the Rec Sports Office or at race site. This one and three mile run also invites walkers to participate — bring all your friends before you get ready to party and watch the big game. There is a $6 shirt fee if you want a long-sleeved shirt — otherwise you can run for free. Don't miss this 1991 kickoff.

Choose your weapon ... Let's get fit

Let the SRC track your exercise program and give you monthly computerized printouts — keep those New Year's resolutions alive throughout the semester!! Register for the Choose Your Weapon program. If you still need a little more motivation, predict how many points you will achieve and you will receive a t-shirt if you make the goal. Point calculations are taken from Cooper's Institute for Aerobic Research. Costs: $2 for record keeping only; $8 for goal prediction/t-shirt. Registration is taken Jan. 10-Feb. 8 in the Rec Sports Office.

Basketball 'FORM-A-TEAM' meeting tonight

Individuals interested in playing intramural basketball but who do not have a team on which to play are encouraged to attend the 'FORM-A-TEAM' meeting tonight at 8 p.m. in SRC 205. At this time we will attempt to organize teams from those present. Teams that are short a few players are also encouraged to send a representative to this meeting in order to identify players that may fill out their teams.

Basketball entries due

Intramural basketball registration continues through 5 p.m. tomorrow (Thursday, Jan. 25) in room 203 of the SRC. Teams are encouraged, however, to enter today in order to obtain a playing time that is more preferable to their team.

To enter a team, bring your players' names, addresses and phone numbers along with a $25 refundable forfeit fee to SRC 203. At that time you will be able to select a playing time from those time that remain available. Improve your chances, enter today!

All-Nighter slated for Feb. 1

The annual Rec Sports All-Nighter is Friday, Feb. 1. The event begins with aerobic classes at 3:30 and 5:15 p.m. Structured tournaments with pre-registration in the Rec Sports office include basketball, co-rec volleyball, indoor soccer, bodybuilding, 3-point shot contest, water jousting, racquetball, table tennis, 3-on-3 water volleyball, lazer tag and wallyball. Arm wrestling is pre-registration but drop-ins the night of the event are also welcome. Entries are limited for these tournaments so register early. The deadline is Thursday, Jan. 31 by 5 p.m. provided space is still available. Entry forms and information may be obtained in the Rec Sports office.

Other events accepting registration up until the event starts include: slam dunk, "42," darts, and spades. Throughout the evening will be the casino room, baseball throw for speed, rappelling, rockclimbing, open rec swim, racquetball, basketball and weightlifting. Bring a little cash for the food booths in the upper level lounge and relax while watching some of the sports bloopers.

Make sure you arrive early for the Tom DeLuca Show starting at 11 p.m. on basketball court 4. Don't miss his "Evening of Imaginative Improvisation and Hilarious Hypnotic Insanity." Immediately following DeLuca will be the bodybuilding championships, as well as the continuation of tournaments and free play. So, mark your calendar now and plan on spending the night with us at the Rec Center.

Winter camping trip

Backcountry travel in the winter offers rewards you can't get any other time of the year. Many people have the impression that only the hardest of mountain persons can venture into the backcountry in the winter; yet nothing could be further from the truth. All that is required is a little more equipment than in the summer, the desire for new experiences and adventure, and common sense.

Inexperienced students, faculty and staff should not hesitate to sign up. The cost of $35 includes transportation, camping equipment, fees and instruction. The date is Feb. 15-17. There is also a winter camping workshop scheduled for Jan. 30. It will help campers learn how to travel, camp, pack and stay warm while enjoying the outdoors. The workshop is free and is to be held in SRC 205 from 6 to 8 p.m.

Come by the Outdoor Program located in SRC 206 to receive more information on all camping excursions offered.

Aquatic classes scheduled for February

If interested in teaching swim lessons or becoming certified to work as a lifeguard this summer the aquatic center can help you by offering night classes during the month of February. The following classes are being offered to allow students and staff to become a more qualified aquatic person:

Community CPR & Standard First Aid Classes

This course provides the latest information on Standard First Aid and Community CPR as set by the American Red Cross. Those who successfully complete the course will receive both a Standard First Aid and Community CPR card.

Session I.....Feb. 11, 13, 18 (M,W) 6-9 p.m.

The cost of this course is $25 for TTU students and SRC Pass holders — $35 for others. Books may be purchased in their Recreation Center's Pro Shop. To reserve a place in the class or for more information, please phone 742-3896.

Water Safety Instructors Course

For those of you who have always wanted to learn to teach others to swim, this is the course for you. This course teaches the newest methods of water safety instruction. The cost of this course is $20 for TTU students and SRC Pass holders — $30 for others.
