Allen absolved in investigation

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Justice Department absolved Richard V. Allen on Tuesday of any wrongdoing in his receipt of $1,000 from Japanese journalists but said it was still investigating other questions about the president's national security adviser.

Allen said he was "very happy" with the decision, in which Attorney General William French Smith ruled out the appointment of a special prosecutor regarding Allen's acceptance of a cash "thank-you" following a Japanese magazine's Jan. 21 interview of first lady Nancy Reagan.

Allen, who took an administrative leave of absence over the weekend, said the decision on whether he will return to his duties "will depend on my colleagues at the White House. We'll wait and see."

The White House said in a written statement that the report by the Justice Department was "self-explanatory."

"The department's statement indicates that during the course of its inquiry, two additional matters regarding Mr. Allen came to its attention: that Mr. Allen received Japanese watches from certain Japanese individuals and that his financial disclosure form incorrectly stated the date he sold his interest in Potomac International.

"Pending the completion of the Justice Department inquiry into these matters, the White House will have no comment," the statement said.

Allen was read Smith's decision by Associate Attorney General Rudolph Giuliani shortly before it was made public.

At about the same time, Smith, formerly Ronald Reagan's personal attorney, called presidential counselor Edwin Meese III to inform him.

"When the uncontradicted facts are analyzed in the context of possibly applicable criminal laws, it is clear there was no criminal violation by Allen regarding the $1,000," concluded the report released by the department.

The money, the report said, "was intended as an honorarium" for Mrs. Reagan in return for a brief interview she gave the Japanese journalists on Jan. 21. "It was neither given nor received to benefit Allen or to influence him in any way."

Law School alters minority recruitment plan

By DARIA DOSS
UD Reporter

Minority student recruitment for the Tech Law School is experiencing a change — the aim this year is to get minority affairs counselors and students in leadership positions to visit the Law School instead of recruitment faculty only visiting the students' colleges.

Last year, members of the Tech Law School affirmative action committee visited campuses with large minority enrollments such as Bishop College and East Texas State, James Eissinger, chairman of the affirmative action committee at the Law School, said.

This is Eissinger's first year as chairman but his third year on the committee. Three other faculty members are on the committee. Students also help with the recruiting process.

The committee is planning to have a day in the spring similar to the undergraduate University Day on which students and others can see what the Law School has to offer, Eissinger said.

Eissinger said one of the problems with visiting students at their schools is that sometimes they have an image of Tech as "all dust."

"By bringing students here to the campus, we can show them that Tech is not all dust and that the Law School does have fine facilities," Eissinger said.

If a student is accepted, the next step in the recruiting process is to call the student and encourage him or her to attend Tech instead of accepting another law school's offer, Eissinger said.

He said there are two main problems in recruiting minority students to the Law School. One is that Tech lacks the money to fly students to Lubbock for a visit; the other is that scholarship money is very limited.

"When the University of Texas Law School can offer full tuition for three years of law school and all we can offer is $250-$400 a year, you can't blame a student for not coming here," Eissinger said.

An analysis of 1980 minority applicants indicates that of 101 applicants, 39 received acceptances, but only 6 enrolled. Statistics were not available for the 1981 fall minority entering class.

An Associated Press story last month said the Law School Admission Council for the nation's law schools has launched a campaign drive with the idea that "getting into law school may be easier than minorities think."

Some law schools are worried, because their minority enrollments are no longer climbing rapidly, the AP story said.

The council has employed Ricardo Montalban, star of the TV show "Fantasy Island," and other public figures to tape radio messages aimed at blacks and Hispanics.

The print ads for the campaign stress that the LSAT is only part of the admission evaluation for law school. Personal, social and ethnic backgrounds, college records and individual experiences also are important in student acceptances.

The story said the most dramatic gains in minority enrollment were made between 1969 and 1976. Progress since 1976 has been slow.

However, Eissinger said Tech's Law School is not noticing any leveling off. He said the school is still in a growth stage since it is only 14 years old.

This fall, the minority enrollment is 3.6 percent. It was 3.2 percent in 1980, 5.8 percent in 1979, 5.7 percent in 1978, 5.9 percent in 1977 and 7.2 percent in 1976.

The reason for the sharp decrease between 1979 and 1980, Eissinger said, is that the Chicano Law Student Association filed a complaint in April 1980 charging Tech with racial and sexual discrimination in hiring, admissions, promotion, pay, tenure and recruitment.

The complaint was filed with 13 local, regional, state and federal civil rights agencies. The results of the complaint are still pending.

"This complaint can do more harm than good," Eissinger said.

To enroll more minority students and to get a variety of student abilities, the Law School uses a three-prong acceptance standard for admitting students.

The top category students are considered for is LSAT scores and GPA. A certain number of students are admitted on this only. Next, LSAT and GPA and other factors such as race and past activities are considered for admission.

The third category is unique compared to other law schools. It is a summer school program designed for students who make below 500 on the LSAT.

First-year students enrolled in the summer school program may take two courses. If they do well during this program and are recommended by their professors, they may continue in the fall but will be restricted.

Center urges victims to report rape to police

(Editors note: This is the second of a four-part series on the Lubbock Rape Crisis Center).

By BILL MILLER
UD Staff

When a rape occurs, a victim must decide if she wants to report the act and, ultimately, she must decide if she intends to prosecute.

A major goal of the Lubbock Rape Crisis Center (LRCC) is to encourage the victim to report the rape to the police. The center also works to insure that the victim does not shy away from prosecuting the rapist because of the personal trauma of rape.

Reporting rapes and prosecuting assailants is important because if a victim decides not to prosecute, the rapist is free to harm someone else, center director Becky Cannon said.

FBI statistics show 73 percent of all convicted rapists are repeaters of sex-related crimes.

Lubbock Police Cpl. Jimmie Riemer related one national case in which a rapist attacked 26 victims before being convicted and jailed.

Several myths about rape and rape victims have existed for years, experts say. One myth is that rape victims "ask" to be raped, either subconsciously or overtly, by dressing promiscuously, walking alone at night or hanging around the wrong crowd.

A former Tech psychology professor said it is the rapist, not the victim, who commits the crime.

"Every woman may have had guilt feelings because she wondered what it would be like to be taken forcibly, but that doesn't mean she asked to be raped," Richard Wall, a former Tech psychology professor, said.

Although some women have rape fantasies, most medical and psychological authorities, including Wall, argue that such fantasies are never meant to become realities.

"There is nothing wrong with feelings of being forcefully taken by a lover, but that doesn't mean you want some asshole to beat you up," Wall said.

Rape begins when the female says no, but it depends on who the woman is with, what the circumstances are and how the "no" is taken by the man, Wall said.

"A male will always press to see how far he can go," Wall said.

Women sometimes hold themselves responsible, Wall added, thinking that being in with the "wrong crowd" caused the rape.

"Hanging around any group of people does not justify the rape, and the woman is not asking to be raped," Wall said.

Fantasy and real life are separate entities, he said, and many women support his view of rape fantasies.

"There is complete control in fantasy that is not present in a rape situation," said a second-year Tech law student and Rape Crisis Center caseworker who asked not to be identified.

"In real life, rape is a crime and a crisis. It is a violent interruption in a female's life. Rape and the rapist can and should be dealt with legally," an LRCC pamphlet states.

Several steps can be taken legally to protect a rape victim if the victim wants to prosecute.

If a victim wishes to prosecute, it is important that the crime be reported as soon as possible, Riemer said.

Riemer said an immediate outcry helps officers investigate the crime.

A medical exam is important to physical and emotional well being and to evidence that might be utilized at a trial, Cannon said.

A caseworker must be present during the examination to document the exam for prosecution, the LRCC training manual states.

Transportation to a hospital is available through rape crisis center caseworkers. Caseworkers will bring victims to Lubbock General Hospital where most of the physicians are trained to handle rape cases.

However, rape victims may go to another hospital if they wish, Cannon said.

Second in a series

If brought to a hospital by a friend or relative, it is important not to leave the victim alone, the manual states.

Volunteers will be dispatched to the hospital emergency room immediately after the center is contacted. A victim can contact LRCC caseworkers by telephoning 763-RAPE.

When a victim is brought to the hospital by family or friends, police and the LRCC are notified by hospital authorities.

For the prosecution to have a successful case, doctors need to examine the rape victim thoroughly.

It is important the victim does not bathe, change clothes, defecate, douche, shower, straighten up the house or touch anything relating to the rape scene, Cannon said.

"It is a natural desire for women to clean themselves after a rape occurs. It is important for evidence that they do not," Cannon said.

If a caseworker is notified by the victim, family or friends before going to the hospital, the caseworker will instruct them on procedures involved in the medical exam.

Once the medical exam begins, the caseworker will explain the medical procedure to the victim. The victim has a right to be examined by her personal physician, but center workers recommend she be examined by physicians on call to the LRCC.

"These physicians have dealt with rape cases before and are skilled in evidence collection," Cannon said.

Routine pelvic exams and standard tests on a rape victim include a pubic hair exam or combing of the pubic hair where doctors look for collection of hair, debris and dried seminal fluid or blood.

External and internal examination of the vaginal area and vaginal vault is where physicians look for bruises, cuts, seminal fluid, sperm and tears.

Doctors collect any stained or torn clothing and will start base-line testing for venereal disease and infection.

If the victim indicates an intent to prosecute, the state will pay for those parts of the exam, which will be used in court to substantiate penetration and possible lack of consent.

The state will not pay for extra medical treatment such as venereal disease tests, pregnancy tests and X-rays.

However, some tests can be administered free of charge through other agencies.

The Lubbock City Health Clinic, 1100

Ave. Q, offers free testing and treatment of venereal disease. Lubbock City Family Planning, 1108 10th St., offers free pregnancy testing.

A follow-up medical exam is recommended for the victim's safety, Cannon said. Follow-up procedures should include venereal disease testing, pregnancy testing and attention to any injury sustained during the assault.

A relatively new method of gathering rape evidence is Silver Plate Transfer (SPT) testing, a process designed to lift a rapist's fingerprint off a victim's body, said Riemer, a fingerprint expert for the Lubbock Police Department.

"It is imperative that the victim doesn't shower or rub areas the rapist touched," Riemer said.

SPT was first experimented with in California for 10 years. A Florida Supreme Court case upheld the process in court, Riemer said.

Because of personal body perspiration, the test is hard to conduct. Ideal conditions for the test are when a victim showered prior to being raped, Riemer indicated.

The test relies on clear fingerprints on a victim's body. Police need six ridges and eight points in order to get a positive print identification.

A normal fingerprint has between 75 and 100 points of identification per finger. These points vary with each individual, Riemer said.

Budget chief seeks blitz of housing cuts

WASHINGTON (AP) — Budget director David A. Stockman wants to phase out two urban aid programs and eliminate subsidies for low-income housing construction as part of a blitz of spending cuts that has left federal housing officials in shock, sources said Tuesday.

Informed sources in and out of government said Stockman wants to eliminate all new spending after 1983 for Community Development Block Grants and to ban Development Action Grants.

The two programs, which this year aided about 2,850 communities in every part of the country, started out with a $4.2 billion budget for 1982.

The sources, who declined to be identified, said Stockman also is seeking a 75 percent reduction in the nearly $18 billion subsidized housing program for 1982 and even deeper cuts for 1983.

This would limit the number of additional low-income families eligible for rent subsidies from about 75,000 this year to about 44,000 in 1983, the sources said.

The cuts hit two of the major programs run by the Department of Housing and Urban Development. HUD Secretary Samuel R. Pierce Jr., described as angry, plans to appeal the reductions to President Reagan, the sources said.

The cuts would mean that starting next year, there would be no new money to help finance construction or rehabilitation of housing for low-income families.

It would come amid the worst homebuilding slump since World War II. Other areas of large cuts under consideration by Stockman are the Environmental Protection Agency, job training and employment programs for the poor and a variety of other individual assistance programs.

Reagan, who has not given final approval to any program cuts, plans to listen to agency appeals of OMB's proposals over the next two weeks.

Sen. Jake Garn, R-Utah, chairman of a HUD appropriations subcommittee, said he has not been notified of any plans to phase out the urban development grants but labeled it as a "stupid proposal" that he would oppose.

Passage of amendment needed for equality

As "Mainstream ERA" supporters, we find it unfortunate that Pete McNabb, in his editorial of Nov. 24, chose to devote so much space to a radical faction of the women's movement, when there are so many worthy and influential people fighting for the passage of ERA who could, and should, be focused on.

We feel that McNabb should hear the women's point of view.

Although there are many specific points in McNabb's editorial that deserve refutation, we would like to focus on some of the general assumptions he makes — assumptions which make McNabb part of the problem, and not the solution.

Inequality, past and present, is a fact of life. McNabb speaks of ERA supporters "finding statistics" to show women have higher unemployment and lower pay as if such statistics were invented or fictitious.

Those statistics are accurately depicting the job market for women. Limited job opportunities are a reflection of our society's contemporary position on women's status. Such statistics are real, not imagined or construed for the purpose of ERA ratification.

They are not invented to prove a point — they prove a point because they are true.

Just as mainstream supporters of the ERA do not focus on extremists — whether they be male or female — neither should McNabb. It is wrong to see support of the ERA, even aggressive support — as a "lashing out against the male sex."

ERA supporters don't feel that "the male sex" owes them anything. They do feel that it is time to "even things out," and they do want retribution — not from the male sex, but from society as a whole. The point is not to win concessions from individual men, through the time-honored tactics of subordated women, but to change the institutions of society in a way that will end the subordination that makes such tactics necessary.

The biggest obstacle to the ERA's ratification comes from those who do not understand its meaning. The full 24-word text of the Equal Rights Amendment reads: "Equal rights under the law shall not be denied or abridged by the United States or by any state on account of sex."

Anti-ERA individuals try to "read between the lines" or add things that are not there.

Pete McNabb is right about one thing — "The ERA is an attempt . . . to establish equal rights for women in the job market and many other phases of life."

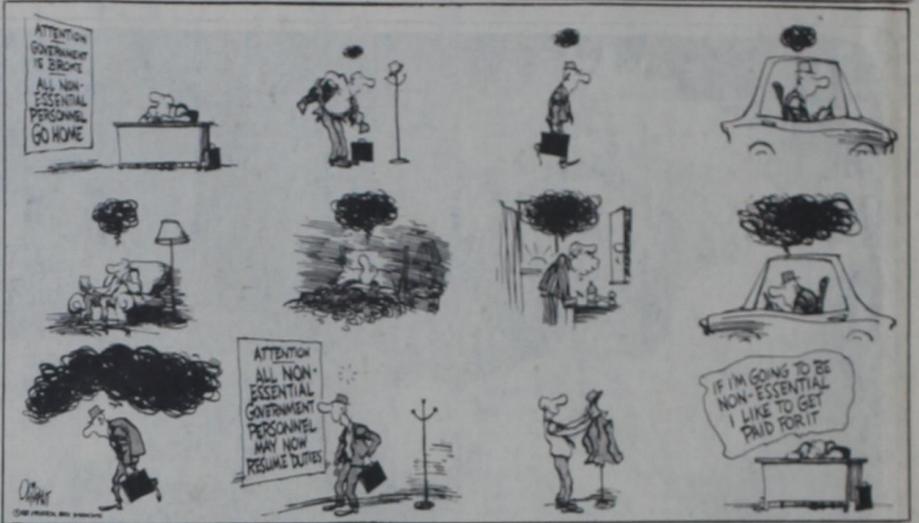

Beyond this, his editorial is a mish-mash of misinformation, common social stereotypes, and evidently, his own emotional reaction to some personal encounters with feminist supporters of ERA.

Any social change, if it is successful, will at first appear radical, extreme, and contrary to the status quo. The feminist movement is quite past that phase. The movement is not a rebellion against the male population, but against prejudicial attitudes which lie as a barrier to equality. The Equal Rights Amendment — and its supporters — demand just what the title indicated, equal rights. They ask for nothing more and expect nothing less.

To deny women their rights is to deny the principles for which our country was founded.

The passage of the ERA should be determined on its inherent qualities, rather than on the emotional reactions given through fanatical responses.

Letters to the Editor

A capitol view

Editor's Note: The following letter is being distributed to newspapers across the state by Texans to Save the Capitol. The group is seeking protection for the views of the State Capitol.

Dear Editor:
The State Capitol Building in Austin is the most important historic and culturally significant building in Texas. The Capitol dominated Austin's skyline from 1887 until 1965, when a few high rise buildings began to intrude and block important views of the Capitol.
Now the explosive growth of Austin as a whole threatens to surround this important symbol of our state and obscure it from public view forever.
The City Council of Austin must take immediate action if the remaining Capitol views are to be protected. Success in this effort will depend largely on public support.

Many citizens think that Austin has a responsibility to all Texans to preserve the Capitol's visibility; visitors and all residents alike benefit from a continued reminder of the symbolic importance of our State Government.

A letter expressing your opinion on this issue will help determine the place of the Capitol in Austin's skyline for generations. Address your letter in care of Austin City Council, and send it in care of Texans to Save the Capitol, 225 Congress Avenue, Suite 404, Austin, Texas 78701.

We will copy and distribute your letter to the City Council, keep you updated on Capitol View actions, and put you in touch with others in your area who have expressed interest in the Capitol View Issue.

Thank you for your help in preserving the Capitol for present and future generations.

Could someone tell us just who is this Michael Angelo?

While walking past the front of the Administration Building, there are a few of us who always take time to read the wonderful words of inspiration, wisdom and worship which have been carved into stone.

The following is a small sample: CHURCH, RELIGION, WEALTH, CITIZENSHIP, and even HOMEMAKING. We suppose that these words are an attempt to provide a 'study harder' enthusiasm in the passerby.

Perhaps in a few instances this approach works, but for the most part, we doubt many have even noticed their existence.

In any case, the real fun begins when you check out the words on the backside of the building. Amongst such classical greats as Plato, Aristotle, Pasteur and others, there is one xenolith, which occupies the space right above the main archway, that is of particular interest — MICHAEL ANGELO.

Now, just who in the hell is MICHAEL ANGELO? Surely, this is not a reference (and misspelled at that) to Michaelangelo Buonarroti, the famous Italian painter, sculptor, architect and poet.

Perhaps, as one local wag has suggested, Mr. Angelo was a Spanish contractor who erected the Administration Building. Being a vain man, Mr. Angelo was determined to impress his psyche upon all students who passed under that hallowed gateway.

However, sources high inside the administration tell us that Mr. Angelo was actually a local pioneer whose contributions to Lubbock's "growth" were of such significance that it was felt he should occupy this keystone position.

At this point, we really don't know which story to believe. It is even possible that there are other explanations floating about. Has anyone heard others?

Finally, should the faculty, administration, regents or whoever, decide that Mr. Angelo is no longer deserving of his high position in the history of Tech, and that, like Trotsky, his name should be forever removed from the people lexicon, we have a few suggestions as to possible replacements.

First, the phrase "Ignorance is Strength" seems an appropriate substitute. Another possibility is "Liberalism leads us down the road to Socialism."

This is our particular favorite because, like MICHAEL ANGELO, it is suggestive of the overall high academic spirit exhibited here at Texas Tech.

Or, more simply, how about HITLER, PESSIMISM or even PROMISCUITY? Once again, all suggestions are welcome.

By the way, does anyone know Dante's first name?

Everything 'OK' with arms talks

GENEVA, Switzerland (AP) — American and Soviet negotiating teams talked for more than two hours Tuesday in the first full bargaining session on limiting nuclear missiles in Europe, and promptly reasserted a news blackout on the conduct of the negotiations.

"Everything is OK," Soviet delegation chief Yuli A. Kvitsinsky said as he left the two-hour, 40-minute meeting. "We meet again Friday" at the Soviet mission, Kvitsinsky said.

There were no other public indications here about the conduct of the talks, which have seized the attention of Western Europeans increasingly wary about the medium-range nuclear forces of the superpowers.

The two sides, in a move they said would encourage progress, agreed to embargo virtually all information about the talks, which are to be conducted Tuesdays and Fridays.

"We have concurred that the details of the negotiations must be kept in the negotiating room," the chief U.S. negotiator, Paul H. Nitze, said after conferring with Kvitsinsky Monday on procedural issues. Nitze described that session as "cordial and

Corn Belt blizzard 'horrible'

By the Associated Press
A corn belt blizzard driving blinding snow across the Midwest with 50-mph winds Tuesday crippled cities and closed highways, stranding hundreds of travelers and shutting down schools.

At least four people were killed as a "very dangerous" winter storm surged through parts of Nebraska, South Dakota, Iowa and Minnesota at blizzard force, flinging snow up to 14 inches deep and building 4-foot drifts.

Highways were strewn with jackknifed trucks. Many motorists abandoned their cars and sought refuge in motels, farm houses and emergency shelters. In some areas, even the snowplows were halted by the blowing snow.

"Absolutely, unbelievably, horrible," was the way Robert McDermott of Piedmont, S.D., described conditions on Interstate 90, as he sat out the storm in a gymnasium at Murdo, S.D., with about a dozen other travelers.

The snow measured up to 14 inches deep in southern Minnesota, 10 inches in Nebraska and South Dakota and 7 inches in Iowa.

A 50-year-old man collapsed and died while running a snowblower Monday at his home in Brookings, S.D.

In Potter, Neb., a 23-year-old worker was killed Monday when 30-mph winds toppled a 100-foot-high oil rig tower.

businesslike." Deputy head of the U.S. delegation Maynard W. Glitman, reached by The Associated Press, would not discuss the atmosphere of Tuesday's round, the first full-scale meeting of the two delegations.

"We've finished for this day," said Glitman. "I'm not going to tell you anything more."

East Germany's official news agency ADN said foreign ministers of the seven Warsaw Pact countries would be discussing "the status of arms control and disarmament" at a meeting that opened Tuesday in Bucharest, Romania.

Early sessions of the Geneva talks on intermediate-range nuclear forces were likely to center on resolving differences about the terminology, numbers, range and destructive characteristics of those armaments.

Redistricting plan cheating Lubbock County Hispanics?

AUSTIN (AP) — Secretary of State David Dean delivered redistricting plans for the Texas Legislature to the U.S. Department of Justice Tuesday warning that the plans may not comply with the federal Voting Rights Act.

A Lubbock County district is among the "problem areas" of the redistricting plan cited by Dean.

"There are claims that under the plan (approved by the Legislative Redistricting Board) there is a retrogression in opportunities for minority representation," Dean said. "It is my opinion that several of these claims are meritorious."

Dean, a Republican, pointed out several "problem areas" in the board's plan, and said he was joined in the protest by Gov. Bill Clements, also a Republican.

Dean urged the Justice Department to expedite its review because subsequent court challenges could shorten the time Texas counties need to make voting precinct plans for the

No survivors in plane crash

AJACCIO, Corsica (AP) — A chartered DC-9, caught in stiff winds and dense fog as it approached the Ajaccio airport, smashed into a mountainside Tuesday. Police said all 168 passengers, many of them travel agents on a promotional trip, and six crew members were killed.

Ajaccio police said there were no survivors and that the victims included three children.

Officials said the plane crashed into the west side of the fog-shrouded 4,543-foot-high Mount San Pietro about 30 miles from the airport and near the village of Casa Casalabriva. They said it hit the ground about 597 feet from the top of the peak.

The Yugoslav company which owned the plane, Inex-Adria Airways, was unable to say exactly how many people were aboard. It said the craft was equipped to carry a maximum of 175 passengers, and as many as 172 people held tickets for the flight but several ticket-holders canceled out at the last minute.

Reagan assures elderly

WASHINGTON (AP) — President Reagan told the White House Conference on Aging Tuesday that the elderly have been "needlessly and cruelly frightened" about his proposals for Social Security and promised never to betray their right to the program's benefits.

At 70, the nation's oldest president ever, Reagan said he is frustrated at being "portrayed as somehow an enemy of my own generation," largely because of his attempts to cut future Social Security benefits.

The president made an unannounced appearance before the conference where hours earlier, Reagan supporters won their first test of strength as a key committee voted overwhelmingly against using general tax revenues to bail out Social Security.

The 111-34 vote in the Committee on Economic Well-Being came on a resolution introduced by Bruce Nestande, a Republican supervisor in Orange County, Calif., and a former aide to Reagan as governor.

Leaders of organizations for the elderly have charged that the White House stacked the Committee on Economic Well-Being with Reagan supporters. Most of the nearly 2,300 delegates were chosen by governors and members of Congress, not the administration.

The president has been dead-set against tapping general revenues to lift the beleaguered retirement and disability program out of its funding crisis.

"We will not betray those entitled to Social Security benefits," Reagan told the conference. "And we will, indeed we must, put Social Security on a sound financial basis."

Earlier this year, while still trying to balance the budget by 1984, Reagan proposed a series of rule changes that would have sharply reduced benefits of future retirees, penalized early retirement, eliminated the minimum benefit and delayed next year's cost-of-living increases for 36 million Americans.

But one-by-one he scaled back his plans and finally abandoned them in favor of proposing a new task force to seek a compromise solution to the financial troubles of the retirement system.

"There has been political demagoguery and outright falsehood," Reagan said Tuesday, "and as a result many who rely on Social Security for their livelihood have been needlessly and cruelly frightened."

And, the president added, "those who did that frightening either didn't know what they were talking about or they were lying."

Rats!

... it wasn't cooked

HOUSTON (AP) — A Houston man who claimed he found a dead rat in his cafeteria food admitted he staged the incident "because the devil made me do it."

Henry Fisher, 25, told managers of Wyatt's Cafeteria he wasn't sure why he mixed the dead mouse in a plate of beef tips and rice he shared with his girlfriend last week.

"I guess the devil made me do it," Fisher said.

Cafeteria officials said they did not plan to take any legal action against Fisher.

The cafeteria was closed last Wednesday after inspectors found several health code violations, said Victor Pappas of the city health department. The restaurant corrected the violations and reopened the following day, he said.

James Muns, executive vice president of the chain's main office in Dallas, said Fisher admitted Monday he trapped the mouse at his home, hid it in his sock and planted it in the food.

Wyatt officials said they became suspicious because the rodent was uncooked.

Fisher's girlfriend also sent a statement to Wyatt officials about Fisher's attempt to blame the dead mouse on unsanitary conditions at the restaurant.

Deceased internship director leaves mark

By CINDI SONNAMAKER
UD Staff

Dick Cook left a living legacy in the mass communications department's internship and workshop programs he had directed for three years before his death Monday.

Cook helped hundreds of mass communications students obtain internships in their major fields. Forty-five students participated in internships last summer, the highest number of communications students ever to participate in the program, said Bill Ross, director of the mass communications department.

"Most students who do internships consider them to be the single most important course they take," Ross said.

Although Cook is gone, the internship program is not going to fold, said Faye Kennedy, director of the mass communications Office of Placement.

"We will definitely have the internship program, and students interested in summer internships should continue to come to the placement office," Kennedy said.

Ross said Cook's death came during a lull of activity in his office. The office will become busier in January, he said.

Cook has set up Tech students with internships that led to jobs after graduation. Becky Patterson interned at the International Radio and Television Society in New York City, and was later hired by that company.

Jon Mark Beilue, former UD sports editor, was an editorial intern at the Amarillo Globe-News, and is now a sportswriter for that paper.

Cook's ability to obtain such positions for students was due to his professional contacts.

"Dick knew a lot of people because he had been in the advertising business for 30 years," Kennedy said.

Cook would go into classrooms and make announcements, so students got to know him, Kennedy said.

"Dick liked students and enjoyed working with them," she added. "He always had time for them."

"He kept an eagle's eye out. When he saw students looking at the bulletin board (where internship positions are posted), he would bring them in the office, talk to them, and have them fill out the necessary papers."

Cook began his communications career at the Lubbock

Avalanche-Journal, where he worked in the advertising department for 37 years. He served as retail national advertising manager for the paper.

He took early retirement from the A-J in 1975. After that he came to Tech and worked as advertising director for The University Daily.

Cook resigned his position at the UD because of poor health.

According to Bill Dean, former Tech student publications director, Cook thought he would need ear surgery. As it turned out, he did not have surgery, and Ross asked him to take over the internship program.

Cook died Monday of an apparent heart attack. A memorial service for him will be at 4 p.m. today at Forest Heights Methodist Church.

Hollywood offers dramatic Christmas

Maybe I'm just getting old, but I can remember back when "Christmas movie" meant those films with a Christmas setting or theme.

Pat Barton

Oh, there were some great Christmas movies around back when. Remember Bing Crosby in "White Christmas," Barbara Stanwyck in "Christmas in Connecticut," Jimmy Stewart in "It's a Wonderful Life" or Edmund Gwynn in "Miracle on 34th Street?"

Now, "Christmas movie" means something entirely different. Now a Christmas movie is one the studios release during the Christmas season because they believe that's when it will make the most money — and they release a lot of them.

Well, this year is no exception as the major studios have assembled a long list of movies to flood the theaters during Christmas.

While comedy always seems to be a major staple of any film crop, most of the releases for this Christmas are dramatic movies.

Noticeably — and thankfully — absent from this year's offerings are any of the space-fantasy type films that made movie screens look like little more than over-sized video games for the past couple of years.

Instead, Hollywood has given us several pictures with actual plots and fine casts.

The present Christmas crop also offers new films from some of Hollywood's biggest names — names like George

C. Scott, Paul Newman, Warren Beatty, Jane Fonda, Diane Keaton and Sally Field.

The season should at least be interesting, so let's take a look at what Hollywood is offering...

"TAPS" — Stars Scott and Timothy Hutton, a fine young actor who sprang to prominence with his memorable performance in "Ordinary People."

It's the story of a retired general (Scott), who's taken command of a military school, and of a young cadet (Hutton) whose unflagging loyalty to the general causes him to undertake a campaign to save the school from sale to developers.

Scott is a marvelous actor who has had too few good film roles in recent years. His powerful performance as a distraught father trying to rescue his kidnapped daughter in "Hardcore" was Scott's finest role since "Patton," but that was three years ago.

Hopefully, the "Taps" role will give Scott an opportunity to act as only he can.

"PENNIES FROM HEAVEN" — Popular comedian Steve Martin takes his first crack at a dramatic role in this musical reminiscent of the MGM extravaganzas of the past.

Martin portrays an aspiring songwriter who hits it big with a happy, optimistic tune during the bleak day of the Depression. Martin is joined by his co-star from "The Jerk," and sometimes romantic interest Bernadette Peters.

Oscar winner Christopher Walken heads the supporting cast. The bottom line for "Pennies From Heaven" will surely be whether Martin can pull off a dramatic lead.

Fortunately for Martin, he has veteran director Herbert Ross to help him through the task.

"Rollover" — A story of murder, mystery and romance in the world of high finance.

Jane Fonda and Kris Kristofferson star as a pair joined together by a series of circumstances to salvage a crumbling petrochemical empire.

Fonda is the elegant, beautiful former actress who commands the empire founded by her late husband. Kristofferson is a tough, worldly whiz who steps in to help Fonda save her world.

"ABSENCE OF MALICE" — Paul Newman and Sally Field star in this tale of love and anger in the world of modern journalism.

Newman is a legitimate liquor wholesaler who is set up by the boys from the U.S. government.

Uncle Sam's boys give ambitious reporter Field a ton of dirt on Newman, which she prints. The only problem is none of it is true. Her carelessness causes her to jeopardize both her professional life and her personal relationship, which just happens to be with Newman.

Newman gave a fine performance in a lousy film — "Fort Apache, the Bronx" — from last year's Christmas movies.

Field is hoping to recapture her "Norma Rae" Oscar form after getting herself into losers like "Beyond the Poseidon Adventure," "Smokey and the Bandit II" and "Back Roads."

"REDS" — Warren Beatty and Diane Keaton star in this one. It's the story of an American journalist who is the only American to be buried in Moscow's Red Square.

Beatty has done very little since he came through like a champ and did everything on "Heaven Can Wait." Keaton hasn't exactly set the screen on fire either since her Oscar-winning performance in "Annie Hall."

'Rollover'

Jane Fonda and Kris Kristofferson star in the romantic thriller "Rollover," part of this year's crop of Christmas movies. The pair join forces to save Fonda's petrochemical empire from going under.

In AP basketball poll North Carolina tightens hold on top spot

By TOM CANAVAN
AP Sports Writer

North Carolina tightened its hold on the No. 1 position in The Associated Press college basketball poll Monday following a week in which four members of the nation's Top Twenty were upset, including No. 2 UCLA and No. 5 Georgetown.

The Tar Heels, who downed Kansas 74-67 in their opener last Saturday, collected 45 of a possible 60 first-place votes and 1,174 points. North Carolina was named on every ballot cast by a nationwide panel of sports writers and broadcasters in widening its hold on first place from a mere 19 points last week to more than 90 this week.

Kentucky and Louisville each moved up a notch in the poll and took over the Nos. 2 and 3 slots, while UCLA slipped to No. 8 and Georgetown tell all the way to No. 20.

Kentucky, an 83-64 victor against Akron in its opener, grabbed eight first-place votes and 1,063 points. Louisville, which will open its season this week, was tabbed No. 1 on five ballots and garnered 1,059 points.

Wichita State, 1-0, and Virginia, 3-0, also were upward bound this week, advancing two spots to Nos. 4 and 5, respectively. The Shockers, who drubbed Abilene Christian 93-55 last week, collected 919 points — 10 more than the Cavaliers, who ran their record to 3-0 by winning the Virginia Tipoff tournament before the hometown fans.

Iowa, No. 9 last week when it whipped Northern Illinois 84-66, took over the No. 6 spot this week with 826 points. DePaul, 0-0, inched up to No. 7 with 748, while UCLA, surprised by Brigham Young 79-75 in Larry Farmer's debut as coach, received 644.

Tulsa, an easy 89-62 winner against U.S. International, leaped from No. 11 to No. 9 with 634 points, while Minnesota, 0-0, remained No. 10 with 594 points.

Alabama-Birmingham topped the Second 10 followed by defending national champion Indiana; Arkansas, which received the final first-place vote; San Francisco; Brigham Young; Missouri; Alabama; Nevada-Las Vegas; Notre Dame; and Georgetown.

Mediocrity describes NFL Central division

An AP Sports Analysis
By BRUCE LOWITT
AP Sports Writer

A 7-6 record won't get you very far in most of the National Football League. Then, there is the Central Division of the National Conference.

The NFC Central long has been called the Black-and-Blue Division. It used to refer to the beatings the four "original" teams — Chicago, Detroit, Green Bay and Minnesota — inflicted upon each other. Today, it refers to the beating the entire division, including 1977 entry Tampa Bay, receives from without.

In the three divisions of the American Conference, a 7-6 record won't get you anything better than third place. The same goes for the NFC East. In the NFC West, it will give you a second-place tie, three games behind San Francisco, which already has clinched the division title.

But, in the NFC Central, 7-6 is good enough for first. Mediocrity, a byword virtually since the division's inception and more pronounced in recent seasons, is alive and well there once again.

Detroit, Minnesota and Tampa Bay all are locked in first place with three games remaining. Green Bay only is one game back at 6-7. Only Chicago, 3-10, is out of it.

Unlike last year, though, when Minnesota's 9-7 record was good enough for the division title and Detroit's 9-7 wasn't even good enough for a wild-card playoff berth, the chances are very good that the second-place team — and perhaps even the one in third — in the division at season's end could qualify for postseason play.

In the AFC, the New York Jets are 8-4-1 and hold a slim lead over Buffalo and Miami in the East. Cincinnati is 10-3 and two games ahead of Pittsburgh in the Central and Denver, Kansas City and San Diego are tied atop the West at 8-5.

It seems certain, therefore, that a better-than-even record will be needed to earn a wild card, and that some teams which finish over 500 will be left out of the playoffs.

In the NFC, though, 500 could be good enough to remain on the road to the Super Bowl.

In the Central Division, Detroit plays Green Bay, Minnesota and Tampa Bay; Minnesota plays Chicago, Detroit and Kansas City; and Tampa Bay plays Atlanta, San Diego and Detroit. There is the very real possibility, therefore, that each team could knock each other off (and don't rule out a challenge by Green Bay which plays Detroit, New Orleans and the Jets) and that the first-place team could finish worse than Minnesota's 8-7-1 in 1978. That is the previous low record for a division champion.

Elsewhere in the NFC, Atlanta is 7-6 in the West and St. Louis and the New York Giants are 6-7 in the East. They, too, still are in serious playoff contention.

In the AFC, there only is one team at 6-7. The Oakland Raiders. They won the Super Bowl last season. Barring a miracle, they won't repeat. If the Raiders were in the NFC, they'd be right there in the running.

Righetti named AL rookie of the year

NEW YORK (AP) — Hard-throwing Dave Righetti of the New York Yankees was named American League Rookie of the Year by the Baseball Writers Association of America on Monday, beating out Boston teammates Rick Gedman and Bob Ojeda for the award. Righetti, a southpaw who posted an 8-4 record for the Yankees after being called up from Columbus of the International League, received 23 of the 28 first-place votes from a BBWAA panel.

GREAT WRITING STARTS WITH A LITTLE LISTENING, A LITTLE BEER, AND A LOT OF LEGWORK.

When the guys at Miller asked me to write an ad on writing, I said, "Forget it. Not even if you held a gun to my head." So they held a bottle of Lite Beer to my mouth. They're a pretty persuasive group.

THUGS TO MUGS

If you're going to write anything, know what you're talking about. And that means three things: Research, research, and more research. The more you know, the more you can tell your reader.

Take my characters. A lot of them I base on actual people. There's this buddy of mine who pops up in every book I write. In one story he's a cop. In another, a private eye. Once, I made him a millionaire. Using him not only helped make character development a heck of a lot easier, he was so carried away by the rich image, he bought me a lot of free dinners (and a lot of Lite Beer from Miller). So use the people you know as models.

Even locations should be based on real things. If you're writing about a bar, know that bar. Hang out there. Watch the bartender. The customers. Whatever they drink, you drink. When they drink Lite Beer, you drink Lite Beer. Remember—research is most fun when you soak up as much subject matter as you can. It can only help you paint a better picture.

HI, DOLL

No caper is complete without dames (or ladies in proper English). Experience has shown me that in mystery writing, the sexier the dames, the better. Experience has also shown me that sexy scenes make great punctuation marks. This is where research has the greatest potential. Use your own discretion in this matter. But when you write about it, don't be too explicit. That way, your reader gets to paint a more vivid picture.

CAPER TO PAPER

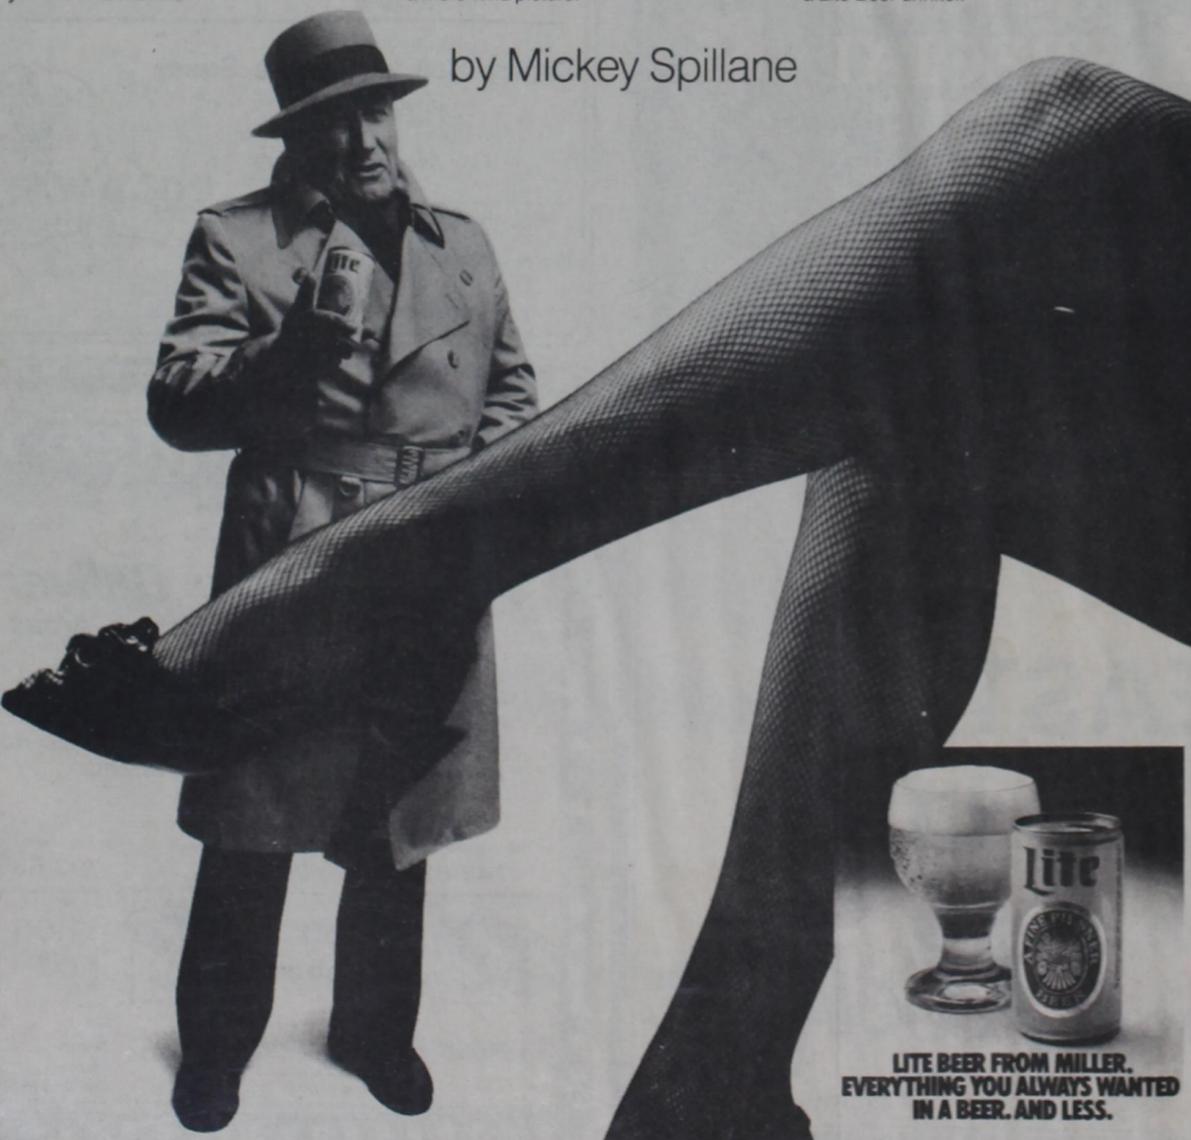

O.K., you've got your characters, locations, and dames lined up. Now comes the good part: Putting your caper to paper. There's no mystery to it. As long as you write the ending first, the rest will follow. Write short, terse, to-the-point sentences. Be as clear as possible. And make sure you've got the right stuff around for when you get thirsty. After all, writing is pretty thirsty work.

I suggest a couple of mugs of Lite Beer—who ever heard of a caper that didn't involve a couple of mugs?

Why Lite Beer? It's a lot like me and my books—great taste, less filling (some people can't get their fill of my books), and always good to spend time with.

At any rate, follow my advice and, who knows—you might turn out a heck of a story. Or you might turn out to be a heck of a Lite Beer drinker.

Who are the experts?

Jeff Rembert

Who's to judge who's a football expert? Who really can judge the football talent of the Southwest Conference?

The Associated Press let the conference coaches determine the 1981 All-SWC squad. By the looks of the results, the coaches were deep in thought trying to determine whether nuclear fusion is a viable energy source.

Fans, sportswriters and broadcasters get to select the all-conference squads in other sports. However, half of them don't see half of the players they're evaluating.

I've always believed the players should make the post-season selections. A player has a whole different — and I suppose more accurate — perspective of his opponent.

And when the AP All-SWC selections were announced Monday, fans from Fayetteville to Houston and from Lubbock to Fort Worth no doubt were howling over what they consider great injustices to their favorite players.

So what if fans consider SMU's Lance McIlhenny, at best, the fourth-most-talented quarterback in the conference. The coaches say McIlhenny was the best quarterback.

Whatever the coaches say is as good as law. Who's to question the decision of the appointed mentors of our football teams?

Tech middle linebacker, Terry Baer, apparently didn't even merit second team All-SWC recognition. Just because he was the most consistent Raider defender in 1981 and the team's top defender with 117 tackles, why recognize him as one of the best linebackers in the SWC?

Baer, however, only made 84 unassisted tackles, intercepted two passes, broke up three passes, recovered one fumble and caused two fumbles in 1981. His season-high 15 tackles apparently weren't impressive enough to garner Baer the All-SWC — or at least second team — recognition he deserved.

Tech punter Maury Buford made the first team and defensive tackle Gabriel Rivera and safety Tate Randle collected second

Cowboys clinch berth

DALLAS (AP) — The Dallas Cowboys said Monday they have clinched a wild card berth in the National Football League playoffs.

Minnesota's loss to Green Bay Sunday put the 10-3 Cowboys in position for their seventh consecutive visit to the NFL playoffs and 15th in 16 years.

San Francisco is 10-3 and Philadelphia 9-4. There are four 7-6 teams in the National Conference. The worst the Cowboys could finish would be 10-6 but they would still qualify for the wild card because the other teams still have to play each other and Dallas would be ahead on tie-breakers.

Also, the Cowboys announced that starting quarterback Danny White was questionable with "bruised ribs" for Sunday's game in Baltimore.

team honors. Granted, Rivera and Randle had good seasons, but Baer seemed to stand out. Covering the games this season, it seemed like everytime I turned around, Baer was in on the defensive play.

Of course, a fan could pass off the coaches' ignorance of Baer's accomplishments on Tech's season record of 1-9-1. Remember in 1976 how the AP selected Rice (3-8) quarterback Tommy Kramer to the first team All-America squad but only the second team All-SWC squad. Tech quarterback Rodney Allison was on the first team.

Just because TCU's Steve Stamp made conference foes forget about Kramer and SMU-ex Mike Ford shouldn't have influenced the selection of the All-SWC quarterback. He paced the Horned Frogs to their first win against the Razorbacks in 22 years. Stamp had the best one-game performance of any conference signal-caller in 1981 when he completed 24 of 43 passes for 399 yards against Rice.

And just because Texas A&M's Gary Kubiak turned the Aggies around in 1981 shouldn't make him any better than second team All-SWC quarterback. Going into the final week of conference play, Kubiak was the highest-rated quarterback in the SWC. He only trailed Stamp for the highest total offense per game average.

Meanwhile, Rice's Mike Calhoun threatened to break the conference record for touchdown passes thrown in a single season (21) and single-handedly made the Owls respectable in 1981. Preseason pollsters picked Rice to finish ninth in the nine-team conference — if that high.

But who's to question the selections of the conference coaches. Though "duck season" officially opened Sept. 5 when SMU played its first game against Texas-Arlington and ended Nov. 21 when the Mustangs tackled the Razorbacks, why question the selection of McIlhenny? Duck hunters from miles around flocked to Texas Stadium this fall in hopes of shooting down one of McIlhenny's "passes."

McIlhenny made All-SWC by virtue of his backfield mates, tailbacks Eric Dickerson and Craig James — each 1,000-plus performers in 1981. It really takes a lot of talent to hand the ball off to Dickerson around the rightside, Dickerson around the leftside and James up the middle.

Of course, it doesn't take a lot of talent to make All-SWC selections as proven by conference coaches in 1981.

Roundball next step for Rec Sports

Rec Sports will make the big transition from football to basketball this week with its Saturday Morning "Live" 5-on-5 basketball tournament.

The tournament is open to all students, faculty and staff, and both a men's and women's division will be offered. This is an informal recreational tournament with a small award being presented to the winner. Its purpose is to provide for an enjoyable leisure activity experience.

Entries need to be turned into the Rec Sports Office by 5 p.m. Thursday. The games will then be played in the Rec Center on Saturday Morning.

Teams shall consist of five people, but teams can play with less than five. No more than one Tech Varsity basketball player can be on a team. All players must be on the roster prior to tournament play, and there is free substitution.

The first team to score 30 points with a two-basket advantage shall be declared the winner. Game time is forfeit time.

Crash Landing

Like this flag football player, football is falling out of the way so Rec Sports can get basketball rolling.
