It's looking good for Columbia

CAPE CANAVERAL, Fla. (AP) -Columbia's astronauts, optimistic to the last, went to bed Tuesday night not knowing if the skies would clear enough for a sunrise launch of the shuttle's first return trip to space.

The forecast indicated a 30-40 percent chance of overnight showers right through Columbia's 6:30 a.m. CST launch target.

Precisely at 10:10 p.m. EST, the countdown resumed as planned after the expiration of a built-in "hold" period that had lasted most of the day.

The decision whether to go, scrub or wait was to be made in a conference of top shuttle officials after midnight when they would have more information about the weather.

Shortly before retiring for the night, both Joe Engle and Richard Truly told a meeting of top space officials that if a launch opportunity exists, they want to take it — even if it means sitting until noon in the cockpit waiting for a break in the weather.

"They don't want to miss a chance to go at their first opportunity," said astronaut coordinator Bill Jones. "They're ready and they want to go."

"I think they're confident we can go and we're sure going to give it a try and hope for the best," said Jones, one of small group who gathered in the crew quarters to wish them luck because there is no time for that on launch me ning. "We are proceeding as thou they are going to launch at 7:30 in 1 morning, that's the whole peychological

Their goal is to take Columbia into or bit; the ship would become the first make a repeat trip into space, ushering in an era where travel and work in space would become almost routine.

weather officer, said "our job is to pinpoint" breaks in the cloud cover and he expressed confidence there would be time this morning when the shuttle could take off.

At the midnight weather conference, top space officials were to decide if weather would permit loading of the ship's volatile liquid hydrogen and uid oxygen fuels.

That operation begins about street before scheduled launch. If the is scrubbed, the fuels have to be unloaded and the tank purged of contaminants

Before climbing into the cockpit today, they were to get a 10-minute medical examination and have breakfast with some NASA officials and fellow astronauts. At 4 a.m. they were to get into their rust-brown flying suits and leave for the pad at 4:40 a.m.

Air Force Col. Engle, 49, the commander of Columbia's Flight II and Navy Capt. Truly, 43, paid an early morning visit Tuesday to their gleaming white ship. They did a pilot's walkaround, shook hands with workers on the pad and thanked them for readying their bird.

From 157 miles in space, the astronauts aboard Columbia will activate experiments designed to reveal where Earth's resources — minerals, or fish, for example - still lie undiscovered.

In all, seven "earth-viewing" tasks are planned for Columbia's five-day flight. Most monitors, along with a Canadian-built bionic arm that is being tested for satellite deployment, are inside the shuttle's huge cargo bay.

One experiment may someday lead fishermen to better grounds.

On-board instruments will search for areas where the blue of the ocean turns green, indicating a high concentration of algae. Some fish eat algae and other fish eat those fish, so the right green hue suggests good hunting.

The shuttle will open its cargo doors and fly upside down - relative to Earth - to target the instruments. The biggest piece of equipment is an antenna 30 feet by 7 feet wide, which will send and receive radar signals to create maplike images of the earth's surface. It is hoped the experiment will help develop information to locate hard-to-find mineral resources.

Last April's maiden flight was designed to prove the shuttle could leave and return in condition to return again. Flight II begins to demonstrate Columbia's capability to put space to use to the economic benefit of man.

The shuttle's ejection seats, similar to those used successfully for pilots flying high-performance aircraft, would be really useful should there be an emergency upon Columbia's approach for landing.

Water amendment goes down the drain

Spending panel goes along with it

Compiled from Staff and Wire Reports

An amendment to the Texas Constitution that would have created a multi-million dollar water trust fund received overwhelming support in Lubbock County Tuesday, but was soundly defeated after it garnered only 43 percent of the statewide vote.

In Lubbock County, Proposition 4, the water amendment, captured about 92 percent of the vote from the 15,070 people

Had it been approved, Proposition 4 would have given half of the state's annual surplus tax revenue to a Water Trust Fund to help cities and counties finance future water pro-

Houston, Dallas and Austin voters were largely responsible for defeating the Water Trust Fund amendment, where hotly contested elections and referendums brought out large numbers of voters.

In Houston's Harris County, approximately 350,000 turned out to vote. With 459 of 519 precincts reporting, about 57 percent of Harris County voters were against Proposition 4, The Houston Post reported at about 11:45 p.m. Tuesday.

But the big issue in Houston was the mayor's race. Incumbent Houston Mayor Jinn McConn, who was seeking his third two-year term, was in fourth place with about 13 percent of the vote. City Controller Kathy Whitmire and Harris County Sheriff Jack Heard won places in a Nov. 17 runoff for the mayor's race. With 328 of 390 precincts reporting, Whitmire was leading with 36.8 percent of the vote, while Heard was second with 25.8 percent, the Post reported.

Houston voters made up nearly half of the state's 730,000 person turnout for the election.

In Dallas, meanwhile, a school board race brought out large numbers of voters -- many of whom voted against the Water Trust Fund Amendment. Dallas voters were defeating the water amendment soundly with 67.6 percent of the voters against the amendment, The Dallas Morning News reported at midnight. In Austin and all of Travis County, 65.9 percent of the more than 52,000 people who voted cast their ballots against the water amendment, The Daily Texan reported. A referendum to sell Austin's 16 percent of the South Texas Nuclear Project brought out a large portion of the vote. Austin voters decided by a 2-to-1 margin to sell their share of the project.

The other six amendments were all passing in Lubbock County, with only Proposition 3 in a close run with 51 percent for and 49 percent against.

Statewide, Proposition 3, which would have created a seven-man state finance management committee, was being soundly defeated with 63 percent of the voters against it.

An amendment to authorize cities to use tax increment financing and tax abatement agreements to encourage redevelopment of blighted urban areas was winning by significant margins both in Lubbock and across Texas. Proposition 1 had 57 percent of Texans voting for it, and in Lubbock, 69 percent were for it.

Proposition 2 had 79 percent of Texans in favor of the amendment statewide, while in Lubbock 83 percent of the voters were for it.

Proposition 2 is a "housekeeping" amendment that will allow the General Land Office to issue titles to people who have lived on state land for at least 50 years under the understanding that they have owned the land.

An amendment that will exempt livestock and poultry from all property taxes was also favored by wide margins. Sixtyeight percent of Texas voters favored Proposition 5, while in Lubbock 77 percent of the people were for it.

An amendment that will exempt homeowners from a portion of their city, county and school taxes was also winning by wide margins across the state and in Lubbock. Proposition 6 was winning with 70 percent of statewide vote and 67 percent of the Lubbock vote. During the next three years, homeowners may be allowed to be exempt up to 40 percent on their property taxes. The maximum exemption will decline to 30 percent in 1985 and will further decline to 20 percent after 1987. The exemptions are subject to approval by individual city, county and school taxing authorities.

Proposition 7, which would authorize issuance of an additional $250 million in bonds for the Veterans' Land Program, was approved.

Statewide, 65 percent of the voters favored the amendment. In Lubbock, 67 percent of the voters endorsed the amendment. In addition to authorizing the issuance of more bonds, the amendment will raise the interest ceiling on bonds to 10 percent. The current interest rate is 6 percent.

In Precinct 48 in the south part of Lubbock, the voter turnout was 746 out of 3,000 registered voters. Precinct 48 is the second largest precinct in Lubbock County.

"This is better than the last amendment election in 1979," precinct election judge Bill Deal said.

The Coronado Room in the University Center remained quiet and empty Tuesday, despite the constitutional election being held in the room.

Less than 2 percent of the registered Tech voters in Precincts 49 and 50 turned out to vote on the amendments proposed for the Texas Constitution. When the polls closed at 7 p.m. Tuesday, 60 students out of the 4,000 registered to vote cast their ballots at the UC precincts.

Stu McDonald, an election judge, attributed the poor voter turnout to student apathy, the unpublicized location of the precinct and the lack of voter registration transfers.

"Students are apathetic toward a constitutional election because the students can't see the direct effect (of the election) on them," McDonald said. McDonald also said that students simply did not know where the election was being held.

McDonald said most upperclassmen at Tech could have transferred their registration because they are registered voters. He also said most of the freshman here are not registered

Despite Tuesday's sparse balloting, not all elections at Tech have had such a low voter turnout.

Neal Pearson, associate political science professor, said 85 percent of the registered student voters went to the polls in the 1980 presidential election. In the 1978 gubernatorial election, 62 percent of the registered students cast their ballots.

McDonald said Tuesday's constitutional election did not have the glamour of a presidential election.

"Presidential elections draw more of a crowd because people are attracted to a two-man competition," McDonald

One of the most important amendments for West Texas, Proposition 4, would give half the state's excess tax revenues to water development. U.S. Rep. Kent Hance and Lubbock Mayor Bill McAlister both lobbied heavily for the amendment.

Clay Daniels, a senior accounting major from Hobbs, N.M., said he voted for the amendment.

"Why wouldn't you vote for the amendment?" Daniels asked. "This area needs water like a baby needs its Grady Martin, a junior mechanical engineering major from Lubbock, said she wanted the water fund proposition to pass, but was not sure it would because of voters in South Texas.

"I really want the amendment to pass, but it seems that the voters in the central and coastal areas don't really care (about the water problem in West Texas)," Martin said.

Regulation of broadcast media favored

By SHANA TOLER and LISA CATON

A small audience at Tuesday's UC Forum favored a resolution that said deregulation of the broadcast media will deny freedom of speech.

The final poll showed 13 votes in favor of and nine opposed to the resolution, thus the majority favored continuing the regulation of broadcasting.

The resolution's wording left audience members in doubt as to which side of the issue the speakers favored. Some forum participants appeared to have trouble understanding how getting the federal government out of broadcasting through deregulation could hurt freedom of speech. But, others said deregulation would give broadcasters too much power over free

"Deregulating the broadcast media is like putting a lion tamer in the cage with the lion," said John F. Deethardt, assistant professor of speech communica-

Deethardt, who favored the resolution, said broadcasters are trustees of the airways, which are in the

"The whole battle centers around the First Amendment rights of the public and the First Amendment rights of the broadcasters," Deethardt said.

"Without broadcast regulations, pressures of the marketplace will keep radio and television in line," Mark Norman, director of KTXT-FM, said in opposition to the resolution.

"Notifying possible opponents to an editorial is burdensome. This has almost eliminated open discussions of controversial issues on the air," Norman said.

"With the passage of the Fairness Doctrine in 1949, broadcasters are required to air both sides of an issue," said Bill Dean, director of Tech's Ex-Students Association and associate professor of mass communications.

"How would you feel as a businessman to have your job hinge on the opinion of seven political appointees on the FCC (Federal Communications Commission) every three years?" said Bob McKinsey, general manager of KCBD-TV news. How long will this be if the airways are halfmanipulated by the government and half-manipulated by the press?" McKinsey said. "The Fairness Doctrine may not be perfect, but it is trying to prevent a monopoly of the airways," Dean

"Television is rated as the most believable form of

"Just because broadcasters don't want to be bothered with the details of the regulations, this doesn't justify their stance (in favor of deregulation)," he said. "It's not too much to ask that broadcasters continue the FCC's regulations for public service." "No one knows how bold television will become without regulation and (television) should be given the chance (to work without regulation)," McKinsey said. "If television is the most believable when the Fairness Doctrine is in tact, why eliminate it? It might need amending but it's doing the job," Dean said. "Why should we air minority views when it does not represent the majority? Editorializing has decreased on the air because broadcasters are afraid of repercussions," Norman said. "How are we going to have changes in our society without hearing from the minorities?" Tim Walker, a senior political science major, said during the audience comment portion of the debate. "We must guarantee that the broadcasters will air different views. This is a fundamental right of a democracy," Walker said.

Letters to the Editor

It's entertainment

To the Editor:

Your title (entertainment writer) is quite appropriate, because your review of "Die Fledermaus" was entertaining indeed. But there is danger

Someone might take your comments seriously and give you credit for knowing what you don't. I don't mean to condemn you for lacking knowledge of "Die Fledermaus" and of music in general

 I simply suggest that, being ignorant of such matters, you should not review and judge them. And, if you insist on doing so, you might at least write carefully:

1) Why tell the story of the show? The people who are interested in a review saw it. were in it, or are familiar with it, so surely they know the plot already. 2) It is a mistake for any reviewer ever to judge the morality of a character or performer on stage. The role of Alfred is meant to be a caricature of a typical Italian tenor, and this includes womanizing and singing at the drop of hat.

3) Brian Rosewall is not a baritone. If you knew that a baritone is a medium-pitched man's voice and that a tenor is the high voice, surely you would never make such an error. (In this case, all you had to do was listen to the dialogue. Rosalinda calls him a "temptestuous tenor.") Likewise, Carrie Cole is a high soprano, not an alto. These mistakes make it pretty clear that you don't know what you're writing about, and they discredit the rest of what you say. Why should anyone be concerned with your opinion of a voice when you can't even identify it correctly?

4) Robin Flood as Rosalinda-Countess Hunyani: "Her strong holds along with her quick ability to change pitch, made her role much more bearable." What was unbearable about it? And, "... strong holds?" Miss Flood is a singer, not a wrestler. Did you mean long notes? Why not say so? ". Quick ability to change pitch ...?" Otherwise known as singing. Why not comment on her agile voice or coloratura? At least say, "ability to change pitch quickly." The voice is quick, not the ability.

5) So Frank Graffeo's "fine performance came from his character?" But of course. Where else would it come from? (I know, I know . . . top left drawer by the socks, right?)

6) The orchestra added "a flavor to each member that would not have been otherwise possible." No kidding. (Surely if they all picked up their instruments and tiptoed quietly away, no one notice.)

Usually it isn't so much what you say as the way you say it. "Her voice featured a good range." The song features her range, and her fine range is a feature of her voice, but I have yet to hear a voice featuring. Writing like this seems to have been done without much thought, and at the last minute. I think we all deserve better.

Watt's that?

The following letter is a copy of one sent to Rep. Kent Hance. Dear Representative Hance:

I wish to voice my strong feelings for an effective Clean Air Act that will safeguard not only my health but also that of my children's children. The Reagan administration's proposals are ludicrous in light of the tremendous grass-roots opposition shown them by the 1.1 million signature petition presented for the removal of James Watt, the leading scoundrel in the Reagan cabinet.

I would appreciate your researching this issue, and considering that once the environment is destroyed for economic gain, we can never replace it. The Indians or.ce stood in Texas and surveyed the vast plains. Do we want our children to look out and see only the smog and oil derricks sucking the last drops of oil from our once prosperous land?

I urge you to put a stop to James Watt, to weakened Federal legislation concerning our environment and protected lands, and the insanity that seems to be surfacing in the Reagan administration as they begin throwing out the babies with the bathwater.

To the Editor:

This letter is our response to the recent changes in the withdrawal while passing (WP) policy. We do not intend in this letter to reiterate the policy outline or explore each individual injustice that results from such changes.

This letter serves our purpose in asking why, and for what reasons the WP option was canceled, and also what benefits were expected to result in this policy change? For whom was the policy designed to benefit, the students, the faculty or the secretaries?

In one of our courses, the last day to withdraw was the day of the first exam. We have learned recently that it is now impossible to withdraw from a course without withdrawing from the university. Is this

If the policy is unamendable, then at least there should be a standard date for the first exam. It's disturbing that se many students and faculty are not even aware of this new policy, and if they are aware of it, they are not doing anything to change the policy.

What input, if any, was given by our student representatives? This policy is a serious breach of student rights.

We heard a rumor that the policy changes were made to simplify bookkeeping procedures. We hope that our reasonable questions will be explored further.

A baseball fan

To the Editor:

Jeff Rembert's column of Oct. 30 was the final injustice done to a sport which has been kicked around this year by lesser men than he.

Mr. Rembert and Mike Keeney both are sports writers whose work has been commendable this fall, but they disappointed baseball fans and hurt their own reputation with the views expressed in Rembert's column on the 1981 "tainted season" of baseball.

Sure, baseball fell upon hard times this year, but does that truly make it tainted? Mr. Rembert may not remember the elements which made baseball's 1981 season an exciting one, such as rookie sensations Tim Raines and Fernando Valenzuela.

Raines thrilled the baseball world by stealing a rookierecord 71 bases in just 103 games, and Valenzuela delighted fans and added excitement with outstanding pitching in a troubled season, including a gutsy performance in the World Series.

The factor which seemed to bother so many people was the split-season and three-tier playoff system set up by Commissioner Bowie Kuhn.

It would not have been fair to pick up the season where it had left off once the strike ended because baseball had undergone a change. Teams became healthier and stronger due to the layoff, teams such as Cincinatti, Baltimore, Milwaukee and St. Louis. I'm tired of hearing people scream that injustice was done to the Reds this year because they had the best overall record in the game.

As basebal! expert Joe Garagiola put it, "They knew the rules like everyone else." Even Cincinnati outfielder George Foster stated, "we had our chances and just didn't take advantage."

And what was so wrong with second-place teams making the playoffs? The NFL allows four second-place teams into the playoffs every year, and no one seems to mind.

In 1975, the Dallas Cowboys made it all the way to the Super Bowl as a "wild-card" team.

(Incidentally, Steve Yeager was an MVP, not Steve Garvey.)

Please, Mr. Rembert. Stop knocking baseball. Lord knows, the sport has been knocked around enough this year.

How Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics gives you a competitive edge in school.

School at any level means reading . . . lots of it. Keeping up with thousands of pages can take a heavy toll in time and energy, and grades. If you're typical, you read 150 to 350 words a minute. But how do you get ahead of the rest?

Evelyn Wood can triple your reading rate and improve your comprehension and study skills.

Hundreds of thousands of students use the Reading Dynamics Method. They find reading less of a chore. Concentration and retention improve, which can lead to better grades. A competitive edge is important . . . too important for you to delay.

Prove it to yourself today!

Whether you're thinking of grad school or the job market, or if you want to keep up with course reading today, let Evelyn Wood Reading Dynamics give you a competitive edge.

In fact Evelyn Wood guarantees that you will triple your reading rate if you follow the course correctly, or your full tuition refunded. That's our competitive edge.

LUBY'S MANAGER												SOO DOOLVE

Seem hard to believe? The average Luby's Cafeterias, Inc. manager did earn over $90,000 last year. The average training period to become a manager is 6 to 8 years. Managers attain these earnings by collecting a share of the net profits from their own cafeteria. The average associate manager last year earned $50,000. This earning level is attainable in 3 to 5 years.

To become a manager of one of our cafeterias is a very special business opportunity. You'll be joining an ambitious and progressive company that requires more of its managers than any food chain in the Sunbelt. Local managers are decision making executives who are responsible for all purchasing, menu planning, and hiring of personnel. We grant our managers a great deal of autonomy, and treat them as business partners. Luby's Cafeterias, Inc. is a firm believer in promoting from within; hence, most Corporate Officers are former unit managers.

Luby's Cafeterias, Inc. is not restricting interviews to only Business majors; we're open to all degrees. We're looking for people who are interested in becoming dynamic, aggressive, and well paid business people. If that's your goal, then we're looking for you!

HOUSTON (AP) — The sag- first drive of the game. ging Houston Oilers, winners of two of their last seven games and faced with key injuries to Ken Stabler and Earl Campbell, have finally worked themselves into a must-win situation, Coach Ed Biles said.

"This is probably the first must-win game on our schedule," Biles said Monday while reviewing the Oilers listless 34-21 loss to the Cincinnati Bengals. "But I still believe in this football team and I still feel we are going to have a winning football team."

The Oilers, who had beaten the Bengals six straight games, once again were porous on defense, allowing Cincinnati to score 34 unanswered points after the Oilers took a 7-0 lead on their

"The biggest thing for our defense to do is keep its poise, and at certain times in the game make some big plays," Biles said. "When the time comes for a knockdown or an interception, we've got to start making them."

Biles said Campbell, who left the game with a hamstring injury, had a 50-50 chance of playing in Sunday's home game against defending Super Bowl champion Oakland. Stabler suffered a wrist injury and likely will be listed as questionable, Biles

It Don't Matter takes community title

All the hard work, the perils of training camp and the strenuous off-season conditioning program finally paid off for It Don't Matter when they capture i the All-University Flag Football Championship in the Carr Community Division.

A score late in the fourth quarter put It Don't Matter past the Body Snatchers in the championship game. The champions had earned a berth in the playoffs with a perfect 5-0 regular season record, and had outscored their opponents 124-6 during the season. They then beat the Criminal Element 14-6 in the first round of the playoffs for the right to play in the big one.

The Body Snatchers also ended the regular season undefeated and advanced to the championship with a 6-0 win over the Legal

Turkey Trot

Thanksgiving may be a few weeks away, but Rec Sports already has one activity planned to make sure you don't get too rotund over the holiday. The annual Cross Country Turkey Trot will take place at 10 a.m. Saturday, Nov. 21, at the Mae Simmons Park. Enter as an individual or as a team. The top men's and women's team (minimum of five) will receive a turkey. A Co-Rec "fun" division also will be offered.

In addition, gun handlers might note that this is the day for the Trap and Skeet Shoot-Out at the South Plains Gun club. A $5 charge per event has to be paid to the club, and contestants must ming to offer two clinics that may be of interest. First, there is a supply their owns guns and ammo.

Play those matches

Racquetball, handball, table tennis and "B" tennis players are reminded to play those matches. Please report scores to the Intramural secretary at 742-3747.

Injury clinic still rolling

Dr. Robert Yost, orthopedic surgeon and sports medicine consultant, continues his weekly injury clinic at 7 p.m. in the Rec Center classroom. Students, faculty, and staff with athletictype injuries and questions relating to such injuries may attend and avail themselves to this free service by Dr. Yost.

The clinic is educational though Dr. Yost sees a limited amount of injuries each week. The clinic is sponsored by the Department of Recreational Sports. Anyone interested in attending need only be present tonight or any Wednesday night at 7

Rec Sports is deviating a little from its usual sports programyogurt making clinic Wednesday, Nov. 11. Yogurt is inexpensive and easy to make, and tastes good, too. The following Wednesday, Nov. 18, a clinic on bread making will be offered. Learn some tips from the experts and impress friends during Thanksgiving break. Both clinics will take place in the Arts and Crafts Room from 7:30-9 p.m., and they are free. To register, telephone 742-3352

Saturday Morning 'Live'

Table tennis will be the featured event for Saturday Morning "Live" this week. The tournament will be open to all students. faculty and staff, and entries must be turned in to the Rec Sports Office in the Rec Center by 5 p.m. Thursday.

There are three divisions to enter - men's singles, women's singles, and co-rec doubles. The first player or team to win the best two out of three games by two points going to 21 will be declared the winner. A small award will be presented to the winner, but the tournament is being offered to give students an enjoyable leisure activity experience.

Slide show to be presented

Rec Sports, in conjunction with Sport Haus, will sponsor a slide presentation by Richard Rice and Robin Shaw of their Alpine style ascent of Mount McKinley. The two-man expedition climbed Mount McKinley, which at 20,320 feet is the highest peak in North America, in May 1981. The slide presentation will be followed by a question-answer session and a display of equipment by the Sport Haus. The presentation will take place at 7:30 p.m. Nov. 24 in room 201 in the Rec Center. No registration is required, and there is no charge.

Refs needed

Soccer officials are needed. If interested, telephone John Bowlsby at 742-3351. Experience as an official or soccer player is helpful, but not required.
