Senate approves tenure procedures

By LYN McKINLEY UD Reporter

Despite continuing objections from some faculty members about the necessity of the proposed tenure policy, the Faculty Senate Wednesday passed the procedures to be followed for faculty consideration and possible adoption of a new tenure policy.

Following the passage of the procedure, the results of Tuesday's and Wednesday's open hearings will be incorporated into the draft revised tenure policy by the Academic Affairs office.

After obtaining reactions concerning the draft from the Tenure Policy Review Committee, the draft will be submitted by the Senate to the Tenure and Privilege Committee. The committee determines whether tenured faculty should be dismissed.

After determining whether the draft or the present tenure policy best protects faculty rights, the Tenure and Privilege Committee will decide what course the Faculty Senate should take with the draft.

If the Faculty Senate approves the draft, with or without amendments, the proposal will be submitted to the Academic Affairs office.

If the Academic Affairs office approves the draft, the draft will be submitted to the faculty for discussion and vote at a general faculty meeting called by the Faculty Senate.

If the draft is adopted by the faculty, the draft then will be submitted to Tech President Lauro Cavazos for approval by the Board of Regents.

If the Academic Affairs Office does not approve the draft as submitted by the Senate, John Darling, vice president of Academic Affairs, then will tell the Faculty Senate his objections, which will be considered by the Senate. The Senate does not have to adopt Darling's objections, but must inform him of the group's decision.

Faculty members once again voiced opposition to the proposed tenure policy in Wednesday's open hearing in Wednesday's open hearing.

"When I looked at the proposed document, I thought I had seen it before," said John Wunder, associate professor of history. "Sure enough, it looks like the Fugitive Slave Act of 1850."

However, Bill Conroy, a member of the Tenure Policy Review Committee, new tenure policy, although disagreement still is rampant about whether the proposed tenure policy will be accepted.

told faculty members the current tenure policy is in need of revision and clarification.

"Anyone who has worked with the tenure policy thinks it needs revision," Conroy said. "The question is how much."

After continuing objections to the proposed tenure policy were made by faculty members, Darling responded by saying, "The president does not plan to come up with a policy that is unacceptable to the faculty."

Darling urged faculty members to tell him about any phase of the proposed tenure policy they found objectionable

"I'm coming back to the faculty," Darling said. "Now, you tell me as a faculty what you don't like."

Faculty members cited the diminished power of the Tenure and Privilege Committee as a fault in the proposed tenure policy.

In the present tenure policy, the committee is composed of two faculty members selected by the president, two faculty members selected by the Faculty Senate and a fifth person chosen by the committee.

In the proposed tenure policy, the committee will be selected by the president.

"This is a significant alteration," said Rodric Schoen, faculty senator. "Who can prove this is an improvement?"

The Tenure Policy Review Committee will meet next week to discuss the recommendations made by the faculty in Tuesday's and Wednesday's open hearings, Bill Conroy, member of the Tenure Policy Review Committee, said.

Many faculty members object to the degree of change in the proposed tenure policy, Conroy said.

"Many professors who have not been involved in considering tenure cases weren't aware of the problems," he said.

After passing the recommended procedures, senators were told by Darling that substantial changes would be made in the proposed document after recommendations from faculty had been obtained.

Collins announces U.S. Senate campaign

By PETE McNABB UD Reporter

U.S. Rep. Jim Collins (R-Texas) brought his U.S. Senate campaign to Lubbock Wednesday, reiterating criticism of Democrat incumbent Sen. Lloyd Bentsen and encouraging college students to put themselves through school.

During his press conference at the First National Bank Building, Collins encouraged college students to put themselves through school and not depend on federal grants or loans. Federal aid to students has been cut drastically under the Reagan administration.

"When I went to college, we didn't have that problem (cuts in federal funds for education) because we didn't have any in the first place," said Collins, who has received degrees from Southern Methodist University, Northwestern and the Harvard Business School.

"And when I started paying my own way through college, I really appreciated it more and my grades went up," Collins said.

The 65-year-old Congressman even suggested that students plan on taking five years to finish their undergraduate studies rather than four years.

"In other words, it's not a question of how long it takes you to get through college but the fact that you get through college," he said.

Collins took numerous jabs at Democrat Bentsen, frequently comparing him to liberal Sen. Edward Kennedy (D-Mass.) and former Sen. George McGovern (D-S.D.).

"I like Lloyd. Lloyd's a likeable guy," Collins said. "But what he says in the campaign does not reflect what he does in Congress. Lloyd talks like Herbert Hoover but votes like George McGovern."

"You talk about the liberal leader of the South — he is the leader," Collins said of Bentsen.

The ultra-conservative Collins was quick to align himself with the conservative West Texas voting philosophy.

"When you're a Republican running for office, you're certainly interested in West Texas," the Dallas congressman said. "West Texas is the most conservative area in the state — maybe even in the whole country."

He was fast to criticize Bentsen, who is running for re-election this year, but was reluctant to knock either one of his two opponents in the May Republican primary.

State Sen. Walter Mengden (R-Houston) and San Antonio businessman Don Richardson have both announced for the Republican spot on the senatorial ballot.

Collins, while steering away from criticizing the opponents, claimed he is a more electable candidate with more campaign experience than either of the two opponents.

"My in-depth experience leaves me better qualified," he said. "I think that the fact that I won my district with 80 percent last year shows that I know how to campaign. And I know about half of those senators."

Tech professor seeks District Attorney post

By GAIL FIELDS and PETE McNABB UD Reporters

Tech Professor Wanda Wray, saying she is tired of seeing repeat offenders roam the streets of Lubbock, formally announced Wednesday she will seek the Democratic nomination for Lubbock County Criminal District Attorney.

"There is no excuse for 34 murders in Lubbock County in one year," Wray said. "If I'm elected, we're going to deny bonds to repeat offenders. We're not going to have these people back on the streets."

The 37-year-old business law and Certified Public Accountant law review professor, who is also a practicing Lubbock defense attorney, said she sees no problem in switching legal roles and becoming the head of the county's prosecution team.

"I think a criminal defense attorney can do more because he knows how to attack their (the prosecution's) game plan," Wray said.

No other candidates so far have formally announced decisions to run for district attorney. But two assistant district attorneys already have hinted strongly they will seek the position.

Travis Ware is expected to announce within a week his intention to run against Wray in the Democratic primary. Bumper stickers reportedly already have been seen on area cars in support of Ware.

Another assistant district attorney, Jim Bob Darnell is expected to announce soon that he will seek the Republican nomination for district attorney.

Wray, who has run her own law practice in Lubbock for three and a half years, said she believes her administrative experience should make her a better candidate than her two unannounced opponents.

"As far as I know, Ware has never worked in a law office, dealt with personnel and made those kind of (administrative) judgments," Wray said. "He hasn't been exposed to that."

Ware, however, said his experience in the district attorney's office will be more valuable than Wray's experience in private practice.

"She's a very nice person and lawyer, but she doesn't have the experience — not for this job," Ware said. "It will become abundantly clear as we move along."

Wray, who has practiced law for five years, including three-and-a-half years in Lubbock, has defended clients on trial for Class A misdemeanors to capital murder offenses.

She believes, however, that her defense attorney experience will not hinder her in her campaign for the district attorney's post.

"John Montford (Lubbock's incumbent district attorney) was one of the finest criminal defense attorneys in the country before he ran for D.A. There's no problem with that," Wray said.

Montford is stepping down from the district attorney position he was elected to in 1978 to run for state senator against Sen. E.L. Short.

Wray has been working the past several months on a widely—publicized case involving Jodie Mack Oliver, a 33year-old man who is accused of the rape and murder last summer of a 10-yearold girl.

Proceedings in Oliver's capital murder trial are scheduled to resume next month. Oliver is a former body guard to Fort Worth multi-millionaire T. Cullen Davis.

Flight recorders recovered from Air Florida wreck

WASHINGTON (AP) — A Navy frogman, following an electronic listening device, retrieved two flight recorders Wednesday from the week-old wreckage of an Air Florida jet. The "black boxes" were analyzed for clues to the cause of the fatal crash.

After days of frustration with the Potomac River's ice and sub-surface murkiness, Lt. John Sechrist, of Vashon Island, Wash., found the critical recorders on his first dive. He carried a sonar receiver that homed in on the "ping" emitted by the recorders, which apparently were undamaged.

Laboratory technicians were expected to take anywhere from a few hours to possibly several days to analyze the recorders, which monitor cockpit conversations and the key instruments. But Robert Buckhorn, of the National Transportation Safety Board, said the results may not be released to the public anytime soon.

"I don't think at this point you're going to get anything," he said, adding that authorities likely would conceal the results until they could be tied with other aspects of the investigation

Buckhorn said the voice recorder's metal box was banged up, but the apparatus appeared in working condition.

Francis McAdams, a board member, called the recorders "most critical" in trying to determine why the Boeing 737 clipped a busy commuter bridge Jan. 13 and plunged beneath the river's ice, killing 78 people, including four motorists.

Among the 79 people on the plane, only four passengers and a stewardess survived.

Rudolph Kapustin, the NTSB's chief staff investigator, said the flight data recorder, which provides such information as air speed, altitude and time of liftoff, is "in excellent shape" and its five-inch wide recording foil has "good traces on it."

The military divers, meanwhile, resumed their quest for bodies still in the river, finding two more shortly after the recorders were recovered. Sixteen additional bodies were believed to be still in the frigid water. Some officials expressed fears that the current may have swept several away, perhaps never to be found.

NTSB investigators have interviewed more than 100 witnesses to the crash and were examining some of the wreckage, including the plane's left wing, tail assembly and shell of the cockpit, at a hanger at National Airport. Some major pieces, including both engines, were yet to be recovered although they have been located in the river.

Much of the investigation has centered on whether the Air Florida jet might have had too much ice on its wings when it took off during a steady snowfall after waiting at least 43 minutes for clearance.

The two electronic recorders were expected to shed light on all these observations, investigators said.

Selection of new dean ends indecision at Law School

Fullerton's background, experience to aid transition period; recruiting faculty first important goal

Inez. Russell

Two years of indecision at the Law School ended during the Christmas holidays when Tech President Lauro Cavazos named Byron Fullerton Law School dean.

Fullerton had been serving as interim dean since last July, but originally said he did not want to be considered for the permanent position. But after six months at the helm of the Law School, Fullerton has become more aware of the school's possibilities and has decided to stay on permanently.

By finally naming a dean, Cavazos has taken the first step to putting the Law school back on a more guided course. While both interim deans -Richard Hemingway and Byron Fullerton performed admirably in their jobs, the Law School is too important to have remained under the guidance of an interim administration rather than a permanent one. The school's image is changing from that of a second-class school in a hick West Texas town to that of a top regional one. And a firm hand at the top is needed to make that transition a success.

Fullerton has said that his main goal at the Law School will be recruiting faculty, which is as it should be. Finding new faculty members is not an easy task because of Lubbock's isolated location and low Tech Law School salaries make that task even more difficult.

However, Fullerton brings 18 years of experience as professor and assistant dean at the University of Texas Law School to his new position. With such past experience, chances are good that Fullerton, by merit of his reputation, will be able to attract the needed law professors with solid credentials to supplement an already

The hiring of new faculty members will enhance the education of law students, as well as ensuring that Tech is in compliance with the American Bar Association's teacher-student

The recruiting and hiring of faculty can serve another purpose as well. If Fullerton and the school can attract the right kind of faculty men and women well respected in their fields the Tech Law School should continue to gain respect and stature as a top law school of the

The moot court national championship two years ago, and a second-place finish in moot court competition this year, have helped cement that growing recognition. But the lack of a dean for the past few years has caused some indecision as to how and in which direction the school

The selection of a new dean, one who has firm ideas about the school's direction, should end that indecision.

Besides hiring new faculty, Fullerton also will be busy trying to raise the funds to attract the kind of faculty the Tech Law School would want to hire. Once again, Fullerton's contacts after 18 years at Texas should come in handy in helping him raise the necessary funds.

In looking for a dean, Cavazos counted the ability to raise funds one of his top priorities - as important as the ability to get along with students and faculty and with the legal community in Lubbock.

Finding a man with all three qualifications and a man who was right for the Tech Law School - was no easy task. The search has taken two years, something Cavazos believed

But the waiting is over, and with the stature and respect Fullerton brings to the job, Tech should be able to glide out of the holding pattern and down to necessary business.

Relief letters a sign of the Times: Frivolity gives Londoners a break

Anthony Lewis

BOSTON — Roald Dahl, the English writer of macabre fiction and children's stories, complained recently about the letters published in The Times of London. "Nowadays," he wrote to the paper, "we are lucky to get one frivolous or amusing letter a week. Politics and prisons, atom bombs and arts councils is what most of the correspondence is about."

To right the balance, Dahl, in his letter, told about the new gym shoes. They fit in the shop. But after he had worn them for an hour at home, they pinched.

"Thinking back 50 years to my physics classes at school," he said, "I remembered that 10 volumes of water expand to 11 volumes at freezing point. So I pushed a plastic bag deep into each shoe and filled it with water. I closed the tops of the bags tightly with wire. I placed the shoes in the deep-freezer compartment of the fridge and closed the door . . . .

"The next morning, the water inside the shoes had frozen solid and had expanded in all directions by 10 percent. The gym shoes fitted me a treat. This system also works well with ordinary shoes and Wellington boots."

Dahl's complaint in fact seems to me unjust. In a world where the news grows grimmer, the letter column of The Times continues to provide relief. Yes, a subject such as Poland comes to dominate that page as it does our thoughts. But there is also room for the eccentric and the frivolous-treated, naturally, with solemnity.

Early in 1981, for example, there was a brisk correspondence about stiff white detachable collars. Dr. Charles Pither of Addenbrooke's Hospital, Cambridge, wrote sadly that it was impossible to find anyone who could, or would, launder them. "Am I to conclude, " he asked, "that white-collar workers are a dying breed?"

Ivan Mason of Broad Water, Thorpeness, Suffolk, replied that in the good old days excellent paper collars were available. "These could be reversed on the second day," he said, "and then used as fire lighters.'

The exact date on which we should celebrate the 2,000th anniversary ("the bi-millenary") of Virgil's death was a subject of controversy. The problem involved the Julian and Gregorian calendars, among a number of other things.

"Two thousand Julian years amount to 730,500 days," wrote Professor R.J.C. Atkinson of the Department of Archeology at University College, Cardiff-less "the 11 days lost by Act of Parliament in September, 1752, and one day each in 1800 and 1900, which in the Gregorian Calendar were not leap years." After a further obscure adjustment for vernal equinoxes, Atkinson set the commemoration for Sept. 18, 1982, "ignorance of the precise hour of Virgil's death notwithstanding.'

Every year Mrs. Margaret Brown of Wigginton Terrace, York, writes a letter analyzing the names given to children whose births were announced in The Times during the previous year. Her 1981 letter seemed at first to show no surprises. James continued to be the most popular boy's name, Elizabeth the girl's.

But that was when Mrs. Brown included any of the names given a child. When she rated only first names, there was a shock. As she put it, "Thomas has at last succeeded in toppling James." After them came Alexander, Edward, William, Charles and Christopher. And among girls, Katherine took the lead for the first time, followed by Sarah, Emily, Charlotte, Emma, Rebecca, and only then Elizabeth.

T.C.M. O'Donovan of Datchet, Berkshire, carried out "a survey of the duties performed by the Royal Family during 1980." This showed that the queen made 92 official visits, attended 54 receptions and meals, gave 65 audiences and made five overseas tours and visits. Her husband, the Duke of Edinburgh, was even more active, making 123 official

When a news story listed women among "minorities," Mrs. R.G.M. Williams asked whether women had ever been a minority group. Jeremy Lee-Browne replied: "They became one in Genesis IV when Eve bore Cain, and an even smaller minority in verse 2 when she bore Abel."

Shortly before Christmas Mrs. Joanne Bower, honorary secretary of the Farm and Food Society, wrote about another recent news story:

"How very strange that, while China is trying desperately to control its population explosion, Mr. Peter Walker, minister of agriculture, should bestow the industry's top marketing award on Mr. Joe Buckner, of Cherry Valley Ducks, who is exporting ducks' feet to China as aphrodisiacs."

As for Dahl, his letter did not go uncorrected. Professor M.S. Paterson of the Department of Computer Science, University of Warwick, wrote: "I was disappointed that the designer of the world-famous chocolate factory should confuse linear with volume increase. He will find on reinspection that his gym shoes are only about 3 percent larger in each direction."

Semester time to revise the old

Inez Russell

The beginning of the semester always has been a good time to reiterate old policies and make any changes. The University Daily, like other groups at Tech, is no exception.

In our case, the changes will depend on the response of you, the reader. Last semester. The UD published a Forum page once a week. The page was designed to allow members of the university limitations. community access to the newspaper. Tech students, faculty and staff members were invited to comment on the issues of the day on this page.

For the most part, readers responded, writing about such diverse subjects as humanism, library copy machines, the Techsans, nuclear proliferaas current as the day's news headlines.

Because of the success of that venture, The UD plans to keep publishing Forum during the spring semester. However, by promising to publish once a week, we often found ourselves in a bind on Tuesday afternoon when we didn't have enough articles for the page. Sometimes, in order to make sure the Forum page was published, some articles of poor quality were published.

This semester, instead of setting a weekly publishing date, the page will be published whenever The UD receives enough good, wellresearched columns or opinions. If enough material to make up a whole page isn't received, then guest editorials will be published as often as space allows.

On the other hand, if the readers comment often enough, then the Forum page will be published as often as enough material is received to fill it. One of the main principles behind the idea of a free press is to assure that the public has access to that press. Through the Forum page, the public is given that

The more traditional access of the public to editorial columns is still open through the Letters to the Editor columns. As always, letters are welcome. Letters may be edited because of space

In addition to written opinions, The UD also welcomes editorial cartoons, or even comic strips for that matter. In fact, response to our call for artists has been so great that The UD will begin the first series of comic strips in its history.

The Student Senate will consider establishing an emergency fund for campus organizations during its first meeting of 1982 at 8 p.m. today in the University Center Senate Room.

Charlie Hill, Student Association internal vice president, said the fund was needed because many campus organizations need money before their budgets are officially approv-

Requests made for funding would have to be approved by a three-man committee consisting of the president of the Student Association, the chairman of the Senate Committee on Budgeting and Finance and the chairman of the Senate Committee on Rules.

The funds would only be given to registered campus organizations who would eventually have to pay the money

In other business, the Senate will investigate the reasons why accounting majors are not allowed to take accounting electives pass-fail.

Hill said the current policy was inhibiting students from taking some more advanced courses that they probably would take if pass-fail was allowed.

"To take the CPA exam you have to have 30 hours in accounting classes, Tech only requires 27. Students take the other three hours as electives. There are some good advanced courses which would help prepare them for the exam but, some people avoid taking them because these classes are pretty hard and might hurt their GPAs," Hill explained.

The Senate will also look at proposed changes in the elec-

Hill said many of last year's resolutions were commending various people while only one of last semester's did so.

"I think this shows that the Senators are concerned with more important things now," Hill said.

Some of the things on the Senate's agenda for this year include: putting up bus route signs on campus, a bike race in April, establishing a Parent's Line to help initiate parents into Tech as well as students, possible placement of Automatic Teller Machines on campus and PSAT recruiting to attract students earlier in their high school years.

Texas Attorney General candidate Jack Ogg said Wednesday the new state drug paraphernalia law is not vague and he will enforce it whenever he can.

"Saying a law is vague is the oldest constitutional argument in the book," Ogg said. If the case came up for vagueness, I could try it sucessfully."

Ogg said the law was made mainly to protect children. "Parents know that drugs are in everyday life of raising kids," he said. Ogg said stores that sell drug paraphernalia (head shops) just invite children to try drugs.

Ogg said one of his goals as a news conference at the Lub- which includes 18 cities in attorney general will be to reform and revise the probation and parole laws, putting an emphasis on restitution to the victims of crime.

> "I would like to see a law that would make restitution to victims mandatory," he said. "If possible I also would like to have legislation drafted aimed at combating child abuse and family violence, Ogg said. "Eighty-five percent of all people are either victims of child abuse or witnesses of family violence, two of the root causes of crime in our society."

He said he would increase fees for things such as marriage licenses to raise the Ogg said he also would like to see more control put at the local level of government.

"People will get more involved at the local level than at the state level," he said.

He said he would like to see a statewide code of ethics, especially for bidding, purchasing and selling. Ogg also would like less governmental controls on business. "Business needs the govern-

Appeals Court allows police to search wallets

AUSTIN (AP) — A divided Texas Court of Criminal Appeals decided Wednesday to allow police to look into the wallets of people arrested for traffic violations.

Judge Marvin Teague, in a dissent, said the decision clears the way for complete searches of "hapless motorists" stopped for the "most petty of traffic offenses."

The 6-3 ruling came in a case involving a man stopped in Houston for driving with no brake lights. He was later convicted of drug possession after the arresting officer found methaphetamines in the driver's wallet.

Donald Snyder appealed the conviction, claiming the officer illegally looked into his

Judge Tom Davis' majority opinion said the search was legal because it was "incident to a lawful arrest."

However, Teague said there was no reason to look in the wallet. Teague said Houston police officer L.D. Garrison gave several "incredible" reasons for looking in the wallet. Garrison testified he wanted to see if there was a lot of money in it because "if it is not a payday, he could have acquired that large amount of money by some other means."

Garrison also said he wanted to check for weapons: "razor blades, needles or even a set of handcuff keys."

The officer testified he counts money in suspects' wallets to protect himself against charges of stealing.

Teague said the search was unlawful.

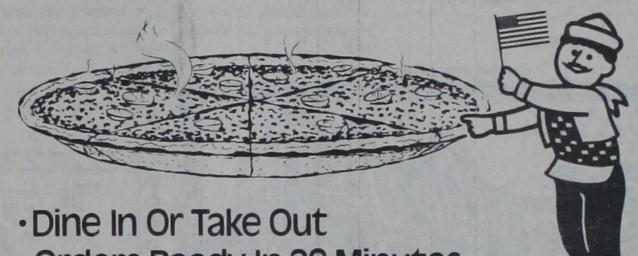

"I strongly disagree ... and cannot subscribe to a principle of law that when any motorist is arrested for committing a breach of our traffic laws, that person becomes subject to a full body search, as well as a complete and thorough search of items of personal property found on his person," he said.

Teague said Garrison had the right to seize the wallet, but not to look into it.

People arrested for traffic or minor violations are entitled to "far more protection" than guaranteed by the U.S. Constitution's provision against unreasonable searches, he

"Today, a majority of this court sanctions a full custodial search of a person arrested for the most petty of traffic offenses," Teague said

LONDON (AP) - Church leaders are angry and most critics unimpressed by a book suggesting Jesus married, staged the crucifixion and has living descendents.

But the public today was snapping up copies of "The Holy Blood and The Holy Grail."

Marilyn spokeswoman for publishers Jonathan Cape Ltd., called the book's sales "really phenomenal." She said two printings had been sold out by Monday, the first day of publication, and another printing of over 10,000 had been ordered.

London bookstores that ordered 200 and 300 copies priced at $17 apiece were reporting their stock exhausted by first-day sales, she said. The book goes on sale in the United States in February.

The story is complex, mixing intriguing fictional characters with great historical figures in a turbulent turn-of-the- century America.

It projects the changing tide of that society's prejudice, morality, and freedom in all the passion, scandal and sensationalism that embodied the

The family, hounded for harboring Walker's child, escapes to Atlantic City where Mother meets Baron Ashkenazy, a Jewish immigrant who finds success directing moving-pictures.

The film eliminates many interesting aspects of the Doctorow.

For example, the baron went on to involve his daughter, Mother's son, and the black child in the "Our Gang" films.

The film also excludes the characters of two great financial minds, J.P. Morgan and Henry Ford, revolutionary Emma Goldman, and Harry Houdini. The film bypasses these characters and their stories by showing them in silent newsreel clips, played against ragtime music, of course. The newsreels also storyline to another.

Winning IS everything to Aggie Kings

MIKE KEENEY

COLLEGE STATION — Former Texas A&M head football coach Tom Wilson was rushed to the emergency-room of Bryan Hospital late Tuesday afternoon suffering from knife wounds in the back.

The former All-Southwest Conference quarterback was on his way out of his office Tueday when nine middle-aged men jumped Wilson and proceeded to back-stab the 37-year-old head football coach out of his job at Texas A&M.

Sounds a little far fetched, but that's just about what happened to Wilson Tuesday afternoon when A&M President Frank Vandiver announced that Wilson had been fired and would be replaced by Pittsburgh head coach Jackie Sherrill.

Wilson had been under fire throughout the 1981 season. He was not assured of his job for another season until the last game of the year when the A&M Board of Regents (also known as the Board of Kings) told Wilson his job was safe. A pretty early and sick April Fool's joke, if you ask me.

Wilson then led the Aggies to a 33-19 victory against Oklahoma State in the Independence Bowl.

But that didn't seem to impress the Kings as they first tried to lure Michigan head coach Bo Schembechler away from the frozen North. Failing there, the board traveled East and found a taker in Sherrill, who as coach and athletic director will receive $3 million during the next 10 years.

Now I don't blame A&M for wanting a successful college coach with a winning record and a history of good recruiting. Anyone would want the best for his or her school colors, but I think the Kings could have used a little more discretion and feeling in the way they handled the situation.

The Kings, led by H.R. "Bum" Bright of Dallas, went behind Wilson's back and began looking for a "big name" coach as a replacement some month and a half ago.

Not until last Friday when Schembechler turned down the A&M job did Wilson have any idea that his job was in jeopar-

Upon hearing the news about the search for a new coach Wilson held a press conference of his own and vowed that he would not quit, that the school would have to fire him. Smart have received the rest of their salaries for the remainder of Wilson made the statement mainly to protect his assistants so they and their families would be provided for during the remainder of the year. Wilson was thinking of others. Who were the Kings thinking of?

Upon hearing that Wilson would not resign, Bright made the following comment, which appeared in The Dallas Morning News Saturday, Jan. 16.

"I don't know if he (Wilson) will be coaching here next year or not. But he will earn his money if he has to coach intramural football," Bright said.

And Aggies wonder why they catch so much flack from

When I read that statement by Bright I knew Wilson was as good as gone even if Schembechler didn't take the job. The Kings would search high and low for their "big name" until they landed one for the South Texas campus.

But I wonder how a man like Bright, who is supposed to be one of the school's biggest supporters, can publicly make such a statement about a man who has worked diligently for 21/2 years to bring the A&M football program back to the top.

In a society where we are suppossed to respect our elders, actions like these make you wonder if it's worth the effort at times.

This whole A&M mess is ironic when you consider that in December of 1980 Wilson could have had the job at Tech if he had asked for it. But when Rex Dockery resigned to take the head coaching job at Memphis State, Wilson said he had no intention of leaving A&M. How soon they forget.

Sherrill plans to bring 'integrity' to Aggie camp

COLLEGE STATION (AP) — Jackie Sherrill, in his first news conference as Texas A&M's head football coach, said repeatedly Wednesday that he plans to "bring some integrity" to A&M's football program.

The former University of Pittsburgh coach, who declined to specify the terms of his contract, washed his hands of the firing of former A&M Coach Tom Wilson, an action which cleared the way for Sherrill to take the dual post of athletic director and "I did not create the situation," Sherrill said. "There is supporting Wilson by a 96 percent vote. nothing I can do about it. All I can do is work to rectify it by beprogram some integrity."

The firing of Wilson, who was promised by the school's president in late November that he would coach the Aggies through he said. "I've said before I felt this (A&M) was the best the 1982 season, antagonized Aggie graduates across the state.

The powerful Houston A&M Club adopted a resolution Monday condemning A&M Regents chairman H.R. "Bum" Bright and ing a very straightforward straight shooter and bringing this a stop for him on the way to becoming head coach at University of Alabama when coach Paul "Bear" Bryant retires.

"Coach Bryant could be in Alabama for many, many years," coaching opportunity in the United States right now."

Sherrill strongly implied he came to A&M for the money. "They will never be able to pay at the University of Pittsburgh what they can pay at other schools," he said.

Sherrill stopped short of denying a rumor that the A&M job is University President Dr. Frank E. Vandiver told the news conference that Sherrill would be paid $95,000 a year by the university. He and Sherrill both declined to be specific about money from other sources.

> Sherrill said his contract was a six-year contract which would be renewed at the end of every year. Vandiver defended the salary Sherrill will be paid.

Bengal quarterback wins Bert Bell Award

PHILADELPHIA (AP) - Cincinnati Bengals quarterback Ken Anderson, preparing for his first Super Bowl, was named the winner of the Bert Bell Award as pro football's best player by the Maxwell Football Club.

Anderson, an 11-year veteran who was nearly benched after the first game of the season but ended the year with his third National Football League passing title, will be honored at the club's banquet Feb. 10. USC running back Marcus Allen, the Heisman Trophy winner, will receive the Maxwell Award as the nation's Anderson was not available for the usual telephone interview following the announcement here because the Bengals were practicing in Pontiac, Mich., where they play the San Francisco 49ers in Super Bowl XIV Sunday.

"Playing in the Super Bowl is beyond belief. Maybe somebody better pinch me. It may be a dream," Anderson said Jan. 10 after hitting 14-22 passes for 161 yards and two touchdowns despite a wind chill of minus 59 degrees in winning the American Conference championship with a 27-7 victory over San Diego.

Anderson led the Bengals to a 12-4 regular season mark, completing 300 of 479 passes for 3,754 yards and 29 touchdowns against only 10 interceptions. He finished with the highest completion percentage (62.6), the lowest interception percentage (2.1) and the best rating (98.6) of any quarterback in the league. The Bengals finished with the best record in the conference, the AFC Central title, their first conference championship and their first trip to the Super Bowl. It was quite a turnaround for Cincinnati, 4-12, 4-12 and 6-10 in the last three years. And it almost didn't happen. In their opening game against Seattle, the Bengals fell behind 21-0 in the first quarter as Anderson was intercepted twice, once for a touchdown, and completed only five of 15 passes for 39 yards. Coach Forrest Gregg pulled Anderson and sent in secondyear quarterback Turk Shonert, who led the Bengals back to a

After the game, Gregg said he would start Shonert or Jack Thompson the next week. But by midweek, he reconsidered.

"I finally decided that if we were to win this year, Kenny Anderson would be the guy we'd have to win with," Gregg said. "And he's made it look like a good decision."

Anderson is the 23rd recipient of the Bert Bell Award and the 14th quarterback honored. Six of the last seven winners have been quarterback, the only exception being Houston's Earl Campbell in 1979.

Anderson's Super Bowl counterpart, 49ers quarterback Joe Montana, was second in the balloting.
