Carpenter, Sneed halls to haunt Tech

By FRANCISCO RODRIGUEZ
The University Daily

Ghouls, monsters and vampires await trick-or-treaters at Carpenter and Sneed halls this Halloween night.

The two Texas Tech residence halls will feature haunted houses open to the public tonight. Both residence halls will direct most of the proceeds to worthy causes.

Bob Moon, a resident assistant at Carpenter Hall, said the residence hall offers "three floors of sheer terror" to kids of all ages.

"We are inviting all the Tech and Lubbock community to come," Moon said. "We will be giving candy and fruit to all the kids that come."

Moon said the admission charge to Carpenter Hall is one can of food and that all cans collected will be given to the South Plains Food Bank.

"If people don't have cans, they can donate 50 cents for the food bank," Moon said. "We prefer the canned food because the food bank can put it to more immediate use."

Jim Burton, a Sneed wing representative, said the residence hall sponsored haunted houses in the past but stopped a few years ago. He said the tradition was "raised from the grave" this year.

"We are inviting all trick-or-treaters to come to our haunted basement," Burton said. "Our haunted house will have several rooms with different themes. Our guides will take you through the funeral, strobe, torture and other rooms. We hope the haunted house tradition will continue in the years to come."

Burton said the admission charge to the Sneed Hall haunted house will be $1, with 75 cents of each admission charge going to benefit the Muscular Dystrophy Association.

Carpenter Hall's haunted house is made up of three of the hall's wings. Trick-or-treaters will have tour guides to take them through the eerie surroundings.

Creepy construction

Carpenter Hall residents were building a haunted house Monday. The haunted house proceeds will go to the South Plains Food Bank, and admission will be one can of food or 50 cents. The haunted house will be open from 8 p.m. to 11:30 p.m. at Carpenter Hall.

"We will have refreshments at the door for everybody," Moon said. "Every kid that comes will get a treat, be it candy and/or fruit."

A fraction of the proceeds from the haunted houses, which are funded by money from the residence halls themselves, will go back to the halls' funds.

Sneed Hall is located in front of University Plaza near the intersection of Broadway and University Avenue. The Sneed haunted house will be open to the public from 7:30 p.m. to midnight.

Soviet reform policy

Administration seeks to grab opportunity

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Disputing the existence of serious differences among key officials, Secretary of State James A. Baker III said Monday the Bush administration is trying to seize "what we think is an opportunity" for significant reform in the Soviet Union and Eastern Europe.

In an interview with The Associated Press, Baker said "there are only nuances of differences" over whether Soviet President Mikhail S. Gorbachev can succeed in his program of transforming the country politically and economically.

Calling that a question of "durability," Baker said, "I don't think there is any policy difference in the administration on the question of the desirability" of the Soviet leader's perestroika policy.

Baker's comments were designed to put to rest the notion that differences among top officials were slowing a U.S. response to Gorbachev's bold approaches, particularly in Eastern Europe.

On the other hand, Senate Democratic leader George Mitchell of Maine has accused the administration of being timid in response to Soviet initiatives.

"We've made up our mind," Baker said, "that there is an opportunity there we should try and seize; that it would be a mistake (not to try) regardless of what we think about his (Gorbachev's) chances of success. And quite clearly he faces some very major problems."

But, Baker said, "we ought to talk about that in the right way and at the right time."

Turning to Nicaragua during a 20-minute session in his seventh floor office in the State Department, Baker reaffirmed his view that President Daniel Ortega may be using reported attacks by Contra insurgents as an excuse to try to scuttle elections set for next February.

"I worry that they (the Sandinistas) may be trying to lay a predicate to walk away from their commitment to hold elections," Baker said in an interview with The Associated Press.

Ortega has said that, under certain conditions, he may not renew a ceasefire that the Sandinistas and the Contras agreed to in March 1988.

Supreme Court to review federal pension authority

By The Associated Press

WASHINGTON — Federal protection for 30 million American workers' pensions could be at stake in a dispute the Supreme Court agreed to resolve Monday.

The justices said they will decide what authority the Pension Benefit Guaranty Corp., a federal agency, has to order employers to revive scrapped pension plans.

A federal appeals court limited such authority by setting aside the agency's order that LTV Corp. and its subsidiary, LTV Steel Co., restore three pension plans with unfunded liabilities of $2.3 billion.

James B. Lockhart, executive director of the PBGC, told reporters Monday that the lower courts "misunderstood and misapplied," the agency's arguments in finding for LTV. By pursuing the matter, he said, PBGC is trying to "prevent future losses from companies that might want to copycat the LTV type approach."

LTV said it was disappointed that the court had agreed to hear the case because it will delay the company's reorganization.

Government lawyers say the ruling, if not overturned, could make the agency "an open-ended source of industry bailouts" and spark a financial crisis similar to the one facing the government's insurance program for the savings and loan industry.

State legislators' wages, bribery clause, per diem pay to top amendments election

By MELISSA SHARP
The University Daily

Voters in the Nov. 7 Texas constitutional amendment election can raise legislative pay and per diem and require state officials to take the bribery clause of their oath of office in writing.

Proposition 1 on the ballot would raise the salaries of the lieutenant governor and the speaker of the house to half the governor's salary and the rest of the Legislature's salaries to one-fourth the governor's salary. "I very much favor it," said Texas Tech assistant law professor Brian Shannon. "We ought not to have a Legislature that's limited to the very wealthy."

"The pitifully small salary that's now paid must operate to deter a number of people who simply could not live on that salary and do not have the luxury of having a job they can leave for four or five months every four years, who can't just get off for special sessions, who can't just get off for committee meetings," said Tech associate law dean Rod Schoen. "It would open it up to people who could be very good legislators."

"They have to make a serious choice about whether they can afford to give up their jobs for at least half a year, maybe longer, and there are many other times when they have to be in Austin for committee hearings and legislative business whether they can afford to do so or not," Shannon said. "And for persons who are not in occupations that are easy or financially easy, those people are not going to run to start with. I think there's potential that minorities might have a tougher time running as well."

Proposition 11 would set legislative per diem at the amount allowed for a federal income tax deduction.

Schoen said the per diem would be somewhat more realistic than the $30 a day now allocated for legislators when they are in Austin. He said per diem would be closer to the actual cost of living because the IRS changes the deduction rate with inflation.

Proposition 7 would take the bribery clause out of the oath of office for state officials. The officials would have to take the oath in writing.

East Germans march in streets for democracy Monday night

By The Associated Press

BERLIN — Hundreds of thousands of East Germans marched for democracy Monday night, the eve of a trip to Moscow by new leader Egon Krenz for talks with the Soviet bloc's champion of reform, Mikhail S. Gorbachev.

Official media said about 300,000 people rallied in Leipzig, a city of 650,000; at least 50,000 in Halle; 40,000 in Schwerin; more than 20,000 in Karl Marx Stadt; and 5,000 in Poessneck.

Lutheran Church sources in East Berlin said 3,000 pro-reform activists demonstrated in the capital.

Leipzig activists told The Associated Press by telephone many of the marchers there demanded that the Communist Party give up its monopoly on power.

They said the protesters wanted free elections, freedom to travel and legalization of opposition groups. Political parties now are recognized only if they align themselves with the Communist Party.

The official news agency ADN said people in all the cities spoke out for a free press, and those in Karl Marx Stadt carried banners reading "Democracy Now."

Krenz reaffirmed the Communist Party's pre-eminence Monday, telling military academy graduates it was "at the head of qualitative changes going on in society."

ADN reported he would leave for the Soviet Union today.

Bullock: 'Tech will get what they damn well want'

By BETH GEORGE
The University Daily

State Comptroller Bob Bullock told a group of supporters Monday that, as a graduate of Texas Tech, he thinks of Lubbock as his second home, and that, as lieutenant governor, he will work with state Sen. John Montford, D-Lubbock, to further the university's interests in the Texas Legislature.

"When I am elected lieutenant governor, Tech will receive greater consideration," Bullock said. "Let's just say it: they will get whatever they damn well want."

Bullock stopped in Lubbock to drum up support in his campaign for the lieutenant governor's job during a Democratic fund-raising luncheon.

Bullock and his wife Jan attended the Democratic function at Lubbock Memorial Civic Center with Montford and his wife Debbie.

Bullock stressed education as a tool to build the future of the state. On May 1, the state Supreme Court ordered that state funding to Texas school districts be made more equitable, and Bullock said he will work to equalize school funding so all young people have a chance to compete.

"We are not going to rebuild Texas, but build a new state where brains play a bigger part than brawn," Bullock said. "We need to educate the kids of the future from the bottom to the top."

Because he has been campaign-

ing around the state, Bullock said, he has had the opportunity to listen to the concerns of people. Exhibiting leadership to deal with the public's concerns, especially in the areas of education and drugs, always has been part of his public service career, Bullock said.

"I don't see these problems as problems but as opportunities," he said. "I believe better days are ahead for our state."

Texas faces congressional redistricting next year, and Bullock said he sees the process as an opportunity to hold districts together and protect representation in West Texas.

"I want to carry on the tradition of good government that West Texas has," he said. "I won't mislead you, but tell you factually and straightforwardly what we should know for the future."

La Ventana opens windows to Tech

Tracy Hoffman
Guest Columnist

Would you like to go through life for 65 years and for people to not be able to remember your name, much less be able to pronounce it?

Not too long ago, a letter was delivered to our office addressed to a Mr. L.A. Ventana. People have called asking for La Venta, La Venter and other such gibberish.

La Ventana (La Ven-ton-a) translated means "The Window" in Spanish. In 1925, the Texas Tech Press Club named the yearbook La Ventana to go along with the Spanish motif of the school. La Ventana is your window into Texas Tech.

The yearbook staff's goal is to communicate with students. Open communication with you and your organization is essential. It is your book, and we are here to provide you with a service.

La Ventana participated in "Meet the Media," an opportunity for students to meet with students who work for Tech media. We also place ads in The UD, pass out business cards, write on chalkboards, call organizations, send out letters, participate in the homecoming parade — all in an attempt to get students excited about their 1990 La Ventana.

La Ventana will have a portrait photographer in the dorms for two weeks. We want you in the yearbook, and we are trying to make the task for you as easy as possible.

In addition to staying in touch with you, all Tech organizations are encouraged to purchase pages in the 1990 book. The deadline is Oct. 31. Call 742-3388 for payment arrangements.

Contrary to what you might think, La Ventana is not funded by Tech in any way. Charging students to be in La Ventana is the only way we can afford to put out a book.

There are almost 25,000 students at Tech, and fewer than 5,000 purchased yearbooks last year. If more students would buy yearbooks, maybe La Ventana would not have to charge students to be in the yearbook.

Whatever money we make, we use it to improve La Ventana (more color, more pages, etc.) We do not split up the money at the end of the year among staff members (although some universities do). Students want a quality yearbook, but to produce a quality book, students need to purchase La Ventanas.

Each year, the staff chooses a theme for La Ventana. The 1990 theme is "It's A First." We want to emphasize: it's the first year of the 1990s; it's the first full year for President Lawless and also for President Bush; and it's the first time Tech's enrollment has reached 24,431.

If you have any suggestions for feature stories, let us know. Maybe you know a professor who won a first place award or you know that an organization will be breaking ground in 1990. Maybe your residence hall won first place in intramurals. Whatever! We are interested.

If you ever have any suggestions or questions about La Ventana, feel free to come in and talk. Our office is open to you, 117 journalism building.

WE DO WINDOWS!

Letters

Ignoring ethical issues

To the editor:

In a recent letter, Jerome O'Callaghan accuses scientists of being unwilling to deal with the ethics of their research. On the contrary, it is the animal rights activists who ignore the ethical implications of their actions. This is an emotional issue for those on both sides. However, O'Callaghan failed to address the substance of (Peter) Doris' arguments. A previous letter by Celeste Reid also ignored the real ethical issues.

When forced to make a choice between the lives of humans and the perceived interests of animals, how do we determine priorities? For most of us, the choice is simple. However, according to the morality of ALF and other animal rights extremists, the lives of 4,000 infants per year are a fair trade for the freedom of five cats.

Now, I don't know if John Orem would have made a major breakthrough to cure crib death if his work had not been interrupted. However, when the lives of 4,000 infants are at stake, I think he should be given a chance. On the other hand, the animal rights activists are so convinced that Orem would not have made such progress, that they are anxious to gamble the lives of other people's children in order to free a few cats.

When human lives are at issue, can it be ethical to abandon proven research methods for nebulous speculation about the possibility of curing crib death with computers?

To those dedicated to improving human life, animal rights activists appear inconsistent and hypocritical. In the same issue as O'Callaghan's letter, there was a report of a protest by the Animal Rights Coalition of the awarding of a fur coat in television promotion. Ronnie Broadfoot suggested that "some big cotton thing" should be given as an alternative. Broadfoot fails to understand that the growing of cotton results in many more brutal animal deaths than does the fur industry. How many animals are displaced or killed outright when plowing a field to plant cotton, corn, wheat, or any other crop? Do these animals have rights?

What about the thousands of animals that are killed on our highways, or in the Alaskan oil spill? Do animal rights extremists refuse to drive automobiles to avoid sharing responsibility for the deaths of those animals? All those of us who drive cars, wear cotton, take medication, or eat food (yes, even vegetarians) share in the responsibility for the deaths of animals. Yet some like to believe that by boycotting hamburgers and stealing a few cats, they live a higher moral standard than the rest of us.

Animal research has saved and improved millions of human and animal lives. Future research is the only hope of recovery for countless human patients, but some want to end this vital research because of their professed concern for the laboratory animals. O'Callaghan wishes to debate the ethics of this issue.

Perhaps the animal rights movement can begin the debate by justifying its apparent indifference to human life, while at the same time its adherents participate in the slaughter of millions of animals which die to provide them corn, wheat, clothing, and transportation. What standard of morality allows human life to be held in such low esteem?

Bubbas will douse Richards' governor bid

Paul O'Bryan
Guest Columnist

Will Ann Richards become the next governor of Texas? Don't bet on it. In fact, if you want to help a Republican win the general election, I would encourage you to vote for Richards in the Democratic primary, because she will lead Texas Democrats into yet another Alamo-like beating.

It has nothing to do with the fact that Ann Richards is a woman. The problem is that she is a woman who tries hard to be a man — a good ol' boy with eye shadow. Let's face it; politics has little to do with the issues. Image elects candidates in this age of "I vote for the man, not the party." And it will be the same good ol' boys that Ann Richards is trying so hard to be like who will run away from her in droves on election day.

For years, Democrats have been turning away for the largest block of voters in out-state Texas: the Bubba vote. Mike Dukakis was just the latest Democrat to be soundly rejected by this group who are traditionally Democrats and whose daddy was a Democrat but who is becoming increasingly accustomed to pulling the Republican lever. And it is not because they really want to, but that they feel sold out on issues such as gun control, immigration, crime, taxes and family values. And Bubba is about as likely to vote for Ann Richards as Pee Wee Herman.

Ann Richards talks about George Bush being born with a silver foot in his mouth. The trouble is that Ann Richards comes off as if she were born with a wad of Red Man in her mouth — and Bubba doesn't like that in a lady.

True, women are making major inroads into Texas politics. Dallas, Houston, San Antonio and El Paso all are led by woman mayors. But Bubba is outnumbered in the cities. Each mayor has built a coalition of labor, minorities, liberals, homosexuals, and other out-of-the-mainstream city dwellers. They each were able to grab just enough votes to squeak out narrow victories. Where they can't win in suburban and rural areas.

Not so, says Monte Williams, the Richards campaign pressman. According to Williams, "While we might not be as strong in the rural areas as we are in the cities, Ann can beat anyone anywhere." Williams talks about Richards' strengths in the areas of education and jobs which he think will make her triumphant next November.

As it stands now, the early steam that Richards is building on college campuses and in liberal circles should push her through an easy primary victory. Attorney General Jim Mattox's early attempts to smear Richards on her personal background — one divorce and recovery from alcoholism — have backfired in his face.

That has left many Democrats that I have talked to in the position of having to paint the best picture possible. But even they realize there are cracks in the facade. One such Democrat is a big-wig in the local Young Democrats who will tell you I am all wet on this one. He'll tell you that I am a chauvinist, and worse yet, a yankee.

Truth is, I've worked on dozens of political races, including a long stint on a woman's race to become governor in Michigan. The one thing I have learned is that you have to listen to what people are saying, and that means going beyond the college campuses and the city clubs and into open spaces.

I was in a coffee shop between here and Dallas a few weeks back where I met an older couple. Soon the subject turned to politics, where I was given a 20-minute lecture on why Ann Richards will not get their vote. The reasons were not but added up to what I have described here: Ann Richards doesn't score well on the Bubba-meter.

Next November, voters will flock to the polls to make an end to the months of disgusting political ads that will be long on imagery and short on substance. One thing the television commercials won't hide will be Ann Richards' lack of feminine qualities, and Bubba will make sure that she doesn't inherit the governor's chair in Austin. Brutal, yes, but equally truthful. If you don't believe me, just ask Bubba.

O'Bryan is a Texas Tech graduate student and served as associate finance director for the Michigan Republican Party from 1986 to 1988.

Donor honored by agricultural college

J.R. Blumrosen of Lubbock has been honored as a donor to the Texas Tech College of Agricultural Sciences and has been inducted into the CoBank-National Bank for Cooperatives, Texas Region's Academy of Honor in Agricultural Credit.

The award includes $3,000 that recipients donate to one of nine state colleges and universities. The award then is presented annually to an individual who has made significant contributions to the state's agricultural credit issues.

Texas Tech graduate student Darren Edwards, who received this year's scholarship, earned a bachelor's degree in May and is working on a master's degree in agricultural finance.

Physics group honored as outstanding

Texas Tech's Society of Physics Students has been honored by the American Institute of Physics as a 1989-90 Outstanding Chapter. Only 27 of the nation's 562 chapters were recognized with the award.

Tech was chosen to receive the honor based on the group's chapter activity, membership, projects and papers submitted by various students in the group. The society, consisting of about 20 students, works to promote interest in physics.

AFROTC recognized for excellence

The Texas Tech division of the Air Force Reserve Officers Training Corps, Detachment 820, has been awarded the Air Force Organizational Excellence Award. The award is given to organizations that perform all administrative and operational duties in an outstanding manner over a prolonged period. Detachment 820 was one of 12 selected from among 150 AFROTC detachments nationwide.

Use of heavy equipment ruining area soil

By SHAUN KELLEY
The University Daily

Area farmers are ruining the soil and using fertilizers to compensate for the damage that results from the use of heavy equipment, a United Nations Peace Fellow says.

Texas Tech agricultural engineering professor E.B. Elbanna estimates $1 billion in crop loss in the United States annually because farmers unnecessarily are using heavy machinery that compacts the soil, making it unproductive.

Elbanna, a visiting lecturer from Mansoura, Egypt, said the use of lighter equipment by farmers would reduce the need for many fertilizers.

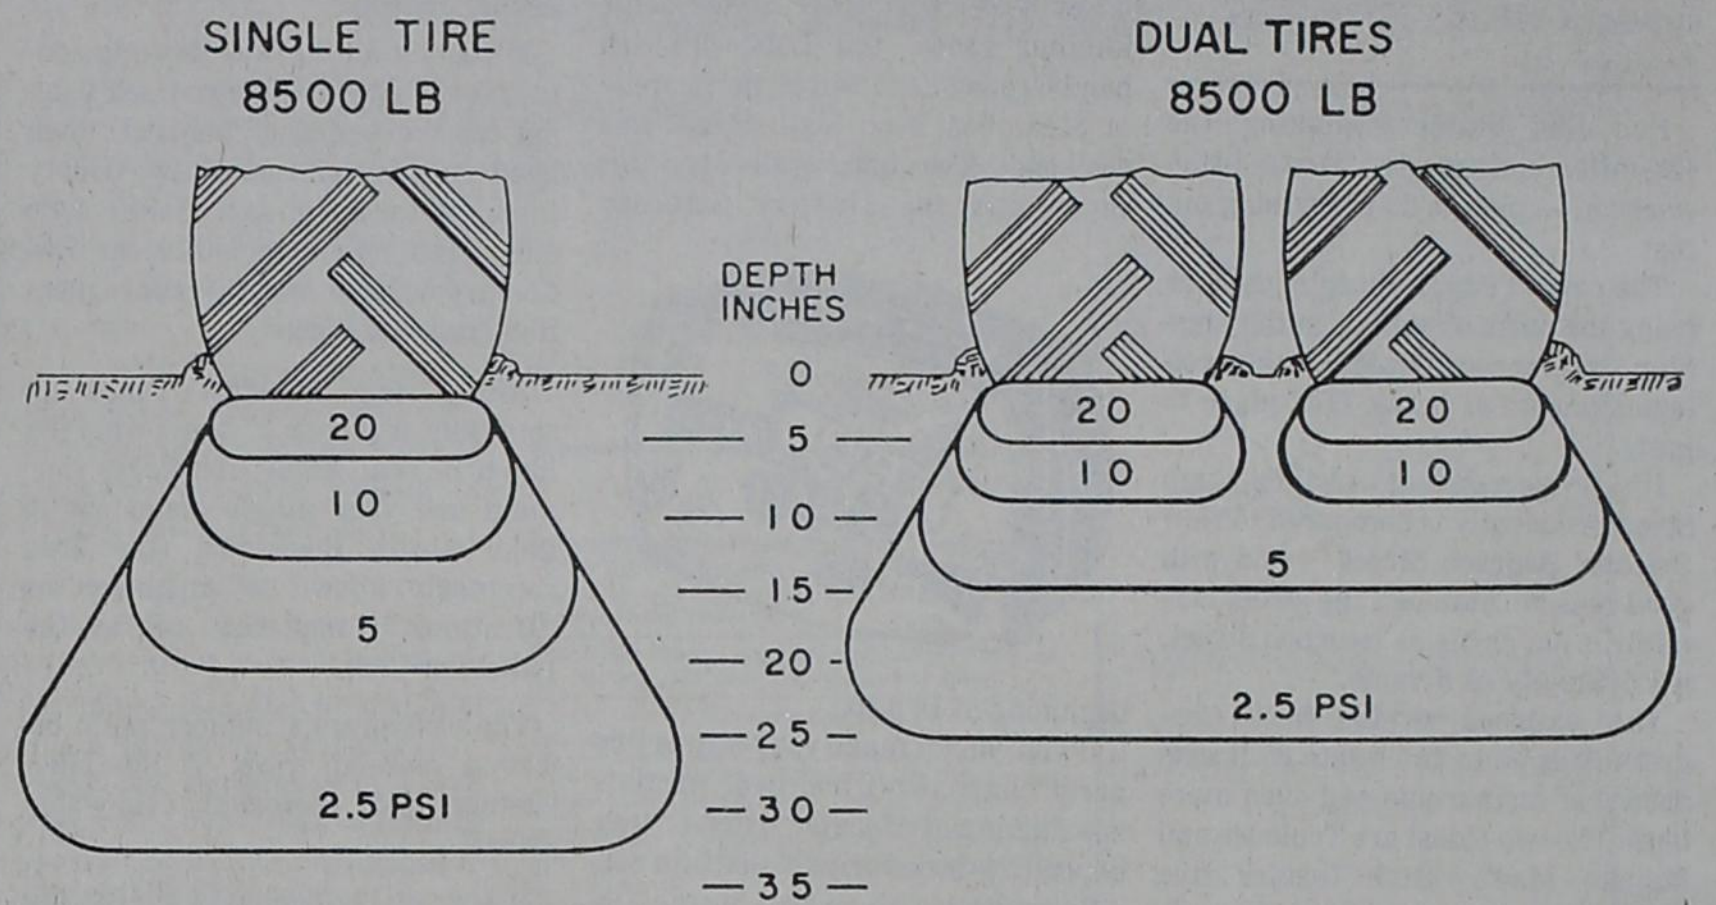

"If I pack the soil with heavy implements, I ruin the soil and must look for another place to farm," he said.

Compacted soil is detrimental to crops because compaction produces clods instead of pulverization of the soil, which possess lower water and oxygen infiltration rates.

The problem of compact soil is avoided by Swedish farmers through the use of two or three small tractors that pull implements in unison instead of one huge, heavy tractor, Elbanna said.

The Egyptian government does not allow the purchase of a tractor weighing more than five tons, he said.

Elbanna said U.S. farmers have larger farms and are in a hurry, so they do not care if they lose a small percentage of their crops because of compacted soil.

This graphic illustrates the damage inflicted on the soil by heavy equipment. The graphic represents a 17-ton tractor. Cotton roots grow only about 17 to 20 inches deep.

Farmers could save money and have better crop yields if they would use lighter equipment, he said. They would save on equipment maintenance costs, irrigation, fertilization and in the area of crop loss.

"If you compare the crop yield in the wheel track to the yield from un-compacted areas, you will see a major difference," Elbanna said.

Two five-ton tractors initially cost about the same as one 16-ton tractor, and the smaller tractors are cheaper to maintain, he said.

He said farmers must be concerned about planting at the optimum time, the type of soil being used, the moisture content of the soil and the type crop being planted to determine what weight the soil can maintain without irreparable damage.

Elbanna spoke recently to the agricultural engineering staff at the University of Illinois and to Illinois area farmers. He also will speak soon at the University of Alabama.

Compacted soil is a worldwide problem that must be dealt with, Elbanna said. Changing to lighter equipment is difficult and costly, but it must be done, he said.

Before coming to Tech, Elbanna taught for three years at Mansoura University and for five years at the University of Edinburgh in Scotland, where he received a doctorate.

"The reason I chose to come to Tech was because of the similarities between the climates in West Texas and Egypt," he said.

Austin filled with fun for football fans

By WENDY WILLIS
The University Daily

For Red Raiders making the 423-mile convoy to Austin this weekend — plan to do everything but rest.

The capital city, although noted for being the pulse of politics in the Lone Star State, is recognized by many college students as being THE place to party.

It's no secret that Austin's Sixth Street frequently is compared to New Orleans' Bourbon Street — and with good reason. Although the street certainly is not as big as Bourbon Street, it's definitely as diverse.

The six-block stretch from Congress Avenue to Interstate 35 boasts dozens of restaurants and even more bars. The two oldest are Toulouse and Maggie Mae's. Both feature live bands almost every night of the week with the sounds of everything from Top 40 to '60s rhythm and blues.

If that's not your style, just keep walking. You'll find a bar to suit your taste within a few feet.

For those who want to see some familiar faces, the Lubbock-based band Ground Zero will be performing at Steamboat's on Sixth Street this weekend. The band will open for Omar and the Howlers Saturday beginning at 10 p.m.

If you cannot make your way to this party block, don't feel bad. Austin's entertainment facets extend way beyond the boundaries of Sixth Street.

Saturday's 1 p.m. game in Memorial Stadium is sure to build up an appetite for hard-working Raider fans, and it wouldn't do Austin justice to forget to mention the names of a few of the more popular dining establishments.

If you get all the way down to central Texas and you find yourself longing for the tastes of Lubbock, then head out to one of Austin's two County Lines (on the hill or on the lake). Both offer great views of either the Hill Country or Lake Austin — not to mention great barbecue.

After being in West Texas all semester, it is easy to forget what it's like to be near water. To refresh your mind and your mouth, head out to Lake Austin Boulevard (the area commonly known to Austinites as "Boattown") and stop off at the Lakeview Cafe.

The restaurant's outdoor patio offers a close-up view of the lake, boaters and dedicated cold-water skiers.

If you can manage to fit all this into one weekend — congratulations. If you're still looking for more to do, there's lots of shopping and plenty of theaters in almost every corner of town.

Local motorists irritated by Lubbock traffic

Lynn Gause
Lifestyles
Writer

OK, here's the situation. Have you ever thought that when you drive in Lubbock, you're risking your life? Not to mention that by the time you reach your destination you rate about 9 on the old tension scale?

I don't believe I'm the only one who has this problem. It seems that for the first part of the semester, the biggest complaint was parking on the Tech campus. Needless to say, that isn't the only traffic and parking problem in Lubbock. When I talk about traffic, I mean the crap you drive in every day, no matter what time it is. It seems that every time you get behind the wheel of a car and drive around Lubbock, you're taking your life in your hands.

Granted, I come from a bigger city and the traffic is horrible there, but driving in that mess teaches one how to get in and out of lanes quickly and use defensive driving. However, driving in Lubbock still is a pain.

Drivers here don't pay any attention to their driving; they keep "lolly-gagging" down the roadway looking unprepared for anything they might encounter — like an accident. On my way to school Monday, the traffic was backed up because of an 18-wheeler that stopped in the middle of the road, which caused problems for every driver. Come on, folks, this has got to be a joke.

I believe part of the traffic situation has to do with the layout of the roads. Take the intersection of 19th and the Brownfield Highway. This has got to be the most idiotic and confusing intersection for half of Lubbock. Knowing this, drivers should change lanes or make a turn BEFORE reaching the intersection.

Speed limits are another inconvenience to drivers. For those of you who speed all over Lubbock: Why? By the time you reach the red light, you end up sitting there with all the other cars that you already passed. Now for those who drive slower than the speed limit, you really ought not drive. I'm not talking about 50 mph in a 55 zone, but rather 25 in a 55! I assure you that most drivers aren't out for a scenic Sunday drive.

I think the worst thing about the traffic is that when your blood is boiling and you're running late, nanny and grampy have decided to hit the road. What makes me the angriest is that after you encounter these drivers, you want to pass them waving with one finger, but this tremendous amount of guilt fills your body and you pass by thinking to yourself, "Just forget it."

Hall hosts comedy channel for HBO

NEW YORK (AP) — "Saturday Night Live" alumnus Rich Hall is among seven hosts named Monday by Home Box Office for the 24-hour comedy channel it is beginning on Nov. 15.

Hall was best known for his "sniglets," offbeat, nonsensical word play on "Saturday Night Live." He will do a two-hour Friday night show called "Onion World."

The four weeknight hosts named for the Comedy Channel are Rachel Sweet; Tommy Sledge, from "The Standup Detective;" the comedy team of the Higgins Boys & Gruber and Allan Havey.

The Turkish Student Association would like to congratulate Maestro Güler Aykal and pianist Verda Erman for a great performance Friday and Saturday nights

Dykes says Raiders profit from week off

By JOEL BROWN
The University Daily

Dykes

Spike Dykes has said time and again how he dislikes off weeks during the football season. But the Texas Tech coach had few complaints with the way his Red Raiders spent their time off last week preparing for Saturday's matchup with Texas.

"I think our guys — they have been hitting it hot and heavy since the middle of August and they deserved a break," Dykes said in his weekly press luncheon Monday.

In addition to allowing a few injured players needed rest, Dykes said the off week would be helpful for kicker Lin Elliott, who is mired in a kicking slump.

Dykes said he is extremely impressed with the development of Texas this season.

"If you watch 'em play Arkansas, you start shaking your head and say, 'No way.' They played a perfect game," Dykes said.

"They start a number of young guys all the way from (freshman quarterback Peter) Gardere all the way throughout the lineup. And they are all blue-chip players.

"They've done a great job of getting that thing turned around. Sometimes it sounds like everything is bad, and then you get to looking at the record and who's beating you. They've lost to two teams in the Top 20. They've not just been sisters of the poor."

Dykes said Tech also should be ready for battle Saturday.

"Our team right now — I think they are in a good position," he said. "I think they understand they can win the game.

"We are gonna have our work out for us, but that is what it's all about."

Dykes said he sees the many rewards that lie ahead if the 5-2 Raiders can get by the 4-2 Longhorns. But national respect has yet to come easily for Tech.

"If you win three in the Top 20, surely they will mention you sooner or later," he said. "I doubt it, but they might."

Dykes said he has been pleased with sophomore quarterback Jamie Gill's progress throughout the 1989 season and has confidence in his ability against the 'Horns.

When Tech takes the field Saturday at Memorial Stadium in Austin, the Raiders will try to defeat Texas at home for the first time in 21 years.

"Like I told our players yesterday, this team has never been to Memorial Stadium, so they have nothing to worry about that," Dykes said.

Dykes did not put the Longhorn win streak at the top of his worry list.

"We have great respect for them and everything else, but we can beat them if we play good," he said.

"I think this conference is a long way from being over. A lot of strange and bewildering things can happen in this conference, I believe.

"Boy, I sure would like to throw a kink into it a little bit."

Basketball coupons to go on sale

About 100 student coupons for the Texas Tech men's basketball season will go on sale Wednesday at the Tech athletic ticket office.

The 16-game package for home games costs $48. A student must show a Tech ID upon purchase.

The Red Raiders will open the regular season against Missouri-St. Louis on Nov. 25 at Lubbock Municipal Coliseum.

Soccer club scores two ties on road trip

The Texas Tech soccer club pulled two ties out of its closet this weekend in games in Waco and Wichita Falls.

The Red Raiders scored in the last minute Sunday to knot a 3-3 tie against Midwestern State.

Raider Nathan Carter scored his club's lone goal in a 1-1 tie against Baylor on Friday.

Kite enjoys finest season with PGA

By The Associated Press

HILTON HEAD ISLAND, S.C. — It was the finest season of Tom Kite's 18-year PGA Tour career.

"A fabulous year. I just want to soak it all in," Kite said after his playoff victory Sunday in the Nabisco Championship, golf's richest tournament.

And he had plenty of time to let it soak in. Immediately after his triumph over PGA titleholder Payne Stewart, Kite boarded a plane for Japan and his next-to-last tournament of the year.

Kite will lead the American six-man team in the Asahi Four Tours Championship this week, taking on teams representing Europe, Japan and Australia-New Zealand.

His only other outing will be in the new Ronald McDonald, three-day team event in Pasadena, Calif., next month.

"Then the kids," he said. "Nothing but being at home and playing with the kids until it's time to go to La Costa."

That's the Tournament of Champions, the exclusive event that brings together only the winners of PGA Tour events from the previous 12 months. It will open the 1990 season the first week of January.

Kite, who will pass his 40th birthday before that tournament, will go into it with his finest set of credentials:

- Three victories from 1989, the most he's won in any season;
- the 1989 PGA Player of the Year title, and
- a single-season money-winning record of $1,395,278.

And, with the official-money season now complete, he'll go into the 1990 campaign as golf's all-time leading money-winner with $5,600,691.

The $625,000 he collected in the Nabisco tournament lifted him over Tom Watson and Jack Nicklaus on the career money list.

"A fabulous year," Kite said. "It was fun.

"And it was disappointing, too." It was at the U.S. Open where he Kite a last round lead with an early triple-bogey that sent him reeling to a closing 78.

"That was as big a disappointment as I have ever had in my golf career," said Kite, who has had numerous near-misses but has yet to win one of the game's major championships, the Masters, U.S. and British Opens and the PGA.

"I'm sure some people thought that would end my victories out here on the PGA Tour," Kite said of the U.S. Open loss.

"I knew in my heart it wouldn't. Now everybody knows."

Houston problems not lack of effort

By The Associated Press

HOUSTON — The Houston Oilers are making mistakes normally covered on the first page of the playbook, coach Jerry Glanville said Monday.

The Cleveland Browns rallied from a 10-0 halftime deficit with an arsenal of trick plays that led to a 28-17 victory Sunday.

"We made errors that caused the most big plays I've seen on us in a long time," Glanville said. "It wasn't fun to watch."

The Oilers dropped to a 4-4 record as they start a three-game home stand Sunday against Detroit.

"It's no mystery," cornerback Patrick Allen said. "If you give up 70- and 80-yard plays like we've done against Minnesota, New England and now Cleveland, you're going to lose the ball game."

"If you're in zone and the wide receiver comes straight off to your zone, you have to stay with him as deep as he is," Glanville said. "The plus side is it wasn't a lack of effort. We played as physical as we've ever played."

The Oilers will host the Lions Sunday in a battle of run-and-shoot offenses.

The Oilers' home stand includes a Monday night game against Cincinnati Nov. 13 and a Nov. 19 game against the Los Angeles Raiders.

Dallas fans reach boiling point

By The Associated Press

IRVING — The fans are beginning to desert the winless Dallas Cowboys. The ones who do come are getting mad.

The 44,431 fans at Sunday's 19-10 loss to the Phoenix Cardinals booed both quarterback Steve Walsh and owner Jerry Jones.

Walsh was intercepted twice, and one errant throw was returned 16 yards for a touchdown by Michael Zordich.

Jones got the razzberry treatment as he introduced Lee Roy Jordan into the Ring of Honor.

"When you're not in the win column, you know the boobies are going to get going," Jones said.

There were 2,461 no-shows from fans who bought tickets to the Cowboys' eighth consecutive loss.

With Cowboys tickets selling at $25 each, Jones had about $500,000 worth of empty seats Sunday.

Some fans were miffed because Jones didn't invite Landry to the Ring of Honor ceremony.

One fan wore a sack over his head that read: "Gee, I miss Tom Landry."

Landry, who was fired in February when Jones installed Jimmy Johnson as the coach, said on Monday he wasn't invited to the ceremony although he coached Jordan to three Super Bowls.

"No one contacted me," Landry said. "I guess they are in an awkward position when it comes to me."

Landry has yet to attend a Cowboys game this season but keeps up with them.

"I guess all of us who are interested in the club are disappointed," he said.

Fans booed rookie Walsh and began a "We Want Babe" chant in the fourth period.

They were referring to backup quarterback Babe Laufenberg, who hasn't played yet this season.

Dallas may have Troy Aikman, who fractured a finger on his left hand six games ago, back in the lineup for Sunday night's game in Washington against the Redskins. Doctors were expected to give him the OK this week.

The Cowboys are beginning to show the pressure from their winless season. They don't want to become the first team to go 0-16. Tampa Bay once had a winless season when the league played 14 games. The Bucs hold the record for consecutive losses in a row with 26.
