Grading Trouble On Army Exams Delays Reports

"It is believed because of the large amount of work necessitated by the grading of the many Army A-12 examination papers, reports to individual students regarding their scores have been delayed," Dr. H. L. Kent, administrative assistant said Monday.

Several students have been notified as to their score made on the examination given here on April 2. Army officials promised all results by May 1 and those failing the examination should have been notified before that date.

The scores were to be equated in terms of the Army classification by those who met the equivalent of an AGCT score of 115 were to be sent cards stating that a achievement, which were to be presented at the reception center upon his induction.

From another source it now appears that if one took the V-12 examination, stating a preference for either the Army or the Navy, and failed and if the individual is not called to service by the next V-12 examination, he may take the examination again. The probable date for the next test is late November or December. Dr. Kent advises those who failed the April 2 examination not subject to call in the near future to make application in his office for the examination.

Aggie Professors Conduct Courses

K. M. Renner and Mart Pederson of the Tech dairy manufactures department will go to Muleshoe Wednesday night to assist in conducting a cream buyers' evening school. The Muleshoe class is one of a series that the dairy department will conduct between now and the first of June.

New government requirements for the standards of the butter and cheese it buys from producers make it necessary that cream buyers be more strict in grading at the buying point. The government will require 60 per cent of the butter and 70 per cent of the cheese produced by American processors next year.

Teachers Names Asked For Here

Dr. Doyle D. Jackson, head of the teacher placement bureau, asks that all Tech students and alumni who intend registering this spring for positions next fall, send their names to him as soon as possible.

Their credentials must be collected and assembled in a brochure form to be sent to the many superintendents who have sent queries to the placement office.

Dr. Jackson reports that the response has been much better than the staff expected, with some new names and many renewals. "Spring registration is nearly over; if there are other applicants who intend registering, the sooner the better," he cautions.

Selection of the student to receive this aid is made in the spring of each year by the staff members of the foreign languages department. MANY Techsians will begin studying Saturday for the last group of final examinations they will ever be forced to endure at Texas Tech, or, for the most part, in any college. In past years the "30" editorial in The Toreador has been largely dedicated to seniors who would never return to this campus as students.

This year A. Hitler and a few cohorts have changed all this. There is little chance for the majority now in school to return to this campus next fall. To these we wish to extend these parting words.

This "what will tomorrow bring" year that we are completing has seen more drastic changes in Texas Tech than the entire seventeen years the school has passed through to reach its present state. At times it looked as if Tech was just about to fold up for the duration.

But there was always that extra something that held it together, that one hidden knot that has pulled the college through so many other "tight spots." That something is as much a part of Tech as the Administration building or the Victory bells. It is the spirit that has brought Tech from an obscure West Texas college to one of the most widely recognized in this section.

To those students who are leaving may we say that you are passing from something far bigger and better than any event in your lives. You are carrying with you a heritage that most college students are not lucky enough to receive in college careers.

These departing students, whether they be freshmen, sophomores, juniors or seniors will have their chance to prove that Tech has meant something to them—that it has made something of them and become a part of their personality.

Scattered to the four corners of the world at the present time, engaged in every phase of the greatest conflict the world has ever known, many more ex-students are carrying on and setting an example for the rest of us to follow. When they departed from this campus, some of them not so long ago, they read something of this same type of editorial in their college paper. Whether they remember it or whether it has become a part of an obscure past we do not know. But we do know that our exes have proved that Tech means something to them—by their actions—by their letters to friends back home.

Those leaving now, especially the newer students who have never known the carefree life that once was Tech, have had little chance to enjoy all the traditions that were a part of the college so long. But these students had a greater chance to do the school good than many of those who have left the campus in years gone by.

During these troubled times collegians are scattering to the four winds. No part of the world is isolated from the other. When these departing Techsians reach their destination it is our hope that they will carry on in true Tech manner, seek to assure the continuation of the American way of life including the perpetuation of the "most democratic school in the nation."

Such Techsians as Floyd and Coe have given their lives for such a cause. Many others are doing the same thing each day. It is, as we have said before, a heritage from which a Techsian can not escape.

To the departing students goes our pledge that those fortunate enough to return next fall will do their best to carry on for you as you have done for those who have gone before you—either into the service or civilian life.

Next year will bring an even more critical situation than has this one. Manpower is becoming more scarce each day. Education has suffered immensely in the face of the present conflict.

Regardless of the odds, Techsians remaining here will seek to assure all exes that they may some day return to the same Texas Tech they loved so much. Education is the most effective weapon against tyranny and oppression. As long as it flourishes and thrives there can be no doubt as to the continuation of the ideals that have become a part of our everyday life.

To the persons with a job to do elsewhere, on foreign or native soil, and to those who will be back on the campus next fall, we don't say "Goodbye," but "Til we meet again, God speed and good hunting..." -30.

Until September—

A Techsian Speaks

—By Barnett

TODAY'S Toreador brings to a close the editor's first semester at the helm of the student newspaper at Texas Tech. It is a feeling of relief that he lays aside the responsibilities that go along with the job but also a feeling of regret that he has left so many things undone.

The writer wishes to express to the student body his appreciation of the fine responses that have been given him during his apprenticeship. No editor could ask for better cooperation and interest than has been shown by the student body here.

The opinions and ideas voiced by the editor have at times conflicted greatly with some of the students here. They have not hesitated to tell him when this happened. It has been appreciated by the editor and staff. It is the hope here that those whose feelings were trampled will forgive and forget. No statement has ever been found in the editorial comments of The Toreador that the editor did not hold to be true.

In carrying out his duties as editor of the 1943 Toreador yours truly has tried at all times to leave his personal feelings in his room. There is no place for such in this office. No matter who had to be hurt it is felt here that what is best for Texas Tech must be said. It was my honest and sincere feeling that I was doing the best for Tech when I made such statements.

The campaigns of The Toreador have met with wonderful response. Especially do I wish to thank the students for their answer to our plea for campus beautification. Although this campaign was begun by Bill Latson last year and carried on by my predecessor this year, it was one of the pet themes of this paper in years gone by. The students in their wonderful response showed that they were still interested in the well being of Texas Tech. They were seeking to assure past student bodies that Tech was going to continue to grow as those former students had hoped and strived.

The year we are ending has seen a series of problems appear and then fall behind. At times the future of Tech took on a dark and gloomy appearance. At times even I threatened to give up. But the college always pulled through regardless of panicky days when students quit by the dozens and the remaining ones were in class in body only.

The athletic teams at Tech suffered the worst season in years. Football lacked the old razzle-dazzle that has for so long characterized Red Raider teams. During football season the scarlet clad men fought against overwhelming odds, both at home and on foreign fields. But like those ex-Techsians now "over there" fighting against heavy odds they always managed to pull out in time. To those men who will not return to Tech next year, to some who will never return, I wish to say that I have enjoyed by associations with them. I think I voice the opinion of the student body when I say that we are proud of the fight they put up against such odds.

To the remaining students I wish to say the same thing. My work in this office has not been up to the standard of other editors, I admit. Yet I apologize for nothing I have or have not done. I merely hope that the students will bear with me and overlook my mistakes. If I am fortunate enough to return here next fall to continue my duties as your editor I will carry on the best that I know how. I will again strive to live up to standards set in former years.

Tech is a young school with a long way to go before she reaches the top. But every student who has ever enrolled in this college has recognized this. They have worked all the harder to see that the college obtained that goal. That is why I am so proud to be a part of Texas Tech. A feeling of democracy and fellowship exists here that can be found in no other college or university. A Techsian is just as much a part of this school whether he be student body presy, editor, or just a freshman. THAT is Texas Tech.

To departing students... I pledge that as long as I am editor of The Toreador I will carry out the duties of this office to my greatest ability. I will strive to assure those who have left the campus that democracy as you have known it will continue to thrive here. Any tyranny or dictatorship that arises will receive the condemnation of this publication no matter who seeks to destroy the school that so many have come to love and cherish because of its ideals. To those students returning may I say that I look forward with pleasure to our associations next year. I hope that our work together

Ex-Techsians BILL FULLER and LOUISE LEWIS will be married on June 15.

Any inferiority shown by this column this week is due to the fact that RAYMOND PILLER has a hangover today and isn't able to contribute his two cents worth of dirt.

Did you know that MARGARET KEENE and BENJO GATTIS are going steady until he leaves Wednesday? He's going to the rmy... And COLLEEN ALLEN and BURL HUBBARD started going steady Friday... but due to difficulties beyond their control, decided to quit Sunday. The COUNT is beginning to think that this going steady is just a fad anyhow... But GEORGIA LEE POWERS maintains it's the one and the best way how NOT to hold a man and she ought to know.

Three pages of girls were late in the dorm Saturday night. Maybe because the clock is still run up and maybe just because they wanted to have a final fling at the COTTON CLUB before dead week and exams catch up with them...

HAZEL THOMAS was just sure that A. B. ARNETT was going to propose to her the other day because it took him so long to ask her if she would go on a trip to CARLSBAD with him and some friends. (Note to A. B.—She's been receiving a lot of letters from some SPAFS glider pilot.)

All the big shots in the ROTC er during the coming year will be as well ordered as this one. And with this I sign "30" until next September... Bill Barnett played ping pong the rest of the week after the final reviews were over.

JANELLE SHANAFELT is wearing a ring on her RIGHT hand from HARRY BLOOM-SHIELD, former Techsian... COTTON ALLEN left this week... This should, by rights, leave ANNIS DURHAM awfully unhappy. DOROTHY MONTGOMERY has practically murdered yours truly about her heart being in CLOVIS. She denies the fact. "It's the wheel that squeaks that needs the grease."

MARIE PETERMAN has two new roommates—both peculiar—one a rabbit and the other a pre-flight wife... TRINKA NORMAN stood up a couple of soldiers Saturday and Sunday nights to go with SGT. STOEKART, better known as STINKY.

Some tall and handsome lieutenant from the LAAP is really leading MICKEY GILLILAND around these days. It came as quite a surprise to a certain girl the other night when DOUGLAS RENNER and BILL HICKEY called her at 2 a.m., faked as BOB WEDDLE and asked to come over. How BOB stands with the girl is evident by the fact that she told them to come on over.

We can't get our news from the LOU TO LOUELLA column this week because she got hers from us this time.

PAUL BERTHELOT and BILL HERNDON were very good Saturday night in an imitation of LEO, the lion, and tamer.

CARL MINOR has succeeded CHARLIE WASHBURN and LESLIE NKKEL as the most suspected man on the campus. The little woman is JANE PEGUES. We didn't mean to start a feud but all nominations from here on out will be taken in this office.

Geology Field Open To Women Studes

Coeds Could Secure Positions Easily With Proper Training

By LEROY T. PATTON

Professor and Head of the Department of Geology and Petroleum Engineering, Texas Technological College

THE department of geology and petroleum engineering is constantly receiving calls from oil companies for women who have training in Geology. We could find positions for a relatively large number of women if women with the proper training and preparation were available. The present situation, of course, is partly the result of the war, but it is believed that it is not entirely the result of the war, nor that it will entirely change after the war. The oil companies, even in peace times, are making increasing use of women geologists, especially in such lines as subsurface laboratory work, micro-paleontology, and as computers in geophysical work. In the post-war period there will undoubtedly be a great expansion of the oil industry, so great that there will be little danger that women entering the profession will be supplanted by men returning to civil life, since the expansion will, it is believed, call for the services of both.

During the war, which promises to be a long one—perhaps even as long as ten years—for wars have lasted that long in the past, women going into geology will be performing an essential service and distinctly contributing to the war effort. This article has not been written for the purpose of Departmental advertising, but for the purpose of bringing to the attention of women students opportunities concerning which they possibly do not have information. Beginning with the summer of 1943 a field course exclusively for women students will be given if there is sufficient demand. All other courses in geology are already open to women students. I would be very glad to talk to any women students who are interested in considering geology as a profession, or who would like to have more information concerning the opportunities along this line.

Summer School Due Increase This Year

—By Kara Hunsucker

ANOTHER week of classes, then the inevitable—final exams. Those tests always seem to dampen one's spirits considerably, especially coming as they do after the gay round of end-of-school functions. For many students this year, finals will mark only the end before another beginning, as such a large number of eds and coeds plan to enroll in summer school in compliance with the wartime accelerated program of education.

As this school year draws toward a close, we find the outlook on the world front, that front that so vitally affects our daily lives, much more optimistic than when students gathered at Texas Tech for enrollment last fall. Only nine months ago, the British were backed up against the gates of Alexandria, invasion of Australia still seemed close, and the Allies, on the whole, were still on the defensive.

Today the Battle of Africa is in the final stages, and the oncoming Battle of Europe is the world's most discussed topic. Invasion seems eminent, but when? Where? That is the question millions are asking as all eyes are focused on Norway, Turkey, Greece, Italy, Spain, France, and the coastal lowlands.

Back on Tech campus, we read the headlines and realize that those battle spots now seem very near, for this great global war has brought us close to every scene of action. We know that in New Guinea, with the air corps in England, in battleships on the Pacific and Atlantic, and in Tunisia, that our brothers, our sweethearts, our former college friends are fighting. We also know they will not fall.

As this column goes to press, it will be our last contribution to The Toreador. On May 31, we'll be receiving a sheepskin from Texas Tech, and we can honestly say that it will be something of a relief to know that there will be no more cramming, no more exams, no more running to get into the dorm on time.

There are many aspects of college life, however, to which the senior bids good-bye with sadness. College is an experience that can never be relived; and as the graduate passes from the gridiron commencement exercises, thenceforward he's "on his own." Four years at Texas Tech has meant yelling for the Red Raiders and marching down College Avenue in many victory parades... social life in the form of dances, teas, dinners... midnight sessions in the dorm... the meeting of many people and the formation of treasured friendships... spring picnics... carefree hours on the

Student Horvath Is Graduate Of Gunnery School

Among the recent replacements in the Tech Detachment is student John A. Horvath, who seems to have a slight edge on most of the boys to start with. Student Horvath already is an honor graduate of both aerial gunnery and aircraft armorer's school, although he is only twenty-one. Entering the service in September, 1942, at his home in Gary, Indiana, he was assigned to the Air Force and given basic training at Fort Harrison, Indianapolis, Ind. He next was sent to Gunnery school at Harlingen, Texas, where he graduated with honor among the first twenty in his class. Here he trained on .30 and .50 caliber machine guns, a 12-gauge shot gun, the regulation .45 Army automatic and training 22 rifles and B.E. machine guns. Graduating from Gunnery school he received his gunner's wings, after extensive training firing a 30 caliber machine gun at moving targets from AT's. Next he went to Lowry Field, near Denver, Colo., and graduated with honors from Armorer's school, but while waiting assignment joined the Avia-

Staff Sergeant Richard Dale Handles Discipline Problems

STAFF Sergeant Richard Dale, from Philadelphia, Pa., is one of the non-commissioned officers the 309th men should be especially interested in, since he handles most of the disciplinary measures for Barracks 2 in his capacity as Acting First Sergeant of Group Two, and also as a member of the Wing Board.

Sgt. Dale claims Philadelphia as his home town, but attended grade school and high school at Lawrenceville, N. J., near Philadelphia. He majored in English for two years at the University of Pennsylvania before coming into the Army, and was on the wrestling team there.

From the wrestling coach at Penn the Sergeant learned Jui Jitsu, which has helped him since in his work in training troops. During his first year at college he also won the heavyweight boxing championship. During spare time he worked on the college paper.

Fishing is Sgt. Dale's principal hobby, and he had time to put it into practice during his days as a newspaper reporter for the Germantown (Pa.) Sentinel. Before enlisting he took four trips to Europe, "just for the fun of traveling," he says. The first was when he was only six, and he doesn't remember much of it, but on the other three visits the Sergeant visited most of the Continental countries including Austria, Germany, Italy and Norway, with which he was most familiar.

Sgt. Dale's service record began in February, 1941, when he enlisted in the Cavalry. He spent a year with his outfit, mostly on maneuvers in North and South Carolina. Their post was at Indiantown Gap, Pa., near Harrisburg. He was next appointed Cadet and sent to Maxwell Field, Ark., in 1942, but was eliminated at Helena, Arkansas, in flying.

From Maxwell Field the Sergeant was sent to Turner Field, Ga., as navigation instructor and recruit quartermaster, and later to Randolph Field as Glider Pilot, but failed to pass the physical there and became a C.Q. for a short time. He was made a drill instructor there before his transfer to the Tech Air Crew Detachment the last week of February, 1943.

Probably the most interesting time in Sergeant Dale's career was when he was in Munich during the fight when Max Schmelling beat Joe Louis in 1936.

Day By Day

By Day

THE first days of the war, when so many of the men in our armed services stood around on street corners on Saturday nights and Sunday afternoons for lack of anything better to do have almost disappeared. Nevertheless, Sunday is still a problem to a good many of the Tech Detachment so far as recreation is concerned.

With world-famous Carlsbad Caverns only 150 miles from Lubbock at Carlsbad, N. M., it might be possible to arrange a Sunday excursion there for the students, if enough were interested. We think most of the men would be willing to pay their share of transportation expenses, if the facilities could be arranged. True, the College Training program of the Air Forces is pressing and urgent at the moment, but Sundays are so much wasted time anyhow, so far as training is concerned.

Four students of the 309th Detachment may have been interested in conserving shoe leather for the good of the war effort last Friday, but we're inclined to doubt it. It seems more likely they were trying for the title of "Laziest Men on the Campus" when they hopped on a bus in front of the Barracks and rode to the "Ag" Building to draw clean bed linen. If ingenuity for getting out of work paid dividends, those boys wouldn't be living on a private's pay.

For more than half of the Detachment personnel, Saturday's parade and review was their first. In view of the fact that a year ago most of the men were standing on the sidelines watching such events being put on by Legionnaires, the review was "as good as could be expected," Lt. Dale Briggs commented.

Reviewing officer was Captain J. F. Zubrod, representing the Inspector-General's department. The SPAAF post band provided music for the occasion. In the future student officers will conduct reviews each Saturday afternoon, Lt. Briggs disclosed.

In view of the fact that members of the Tech Air Crew Detachment all are prospective officers, it would be well for them to begin to show those qualities expected of officers and gentlemen.

The case in question is the action, or rather lack of action, of the small group who broke bounds allowed them as upperclassmen and were caught in a local drug-store. Instead of turning themselves in and taking the punishment they had coming, these men ran back to the barracks, refusing to admit their guilt. Because of this the entire Detachment loses upperclassmen's privileges for fifteen days...hardly fair to make so many men pay for the actions of a few. We're inclined to wonder if, after these students are commissioned as officers in the Air Corps, even an act of Congress can make gentlemen of them!

Mrs. Opal Miller Leaving Soon To Join Husband

Mrs. Opal Miller, instructor of mathematics for pre-flight groups, is leaving soon to be with her husband at Randolph Field. Mrs. Miller will be replaced June 1 by a new instructor. No definite person has been decided upon at the present time.
