Tech Adds Computer

To help lighten the demands on the equipment in the Data Center, Texas Tech has added a new IBM Data Processing System computer.

The computer is a newer model of another processor which has been in use at Tech for two years. Because of the IBM educational grants program, Tech is renting the processor, which rents commercially for $3,600 per month, at a 60 per cent discount or only $1,400 per month.

The new machine is over two times faster than the old one. It can print about 930 figures or 200 words per minute.

Student Group Urges Name Change Protest

Mimeographed sheets protesting the Board of Directors' recent name change decision are being circulated on the campus by a small group of Tech students.

ENTITLED "Action Against Illiteracy," the sheet outlines steps for students to take in "alleviating the burden of attending something called a TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY."

Kay Irwin, member of the group, said the sheets were being distributed to "students who are interested." She said the group consists of approximately 15 persons.

THE SHEET states that "students since the Feb. 15 decision of the Board of Directors have been dazed, angry, and ready for any work. We who distribute these strongly urge you, the non-apatetic, to adopt the action outlined below."

• "Send letters to parents and other interested relatives and friends protesting the name TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY; urge them to write their state representatives and senators asking them to vote against the name TTU. Consult the "Texas Almanac" for names and addresses, or send letters to Austin.

• "Write letters to the newspapers in our hometown, protesting the name change; ask parents, friends and relatives to do the same.

• "Write letters yourself to state senators and representatives.

• "Send letters to Governor Connally and to the Commissioners on Higher Education, and ask others to do so.

• "Urge other students to write letters opposing TEXAS TECH UNIVERSITY."

I PROTEST!!!

The cry of the wounded Model U.N. delegate rings loud through the meeting room.

"I protest the heavy-handed, under-handed, dirty, sneaky tricks of . . .!!!"

A position paper has just been presented before a bloc meeting of the Model U.N., and once again the South African delegation feels compelled to make an immediate reply to correct the statements just made.

South Africa, represented by the Tech Forensic Union, must stand by herself—or practically by herself—as she tries to defend "Apartheid and Human Relations in South Africa."

SOUTH AFRICAN PROBLEMS

Because she is the discussion topic this year, South Africa is being pondered, discussed, cussed and recussed by the other Model U.N. delegations. If South Africa is a problem for these delegations, she is even more of a problem for Alan Henry, secretary-general of the Model U.N. and the Model U.N. Steering Committee.

South Africa is in the Western bloc of nations—and the Western nations are opposed to apartheid in South Africa.

South Africa presents the Steering Committee with a rather large problem—what in the world to do with South Africa—and somebody is opposed to every proposed solution to the South African problem. Opponents to any given solution are quite vocal in their protests.

The Steering Committee decided each bloc would be allowed one position paper longer than most—South Africa immediately protested.

COMMITTEE FAVORITISM?

A position paper of this nature from the Western bloc would be opposed to South Africa's stand. South Africa was in the Western bloc. The Steering Committee was discriminating against South Africa.

So—South Africa was also allowed a long position paper. Everybody else protested!

The Western bloc was being allowed two long position papers. The other blocs were being allowed only one. The Steering Committee was discriminating in favor of the Western bloc and was pro-South Africa.

The vehement cries fell like rain on the ears of the secretary-general—and they fell from all directions.

The Steering Committee decided each bloc—and again and again—and has yet to arrive at a peaceful solution acceptable by all.

In the midst of this storm, the secretary-general stood calm and serene. He was to "pour oil on troubled waters," but in this case the oil of reason and the troubled waters of delegate feelings produced no peace.

OUTSIDE PROTESTS

The greatest protests of all came from those who are in no way connected with the Model U.N. These protests were—and are—directed against the audacity of having a model of a "subversive, one-world, Commie-dominated organization" being allowed on the Tech campus.

Protests in this category are the most fun of all. They are—whatever else they may be or may not be—varied in style if not in content.

The most original protest from this group appeared on campus recently—a short(?) mimeographed letter with a forged signature.

As the Steering Committee continues to emphasize that "the Model U.N. is an educational activity to acquaint students and observers with, not only the workings of the U.N., but, with some of the problems currently facing the nations of the world," the Model U.N. itself promises to be a "wild, wild world."

Campus Coed Gives Review

"Byron and the Edinburgh Review" will be presented Sunday by Kay Irwin, English major, as part of the seminar program sponsored by the Student Honors Council. The paper presentation is to be at 1004 Ave. X, beginning at 8:30 p.m.

Louis Irwin, director of Honors Seminar explained, "The informal seminars are an effort to de-emphasize the importance of grade-seeking in an effort to emphasize creativity in research. Anyone is welcome to attend the presentation, with audience discussion stressed. Participants do not have to be in the honors program."

Future seminars include discussions concerning witchcraft, the effects of air ionization on human behavior and linguistics, particularly Anglo-Germanic linguistics, and Southwestern history.

Irwin said, "The reports will be filed with the honors program as part of its permanent record, and we hope to have the papers printed in the spring."

Rebounding Raiders Try Porkers Today

Second place Texas Tech travels to the Ozarks today to take on an upset-minded bunch of Arkansas Razorbacks in Fayetteville, Ark.

THE RAIDERS hope to rebound from their 82-70 drubbing at the hands of first place Texas A&M in College Station Tuesday.

The task may not be an easy one despite the fact that Arkansas is only sixth in the Southwest Conference and Tech holds down the number two post.

THE PORKERS earlier lost a 60-57 decision to the league-leading Aggies after leading for most of the game, while the Raiders lost by a 12 point margin to the Aggies in the next round of action.

In fact Coach Glen Rose terms the Hogs "the best shooting team I've ever had."

BUT IF IT comes to a shootout, the Raiders will take second to no one. Tech's talented sophomore Dub Malaise is fifth in conference scoring, putting an average of 20.3 points per game through the net, and all five of Tech's starters are averaging in the double figures.

In the rebounding department, junior Harold Denney and sophomore Norman Reuther have gathered in more than 100, while the highest Porker has collected only 68 in SWC play.

DENNEY HAS collected 111 rebounds and Reuther 103 rebounds in 11 SWC games, while Porker Warren Vogel has collected 68 in the same number of games.

Coach Gene Gibson will start with his usual starting five of Malaise, 5-11, 20.3 points per game; Denney, 6-8, 17.0; Reuther, 6-4, 14.5; Tom Patty, 6-5, 13.4; and Glen Hallum, 6-5, 10.3.

PROBABLE starters for the Porkers will be Warren Vogel, 6-4, 14.1; Jim Magness, 6-6, 13.4; Ricky Sugg, 6-1, 12.2; J. D. McConnell, 6-5, 7.4; and Jim Jay, 6-1, 5.3.

Raiders' 'Winningest' Texas Cage Team

What's the winningest major college basketball team in Texas over the past 10 years?

TEXAS TECH, according to a survey made by the Cincinnati sports information director, Hod Blaney. The Red Raiders, under Polk Robison and Gene Gibson, posted a 142-101 mark and won or shared five conference titles in that period — three in the Border Conference and two in the Southwest and didn't compete for a championship during their one-season interim between leagues.

In 10 games this season where the Red Raiders were meeting an opponent they had played in the past, Texas Tech reached a series high. In an 11th contest they tied the series high. For five of the games the margin of victory was the greatest in the rivalry's history.

THERE'S ANOTHER side to that coin, however. In five of the games foes also scored the most they had tallied in their Tech series; in a sixth there was a tie for most scored. Furthermore, University of Kentucky in a 107-91 victory scored the most a foe has ever made on Texas Tech. All of the high scoring cannot be credited to the new time-out rules. The Raiders are shooting accurately (.463) enough to break their field goal accuracy mark set last year.

Tech is scoring at a clip designed to break the school point-making mark. The Raiders are averaging 85.1 points a contest, three and half a game over the mark of 81.6 set in 1954-55.

IN THE 1956 season the Raiders became the first team in NCAA history to score 100 points or more for four consecutive games.

Five Raider seniors will be playing their final week—against Rice in Lubbock Tuesday night, against Baylor in Waco Thursday night; Tom Patty, Carlsbad, N.M.; Bill Murren, Atlantic City, N.J.; Sid Wall, Dallas; Mike Farley, Lubbock; Mike Gooden, Lubbock.
