Wall Sinks Two!

By MIKE WALL
Toreador Sports Editor

Pandemonium reigned in Municipal Coliseum Tuesday night as the never-say-die Texas Tech Red Raiders pulled out a stunning win over the Southwest Conference leading Texas Aggies.

With seven seconds left on the scoreboard, reserve Royce Wollard came from the bench to score two points that tied the score at 82-82. Then Sid Wall, who has been held out of play for most of the season while recovering from a knee injury, took an intercepted A&M pass, and as time ran out, scored the winning two points.

'A FINE BUNCH OF BOYS'

Coach Gene Gibson said of the Raider team after the game, "I've never seen a finer bunch of boys." The Raiders were down at the half, 52-33, and Conference hopes seemed to dim for the Tech five.

But the Raiders came out from the dressing room after half-time and scored 19 points while the A&M crew could muster only seven points in the first five minutes of the deciding half.

In the first half, it was strictly Texas A&M as Bennie Lenox, second high scorer in the SWC going into the game, hit for 19 points while teammate John Beasley hit for 14.

RAIDERS HIT DRY SPELL

The Raiders hit a dry spell on field goals and rebounds midway through the first half and ended the period hitting only 37.5 per cent of their shots from the field and pulling in only nine rebounds.

Sophomore Dub Malaise again lead Tech scoring, hitting for 19 points. Another sophomore, Norman Reuther was runner-up in Raider total points, making 16.

LENOX LEADS AGGIES

For the Aggies, Bennie Lenox poured 30 points through the basket to lead all scorers for the night. Teammate John Beasley hit 20 to place second in the scoring race.

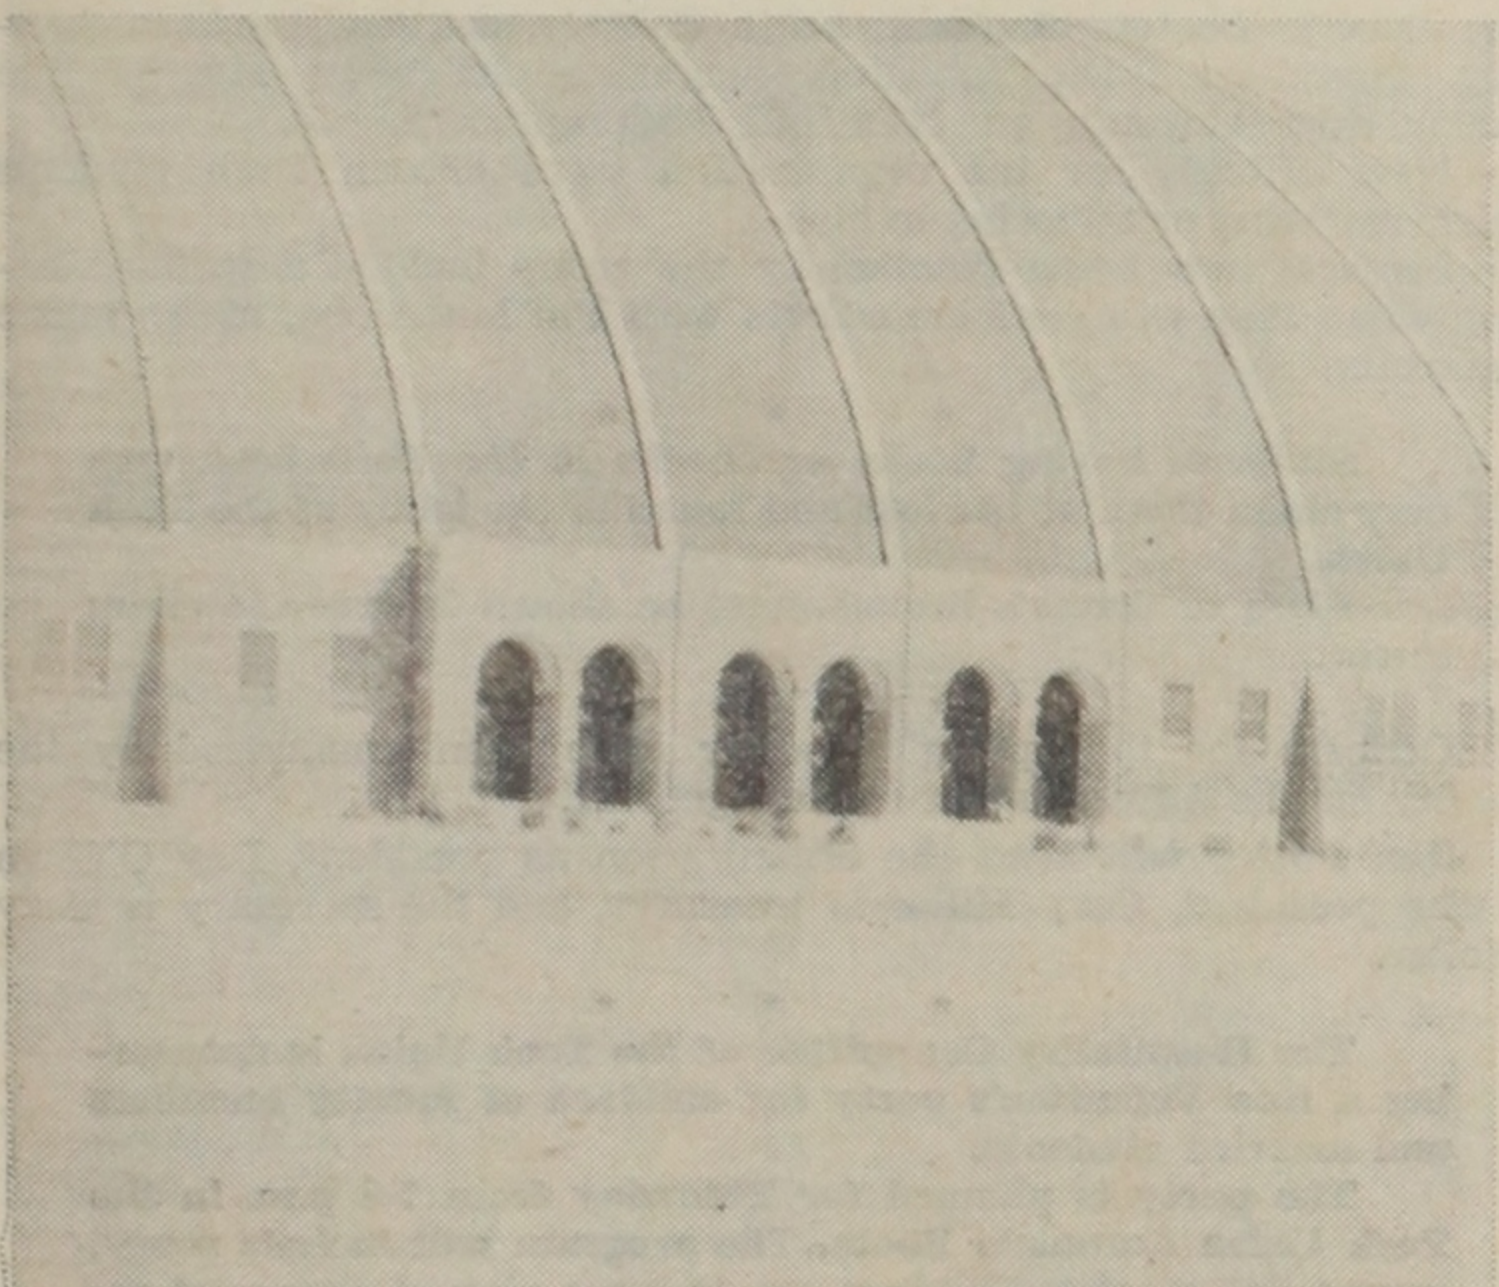

The important win pulled the Raiders into a tie for the SWC lead with the Aggies and set the stage for the second round of conference play to start. Both teams currently stand 6-1 in SWC play.

A record-setting crowd of more than 11,300 fans saw the nerve-wracking game, with approximately 1,200 viewing the game via closed circuit television in the Lubbock Auditorium.

PICADORS BLAST LCC

In the freshman game, Charlie Lynch's Picadors rebounded from last week's loss to San Angelo College by blasting Lubbock Christian College, 89-68.

Bob Glover was again high point man for both teams, with 26 points.

'Till 4 p.m.

'Till 5 p.m.

BUT IT WAS WORTH IT—Techsans took no chances on finding seats to watch the Tech-A&M game Tuesday night. A lone freshman took up his vigil at 1 p.m., and by 4 p.m. many students had taken seats in the Coliseum. By 5 p.m., lines had begun to form outside the Coliseum doors. For the benefit of those who didn't make it in time, closed circuit television was put into operation in the Auditorium. An 18 by 20 ft. screen was ordered from Dallas for use in showing the ball game. —Staff Photo

*'If You
Just Can't Lick Em...'*

Charles Clair, Lubbock sophomore, got tired of waiting around for Tech's name to be changed. Monday he did something about it.

He marched down to the County Courthouse, filed an assumed name certificate, and started his own school — Texas State University.

"It'll be a radio-T.V. school," Clair said Tuesday afternoon. "So far I have only one student, but I won't really get into operation until this summer."

He says he didn't file the certificate to prevent Tech from possibly using the name in the future—he just likes the name and wants to use it for his school.

"I understand that Tech has the perfect legal right to use the name if they want to."

According to a local attorney, Clair's action could not exclude Tech from adopting the name in the future. The assumed name certificate simply keeps a record for the public's benefit of the names of the person or persons operating a business.

The deputy clerk who made the transaction said Clair did not tell her why he wanted the certificate, but said she was almost certain at the time that "he wasn't going to open a business under the name "Texas State University."

The attorney called the certificate an "absolutely worthless thing" as far as exclusive rights are concerned.

Clair seems confident that his school will be a success.

"I've been thinking about it for a long time."

KLBK Broadcasts In Tech Newsroom

Dr. R. C. Goodwin Tuesday approved a five-minute campus news highlights program to be broadcast from the Toreador newsroom.

Beginning Monday Nicky Redinger, Olton senior, will give campus news in a capsule from 6 to 6:05 p.m. Monday through Friday on KLBK Radio 1340.

Other changes accompany the news program.

Mike Read was recently appointed feature editor, a new staff position replacing the former society editor.

Thieves Raid Cars Near Wells Dorm

Thieves have been hard at work in the Wells Hall parking lot according to the reports at the Traffic Security office. Two thefts totaling $136.95 were reported to the office last week.

James Maytun, 341 Wells, reported the theft of a transistor tachometer, a gear shift knob and a chrome air cleaner valued at $91.95.

Buddy Allen, 204 Wells, reported the loss of a sideguard window from an MGA valued at $45.

When asked about the thefts on the Tech Campus this year, Chief Daniels, Traffic Security Department head, reported that statistics showed a decline of 24 fewer thefts than at this time last year. Chief Daniels said the decline was due to the fact that more people are being used this year in patrolling the campus. Also, a German Shepherd is being used for the first time. He explained that with the dog more area can be covered in a shorter time.

Tech Hosts Ag Meet On Chemical Values

"The Necessity for Agriculture Chemical Use" is the theme for the eleventh annual Agricultural Chemicals Conference slated Thursday and Friday on the Tech campus.

This year's conference, sponsored by the West Texas and Lubbock Chambers of Commerce and Texas Tech with Texas A&M University, will emphasize the economics involved in using agricultural chemicals.

For Chemical Dealers

The conference, planned primarily for agricultural chemical dealers, distributors, processors and manufacturers, is open to agricultural leaders and producers and anyone interested in chemicals, their distribution and use. There will be a $3 registration fee.

Registration for the two-day conference is set for 8:30 a.m. Thursday in the Tech Union. The program will begin at 9 a.m. with Lee York, senior vice-president of Lubbock's First National Bank, serving as morning chairman. Dr. R. C. Goodwin, Tech president, will welcome the delegates.

Discussions And Panels

E. D. Burgess, Director of Agricultural Research Service of the Plant Pest Control Department, United States Department of Agriculture, will speak on "The Necessity for Use of Agricultural Chemicals." Assistant Texas Commissioner of Agriculture, Charles

Chapman, will then discuss "Herbicides—Their Lawful Use."

Following these talks, a panel of agricultural chemical experts will discuss "The Economic Use and/or Misuse of Agricultural Chemicals." A 20-minute question and answer period is scheduled at the end of this session.

Soil Fertility Topic

The afternoon program, planned by the South Plains Soil Fertility Committee, will be devoted to soil fertility. At the close of the discussions, Arnold Neumann, president of the committee, will make a report.

Dr. Andrew Downie, representative of the Holly Sugar Corp. of Colorado, will speak on "Commercial Fertilizers in Sugar Beet Agriculture." Following Dr. Downie will be a discussion on results of fertilizer tests taken on the South Plains in 1963 by Harvey J. Walker, agronomist for the South Plains Research and Extension Center. The afternoon program will adjourn with a panel discussion on fertilizers, moderated by Ed Wilkes, farm director of KFYO.

The Friday session begins at 8:30 a.m. and will cover "Entomological Developments and Capital Investments in Agricultural Chemicals."

MUN Films

Will Present

African Side

Two 30-minute films presenting the South African side of the apartheid question will be shown in Model U.N. bloc meetings today and Thursday.

The films, obtained from the South African Information Agency in New York City, will balance presentation of material to model U.N. delegations on the discussion topic, "Human Relations and Apartheid in South Africa."

The titles of the two films are "Workshop of a Continent" and "Impressions of Another Land." Both are favorable to the South African position.

These films will be shown at 7 p.m. both days in the Tech Union to Model U.N. delegates.

Newman Group Names Top Member Of Year

The "Newmanite of the Year" award went to Sam Burt, junior engineering major from Nazareth, at the close of the recent Texoma Province Convention of the National Newman Federation.

The three-day weekend convention at Lubbock's Pioneer Hotel also ended with the honoring of two other Techsans, Mike Malley, president of the Tech Newman Club, and Fr. William Hanly, chaplain.

Malley was named to the Club Presidents' Advisory Council of the National Executive Committee. Fr. Hanly was named "Chaplain of the Year" for the second consecutive time.

Tech served as the host school for the convention which includes Oklahoma and northern Texas in its province. Delegates were from North Texas State University, Southern Methodist University, Tarleton State College, Oklahoma State University, Oklahoma College for Women, Texas Woman's University, West Texas State University, Odessa Junior College, Hardin-Simmons University, South Plains College, McMurry College and Tech.

Seminar Sets Engineer Code

The Civil Engineering Department presented a Seminar recently to acquaint local engineers and architects with the provisions of the current building code requirements for reinforced concrete.

The new code represents the most recent opinions of experts in the use of reinforced concrete as adopted by the American Concrete Institute.

Because of the great differences between the new code and the previous one, the Portland Cement Association cooperated with the Civil Engineering Department in the seminar.

Approximately 25 practicing and 15 student engineers participated according to Dr. Keith Marmion, Department head.

Letters To Editor

Student Says Tech Inferior To UT

(Editor's note: THE DAILY TOREADOR received this letter Tuesday from a student at the University of Texas.)

Dear Techsan:
I wanted to make sure that you Tech people know how the students at the University of Texas feel about Texas Tech . . . and this clipping from today's Daily Texan (the sports column cited in

Smoking Still Hot As Issue

WASHINGTON (AP) — The Commerce Department is getting caught in cross fires from government and industry in the hullaballoo over cigarette smoking.

"We don't even breathe sideways," Secretary of Commerce Luther H. Hodges said at a news conference Tuesday.

Hodges, who doesn't smoke, was trying to get across the idea that the department tries to be as objective as possible in issuing forecasts each year on various industries.

The department's recent review and outlook on the tobacco industry said a slight increase in sales was expected in 1964.

However, on closer examination, the department's figures actually add up to a slight decrease in domestic consumption of cigarettes.

While the report said the value of tobacco products produced this year would increase a million dollars over last year, it also predicted an increase of more than $4 million in exports. Thus, if the increase in exports were subtracted from the total, there actually would be a slight decrease in the domestic consumption of tobacco products. The value of cigarette shipments increased $110 million in 1963.

This could mean also that there would be a considerable drop in the number of cigarettes smoked per person. The per capita figure last year was slightly more than 200 packs for every person over 15 years of age.

Monday's Toreador) seems to be indicative of that feeling.

We all wondered on New Year's day how Tech, of all schools, managed to win the SWC sportsmanship award, but now it is very clear that the award itself is a mere farse (sic). And it was undoubtedly deled out to Tech since you hadn't won anything to speak of all year long.

Unfortunately, Lubbock is my hometown, and therefore I am well acquainted with the kind of support Tech students and Lubbockites give to the Red Raiders. Without exception, it is constantly characterized by rudeness, discourtesies to opponents and their fans, and a continual barrage of ice, cups and obscenities upon opponents and referees.

Spirit is a good thing for a school to have, but it is not spirit that fills up the Lubbock Coliseum with such fans as Tech has. Rather, it is envy, jealousy, revenge, and pure rudeness that draws the mobs and incites their "spirit" at Texas Tech.

One could be very optimistic and say that it is a shame a minority at Tech are (sic) scarring the good intentions of the majority. However it seems to be the tradition at Tech to be discourteous.

Real competitive spirit, such as that at the University of Texas, is based on pride in a winning tradition, confidence that UT is the best school in the SWC in more ways than just athletics, desire, and a certain "Esprit De Corps" that comes from being a part of the University's colorful history.

Most of this Tech doesn't have, but rudeness and envy won't get it for you either.

You can be sure that when the Raiders come to Austin without their mob, they are going to get their tails whipped.

Yours Truly, James Benson
(EDITOR'S NOTE: Mr. Benson, I won't bother to answer your letter. I think the students and exes of Texas Tech will do it for me.)

JUST WONDERING

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following letter was sent to Royal Furgeson, Student Council president, and to the Toreador recently after the Council's ruling on seat saving.)

Dear Mr. Furgeson:

The Council members' interest in cleaning up the mess of seat saving is a credit to your organization. You should be congratulated for taking a definite stand on an issue that involves many students.

Now, one question remains unsolved to most students. Why do the Saddle Tramps occupy the best seats in the coliseum? Their value to the student body is being measured by all students who cannot occupy those seats.

Most students would probably agree that the Saddle Tramps do a tremendous job for Texas Tech. I for one, feel they do an outstanding job. But could not their position be strengthened if they did not reserve the best student seats in the coliseum? This irritates many students who must sit elsewhere, even if they arrive early.

If the Tramps must sit together as a group (and I think they should) why not put them in the area where they congregate to usher the Red Raiders onto the floor?

If some type of clarifying statement could be made, Tech students would be most appreciative.

Sincerely submitted, Floyd Evans
