CHRISTIAN SCIENCE SOCIETY
Services 11 a. m. Sunday, Settles Hotel, Room 1.
"Mind" is the subject of the Lesson-Sermon which will be read in all Churches of Christ, Scientist on Sunday, August 23.
The Golden Text is: "Great is our Lord, and of great power: his understanding is infinite" (Psalms 147:5).
Among the citations which comprise the Lesson-Sermon is the following from the Bible: "Now the God of patience and consolation grant you to be likeminded one toward another according to Christ Jesus: That ye may with one mind and one mouth glorify God, even the Father of our Lord Jesus Christ" (Romans 15:5,6).

The Lesson-Sermon includes also the following passage from the Christian Science textbook, "Science and Health with Key to the Scriptures" by Mary Baker Eddy: "It should be thoroughly understood that all men have one Mind, one God and Father, one Life, Truth, and Love. Mankind will become perfect in proportion as this fact becomes apparent, war will cease and the true brotherhood of man will be established." (Page 467).

A Simple Crocheted Blouse

By RUTH ORR
Pattern No. 344

Our meandering window-shopper needed a dressy blouse—one that she could wear with her best suit on Sundays, and for tea and bridge during the week. She scurried around for a long time until she came upon this one and we agree that it is all that she could wish. It is crocheted in mercerized knitting and crocheted cotton that has a nice silky sheen to it, and the lacy pattern of the work is one that is finished in jig time. At the top, the yoke is done in a simple box pattern while the neck is finished with a band of the motif of the lacy pattern. You'll find it inexpensive to make, too. The pattern gives you stitch-by-stitch directions for each of five sizes: 12, 14, 16, 18 and 20 years.

The pattern envelope contains complete, easy-to-understand illustrated directions, with diagrams to aid you; also what crochet hook and what material and how much you will need.
To obtain this pattern send for No. 344 and enclose 10 cents in stamps or coin (coin preferred) to cover service and postage. Address Big Spring Herald, Needlework Dept., P. O. Box 200, Station D, New York, N. Y.

Howard Co. Man Is 88 Years Old

W. C. Brooks, who lives 11 miles northeast of Big Spring, celebrated his 88th birthday recently with a supper at his home where he has spent the past 20 years. For the past 18 years he has celebrated his birthday with a similar supper in presence of children and grandchildren.
His grandson, Hoyle Nix and Mrs. Nix, presented him with the birthday cake bearing 88 candles.
In addition to Mr. and Mrs. Brooks, present were: Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Warren and sons, Paul and Lorin, Big Spring; Mr. and Mrs. J. L. Nix and sons, Ben and Hoyle; Mrs. N. G. Watkins and sons, Billie Norman and Ebbie Lynn, Alice; Mr. and Mrs. K. Brooks and Allen, Richard; and a nephew, Vinnie Hughes and his wife, Krott.
Falcons Avoid Women
OROVILLE, Cal. (UP)—C. W. Kroesing and daughter, Jimmy, who have undertaken to revive the ancient sport of falconry, have made a discovery about falcons. They do not like women and won't return to them. Hence, "Jimmy" wears trousers when she is training the birds.

It takes a lot of shopping around and a lot of reading of newspaper advertisements to keep up with the grocery bargains, but bargain electricity is always on hand to keep food fresh in your electric refrigerator or to do any number of jobs around the house.
Your electricity is still the biggest bargain in the home, for its cost is always low when measured by the things it does. Thrifty housewives know that electricity is one of the smallest items of household expense.

U. S. FIGURES TO THE LAST OUNCE IN NEW 35,000-TON WARSHIPS, SOON TO BE BUILT

WASHINGTON, Aug. 21 (UP)—Did you ever try to weigh a battleship?

The one known fact concerning the two battleships to be built by the United States navy, beginning soon after Jan. 1, is that they will be of precisely 35,000 tons displacement.

That tonnage figure means, navy officers explain, that when the battleship is launched and placed in commission, loaded down with all the mechanical gads of a modern fighting ship must have, it will displace the equivalent of 35,000 tons of water, and also weigh that number of tons of 2,240 pounds each.

Count All Weights

The steel framework and plates, engines, boilers, armor, guns, wires, electric lights, kitchen equipment—everything that goes into the manufacture of a battleship—is weighed, or its weight known, while the warship of the future is still nothing more than a sketch on a blueprint.

The standard displacement of 35,000 tons—permitted by the London naval pact—includes everything except extra water for the boilers and fuel.

Battleship weight is now such a fine source, officers add, that the number of officers and crew to be carried is set in advance and 1,000 pounds each estimated for every man's weight, clothes, baggage, and his proportion of food and water carried.

So precise is that weighing-in, the navy's experts declared, that if it were possible to hoist the completed battleship on a gigantic scale it would balance the pointer at 35,000 tons.

Large by Necessity

Why 35,000 tons?

The United States has no big naval bases scattered around the world—as Great Britain and other nations have—and it would therefore be impossible for an American battleship to put into port for fuel, water, food or other supplies in an emergency.

To overcome that handicap the American navy adopted the rule long ago to build its battleships so that they would be, as far as possible, self-sustaining.

Battleships are also "the backbone of the fleet" and must be capable of standing up against the warships of any other nation in an emergency. Other nations have battleships with 16-inch guns that hurl gigantic shells 20 miles or more, and an American battleship must, therefore, carry armor of a thickness to protect it against enemy shells of that calibre.

To carry the enormous weight of such armor the ships must be big and sturdy. Vessels of 35,000 tons, officers say, are of the size—and therefore of the weight—to meet the American idea of an efficient battleship.

The biggest American battleships at the present time are the New Mexico and Idaho (33,400 tons).

Japanese Plans

The British navy's Hood—a battle-cruiser—boasts 42,100 tons, while nine of the British battleships proper are 31,000 tons and over.

The British have announced that, immediately after expiration of existing treaties on Jan. 1, they will begin construction of two new 35,000-ton battleships.

The Japanese navy's pride—Mutsu and Nagato—are of 32,720 tons, while their seven other battleships are in the 29,000-ton category.

Japan's plans to build four new ships—runners to range from 40,000 to 30,000 tons—are expected to be announced officially after Jan. 1.

Forest Work Is Launched In East Texas

8,000 Acres, Once Covered With Pines, Will Be Re-Planted

JASPER, Aug. 21 (UP)—The federal government plans to revert this sandy, rolling country to the growth of stately pines.

Within little more than a quarter of a century lumbermen sprawled their logging lines through the pine woods in this section and denuded it of virgin forests.

Rolling hills that once bore 100-foot pines now are bald, sandy hummocks, dotted with occasional scraggy saplings. Foresters call them part of "Dixie's No-Man's-Land."

Lorenzo Jared, ranger for the U. S. forestry service, announced that the government has ordered the fencing of 8,000 acres in the Angelina national forest for protection of seedlings.

Jared said 15,000,000 pines will be planted in the Angelina and Sabine national forests next fall, 8,000,000 of which will be placed in the latter.

The Angelina fence will prevent animals from uprooting young trees and seedlings, Jared said. Fencing already has been completed on a 10,000-acre tract in the forest.

Enclosed areas in the national forests will be used as preserves for wild life, as a part of a south-wide program, according to Joseph C. Kircher, Atlanta, Ga., southern regional forester.

Kircher said 3,650,000 young trees have been planted in the Angelina and Sabine units and in the Sam Houston and David Crockett national forests of Texas. The work was done by CCC enrollees.

In addition, he said, southern CCC workers have gathered 48,000,000 seedlings and shipped them to the Stuart nursery in the Klatschie national forest near Alexandria, La. for planting.

Roads are being constructed in the Texas national forests preparatory for replanting operations which will be done by the Civilian Conservation corps. Headquarters have been established 24 miles west of Jasper in the Angelina unit, according to Jared.

Several CCC units will be transferred to this area when replanting begins.

Talk Of 1940 Labor Party Discounted

Man 'ifs' Ahead For Organization Of Political Group

By BYRON PRICE
(Chief of AP Bureau, Washington)

Talk of an independent labor party in 1940 is interesting, but there is a large dispute as to its importance.

The "ifs" are many and imposing, and four years is a long time under present changing conditions. Much is certain to depend on what happens within the older parties with respect to labor, and what happens in the country generally with respect to recovery.

If Mr. Roosevelt wins this year, if he recommends a successor in 1940, and if those labor leaders who now speak of a new party still feel as strongly disposed toward the Roosevelt policies as they now feel, where will they be standing for an independent labor candidate?

If Mr. Landon wins, if his policies as president are acceptable to the rank and file of labor, and if he finds himself engaged four years hence in a desperate battle for reelection, will any substantial segment of the labor vote withdraw to experiment with a new venture of its own?

If the depression ends, and 1940 finds the country in another era of ample employment opportunity and high wages, is labor likely to jump overboard politically?

Disorganization Handicap

These questionings could be prolonged indefinitely without exhausting all of the possible combinations of circumstance which might affect 1940.

There are, however, several aspects of the case which do not involve conjecture. Certain solid facts are inescapable.

The first of these is that maximum results scarcely could be expected of a labor party unless labor were united behind it. Today labor is anything but united. A very large percentage is unorganized, and manifestly out of sympathy with that percentage which is organized. And the organized section is split in the bitterest schism in its history.

The Washington meeting at which the idea of a 1940 independent party was most prominently projected was a meeting of one part of the organized part of labor. It was a conference of labor's non-partisan league, which is pledged to the reelection of President Roosevelt. Its leadership was made up largely, but not entirely, of union officials who had just been suspended by the American Federation of Labor.

While this meeting was in progress, another union official was charged of a labor committee designed to promote the candidacy of Governor Landon, and officials of the federation itself were retreating an attitude of neutrality.

Failed In Past

Another solid fact is that no party based on the interests of a single class—even when that class was united—has ever gone far or lived long in American political history.

Sensing this, perhaps, most of the leaders at the Washington conference spoke of a "liberal" party, rather than a "labor" party. But the inference was very plain that such a party would be organized in the interest of labor, and would be dominated by labor. The distinction, as it was outlined by the labor leaders themselves, was one of name rather than purpose.

If the definition were expanded, however, new uncertainties would arise. Is it to be supposed that a new "liberal" party, organized by labor, could enlist and dominate such existing groups as the farmer-labor party, the La Follette progressive party, and the Lenke-Coughlin-Townsend union party?

Which leads up to perhaps the solidest fact of all: that the organization of an effective political party always has proved exceedingly difficult under the most favorable of conditions, and always has failed when the elements involved were at loggerheads among themselves.

Theodore Roosevelt tried it and failed. The elder Robert M. La Follette tried it and failed, even though he had the endorsement of the federation of labor. John L. Lewis and his colleagues are strong men, indeed, if they can try it and succeed.

Gen. Elita Dodge accompanied home her grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Griffiths, and aunt and uncle, Mr. and Mrs. S. M. Griffiths, when they returned to Venus following a recent visit to Mr. and Mrs. J. P. Dodge and family.

ERNEST O. THOMPSON
For Re-Election As RAILROAD COMMISSIONER

An Answer To Slander!

A statement by members of the "Hot Oil" Investigating Committee of the House of Representatives of the Texas Legislature, issued August 7th, 1936:

"For selfish reasons and in an effort to mislead the public, certain gentlemen, aided and abetted by sinister interests and individuals notoriously connected with the 'hot oil racket'  have made a contemptible, unwarranted and false attack upon the integrity and honesty of Col. Ernest O. Thompson, chairman of the Railroad Commission of Texas, by the circulation of printed matter that does not give the true facts, and by a whispering campaign of the lowest order.

"We have made a most careful and complete examination of all records and details pertaining to Col. Thompson's personal and official business affairs and acts ***

"WE DID NOT FIND THE SLIGHTEST EVIDENCE THAT WOULD REFLECT IN ANY MANNER UPON THE INTEGRITY AND HONESTY OF COL. THOMPSON, EITHER IN HIS PERSONAL BUSINESS OF OFFICIAL ACTS."

ERNEST O. THOMPSON

RAILROAD COMMISSIONER

(Political Advertisement, Paid for by Ernest O. Thompson Club, Sam Goldman, Chairman)

What Will YOUR Answer Be?

Here Is The ONLY Issue

"The real issue of this campaign is whether the Railroad Commission shall continue to administer and enforce the law, fairly and to all alike, for the benefit of the consumer and the general public; or whether it shall become the tool and instrument of a small group of law violators who wish to operate it for their special profit and benefit."—From Ernest O. Thompson's address, Waco, August 8, 1936.

YOUR Interest At Stake

"I take pride in the fact that in this field of regulation your Commission has earned a reputation of fairness. Today, six million consumers look to the Commission to safeguard their rights in the making of rates. Tonight, I sound the watchword of this campaign, that so long as I am a member of this commission, the consumers' interest and the consumers' right is and shall be the primary concern of the Railroad Commission."—Ernest Thompson's Waco address.

Who Opposes Thompson?

Who is it that is making this fight on the re-election of Ernest O. Thompson, spending huge sums of money to back an untried, unknown, and inexperienced candidate? Here is the answer:

"There were small groups in Texas who were running hot oil in defiance of the law, who were illegally operating refineries and making millions of dollars out of it at the expense of the oil industry and the people of Texas . . . Through my efforts, that was ended in a lawful manner; and that small group of operators, chagrined and made angry when their source of illegal gain had been cut off, dedicated themselves to defeat me as a member of the Railroad Commission if it was within their power to do so. As an opening gun they started a whispering campaign of vilification and abuse."—Ernest Thompson's Waco address.

marks so that when they pitched camp that night the guides could find no water.

Dawn found the company in saddle again. All day they rode in the blazing sun, two men being sun-struck. The captain detailed a sergeant and a few men to take care of the stricken and follow as soon as able.

Caftily aware that they were being trailed, the Indians scattered so that the soldiers were unable to follow the main trail in the sand. Knowing that he was not lost, Capt. Nolan sent out his guide on a fresh mount to find water somewhere in the plains country protected only by knobs of crackling buffalo grass, drooping mesquite and shin oak. Desperate, the guide and party of eight men spread out and were not seen again for ten days.

Next morning Capt. Nolan, probably in northeastern Terry or southeastern Hockley county, changed his northwesterly course to one in a northwesterly direction. With the sun growing more intense, he conferred with his lieutenant and decided to fall back on Double Lake. This decision was rashly reached after they had searched to near where the present site of Lubbock.

helplessness must have hovered over the lieutenant as he took his pen in hand on July 29 and wrote: "This, our fourth day without water, was dreadful. A picture of the infernal regions, and the rich man begging for a drop of water to cool his tongue, could not have been more fully portrayed as the agony than it was to us during the eventful day.

Sighted Rain
"Men gasping in death around us; horses falling dead to the right and left; the crazed survivors of our men fighting their neighbors for the blood of horses as the animals' throats were cut. Prayers, curses and howls of anguish intermingled. There was rain, apparently in the far away distance, yet never a drop for us."

When the moon came up that night, the men plodded wearily to the southeast, dragging their tortured and swollen feet from one foot of mocking dust to another.

Only an active imagination could picture the facial expressions of the men when, at 3 a. m. on July 30th, Capt. Nolan reined his mount and looked down upon a wagon trail. Eagerly, he scanned the country about him, and in a hoarse voice, croaked that he knew they were now only about five miles from Double Lake.

By 5 a. m. part of the troop's remnant had stumbled to the lakes to find six of the party already there. Capt. Nolan sent the men back with canteens after the stragglers in his group of 18.

Four Men Lost
Still their fight for life was not over. Men gulped at the water, but promptly vomited every drop they drank. They tried to eat moistened food, but their wracked systems revolted. Finally, they found that hot, black coffee would stay down.

Several days later news came from the base camp that 14 of the party had made their way back to Horden county. Thus, out of a group of 40 soldiers and 21 civilians, total loss was four soldiers, one civilian, 23 horses and four mules.

The tragic experience of the troop produced such a repercussion in Washington that orders were sent forbidding any further expeditions after Indians on the stacked plains.

No Governor's Contest; State Vote To Be Light

AUSTIN, Aug. 21 (AP)—For the first time in 18 years, Texas will have a run-off primary election Saturday with no race for governor or United States senator to be decided.

Contests for those offices and all others except two for which a state-wide vote is cast were settled in the first democratic primary July 25 when 1,071,572 ballots tumbled into boxes for a record.

Interest which blazed in campaigns of other years was absent, and predictions were heard freely that the vote would not exceed 800,000. Absentee balloting was light, and several counties planned no elections.

In one state contest, Frank Morris, of Dallas, speaking from a hospital bed, denounced official acts of Ernest O. Thompson, former army colonel running for re-election to the railroad commission. Mrs. Morris was on the stump.

Thompson led Morris by more than 250,000 votes in the first primary, but failed by a few thousand to obtain a majority over all his four opponents.

Terrell vs. McDonald
In the other state race, George B. Terrell, former congressman, was seeking to unseat J. E. McDonald, running for another term as commissioner of agriculture. Terrell also led in the initial pri-

GENERAL ELECTION BALLOT IN TEXAS TO BE LARGE ONE

AUSTIN, Aug. 21 (AP)—Marlin E. Sandlin, assistant secretary of state, said today the general election ballot in Texas in November apparently would be larger than the average newspaper page.

Six parties have announced they would have candidates, which would require six columns. One column would be left blank for "writings" and in counties in which independent candidates filed the ballot would be eight columns wide. The ballot columns would be nearly 20 per cent wider than a newspaper column.

The ballot size will be enlarged by the printing at the bottom of six proposed constitutional amendments.

The democratic party's nominees will be placed in the first column on the left because the party polled the largest number of votes in the last general election. Republicans will be in the second column.

Other parties which had filed electors or announced their intention of doing so were the union, prohibitionist, socialist and communist organizations.
