Club Woman Utilizes Old Barn Lumber To Make Modern Closet

Home Demonstration club work is proving itself more beneficial each year if one can judge from the work done by the club women the past year. With very little to work with and on a very low scale these women have turned out attractive dresses, bright, airy rooms, closets of convenience and prize winning yards. Also in the pantries of these homes are shelves of food that have been canned under the direction of a club demonstrator.

The following is the account of Mrs. H. C. McClain of the Knott club on her work the past year:

"In the spring of 1935 I joined the Knott Home Demonstration club. For several months I attended the meetings regularly but not actively. In the fall I was elected wardrobe demonstrator. At first it didn't mean much to me. I began to receive literature and soon became interested in my work. Having always done most of my family sewing I soon began to sew for my neighbors. I learned much on finishing garments from a bulletin called "Finishes For Every Fancy."

"My closet was most inconvenient. There were no shelves and no doors. From old lumber taken from the inside of an old barn I made my improvements. I put a large shelf over the bar where I hung my husband's and my clothes. On this shelf I put bags on one side and sheets and spreads on the other. I put a narrow shelf across one side to place hats on. Beneath this shelf I made a shelf for shoe polish, cleaner and clothes brush. I fixed a bar down low enough for my six year old daughter, and put two small shelves between the chimney and north wall. On one of these I put pillow cases and dresser scarfs. The lower one, which has always been in the closet and the upper one are used to store things not frequently used. I made my door from flooring removed from this same barn. At a cost of 92c I made my improvements. Two quarts of paint at 44c a quart and a nickle's worth of finishing nails were my only expenses. I had some hinges on hand that I hung my door with.

"My small daughter was as thrilled as though we had added something very nice to the home, which, I think, we have."

LIQUOR CANNOT STAND THE LIGHT OF TRUTH

A SHAMELESS DESECRATION

The liquor traffic continues to violate every sense of propriety and decency in its greedy fight for profit. Few incidents in recent years have been more shocking than the use of Lincoln's Gettysburg Address in a nation-wide broadcast advertising a certain brand of beer. Representative Francis D. Cullen was fully justified in his denunciation of this incident. In a letter to Mr. Anning E. Frall of the Federal Communications Commission the representative accuses the man in charge of the broadcast with mutilating the address, paraphrasing it to extol the alleged merits of alcohol and defiling a sacred classic with misplaced and vulgar comedy. "Cannot the power to withhold a license be used some way so that this shameless performance will not be repeated?" he asked.

It might be thought that with the door barely closed upon National Prohibition the liquor traffic would show some restraint. It is showing none. A rising tide of indignation is the direct result of the prevalent advertising intended to increase the use of liquors by women and young people.

It requires no prophet to predict the state of affairs in America within a few short years if this commercialized debauchery of the people is not stopped. Bringing the women of the nation within the sphere of influence of the liquor traffic will alone double the liquor bill, double drink-caused delinquency and delinquency, double the alcoholism rate, double the police problem, and once doubled these social calamities will be supported by a deeply-rooted narcotic appetite throughout the population. Meanwhile, traffics in other vices are daily increasing their menaces. The thin crust of civilization has been broken by the underworld, which is surging up to a new influence and power.

There is an alternative and one only to prohibition, and that is a liquor traffic stripped of all privileges of trade protection and of the incentive involved in private profit. Whether this alternative would prove acceptable to the American people, no one knows. It is not being tried. Meanwhile, present indefensible policies insure the return of Federal Prohibition.—Deets Pickett, Sec. Board of Temperance, Prohibition and Public Morals, M. E. Church.—(Submitted by the local W.C.T.U.)

HE SHOULD WIN 'HANDS DOWN'

The failure of his opponents to find any real issues upon which to combat Governor James V. Allred in his campaign for reelection seems to The Herald to be sound argument for the retention of the governor. If opponents can find no more "fault" than to accuse Allred of "ribbon-cutting" and to assail an old-age assistance program which seems to be functioning satisfactorily, there is not much basis of real opposition.

The Herald thinks he should be given a second term.

When he first went into office, he faced a hostile legislature, and considering that handicap he has done much.

He presented a tax program that in most details was fair and just. The legislature turned it down and he says he will present it again. It is sufficient to pay the pensions and possibly to relieve other tax burdens. It is far better than any of the "single-shot" tax plans of his opponents.

The State's financial condition is good and has improved under Allred. We do not mean to say that a thorough revision of fiscal affairs is not needed. We repeat that it is but Governor Allred is not responsible for our present antiquated system of finances. Texas is financially sound, however, and the governor has done well in keeping it so.

His influence defeated the sales tax. His good offices obtained the passage of a driver's license law that had languished session after session in the legislature. He approved the law setting up parole boards in each county to keep young men out of prison wherever possible. He set up a merit system of clemency for convicts.

He obtained the establishment of the state safety commission which welds all the law enforcing agencies of the State into one body and which, if properly operated, will mean increased efficiency.

He has rewarded his friends with office, but he has steered clear of political hacks and, fortunately for the state, his friends are largely clean and capable young men.

He advocated old age pensions before the passage of the constitutional amendment and the law the legislature passed is a good one and one of the most liberal in the nation.

The governor is well beloved by his people. No one need be surprised if he wins hands down on July 25. He should.

★ Man About Manhattan ★ By George Tucker

NEW YORK — Gladys Loyd, who is Mrs. Edward G. Robinson in real life, was a business manager for several famous authors long before fame rewarded the Robinson histrionics. As a matter of fact, he wasn't well at all until he impersonated Al Capone in a play about six years ago. After that "tough" assignments came readily and eventually the movies got him. Now rapidly nearing the "millionaire" class, he ascribes his success to the "menace" in his face. But, the financial sagacity of his wife hasn't exactly been a hindrance.

Standing on Broadway at 47th street the other night, minding my own business, I was pleasantly startled to observe the youngest of the Bennett sisters, Joan, go by. The pretty, honey-haired thing was just off the boat (the Queen Mary, no less) and she was wearing a lovely gown of some unknown (to me) design. But the soft blue of it chimed in so prettily with her hair and eyes that you thought for a moment you must be witnessing a scene from a movie. Ladies and gentlemen, Miss Bennett has never appeared lovelier in any picture than she is in real life.

Now is the time of year when the river police are on the alert for "pirates" in distress. These are the kids who, imbued with the spirit of Captain Kidd, Jean Lafitte and other corsairs, build themselves rafts or boats and go adventuring on the nearby waters. The danger is that these rafts are seldom substantially built and almost never expertly manned. Caught by the dangerous currents of Hell Gate, there is apt to be a tragedy unless the police, who use fast, small motor boats, are able to reach them in time. It's an exciting business—this being a pirate—but it's more exciting if the river police catch you. They give you a real talking-to.

Jane Cowl, who takes acting seriously, keeps one thing in mind, and one thing only, when reading a new part. She weighs it against previous roles and decides whether her public would like to see her in such a characterization. Whether she admires the part herself is something she never allows to influence her.

Tourists making their first ocean voyage are often startled when, upon boarding liners in Manhattan, they are handed a paper marked "New York Police Department."

But they needn't be. This is a warning against card sharks who prey on the uninitiated and fleece the unwary out of their coin. Almost every large liner unwittingly lists such a shark among its passengers—despite the vigilance of the police. Usually they are affable fellows with an easy approach, a friendly line of chatter, and an infectious personality. You know, a friendly chat on deck, a drink at the bar.

Another of those socially-minded matrons who thrills to the presence of celebrities at her parties, made the error of inviting two song-writers recently. They went well armed. When the request came, as they knew it would, for a display of their talent, they agreed with enthusiasm and immedi-

The Daily Washington Merry-Go-Round

By DREW FAARSON and ROBERT S. ALLEN

This is the fifth of a series of sketches of the Roosevelt family. The next, on Franklin D. Jr., will follow next week.

WASHINGTON—The trials and tribulations of Elliott Roosevelt perhaps come chiefly from his apparent necessity for an annual income of around $15,000.

At the age of 25 this is not an easy figure to hit. In fact, about the only way to hit it is by having an assured independent income, or by cashing in on family prestige—and Elliott has no independent income.

This much can be said for him, however. Though sometimes he has been very clumsy about it, he has refrained to a far greater degree than his elder brother from cashing in on the family name. Jimmy is the high-powered, highly polished go-getter type. Elliott is temperamental, tumultuous, mercurial. But his economic motives are on a slightly higher though less successful plane.

Elliott started being the black sheep of the family when he was in Groton, traditional school of the Roosevelt family. He didn't get along very well there, and transferred to a preparatory school at Princeton. He graduated at the age of 19, just two years before the campaign which was to elect his father president of the United States.

Rebellious at the family and determined to make his own living, Elliott launched out with a New York advertising agency, later setting up his own firm of Kelly, Nason and Roosevelt, and still again transferring to the Paul Cornell agency.

At that time Elliott was 30 years old, and naive enough to think he was being hired for his ability, not for his father's position as governor of New York.

He did not remain naive long, however. It became all too apparent that the real reason large and long experienced companies were throwing their advertising business to Elliott's firm was because his father occupied a very important place in the state of New York.

There was, for instance, the case of E. L. Cord, heavy owner in American Airways, who hired Elliott's firm, the Paul Cornell agency, to make a survey of a new airline he had just purchased. Elliott made the survey, for which he received $750, and says that the report he submitted "was sufficiently uncomplimentary to Mr. Cord's managers" to cause his job to cease.

This was while his father was campaigning for the presidency and also enjoying the full support of Mr. Hearst. So Elliott, who had become an aviation enthusiast, went to work for the Hearst newspapers as aviation editor.

But here again, Elliott was not particularly happy. The Hearst-Roosevelt honeymoon came to an end and very soon Elliott found himself linked with an organization which was constantly lampooning his father. Meanwhile, Elliott had flirted with the idea of going Hollywood, and had operated the Gilpin airlines out of Los Angeles, owned by an old friend of his mother, Congresswoman Isabella Greenway.

Finally, in the spring of 1934 Elliott went to O. Max Gardner, ex-governor of North Carolina and attorney for the Aeronautical chamber of commerce, said he was not happy in his work with Hearst, and asked for a job with the chamber.

This was given him by Thomas A. Morgan, president of the chamber, a vice-presidency with a salary of $10,000.

As such, Elliott was charged on the floor of congress with lobbying for aviation companies. He denied this, and so far as the writers can ascertain, he did just the opposite.

When the airmail scandals broke Elliott sent a somewhat preemptory cablegram to Tom Morgan, president of the chamber, who was abroad, advising him to resign—advice which Morgan resented and did not follow.

Elliott also acted in a similarly preemptory and youthful manner with other members of the Aeronautical chamber, including Donald Brown, president of United Aircraft, to whom he sent a note asking him to come and see him, receiving the reply that he, Elliott, could come and see Brown since the latter was paying his salary.

So in the end Elliott found that his $15,000 job had slipped out from under him, and had to look around for more worlds to conquer.

This time he turned to the Texas Centennial Exposition and proposed air race from Texas to South America. Whatever else he may be, Elliott is a real aviation enthusiast. He thinks it, loves it, dreams it; and when he was vice-president of the Gilpin line he was out every morning working with the mechanics in the hangars.

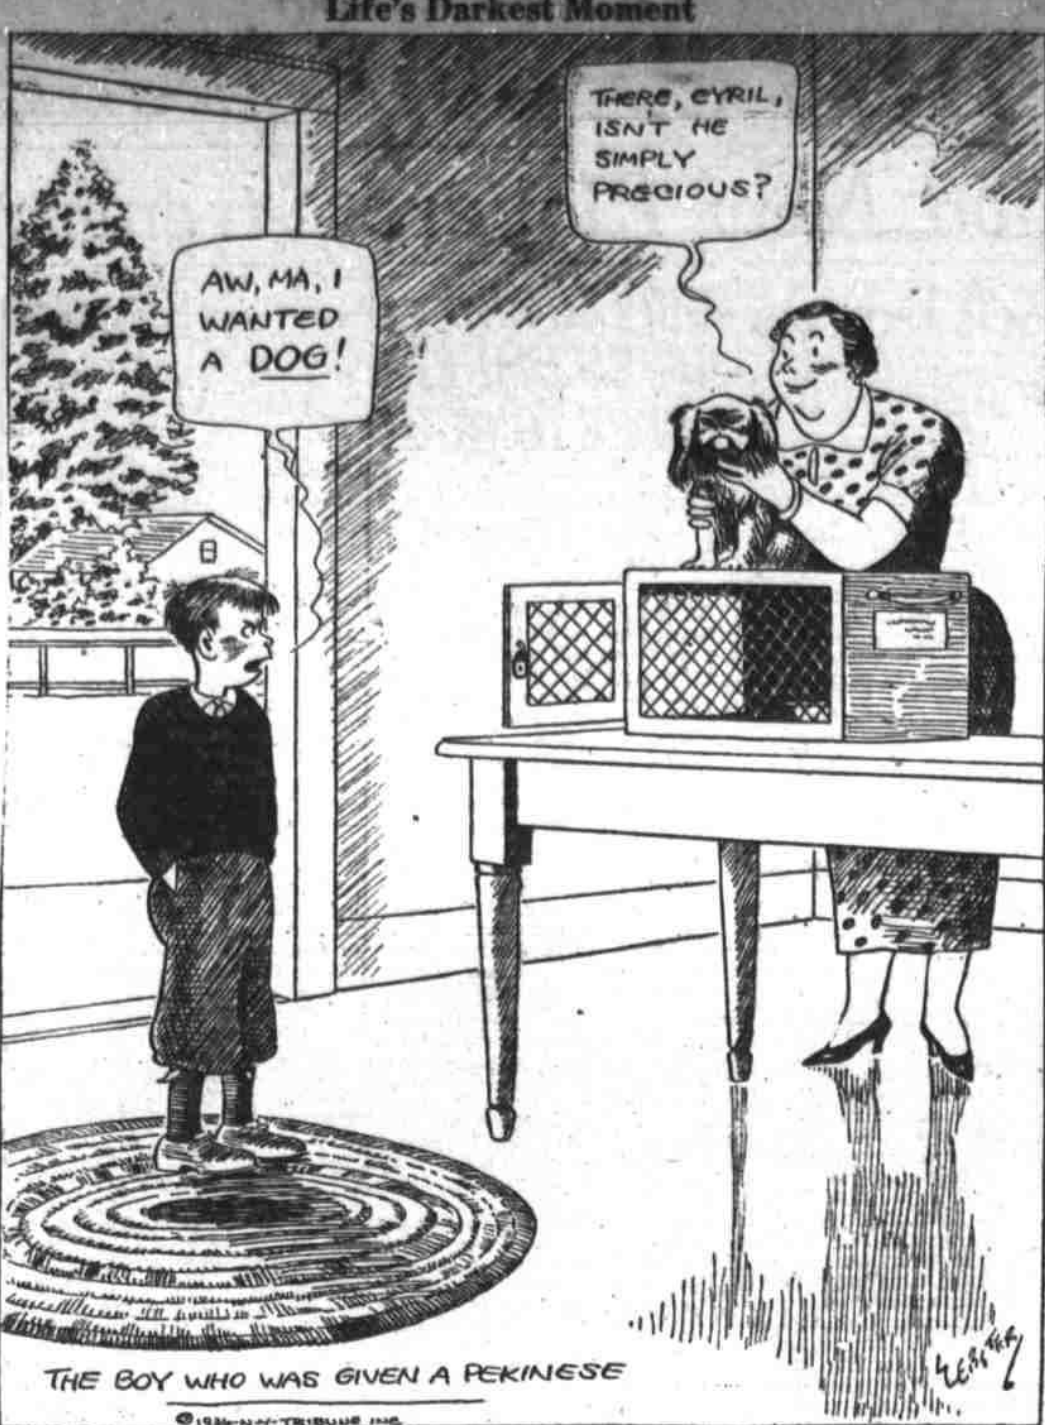

Elliott sold his Latin American air race so well that the Texas Centennial promoters staked him to a large salary while he promoted it. But the most essential part of the promotion was raising the money, and here Elliott fell down. Once again, he found a cushy job folding up underneath him, putting him out on the street.

This time Elliott hooked up with the Southwestern Radio network and very recently when part of the chain was sold to Hearst, Elliott helped arrange the deal. In fact, his old unhappiness with Hearst seemed to have dulled to such an extent that he was able to accept a vice-presidency in the Hearst radio organization.

That brings Elliott up-to-date on the economic side. He still at last sang a song which ridiculed dowagers who spent their time celebrity-chasing.

The song got a big laugh from the guests, and none applauded louder than the pilloried hostess. But that ended their welcome at THAT address. They aren't invited there any more.

spends most of his time in Fort Worth, Texas, where lives the family of his second wife, Ruth Googins, whom he married a few days after a divorce from his first wife, Elizabeth Donner. The divorce came just after his father was inaugurated, and was much opposed by his family. Mrs. Roosevelt flew from the step, but was unsuccessful. Politically, Elliott has been no asset to his father, though he has been more loyal to all his father's principles than his elder brother. It was Elliott's championship of a constitutional amendment to override the supreme court on the NRA decision which contributed to the failure of Texas Young Democrats against him. Mrs. Roosevelt is understood to be more fond of Elliott than of any other member of the family, possibly because he is so tumultuous and ungovernable and she has had such a hard time with him. Also, perhaps, it may be that Elliott is like her own father, Elliott Roosevelt, brother of Teddy, who died early in life. Elliott is leading what must seem to him a very humdrum life these days, but all reports are that it is a happy one. His wife rules like a czar over the purse strings, and Elliott takes it and likes it. Perhaps if she rules wisely enough her husband will not need the $15,000 income. After all, other married couples have got along with less. (Copyright, 1936, by United Feature Syndicate, Inc.)

Cooperative Institute To Be Conducted During Farmers' Short Course

COLLEGE STATION, July 14.—The second annual Texas Institute for Cooperatives will be held in connection with the Centennial year farmers' short course at A. and M. college. It was announced by J. Wheeler Harger, head of the U. S. department of agricultural economics, who recently that twice as many cooperative organizations were formed in Texas last year as in any previous year. Opening July 20, the meetings of the Institute for Cooperatives will continue through July 22.

Most of the speakers on this program will be successful leaders in Texas cooperative enterprises. Among those nationally prominent to appear are President C. E. Huff of the Farmers' National Grain corporation; Dr. V. N. Valgreen of the Farm Credit administration at Washington, D. C., who is a national authority on farmers' mutual insurance; Maurice R. Cooper, authority on cotton marketing with the U. S. department of agriculture; and Harold Hodges, former secretary of the Omaha Bank for Cooperatives, who is a specialist on cooperative purchasing and cooperative elevators. The successful management of every type of farmers' cooperative establishment such as gins, packing plants, elevators, and creameries, will be taken up. Cooperative purchasing will also be discussed.

CROP CONDITIONS IN SOUTH ARE IMPROVED

NEW ORLEANS, July 14. (UP)—A definite improvement in crop conditions in Alabama, Mississippi and Louisiana was reported today by Edward B. Green, president of the Federal Land bank at New Orleans. In sharp contrast to the disheartening news of poor crops and ravages of the drought in the middle west, Mr. Green asserted that the past two weeks have been beneficial to cotton and other field crops in the central gulf states. Mr. Green said that the better planting and growing conditions had been immediately reflected by an increase in sales of farm property in this area. "A considerable portion of this increase in land sales is due to the purchasing of farms by war veterans with their bonus payments," Mr. Green said. "Many veterans in this district are paying their bonus money on farms they have selected and financing the remainder of the purchase price over a period of years through the federal land bank."

MURDER TONIGHT

BY LAURENCE W. MEYNELL

Chapter Three
THE SERGEANT
 The gypsy's eyes flickered but he said nothing, so Dale drained his tankard and set it ostentatiously down on the sill of a window. "Nice day," he said, "if the rain holds off. Well, I'll be getting along."
 The gypsy was with him in two strides, and a swarthy hand was laid on his arm. "Come, Mr. Dale, you want that mare—at sixty pounds."
 "Sixty?" Dale swung round.
 "To a gentleman like you, as I know can ride her properly."
 "Damn you," Dale cried explosively, "but I do want her and that's a fact. I haven't had a decent horse of my own for two years. I'll give you sixty for her Dawley, but I'll have to be thirty down and the rest in a month's time."

 Banner Dawley considered, his quick eyes searching his man. Had he been dealing with an other gypsy he would not have hesitated but with a gentleman it was different. You couldn't trust gentlemen far. Still, risk nothing, win nothing. "Forty down," he amended.
 "All right then, forty it is, and the mare's mine now. Here Charley (he put his head through the window of the Horseshoe) tap bring out a couple of pints, we've struck a bargain."
 Banner Dawley drove his cart away from the Horseshoe well satisfied. Money—a strange thing (he reflected) where these gentlemen who were always hard up and who never did any work got it all from. They did say that the old gentleman who lived by himself in the big yellow house outside the village had thousands of pounds saved by—well, he wasn't doing too badly himself for a Higgler of Far Hope Common.
 The sight of a blue uniform in the roadway chased these agreeable reflections from his mind. Instantly he became secretive, mask-like, aware—the immediate and natural reaction of the born law-made him an odd object to look at. Most people would have mistreated him on sight, and why he should be the one person in the world in whom Arthur Burdett had any sort of faith is a mystery.

 "Everything all right Lumdale?" he queried as soon as he saw him. The man smiled, almost sneered, a little at the old fool's windy apprehensions.
 "None's been, nothing's happened," he snapped.
 "Good," Arthur Burdett made his way into the house and just before he left the kitchen region shouted over his shoulder. "I shan't want any lunch today Lumdale."
 "All right."
 Burdett hurried to his living room in the front of the house and ran his eye rapidly round its familiar scene. Nothing was disturbed; he had managed to evade the hostile world a little longer, it had not robbed him yet. With a grateful grunt he sank into the only chair and drawing his coat close about him (no fire was lit in the grate) prepared to examine his treasures.
 First he drew towards him a calendar (the gift of some optimistic tradesman, else it would not have been there) and pulled off the top layer disclosing that appropriate to the day:
 Monday, Jan. 18th
 "There are no true riches save goodness."
 Arthur Burdett chuckled loud and long over such idiosyncrasy. His laughter doubtless would have been less hearty could he have foreseen that Monday the 18th of January was to be the last day of his life.

Gov. Allred Defends His Pension Plan

One Of Opponents Blamed For Delay In Putting Program In Effect

ABILENE, July 14.—The next time he calls the legislature into special session it will be for constructive work and not for politics, Governor James V. Allred said here last night in answering critics of his failure to call a third special session to raise revenue for old age assistance.
 He spoke at an "All West Texas rally" under the floodlights on the Hardin-Simmons university athletic field, which was attended by hundreds of electors from all over West Texas.
 Even if a third special session had been called immediately after the end of the second session, old age assistance payments would not have been started any sooner, Governor Allred said, "because one of the men who is opposing me for a second term now voted against the act when his single vote for it would have given it the two-thirds majority needed to make it effective immediately instead of three months later."
 In criticizing him for failure to call another extra session, his opponents "are simply trying to play both ends against the middle," the governor charged.
 "Had I called another special session I would have been lambasted for doing it," he said. "Having refused to call an extra session before the facts justify it, I am still being lambasted."
 "No Money Wasted"
 "I am being criticized now by the same men who would have criticized me for calling another session."
 "I have the satisfaction of knowing, however, that I haven't wasted $150,000 or $200,000 worth of your money on another futile session. When I call the legislature again it will be for constructive work, not politics."

 No constructive plan for providing revenue for old age assistance can possibly be worked out until the needs are known, Governor Allred explained. He reminded his audience that the legislature already has rejected a tax program submitted by him which would have made adequate provision for all governmental needs, including old age assistance.
 "I submitted a 16-page printed report to the legislature on my tax recommendations," he said. "It called for reasonable increases in taxes on oil, pipelines, sulphur and all natural resources."
 "In keeping with my campaign promise, I asked the legislature to submit a constitutional amendment to provide old age pensions under the federal social security laws. I took the stump to advocate adoption of the amendment. I called two special sessions, and finally got the old age assistance act."
 "It isn't a perfect law—I said it wasn't when I signed it—but it was a miracle to get any law at all in view of the divergent opinions in the legislature."
 "It would have been folly to call another special session then. We had no way of knowing how many Texans would qualify for pensions. We did not know what amounts would be allotted for their needs in keeping with the terms of federal social security laws."
 Money From Washington
 "If I had called the session the legislature would have wanted to know how much money was needed—and no one could have answered. Then I would have been lambasted for wasting $150,000 or $200,000 on a session when we've necessarily growing in the days. "I did know that we had money enough to start paying pensions. I went to Washington, got the Tax set-up approved, and came back with $1,152,000 in federal funds for July and August. Already, 40,000 aged needy Texans have received their first checks and others are qualifying daily."

 "There is a need for additional taxes for permanent financing social security legislation. I submit to the legislature the need to do it earlier would be to three away good money."
 Mr. and Mrs. D. M. McKinn have as their guest Mrs. McKinn's sister, Mrs. Gene Riddell and their daughter Shirley Ann. They plan to spend several days here.

"Just What the Doctor Ordered"

FOR MY FAMILY," says T. L. Woolhouse, Cranford, N. J.

The popular phrase "just what the doctor ordered" fits my big, new Dodge to a "T"—so far as my family is concerned.

My wife demanded safety, and I don't know where I could find a car with more safety provisions. My son was impressed by the quick responsiveness of the new Dodge; and my daughter insisted that we have a good looking car.

I have to foot the bills, and while all these things sold me on Dodge, I know that Dodge owners have reported getting 18 to 24 miles to the gallon of gas... and saving up to 25% on oil. I have averaged over 19 miles to the gallon.

under government contract. Adams was optimistic as to the future outlook for a bumper yield. "We will need more rain, of course, to complete the crop. But at this time our cotton is doing splendidly."

Adams works his crops both with motorized equipment and with horses and mule teams.

Ernest Greer on the H. H. Hurt farm south of Soath, has a fine crop prospect. He stated his crop could be made without additional rain. His land has received more rainfall than others in that vicinity, he stated. Fed crops on this place are also good.

Farther south, the L. H. Thomas farmlands look good. His cotton stand is the best in years. Other farms in this section have excellent stands.

Corn, oat, potato, and sweet potato acreages are somewhat less than those of last year. The acreage of wheat to be harvested this year is much above the 1935 harvested acreage, due in a large measure to less acreage being abandoned this year. Increases in the acreages of barley, tame and wild hay, annual legumes, and rice are estimated.

Yields per acre are expected to be lower than last year for crops other than wheat and Irish potatoes. Late May rains were beneficial to wheat, and the early commercial crop of potatoes yielded nearly twice as many bushels per acre as in 1935. No forecast of the yield of cotton per acre is made at this time. Fruit crop prospects are poor. Apples, peaches, and pears promise about one-half of the 1935 production. The condition of citrus is much better than a year ago, and a fairly good crop is in prospect. However, the final out-turn will be governed by conditions from now until October.

Bread in Heat Promised

Meanwhile, the weather forecaster at Chicago said that cool weather and rain was on the way to the heat-baked north and central states. He added that he believed sweltering millions would not be fooled this time. Saturday's prediction of a general break in broiling temperatures failed to materialize.

Deaths in the 12-day heat wave exceeded 2,000, and crop damage is estimated at $1,000,000,000.

Temperatures were lowered somewhat following rains last night in the northwest sector of the drought belt, but severe heat still prevailed in the East.

Good rains struck sectors of the drought-parched Dakotas and Western Minnesota last night, lowering temperatures as they fell and signaling an expected eastward movement of the cool front.

The central office of the weather bureau at Chicago reported that cooler weather was moving eastward from the Pacific Seaboard and the Northwest.

Masses of cool air were breaking a path through a virtual wall of hot air which had piled up over the farm belt and showers were expected by Wednesday in most of the west and northern sections of the north central states.

Taylor To Sing High Mass To Honor Foster Parents' Anniversary

Father Charles Taylor will be unable to attend the golden wedding anniversary of his foster parents, Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Sourhgate, in Corpus Christi Wednesday but he will contribute to the occasion by singing high mass at the local Catholic church at 7 a. m.

The Southgates are prominently known in South Texas. Mr. Southgate having served in civic capacities in Corpus Christi and as United States commissioner from that district. Mrs. Southgate is the younger daughter of Col. Charles Thorlkin, Baron de Levenskold, who taught the first school in Corpus Christi in 1833. As a young woman Mrs. Southgate founded the Women's Monday club of Corpus Christi, long prominent in the Texas Federation of Women's clubs.

Mrs. A. M. Ripps returned Monday afternoon from Sweetwater where she spent the week with her husband who is stationed there temporarily by the T. & P. railroad.

Reward Of $250 Posted By County On Stock Thefts

Howard county commissioners court Monday voted unanimously to post a $250 reward for information leading to arrest and conviction of any person for theft of livestock in this county.

The county's figure will be used to match that figure by the Howard County Livestock Theft Association. The theft association organized here early in the year and raised a sizeable amount to aid in the capture of any livestock thieves.

Commissioner Arch Thompson moved the passage of an order for the reward and Commissioner J. S. Winslow seconded the motion which passed without dissenting vote.

Since livestock prices jumped to post-depression peak within the past year, forays against range cattle have increased.

Child Player Star Of Picture At Ritz

Jane Withers, another of the child players who is making good in Hollywood, has another of the mischievous-girl roles in a heart-warming story, "Little Miss Nobody," which is the Ritz theatre attraction Tuesday and Wednesday.

Jane is one of the children in the Sunshine Orphanage presided over by two kindly matrons, and her pranks have her continually in hot water. When Jane steals a complete dinner from the back of a grocery wagon so that the children will not go hungry on Thanksgiving Day, she is arrested and brought before the juvenile court. The judge, however, decides to parole her into the matron's custody.

She goes on good behavior for awhile, but when she tries to do her bosom pal, Betty Jean Halney, a good turn, she is discovered, and the matrons, misconstruing her act, decide she must be sent to the reformatory.

But "Little Miss Nobody" has ideas of her own. When the opportunity presents itself, she escapes and finds refuge in the pet shop of Harry Carey, an escaped convict. How Jane finally proves her identity and wins a home for herself and happiness for those who aided her make for the picture's happy climax. In the supporting cast are Jane Darwell, Ralph Morgan, Sara Haden and Harry Carey.

Barbecue and Rodeo At Stiles July 23

STILES, July 14. (Sp1)—A free barbecue will feature the old time rodeo to be held here July 23, those promoting the affair announced today. Goat roping will be held from 10 a. m. until noon with calf roping, cow riding, break-away, bull riding, goat roping, calf belling, and novelty races following the barbecue. Two dances, one the evening before and one the evening of the rodeo, will be given. Invitation has been issued to all people of this section to attend the affair.

Checking Progress On Water Survey

Samuel F. Turner, assistant hydraulic engineer for the U. S. Geological Survey, arrived here Tuesday to check work of the WPA underground water surveys in Howard and Martin counties.

Turner will also assist J. Howard Samuel, in charge of the Howard county project, in the preparation of a report on the city's underground water supply.

Representative Of Several Towns Will Attend Rally

Representative citizens from approximately ten towns already have advised they will be on hand to join in honoring Senator Morris Sheppard when he makes a West Texas appearance in Big Spring Friday night. In reply to invitations from B. Reagan, chairman of program plans, these people said they would serve as members of a reception committee honoring Sheppard and would bring other supporters from their home towns.

Among those sending acceptance are Tom Garrard of Tahoka; W. W. Lay of Coahoma; Wm. E. Denton, Brick P. Eldson, Joe L. Hall and Jas. E. Kelley of Stanton; Judge Charles L. Klapproth and Mr. and Mrs. Carl Covington, Midland; Penrose Metcalfe of San Angelo; D. Dorrard of Gail; Chas. C. Thompson of Colorado; Paul Moss, Murry H. Fly and F. M. Gwinn, Odessa; and A. G. Bearden, Phil Yunge, J. E. Barron, and Carl Rountree of Lamesa. Rountree, former state legislator, will introduce Senator Sheppard. The speaking program will be held at the courthouse lawn here, beginning with a band concert at 7:30.

ONLY APPLICANTS MAY CASH STATE PENSION CHECKS

Checks mailed to old-age assistance applicants who die before the checks are received, cannot be cashed, George White, district supervisor, said Tuesday.

A ruling from the state office holds that the check is made payable only to the applicant and must be endorsed by the payee and two witnesses before it can be cashed, according to White.

Estates coming in possession of the checks must return them to the old age assistance commission.

Several oldsters have died since first checks were mailed by the state office, White disclosed.

SEATTLE HOST FOR SHRINERS' SESSION

SEATTLE, July 14. (UP)—Thousands of Shriners gathered here for their four-day national convention.

Delegates from 21 temples arrived over the week-end, swelling the total to more than 10,000. More were arriving every hour.

Among notables on the guest list were Clark Gable, William Farnum, Bally O'Neil, Patsy Ruth Miller, Monte Blue and Allan Jones from the film capital. Gable and others were scheduled to participate in the Shrine show at the University of Washington stadium, Tuesday night.
