

Basil Rathbone Delights Group

By MARGARET EASTMAN
Assistant Fine Arts Editor

Basil Rathbone's extraordinary many-faceted talent entertained a small but enthusiastic audience of Tech students at Municipal Auditorium Tuesday.

The versatile actor presented a Shakespearean program with selections from "Henry VI," "Julius Caesar," "Romeo and Juliet," "Macbeth" and "Hamlet."

The performer prefaced these selections with delightful recollections of his life in the theater. Preceding the evening performance, Rathbone was a guest at a reception in Tech Union, at which he made several comments.

Rathbone said he tried to come to Lubbock to see Tech's production of "The Tempest," but his plane was delayed in Dallas and he had to spend the night there.

He said, "I heard that 'The Tempest' was an excellent production, and Stephano and Trinculo stole the show." (The parts were played by Charles Benton and Glenn Polk, respectively.)

The noted actor told of an experience he had with John Barrymore when they filmed "Romeo and Juliet." The two roomed together, and Rathbone said he woke up one morning and saw Barrymore lying on the bed with about a six-day growth of beard. Rathbone had to call people to come in and dress Barrymore, and "he was so drunk that they had to dress him lying on the bed."

They waited all morning for the shooting, and Barrymore finally arrived on the set. "He looked like a god," Rathbone said. "He was immaculate, clean shaven, and wearing a beautiful costume. He looked like he had never been drunk in his life."

They were all ready to begin shooting when Barrymore walked over to the director and whispered, "I can't work today. I've lost my voice." The director yelled, "Go to lunch!"

Rathbone was asked what he thought of Richard Burton's "Hamlet." He said he couldn't imagine how an artistic man like John Gildud would ever direct a man like Burton. Rathbone said, "I don't believe that Burton's Hamlet ever once considered killing himself."

He commented, "When Burton played in London there were more people waiting outside the theater to watch Elizabeth Taylor pick him up than inside the theater to watch the performance. I think the only reason Burton got to play Hamlet was because of this thing with Liz."

Rathbone added he got the feeling that somewhere down deep there was a dynamic potential in Burton. "I would like to see him play Iago in 'Othello,'" he said.

The actor said he would like to see a national theater in the U.S. He suggested government subsidies for theaters in ten large cities across the country. "These theaters might be in cities such as Atlanta and San Francisco, but not in New York. I would suggest that they produce three plays a year and rotate them."

Since he was eight years old, Basil Rathbone has had no thoughts of the future other than acting. He told of being taken on at one of England's national theaters to play bit parts. He earned one pound a week—"just enough to buy one package of cigarettes per week." He said he would do his part and then watch the rest of the show, and in this way his career began.

Rathbone served his apprenticeship with Sir Frank Benson. During his apprenticeship, he played 52 roles in 23 of Shakespeare's plays. He has also made nearly 100 motion pictures. His duels with Errol Flynn in "Captain Blood" and with Tyrone Power in "The Mark of Zorro" are considered classics of their kind.

Committee Continues Name Fight

Tech Name-Change Committee members heard a former Lubbock mayor and member of the first group of students to register at Tech voice approval of Texas State University as a new name in their regular meeting Thursday.

Clarence Whiteside, also one of the first Tech graduates to gain admission to a "big name" graduate school, addressed the group concerning the problems he encountered in gaining admittance to the graduate school. Whiteside, who applied for admission to Harvard's business administration school after his graduation from Tech, said he was allowed permission to stay "on condition".

In further remarks, Whiteside pointed out that some school in Texas would probably eventually receive the designation as "state university" and will then become recognized as one of the two top schools in the state.

He said he preferred Tech to be that school.

Other committee members pointed out that Tech was one of two statewide multi-purpose universities in Texas and it was said that Tech deserved the name which goes with the statewide multi-purpose universities all over the United States, "state university".

In other action, the committee passed out new literature on the name change. Included in the literature were mail-in ballots on which persons may indicate three choices for names they think would be most advantageous for Tech's future.

Eight names were listed on the ballots, but there were no variations of the name, "Texas Tech University."

Committee Secretary Tom Burris explained the omission by saying, "We feel this name would do more damage to the school than good, and we would rather focus our attention on a name that would not be a contradiction, but rather a descriptive and appropriate name for this institution."

Techsan In Serious Condition

Tom E. Yarbrough, Tech sophomore, remains in the intensive care ward of Methodist Hospital after a Sunday morning automobile accident.

Yarbrough, accompanied by Andrew Kochis, ran into a concrete abutment one mile southeast of Shallowater at 12:20 a.m. Kochis, who remained in the car as it rolled into the ditch, is reported to be in fair condition, but Yarbrough, who was thrown from the car during the course of its roll, has head injuries and possible brain damage. His condition is now uncertain.

Yarbrough's father, Lt. Col. T. E. Yarbrough Sr., is now on his way to Lubbock from Weisbaden, Germany, where he is stationed with the Air Force.

POOR PORKER — Texas Tech has made a "voodoo" image of its enemy, the Arkansas Razorback and will stick pins in it Thursday in hopes the Hogs will die an agonizing death on the gridiron Saturday at Homecoming. The "pin-sticking" will be in the Tech Union. Students will pay five cents a "jab." The papier mache image project is sponsored by the Freshman Council. Johnny Walker, council president, said the "jab" money will be donated to the Fountain Fund.

IN STUDENT GOVERNMENT

Power Division Sought

A "revolutionary" new type of student government may soon be in the offing for Texas Tech.

In a regular Student Council session Tuesday afternoon, representatives heard a report from the Self-Evaluation Committee, recommending that a three-division, "separation of power"-type government be instituted to replace the current SC setup.

As described, the plan would have an executive branch, a legislative branch and a judicial branch. The main body of the legislative branch would be a Student Senate composed of elected representatives, much as the Council members are chosen now.

Roland Anderson, chairman of the committee, pointed out that "... the main duties of the Senate would be to pass legislation and investigate matters that should be acted on for the welfare of the school." The Student Assn. vice president would preside over the Senate.

The executive branch would be organized with the Student Assn.

president in charge, with the business manager, presidential assistants and several appointed "directors" working beneath him in the power structure.

These directors would head general areas such as student government services, student affairs, public relations, academic affairs and student athletic affairs.

"Under these directors would be many of the present Student Council standing committees," Ronnie Botkin, SC president, explained, "and the heads of these committees would be responsible to the directors who would in turn be responsible to the president."

"This organization would possibly be more effective," Botkin continued, "because the appointed directors and committees would free the Senate from much of the routine busywork that plagues and hampers the present Council setup, and leave the Senate with more time to thoroughly investigate important matters."

The judicial end of the proposed student government would remain the same as it is now, with an appointed chief justice and five justices appointed from each undergraduate school.

"Purdue University is the only other school in the country with a working student government that is as advanced as this plan," said Anderson, "and at the rate this institution is growing, we will of necessity be forced to reorganize the present student government somewhat along these lines sometime. If we act now, we can better prepare for the future," he said.

"Also, the basic organization of this type of government would get more students interested in student government and working for it and the school," said Kent Hance, Council vice president.

"This idea is still in the planning stages," said Anderson, and "it would be at least three or four more months before anything like it could be instituted."

Aggies Honored In Annual Pig Roast

Sixty-six Tech agriculture students received awards and scholarships totaling $52,000 at the 37th Annual Aggie Club Pig Roast in the Agricultural Pavilion, Tuesday.

The awards and scholarships, some national and many local and statewide, ranged from $75 to $1,000.

Several fellowships and graduate assistantships were awarded, one for $3,000 and several for amounts of $2,400.

Dr. W. L. Stangel presented the Ray C. Mowery Honorary Plaque, given by the Lubbock Kiwanis Club to the School of Agriculture, to Agriculture Dean Gerald Thomas.

Tommy Welch, Agricultural Council president, was master of ceremonies.

Dr. Gerald W. Thomas, dean of the School of Agriculture, introduced members of the board, faculty, administrative officials, and special guests.

Dr. James Bennett presented the awards, donated by many foundations, funds, clubs, companies, and organizations.

And, of course, no one was so engrossed with the awards presentation to forget about the roast pig. To many, the food may have been the most exciting part of the program.

Proofs Due Back Today

La Ventana editors and Avalon Studio have announced that today is the last day students can return proofs for class pictures in the yearbook.

It also was announced that the following organizations have La Ventana appointments with Avalon this week:

- Today — Alpha Phi Omega and Chi Omega;
- Thursday — Kappa Sigma, Scabard and Elade and Tau Beta Sigma;
- Friday — Alpha Lambda Delta and Phi Mu.

FINE ARTS FILM — "Julius Caesar," starring Charlton Heston and David Bradley, will be shown at 4 and 7 p.m. today and Thursday in the Coronado Room of Tech Union. This is the last of the fine arts film series.

Entrants Receive Positions

Float chairmen from approximately 25 campus organizations recently drew for positions and numbers and received final instructions for the Homecoming Parade Saturday.

O. A. Keeter, Homecoming Parade chairman, briefed the chairmen on procedures, the parade starting time, and how the floats are to be judged.

Keeter called for all floats, convertible, and other entry forms.

Keeter said floats must be in place by 8 a.m., convertibles by 9 a.m., and drill teams by 9:30 a.m. Saturday.

The parade starts at 10 a.m.

Not all float chairmen were present, making the drawings for positions and numbers incomplete, Keeter said, however, that about 25 floats will be in the parade for competition.

Floats will be judged on originality, craftsmanship, effectiveness and overall appearance, and coherence with the theme.

Cain Theme Dramatized

"Even the Hater", a one act play by Albert Johnson shows Wednesday at 7 p.m. at the Methodist Student Center.

The drama premiered at the National Conference of Christian Writers in 1962 and has been widely used by groups of all sizes since that time.

The play contains the timeless treatment of the Cain and Abel theme. Somewhere on a "lonely patch of earth", a girl, a youth, and a man become involved in the age-old struggle of man against man, man against woman, race against race, and nation against nation.

Poetic, humorous, and profound, the play builds to a crisis that literally explodes.

Hamilton Is Named Editor Of Bulletin

The South Central Modern Language Assn. named Dr. Alfred Neumann, University of Houston, president during its 21st annual meet Friday and Saturday at Tech.

Other officers elected at the convention were Dr. Wilfred Dowden of Rice University, vice president; Dr. Richard Adams and Dr. Eric Albrecht of Tulane University, executive council; Dr. Martin Shockley of North Texas State University, Dr. James Malin of the University of Houston and Dr. T. Earl Hamilton, Texas Tech, associate editors of the South Central Bulletin.

The conference gave professors a chance to exchange ideas and research results in short sessions carried out by the professors themselves.

About 100 scholarly papers were read on historical literary works, modern teaching techniques and modern literature. Papers were read in English, French, German, Spanish, Portuguese and several Slavic languages.

Featured speakers at the meet were John H. Fisher, executive secretary of the Modern Language Assn. of America, discussing "The Problem of Federal Support for the Humanities," and Andre Paquet, foreign language coordinator for the association, speaking on "Teacher Preparation for Foreign Language."

The convention had a registration of 697. Dr. Truman Cam Tech English professor and local committee chairman, said this was the largest scholarly group ever to visit the Tech campus.

Next year's convention will be held in New Orleans, sponsored by Tulane University.

Purity Code Plagues Army; Throats Suffer

WASHINGTON (AP)—The Pentagon's new purity code reared its haloed head Tuesday at the convention of the Army Assn.

Gone were the "Hospitality Suites" where in past conventions Army officers and other delegates with parched throats could get relief.

There used to be about 60 of these suites, paid for by defense contractors.

Gone, too, are such institutions as the "Breakfast Bar," also financed by a firm that did military business.

The change was brought about by a Defense Department order issued in late September. It forbids military and civilian personnel from accepting any entertainment or favors from contractors or their representatives.

An official of the association said that at the last minute his group set up a "Courtesy Lounge" so he put it—a guy could get a drink without worrying about who picked up the tab.

The Pentagon order was supposed to go into effect in late November, but the Army acted earlier than its sister services with the Assn. of the U.S. Army convention in mind.

The association describes itself as a nonofficial group.

Tech To Bowl, But Where?

When the smoke had cleared around the Southwest Conference last Saturday, these facts stood above the rest:

Arkansas, showing no sign of letting up in its relentless drive toward an undefeated season, crushed SMU 44-0, upping the Hog record to 9-0 and clinching a berth as SWC representative in the Cotton Bowl.

Texas, looser only to the Razorbacks, marched right past Texas Christian 28-13 and into the Orange Bowl.

And Texas Tech became an almost certain post-season participant for the first time in many years when it crushed Washington State 28-10, looking like world beaters in the second half.

Talk to anyone around the Tech athletic offices these days and they will tell you they don't know anything about any bowl games, which might be true.

'Cause everyone, including the committees that put on the big shows, are kind of waiting around to see what will happen when Ken Hatfield and crew show up in Jones Stadium this week, intent upon ruining Tech's homecoming festivities.

A good showing, meaning the upset of the year, would bring the Raiders offers from such exotic places as the Gator Bowl or the Bluebonnet thing down in Houston.

And El Paso's Sun Bowl people would just love to have J T King and his boys make the trip down their way. Those putting that one on have landed a fat national TV contract and are looking for big name teams.

From the way most of the organizers are talking to the press, which probably means that the info is probably worthless, Tulsa and Tech would bring out the crowds in a hurry.

Tulsa, of course, is where Jerry Rhome went to play quarterback after Hayden Fry came to Southern Methodist and wouldn't allow the whiz from Dallas to throw the ball as much as he wanted to.

The prospect of Rhome's aerals and Donny Anderson's running would pack any of several possible stadi.

Donny Doing Everything

Anderson is in the process of putting on one of the greatest individual shows in the history of the conference while sparking Tech to winning ways.

The Stinnett bombshell is listed in SWC stats as:

- (a) leading all rushers with 877 yards,
- (b) pacing kickoff returns with a 273-yard total,
- (c) having scored 42 points for a second-place tie,
- (d) taking time off from rushing to catch 29 passes for 379 yards, good enough for a third-place tie in that department.
- (e) ranking third in total offense with his 877 yards, all on the ground, and
- (f) punting for a 37.9 average, good for fifth in the SWC.

All this while playing two games (Texas and SMU) out of nine in driving rainstorms. And Donny has only one real long run that tend to add yardage in a hurry. That came against TCU and went 90 yards for a touchdown.

It has been steady, consistent, play almost all the way for the fabulous junior halfback, the kind of play that helps a team the most.

Although Anderson is a junior, he is eligible for the pro football drafts that will be coming off this month, because next year will be his fifth at Tech.

Donny is almost certain to be picked up as a "future."

San Francisco and the Chicago Bears play this week, and little is at stake except that the team that loses will have first pick of the collegians in the NFL-standings system.

The '49ers need a good running back, but can they wait a year for him?

Washington is also very much interested in Anderson.

ATO BASKETBALL TOURNAMENT

The annual Alpha Tau Omega Basketball Tournament is tentatively scheduled for Dec. 4-5 with all games being played in the Intramural Gym. This tournament usually precedes regular Intramural play. Intramural play is tentatively scheduled to start in all leagues during the week of Dec. 6-12.

Passers Rip Record Books

Most of the excitement has been over Texas Tech's nationally-ranked running attack, so it's little wonder the Red Raiders have been setting some school passing records comparative unnoticed.

Quarterback Tom Wilson of Corsicana has been responsible for most of the aerial acrobatics. When he connected 14 times on 18 attempts—twice throwing out of bounds to stop the clock—against Washington State Saturday, he established a new season record for completions.

Wilson now has 60 completions to his credit, three more than the 57 Freddie Brown attained in 1947. Wilson will be the Red Raiders' busiest passer in school history if he throws 11 times against University of Arkansas at Lubbock this Saturday. He has tried 107, and Brown set the record for most passes tried with 117 in 1947.

Wilson's passing accuracy percentage is 56.1, which is close to the Tech record of 56.5 percent set last year by James Ellis of Lubbock.

Halfback Donny Anderson of Stinnett, who is more noted for his rushing (second nationally, two Tech records already), has already tied the season record for touchdown passes received, with four.

He's just three receptions shy of the mark for most receptions, one season, of 32, set by David Parks in 1962 and repeated by Parks last season, when he wound up the National Football League's No. 1 draft choice.

Against West Texas State, three Tech passers—Wilson, Ellis, and Teddy Roberts of Gulfport, Miss.—collaborated to tie the Southwest Conference record for a team's touchdown passes in one game. That mark is five, set by Southern Methodist against Arkansas in 1951 and first tied by Texas Tech against Kansas State last year.

Texas Tech is averaging 98 yards a game passing, a figure that probably would be higher if the Raiders hadn't played two games in driving rains. Against SMU in the rain, for example, Tech threw only one pass.

Arkansas, 9-0, and Texas Tech, 6-2-1, wind up their 1964 seasons in this Saturday's game. The Razorbacks will be the Southwest Conference representative in the Cotton Bowl against Nebraska.
