'Food' Group Plans Hearing

The new Food Committee of the Student Council will hear complaints against dormitory food and food service in a closed session at 5 p.m. Wednesday in the Blue Room of Tech Union.

Tom Edwards, chairman of the committee, says the committee will hear anyone who wishes to register a complaint or offer a recommendation about dorm food. So far, 10 persons have registered their complaints in the Student Council office.

Edwards said, "This is the time to speak out about bad food, or to forever hold our peace." There will be no direct reprisals against students who speak out, he said.

Edwards said complainants who are unable to attend Wednesday's hearing should contact Kent Hance, Graland Weeks, Betty Jo White, Ashley Wisdom, Tommy Craddick or himself.

The Food Committee will continue to eat in the various dorms to check the situation, he said.

At Matrix Table Dinner

White House Aide Speaks Here Today

Elizabeth S. Carpenter, press secretary and staff director for Mrs. Lyndon B. Johnson, will speak on "News From the Nation's Capital" at tonight's Matrix Table.

Mrs. Carpenter, veteran Texas and Washington newswoman, will arrive today at Reese Air Force Base accompanied by Maj. Gen. C. V. Clifton, military press aide to the President, and George Mahon, Lubbock congressman.

Following World War II, Mrs. Carpenter and her husband opened a Washington, D. C., bureau for Texas newspapers. She gave daily coverage to Lyndon B. Johnson in his rise in the political ranks.

'First' Newswoman

Mrs. Carpenter is the first professional newswoman ever to be appointed press secretary to a First Lady. Her job includes providing information and assistance to all news media on all subjects except President Johnson himself. She discusses all social functions, decorations and maintenance of the White House.

She was riding in the Dallas motorcade when President John F. Kennedy was fatally shot and was present when Johnson was sworn into office following the assassination.

Matrix Table is the annual founders' day banquet and is sponsored by the student and professional chapters of Theta Sigma Phi, national fraternity for women in communications. It is scheduled at 7 p.m. today at the KoKo Palace.

Awards Presented

At the dinner, Ann Brown, vice president of Tech Theta Sigma Phi chapter, will announce the outstanding senior woman in journalism. Walter Wimsdor of KLBK Radio will present the Headliner Award to the outstanding Lubbock high school journalism student. Three other high school students will be recognized for their achievements in journalism. Bob Nash, KFYO Radio news director, will be master of ceremonies.

— By Tech Union Board —

Arts Program Sought

A recommendation for a $15,000 fine arts series will go to the Student Services Allocation Committee from the Tech Union Board within a few days.

The Board decided there was a need for the student body to have the opportunity to attend performances of top professional musical artists as part of their educational experience.

The proposal for a fine artists series was presented to the Board by Gene Hemmle, music department head, several weeks ago.

Reach Agreement

Board members reached agreement on three points: (1) the Tech Union would like to explore the need for first class musical artists, (2) the series could be conducted in a manner that would appeal to students and at the same time enhance the image of the Union and Texas Tech, and (3) the method of handling other high level expensive programs would, with only slight modifications, make it possible for the Program Council to handle musical programs with minimum operational expense and effort.

Under present plans, if the Allotments Committee allots funds for the series, there will be a minimum of four programs for the long school session. The Committee must provide funds for the program to go into effect.

Students will receive free tickets, faculty members will pay half price and all others will pay full box office prices under present plans.

The Union Board will establish a committee to plan, supervise and coordinate the series.

The committee will have three students—two appointed by the president of the Student Association and one who is the chairman of the Union Fine Arts Committee.

Also included are two faculty members appointed by the college president—one each from the music and speech departments.

The Union program director will serve as a voting chairman.

More than 250 persons are expected to attend the dinner. Special guests will be Mrs. Carpenter, Maj. Gen. Clifton, Rep. Mahon and Mrs. Jean Daugherty, national treasurer of Theta Sigma Phi. Presidents Carolene English, student chapter, and Mrs. Burt Brewer, professional chapter, are in charge of the banquet.

Following the Matrix Table Mrs. Carpenter will be honored with a coffee in the KoKo Palace.

Clifton Speaks

At the Southwestern Journalism Congress, which will officially open at 9 a.m. Friday, Maj. Gen. Clifton will be a featured speaker during the Friday sessions.

All conferences are open to the public. Other speakers are Bill Steven, editor of the Houston Chronicle; Bill Payette, Southwestern regional manager for United Press International; Bob Johnson, chief of the Dallas bureau for Associated Press; and Ralph Sewell, national president of Sigma Delta Chi.

Keen Rafferty, head of the journalism department at the University of New Mexico, Albuquerque, will address the congress at Friday's noon luncheon in the Union Ballroom. Will Harrison, Santa Fe columnist, will speak at an awards banquet Friday night.

Following a student forum at 9 a.m. Saturday, the congress will adjourn.

The board members gave final approval of the recommendation in a split 6-2 vote with disagreement over technical aspects of the series rather than the idea.

The motion on the recommendation was made by Ronnie Botkin, Student Association president, and seconded by Bronson Havard, Daily Tornado editor.

Other members of the Board are Peggy Griffith, Tech Union; Steve George, Union president; Sue Walker, Union vice president; Nelson Longley, Union director; Mrs. Dorothy Pijan, Union program director; and Dean of Student Life James Allen, chairman.

European Tours Now Available For Nominal Fee To Students

Tours to Europe exclusively for Tech students, faculty, and members of their immediate families are now being organized.

The tours are being sponsored by the Student Association in cooperation with the Texas Intercollegiate Student Association (TISA).

Tom Craddick, Business Administration representative to the Student Council, has been name coordinator.

The tours, which can be taken for as little as $10 a day complete, will originate in Houston.

Programs are available that enable students to see Europe and pay for it by working abroad.

Also, opportunities for research and study and summer school in Europe have been provided.

Additional information can be obtained from Craddick at SH 4-1669 or from the European Charter Director, P.O. Box 1005, Austin, Texas.

Baroque Players Plan Performance

The Baroque Players, a new quartets for flute, violin, 'cello and student chamber orchestra will present a performance of an 18th century Telemann quartet in Room 1 of the Music Bldg. at 4:05 p.m. today.

The group was initiated in the spring of 1964 for the study of Baroque music for trio sonatas and harpichord. Members are Sallie An Manicapelli, violin; Billy Watt, flute; Beverly Barton, harpsichord; and Robert Ashby, 'cello.

Miss Manicapelli is a graduate of Lubbock High School where she was concert-mistress of the orchestra and active in the senior a capella choir. She was a member of the All-State Orchestra for two years. At Tech, she is a member of the Tech Symphony Orchestra and the Lubbock Symphony.

Billy Watt is a member of Kappa Kappa Psi, the Concert Band, the Tech Symphony, the Lubbock Symphony and the Court Jesters. He has studied flute with Byron Hester of the Houston Symphony and is presently a student of Frank Bowen, organizer and director of the Baroque Players.

Miss Barton is a member of Mu Phi Epsilon and was recently a recipient of the Elliot Award. She will be a soloist for the Tech Symphony Commencement Concert.

Robert Ashby is the first 'cellist with the Tech Symphony Orchestra and is assistant first 'cellist with the Midland-Odessa Symphony. He spent two years in summer study at the Aspin Music Festival in Aspin, Colo., and is a recent Young Artist Winner-Soloist with the Amarillo Symphony.

'Mack The Knife' Prepares For Debut

Mack the Knife comes to life, along with the rest of the motley crew which compose the cast of Bertolt Brecht's "Three Penny Opera," when the play opens March 18 at the University Theater.

The production, the first jointly undertaken by the Tech music and speech departments, will run through March 21.

Brecht's play, satirizing the legitimate opera, first opened in 1928 as a "comédie musicale" which gained almost immediate popularity.

Nazis Ban

In 1933, after five years of success, the play was banned by the Nazi government in Germany, and was not performed again for 20 years. It was revived in 1955 in an off-Broadway production which ran for six years and a record-breaking 2,611 performances.

In the University Theater's production of the play, Ronald Schulz of the speech department is attempting to produce the play as it was originally staged by Brecht in Germany. Charles Lawrie, director for the play and a member of the music department at Tech, is using Brecht's concept of Germany and the 1920 jazz era for his orchestration.

Best-Known Work

This play is Brecht's best-known work in the United States, but he is acclaimed in Europe as one of the most outstanding contemporary dramatists. His plays include "Mahagonny" and "Mother Courage." These two plays were considered one of the major explosions in the German theatre before Hitler came to power.

In the U.S., Brecht's popularity is increasing with each season and nearly every major college theater class requires his works to be read now.

Information for tickets may be obtained at the University Theater box office on campus or by calling PO 2-8811, Ext. 2154.

Members of the cast include Jan Grace as the Street Singer; Dick Phillips as J. J. Peachum; Kathleen Graw, Mrs. Peachum; Marilyn Campbell Peck, Polly Peachum; Larry Scott, Macheath; Mary Anne Engram, Jenny; Gary Frazier, Flich; Jay Brown, Rev. Kimball; Mike Niemczyk, Tiger Brown;

Other Members

John Painter, Smith; Jeannie Rook, Lucy Brown; Charles Addington, Joel Hughes, Don Stevens and Bob Williams as Macheath's gang; Ray Addington and David Taylor as constables; Joe Dennis, Bobby Hurt, Pat Rogers, Richie Smedley and Woody Woodward as the beggars; Mary Bently, Sharry Cannon, Cathy Carmichael, Pat Edmiston, Elizabeth McAninch, Kathleen McCullough and Linn Sanders as the Girls; and Joe Dennis, the Mounted Messenger.

Charles Lawrie is presently completing the selection of orchestra members. Students from the music department will alternate in orchestral assignments during the play's run.

Lawrie will follow the original orchestration, done by Kurt Weill, for an eight-piece "Jazz Ensemble."

'Youngblood Hawke' Tells Story Of Author's Trials

By BARBARA WORLEY
Fine Arts Staff

YOUNGBLOOD HAWKE, Herman Wouk, Signet Books, $1.25.

In the world of literature, it is not usual to find an author who will write about something he knows well objectively, and come out with an excellent novel.

The rarity of the moment, Herman Wouk; and his novel is about, of all things, a talented young author and his work.

It is "Youngblood Hawke."

In this massive volume Wouk takes author Youngblood Hawke from the hills of Kentucky where he spent his youth working in the coal mines by day and on his novels by night. He gears him through a shift in the navy, continuing to push Hawke toward his ultimate success as a writer.

The "overnight success" story climaxes for Hawke when his book is selected for publishing by a prominent New York company.

But Hawke's inside story only begins with the decision to publish the book. It is at this point that he meets Jeanne Green, his editor and severest critic and eventually the girl he wants to marry.

Any lover of Marjorie Morningstar will find all over again the deep personal attachment to Youngblood Hawke.

Wouk has created once more a character to be loved, hated or respected, but above all a character to be remembered.

but even after the book is closed the story lingers. In a word, Youngblood Hawke is a memorable experience in reading, and not to be confused with the movie of the same name.

RAGTIME PIANIST — Max Morath, a pianist considered the leading exponent of ragtime music, will be presented March 19 at 7:30 p.m. in the Union Ballroom. Admission will be $1, and tickets go on sale today. Morath has been dubbed the "ideal spokesman" for ragtime by Variety magazine, and "the folk hero of the spreading ragtime cult," by Time magazine.

'Rashomon' Set For LTC

Students who plan to see "Rashomon" had better get their tickets soon.

The Lubbock Theatre Centre production which tells the story of a murder from several different viewpoints will open March 25—two days before classes are dismissed for spring vacation.

"Rashomon" stars Barry Corbin, Elyse Soape, Mike Connell, Charles Benton and Ray Cook. The action takes place in Kyoto, Japan, about 1000 years ago at a corner of the Rashomon Gate.

The play's name is taken from a short story published in 1915, but the plot came from "In a Grove," another short story by Ryunosuke Akutagawa.

Tickets will be on sale March 22 at the Theatre Centre box office, 2508 Ave. P. Admission is $2.25.

ENROLLMENT

By the 12th class day of the fall semester, 1964, 13,327 students were enrolled in Tech, 8,730 men and 5,097 women. Over a 10-year period, the enrollment increased 93.2 per cent. The number of men students increased 64.1 per cent while a 178.1 increase was recorded for women students.

The ratio of men to women is slightly less than two to one.

The total in 1965 is expected to be 15,000 and the estimated enrollment in 1972 is 28,043.

French Film Set

"Picnic on the Grass," a French film about a professor of science who is trying to popularize artificial insemination as a means of improving the human animal, will be the film at the Union this weekend. The film stars Paul Meurisse and Catherine Rouvel and is directed by Jean Renoir. It will be shown at 3 and 7 p.m. Sunday in the Coronado Room. A Report To The Editor:

Why I Had To Write A Slanted Story

(EDITOR'S NOTE: The following story is a report presented to the editor by a Daily Toreador staffer. It illustrates some of the problems reporters face when collecting information for publication. We believe it is revealing. See accompanying editorial and story.)

Bronson:

I probably won't get to see you today so here's what happened on the suicide story.

My attention was first called to the story by Dean Phillips' (Florence Phillips, dean of women) comment to the Board that "incidents" of suicide attempts were increasing as enrollment increases.

My primary idea for writing the story was perhaps a comparison of the rate of such attempts at Tech with the national average or with the average of colleges of similar size.

Since Dean Phillips was requesting the services of a psychiatrist, this could have included a comparison of facilities available at Tech with facilities available at other colleges, kinds of emotional problems experienced by Tech students or something in a similar vein.

However, when I interviewed Dean Phillips she refused to add anything — figures or facts — to her statement. She said a question directed to her by a board member prompted the comment and it was not part of her prepared statement.

Next I went to Lubbock Chief of Police J. T. Alley who could not find information in his file without names of the persons making attempts at suicide.

My plan was to get the information elsewhere and re-approach Dean Phillips for her comments.

Traffic-Security keeps no records on suicide attempts.

Dean Allen (James Allen, dean of student life) also refused to comment on the number of attempts, saying that he did not know how many and wouldn't reveal it if he did. See Story.

By this time I had shifted my intent from the original idea to the idea that the administration's refusal to comment on figures, which Dean Phillips' statement indicated did exist, was a peg for another story.

I wrote the accompanying story.

Mr. Rooker (Bob Rooker, assistant professor of journalism) suggested that I take the story to Dean Phillips and Dean Allen, let them read it, explain that my intentions were not to make them look bad (but had), and ask for further comment. This I did.

Dean Phillips read the story twice, asked that I change the part reading "question from a board member" to "question directed to her." I did. She did not comment further.

I then went to Dr. Joseph Ray of the psychology department. He asked me not to take notes because the information he would give me was in a written speech which I could have at the end of the interview. I didn't take notes. He told of the work that the counseling center did with students, that they were very busy, and explained some national figures on emotional disturbance among college students.

At the end of the interview I asked him how Tech's suicide attempt rate stacked up against national average. He said he did not want to release this information and what information he did have would not encompass the entire campus — just the students he worked with.

I asked him why he would not release the information. He said it would be "bad publicity" for Tech.

Then he said he would give me the speech only on condition that he could read the story after it was written. I told him that I could transpose information from one paper to the other without error and that ethically he did not have the "right" to see my copy.

However, I promised him that if I should use any of his information, I would let him check it for factual accuracy. He then told me to write my story (sans notes and sans speech), bring it back and let him fill in the figures. He did not give me the speech.

I felt this was an indictment of my character but did not tell him so.

I asked if I quoted him as saying "I do not wish to release this information," would it be correct? He said yes.

I then went to Dean Allen. He had the copy of the story that Dean Phillips asked that I leave with her.

He assured me that Tech's suicide rate was not skyrocketing. He said the proportion (percentage) of suicide attempts had not increased but that the number had become larger since enrollment was constantly increasing.

He said that this number could not be accurately determined since there was such an overlapping of figures among those that knew of these attempts.

I told him that this was the first time that I had been assured that the number could not be determined and no one else would tell me that much.

He again went into the fact that he would be defining "suicide attempts" if he called any of them suicide attempts. I told him that I felt that Dean Phillips evidently had defined suicide attempt in some manner and also assigned some number to them when she made her statement.

Dean Allen said a good story could be written on the fact that Tech did not have the services of a paid psychiatrist available to students. Those in the psychology department offer their services on their own time — free of charge.

After his explanation that no such figure exist I felt that my story was rather slanted.

I think the fact that Dean Phillips indicated that definite figures were available and then everyone's refusal to release any information threw me for a loop and resulted in this slanted story.

Mack Sisk

Our Job Is To Inform

ON THIS EDITORIAL PAGE today is a "slanted" news story. It is slanted not because the writer wanted it to be, but because it had to be.

The story makes several persons appear to be concealing information concerning a little-known aspect of student life. If the story had appeared as a regular item of news, it would have unfavorably reflected upon the individuals.

We ordered the story not to appear and requested the writer to prepare an account of the problems he encountered when exploring the possibilities of a story telling "why" a full-time psychiatrist is now needed in the campus community. The writer's account appears at the top of this page.

What we are presenting is an outstanding example of a situation which the reporter faces each working day.

Even though the subject of the reporter's inquiry may be "touchy," and knowledgeable officials may not wish to release information, the results of not completely discussing and explaining a matter before the public are often more undesirable.

We wish to make it clear that we are not being sensational in the discussion of this problem.

We are not alarmed by the increase in cases of emotional instability in proportion to the student enrollment increase. We feel no one else should be.

The various persons who are interested in this problem and who have pointed out a need for a psychiatrist are doing an excellent job for Texas Tech.

However, our job is to inform the campus community, and in doing so, educate its citizens. We strive to distinguish fact from rumor and to dispel rumor.

Cases of emotional instability are a fact of life. We must face them as such. If we treat such things in a concealed matter, this unnecessarily enhances public fear and suspicion.

tional information concerning her statement to the board.

Other members of the administration also refuse to release information concerning suicides and attempted suicides by students.

James Allen, dean of student life, said he did not know how many students have tried to commit suicide and added he would not release the information if he did.

Dean Phillips said the comment came after a question to her and was not in her written statement.

She was speaking in behalf of securing and retaining residence hall counselors with specialized training and for a campus psychiatrist to be added to the staff. She said, "As our enrollment has grown, there has been an increase in the number of students who have been emotionally disturbed."

Dean Phillips added that as enrollment has grown so have the incidents of suicide attempts.

Allen said his work with emotionally disturbed persons now has a "pleasant connotation" and he did not want to create "another problem of public awareness." Now a student with an emotional problem is referred to a member of the psychology staff working without pay, or to an off-campus psychiatrist, according to Allen.

Allen said he felt a psychiatrist was needed for those students who were "above average emotionally disturbed" more than for the extreme cases.

He said a psychiatrist on campus could solve two problems.

One is the problem of students who do not have their families at hand to talk over problems.

The other is that of parents who would resent the inference that their son or daughter was "crazy." Some parents would resent the high cost of an off-campus psychiatrist.

Allen said the definition of "suicide attempt" is a difficult one. "For instance, if a student takes an overdose of pills and later denies that he was trying to kill himself, who is to say it was a suicide attempt?" he said.

Lubbock Chief of Police J. T. Alley said police files contain information on suicide attempts which were investigated but the name of the person attempting suicide had to be known before it could be found in the file.

A secretary in the Traffic-Security Office said she recalled one such attempt last semester but no record was kept. Traffic-Security does not "follow-up" suicide attempts, she said.

About Those Threats . . .

THE REACTION IN AUSTIN to the letter writing campaign appears unfavorable to Texas Tech because a number of persons are writing threatening letters to the legislators.

It is understandable that some senators and representatives would get angry over the tone of many of the letters.

Letters should, of course, express opinion on legislative matters, but they should not be juvenile and threatening.

A legislator reading an anonymous letter will end up with it in the wastebasket and he will end an abusive letter with anger, but he will take seriously a thoughtful letter written by a responsible constituent.

Lubbock Rated 'Behind' In Race Relations

By JACQUE GILL
Feature Editor

Lubbock and the surrounding area is grossly behind the times concerning race relations, a student panel on race relations concluded this week.

Moderated by R. O. Keslin, assistant professor of anthropology and sociology, the panel was composed of a Negro, Vietnamese, Latin American, and Caucasian. The Ideas and Issues Committee of the Tech Union coordinated the program.

Walter Marlin, Negro student from El Paso, said he thought Lubbock was backward in race relations because the schools were still segregated.

"The schools in El Paso have been desegregated since 1952, so I had never known the prejudice I have encountered here," Marlin said.

Steve George, senior from Houston, said the Lubbock attitude toward race relations was "provincial" as compared to Houston's. He added that Lubbock seemed out of the main stream of thought in other areas. He indicated that conservative ideas dominated the general attitude of the Lubbock area.

Both Marlin and Eliseo Perez, sophomore from Monterrey, Mexico, think there is a discrepancy between the teachings and practices of many of the churches of the area.

"I don't know the principles of all these groups but I do think the churches play a big part in forming the social ideas of the people," Marlin said.

Members of the audience questioned the panel about their encounters with personal prejudices at Tech and in Lubbock.

Hoang-Thi Quynh-Hoa, graduate English major from Viet Nam, said most persons were extremely friendly to students from Viet Nam.

She added that one of the major reasons for the friendliness was they were girls from a war-torn country.

Marlin said he didn't have to look for prejudice — "It always seems to find me."

Perez said most prejudice toward him came from persons of low moral character who had little education. "This type person would probably rob his grandmother if he could," he added.

The panel turned to the area of what causes prejudice. This group brought out the point that sociological and cultural differences are as important as biological differences in causing prejudice.

Keslin said two social groups usually believe that if they looked different, they were vastly different in most other areas.

"This causes fear and distrust," Keslin added. "The result of this fear and distrust is usually prejudice; this prejudice is usually directed toward a minority group."

Keslin also said groups from Europe came to America for different reasons. The Spaniards came for wealth and then returned to Europe, but the English came over to make permanent homes. Since they brought their complete family, they were more interested in keeping their moral ideas and beliefs intact and remaining within their own social group. This idea has prevailed and these groups still attempt to keep their social cliques intact.

In discussing intermarriage, Perez said he thought the individual should do as he pleased, without interference from parents. He felt the way to solve these conflicts was to let people do what they wanted to do.

Hoang-Thi Quynh said she felt it natural that a person would want to marry a person of his own race.

In discussing laws about race relations, Perez said he thought the laws still were inadequate in some areas. For example, some states still have a law against intermarriage.

Keslin emphasized the fact that public opinion cannot be legislated — that laws cannot force the people to change their minds.

Marlin noted that laws concerning race relations were for all minority groups — not just the Negro. "Although the main emphasis is on the Negro, the laws give all minority groups equal opportunity," Marlin said.

TECH LIBRARY

The library claimed 440,963 volumes in 1960 and 639,807 by 1964, for a 12.6 per cent increase.

The panel also discussed extremist groups in racial activity.

Perez thought groups such as the Black Muslims were justified in using extreme actions to obtain their goals.

"When people have been wronged for so long a time, their only recourse is violence," he said. "The situation will be corrected sooner this way. Sometimes a middle of the road course is ineffective."

George said he thought the ideas of extremist groups were bound up in religion, heritage, background and politics. He thought their main fault was that they lacked education and sometimes didn't know exactly what they were doing.

The group thought the best aid in solving the racial problems was better education.

However, Marlin said that no matter how educated the populus was, there would still be some with prejudice.

Picadors Beat LCC Two Times

Texas Tech's Picadors beat Lubbock Christian College 17-1 and 9-1 Wednesday afternoon in their first performances of the season.

Mike Murphy, who pitched four no-hit innings, was credited with the victory in the first game. He struck out seven and gave up three walks. Tom Wilson relieved him in the fifth and was charged with LCC's only run. Wilson allowed two hits.

Ed Stiles was the Picador's big gun in the first game with two triples, a double and five runs-batted-in. In all, the freshman collected 15 hits, while LCC could manage only two.

Tech scored in every inning except the final two, and Lubbock Christian tallied their lone run in the fifth.

Second Game

The second game was a little tighter, but still the Picadors won easily. They chalked up eight hits to LCC's four.

Robert Weber pitched six innings for the Picadors and gave up one run, four hits and three walks. Ray McKinney came on in the seventh and retired the side in order to finish the game.

LCC scored their one run in the second and held the lead briefly. However, the Picadors scored two in the third, five in the fifth and two in the seventh to gain the victory.

Jim Larson collected three doubles in the second game, while Jerry Kolander knocked a two-run homer in the fifth for the twin-bill's only round circuit.

The Picadors travel to Odessa Saturday to face Odessa College in their next outing.

OVER THE FENCE — Jerry Kolander, leftfielder for the Tech freshman baseball team, hits a two-run homer in the second game of a doubleheader against Lubbock Christian College. The freshmen won both games Wednesday afternoon by the score of 17-1 and 9-1.

Coach Danny Mason also is entering Steve LeCrone of Amarillo, Joe Huber of Lubbock, Jerry Hrcnciar of Shamrock, Rick Rogers of Corpus Christi and Mike Moorhead of Lubbock.

It will be Tech's final meet before beginning Southwest Conference play against Rice at Houston March 19.

Scarsy Says —

Anonymous Longhorns Criticize Tech Loyalty

The following letter was received in this office yesterday and, in fairness to all concerned, is being printed so that we may comment that the authors seem to have missed the point of Techsan's rally in support of the Raiders.

Could it be that some Longhorn fans are envious of the affection which the Raider cagers receive from Lubbock fans?

Dear Editor,

While wailing over spilt milk and firmly holding to the myth that Tech IS the SWC champion, you people seem to overlook several facts.

First, Baylor DID beat Tech twice you know, while SMU and Texas both whipped them (Baylor) . . . Texas by 21 points in Austin. By some twist of the imagination Tech fans manage to ignore these facts.

Second, Tech only beat Texas by four points in Austin, and Texas led most of the ball game . . . by as much as seven points once. Who knows, had John Paul Fultz practiced more and studied less like Reuther he might have scored the extra five or six points Texas needed to beat Tech.

Thirdly, Tech did no better against A&M in College Station than Texas did. Texas won by two in regulation time, while Tech needed an overtime to get a victory.

And so forth . . . I mean let's face it, Tech, you just weren't any better than two or three other teams this year . . . you have been in the past, and maybe you will be in the future, but not in 1965. We all respect Tech as a very good team, and regret the misfortune of winning games with an ineligible player by the Raiders, but, really, to insist that Tech belongs in the NCAA playoffs instead of Texas or SMU, and to insist that Tech could have done better is acting somewhat less than people expect of good losers.

But then no one else in the conference still hurls ice and cups on the court except you and Baylor. And Baylor lost, too.

Sympathetically,

Some SWC Champ Longhorns

Another comment on this letter: We would like to point out to the anonymous authors that in the final figuring it matters very little that a game was won in an overtime or by a very few points. It is the final score that counts.

Although the Longhorns aren't champions of the SWC either, we feel certain no "Anonymous Raider Fans" will write such a letter as the one we received. We shall consider the matter closed unless some Techsan feels the urge to say his piece and sign his name.

Ford Motor Company is:

Stephen Jaeger
B.B.A., Univ. of Pittsburgh

A key dimension of any job is the responsibility involved. Graduates who join Ford Motor Company find the opportunity to accept responsibility early in their careers. The earlier the better. However, we know the transition from the academic world to the business world requires training. Scholastic achievements must be complemented by a solid understanding of the practical, day-to-day aspects of the business. That is the most direct route to accomplishment.

Stephen Jaeger, of the Ford Division's Milwaukee District Sales Office, is a good example of how it works. His first assignment, in January, 1963, was in the Administrative Department where he had the opportunity to become familiar with procedures and communications between dealerships and the District Office. In four months he moved ahead to the Sales Planning and Analysis Department as an analyst. He studied dealerships in terms of sales history, market penetration and potentials, and model mix. This information was then incorporated into master plans for the District. In March, 1964, he was promoted to Zone Manager—working directly with 19 dealers as a consultant on all phases of their complex operations. This involves such areas as sales, finance, advertising, customer relations and business management. Responsible job? You bet it is—especially for a man not yet 25 years old. Over one million dollars in retail sales, annually, are involved in just one dealership Steve contacts.

As a growth company in a growth industry, Ford Motor Company offers an exceptionally wide spectrum of job opportunities. The chances are good that openings exist in your field of interest. See our representative when he visits your campus. We are looking for men who want responsibility—and will be ready for it when it comes.
