

Anderson To Propose Tech Improvements

Tonight's Student Senate meeting will both begin and end with speeches calling for needed legislation and action.

Roland Anderson, Student Association president, will open this semester's first Senate meeting with his "State of the Student Body Government" address—a tradition called for by the new Student Association Constitution.

The purpose of Anderson's speech will be to point out areas in which improvement needs to be made and to call for action to resolve these problems.

At the conclusion of the Senate meeting, vice president Scott Allen will summarize the Senate's activity during the first semester and will call for legislation.

Senate Retreat Possible

Allen will call for an investigation into conducting a two-day Senate retreat before the fall semester begins, the establishment of a committee to plan a "Government Information Day" and to invite legislators to come to the campus to talk with students during the day, and the possibility of a closed Senate luncheon when administrators could appear before Senators to answer questions and talk with them.

The meeting will also include the first reading of the by-law on summer senators. The by-law calls for the appointment of seven senators to serve during the summer.

appointed by the vice president from those elected during the spring elections and must plan to stay in Lubbock during the summer. One of the senators would be designated secretary and another summer chairman. The chairman would be in charge of freshman orientation and would receive $35 for July and August.

The Senate will consider the last item in the election revision report submitted last semester. The proposed change reads: "A Senator must be a candidate from the school in which he is registered and, if elected, must remain in that school to hold office."

The Senate will also consider revisions to the Freshman Constitution and will elect a new president pro tempore for the Senate who will serve in the absence of the vice president.

The Senate will meet at 7 p.m. in the Biology Auditorium.

MAGIC SPELL—Cupid's love-tipped arrows seem to have inflicted serious amorous thoughts into the minds of Techsians Charles McCasland, Duane Jones, Bill Anderson, Steve Houston and Richard Johnson. Cupid, portrayed by Val Vaden, son of Mr. and Mrs. R. E. Vaden, will make an appearance at the Miss Mademoiselle Pageant at 7:30 p.m. Friday night in Municipal Auditorium. Theme of the pageant will be Valentine's Day. Vaden is supervisor of Men's No. 9.

Campus Comment:

Techsans Speak On The Issues

Do you think Tech fans display good sportsmanship at basketball games?

By IONE HEARTSILL
Staff Writer

Terry Tucker, junior from Houston, thinks criticism is due in some instances, but that the fans' enthusiasm makes up for what bad sportsmanship there may be.

"By the time you get that many fans in such a small area there is bound to be some rowdiness. Actually, I think it is just excitement, not bad intentions," said Don Halsey, a junior of Borger.

Tech Has Best Spirit

Jan Robinson and Vicki Nichols, sophomores, think Tech has the best spirit around. They believe the fans are backing the team, and that there are always a few in any crowd who won't conduct themselves correctly.

"I have seen paper throwing at games everywhere. Only the immature have to express their emotions in that manner," said Charlie Welch, senior.

Pat Smyrl, sophomore, and Melody Stenis, senior, said there is too much booing of decisions, but they don't consider the sportsmanship to be lower than it was the past years when Tech won the SWC sportsmanship trophy.

Joe Terry, sophomore, said more students should realize they are in the public eye and affect person's opinions of the school.

'Enthusiasm Is Natural'

"This is a basketball school, and it is only natural that students would be enthusiastic," says Pat Butler, sophomore.

"I sit at the news desk," says George Chaffee, junior, "and I don't like the thought of being hit in the head some night as I have seen at other schools."

Harold Bradley, head coach at the University of Texas, commented last week that Tech had the worse basketball crowd in the nation.

Tech students agree in an overwhelming majority that Tech fans back their team. They say more students would go if there were room for them, but going at 5 p.m. takes away too much study time.

Most believe booing and throwing paper are in bad taste, but that in a crowd of that size someone is bound to get out of hand.

Women Students Disagree With Mandatory Housing

By BECKY BRYAN
Staff Writer

"The College requires that students live in the college residence halls as long as there are vacancies."

Taken directly from the General Catalog, this statement constitutes the basis of a long, and frequently heated, dispute at Tech.

In a random poll of 100 upperclasswomen, 66 said they would prefer to live off-campus, and 34 said they preferred living in dormitories.

When a "Treador" reporter called one girl, her roommate said, "She isn't here; she's out looking for a job to try to get off-campus."

Florence Phillips, dean of women, was asked to comment on the conflict between women students and the housing rules. She explained that since the first dormitories were built in 1934, the school has felt that the housing program was an integral part of college life.

"The college believes that the experience in group living and the self-discipline inherent in dormitory life are important parts of the development of the mature person.

"The residence hall program was designed to add significantly to the individual's intellectual, personal, and social development."

Marshall Pennington, vice president for business affairs, said Tech uses long term revenue bonds to build dormitories. The Board of Directors guarantees that the dormitories will be filled to capacity in order to pay off the bonds, he said.

The office of the dean of women named several exceptions to the rule that women students live in college residence halls:

Students who live with their parents, husbands, or relatives in Lubbock or its vicinity, students who have extreme financial difficulties, students whose health condition demands special services and living conditions, and students whose part-time employment prohibits their securing meals regularly in a residence hall may submit an application to live off-campus.

When applying for permission to live off-campus the student and her parents must complete a form-letter from Dean Phillips. The letter asks the reason for the request and also states the conditions for off-campus living.

"Permission cannot be given for an undergraduate woman student to live in an apartment. If a bedroom is occupied it must be a part of the home itself; the room may not have a useable outside entrance."

Dean Phillips said the conditions were set up for the protection of the student.

"If the student lives in a home where several rooms are rented, these rooms must be occupied only by women. When requests for off-campus housing are made the parents are agreeing to assume with their daughters the responsibility of locating a place of residence which meets the specifications of the college," Dean Phillips said.

Loyce Katz, assistant dean of women, said that as of Oct. 2, approximately 206 women lived off-campus because there was no room in the dormitories. Approximately 56 students lived with relatives.

Approximately three lived off-campus because of health reasons, and about 25 because of financial difficulty. Miss Katz said most of the women who lived off because they could not get a room were very anxious to move into a residence hall.

Barbara Layendecker, a freshman from Laredo, could not be accommodated in a residence hall at the time of registration and had to live off-campus. She moved into Drane Hall when a vacancy occurred.

Miss Layendecker lived with a divorcee prior to her move to Drane. She said she preferred dorm life to off-campus living. "I felt like I was living with my grandmother or something."

Sharon Stephens, an Arlington senior, lives in Weeks Hall but would prefer to live off-campus. She said her primary purpose in living off-campus would be to have better living facilities for the same price.

"Three of us pay $222 a month to live in Weeks, and we could have a very nice apartment for that. Neither the room nor the food here is worth what we pay."

She also named restrictions and "Mickey Mouse rules" as reasons for wanting to live off-campus. Miss Stephens said a woman should not be required to live on campus after her freshman year, or at least after she's 21.

"After you're 21 you are by law an adult, and you should be able to make up your own mind about where you want to live."

U. N. Security Council To Debate On Viet Nam

UNITED NATIONS, N.Y. (AP)—The United States won its fight Wednesday for a full-scale debate in the U.N. Security Council on Viet Nam.

The vote of Jordan, coming after last-minute instructions from Amman, gave U.S. Ambassador Arthur J. Goldberg victory in his drive for the required nine affirmative votes for putting the question formally before the council.

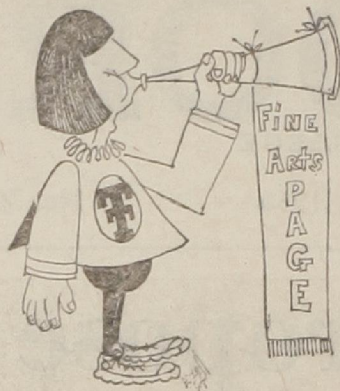

The vote in the 15-member council was 9-2 with 4 abstentions. Immediately afterward the council adjourned for consultations on when to launch what is expected to be a lengthy, acrid debate.

The no votes were cast by the Soviet Union and Bulgaria while France, Mali, Uganda and Nigeria abstained. The big-power veto did not apply because the question was a procedural one.

Supporting the United States were Argentina, Britain, China, Japan, Jordan, the Netherlands, New Zealand, and Uruguay.

Touch Of Vaudeville In 'Carry On, Nurse'

"Carry On, Nurse," first in the series of foreign films to be shown in the Union, is set for 7:30 p.m. today in the Coronado Room.

The British comedy, which gained phenomenal success in both the U.S. and Britain, stars Kenneth Connor, Kenneth Williams and Charles Hawtrey. It concerns the problems of the nurses in the men's ward of a hospital who try to evade the relentless pursuits of their patients.

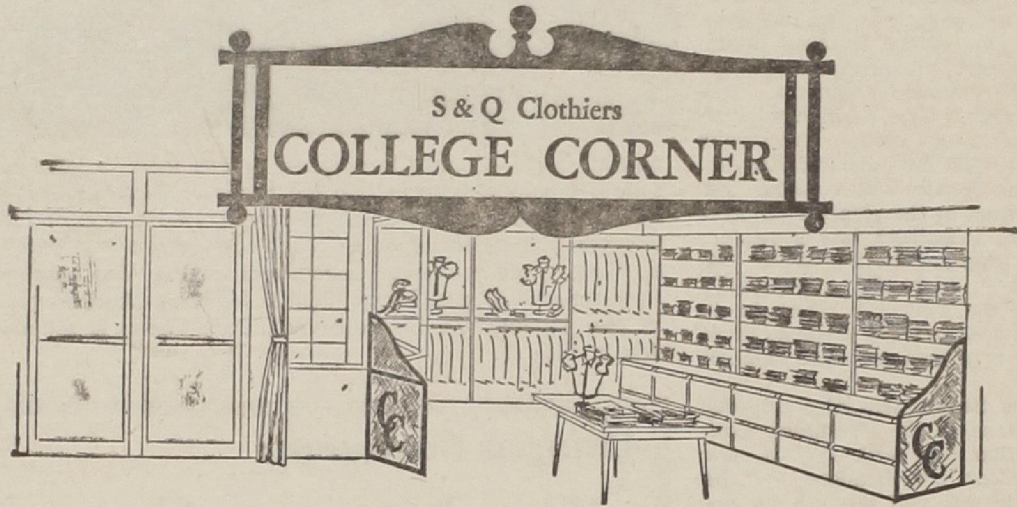

is more a series of vaudeville-type incidents and burlesque jokes so put together as to prove that the humor of the British is not necessarily subtle, droll and reserved. It has been described as "complete and unadulterated farcial chaos, including the wackiest assemblage of characters that ever appeared together on the screen."

The series is presented by the International Interest Committee of the Union.

IN MACBETH CAST—William Metzso, right, as Macbeth and Keith Mano as the murderer are shown in a scene from the National Shakespeare Company's production of "Macbeth," coming to Municipal Auditorium Monday. The play is another part of the Tech Artists Course.

Coeds Represent Tech In '66 Mlle. Board Contest

Five Tech coeds will represent Texas Tech in Mademoiselle's 1966 national College Board competition.

Mademoiselle, a leading women's magazine, sponsors a college board staff which enables women students to participate in the magazine's activities. Coeds on the board submit articles ranging from research projects to current fashion trends on their campuses.

Once a student has been selected for the college board she is eligible to compete for "Mademoiselle's" 20 grand prizes. These prizes include a month's visit in June to New York City as a salaried employee of the magazine.

Women students representing Tech in the 1966 competition include: Teena Brown, Genevieve Ann Caldwell, Camille Keith, Carmen Keith, and Helen McGehee.

Katy Marcotte, an El Paso freshman, moved into Knapp Hall Nov. 1 after living with a family in Lubbock because she could not get a room in a residence hall.

She said off-campus living would be fine for "someone who already knew people in school," but that she didn't know anyone. "I didn't meet very many people and I felt out of touch with the campus. The general atmosphere was more like going to high school."

An Abilene senior who lives in Weeks said she would prefer to live off-campus. She said it would be a good way to meet a cross-section of people. Freedom of restrictions was her main reason for wanting to live off-campus.

"The responsibility for conduct lies in the individual. If she were going to be a loose harlot, she would be that living in the dorm." As another reason for wanting to live off-campus, she said the food would be better in general and "it would be what you preferred."

Jeanne Waldrop, a Roswell, N. M., sophomore, moved into Weeks after living off-campus with a widow for two and one-half months. She said she preferred living in the dorm, because she was lonesome living off-campus. It was inconvenient, the house was dirty and cluttered, and the widow complained constantly, Miss Waldrop said.

She added, "Most of the people I've talked to don't like it (living off-campus), because they have to live with a griping old lady. It would be better if you lived in an apartment."

Rahna Penix, a Dallas senior, said that instead of building new women's dormitories, the school "should let some of us (seniors) live off-campus."

"This school has the potential to be the best school in Texas, but its conservative viewpoint hinders any action that would bring advancement—academic or otherwise."

A "Toreador" reporter asked Dean Phillips why the school didn't allow seniors who so desired to live off-campus rather than build new women's dorms. She said, "Because it still wouldn't accommodate the new freshmen and sophomores we enrolled."

She said there had been an increase of approximately 1,000 women students this year. In the five-year period between 1960 and 1965, the number of women students increased 109.8%.

She said, "I wouldn't want seniors to live off-campus for the same reason I wouldn't want sorority girls to live off."

"The younger students would be deprived of the educational benefits of the senior girls' living with them. These girls have important educational contributions to teach, and their presence enriches the organization."

Texas Delegation Opposes Four-Year House Terms

WASHINGTON (AP)—A majority of House members apparently favor President Johnson's proposed 4-year term for representatives in Congress, if polls are correct. But this is not true of the Texas delegation.

Most of the Texans are against the idea. Some say they will support it, but without enthusiasm, so that the people themselves can make the decision in a constitutional referendum. A few endorse it.

Rep. Wright Patman of Texarkana, 36-year veteran, said: "I've always opposed it on the theory that a two-year term keeps members of the House closer to the people. It gives the people a firmer hold on the purse strings."

Rep. Jack Brooks of Beaumont, in Congress since 1953 and a member of the House Judiciary subcommittee which last year approved a 4-year term bill, said: "I have always been in favor of the proposal. It would give a congressman more time to work at his job to which he was elected. As it is now he hardly finishes one campaign before he has to start out campaigning for the next election."

He said some problems are involved but these could be solved. One would arise in keeping apportionment of representatives among the states current, especially if they were elected on a staggered basis so that a half or a third were elected every two years. This he said, might necessitate taking of a national census every five years instead of every decade.

Veteran Lubbock Congressman George Mahon said there are two sides to the question, then went on to give his opinion: "The House of Representatives is and should be very close to the people. For that reason I believe a 2-year term is preferable." Mahon is chairman of the powerful House Appropriations Committee.

The newly elected chairman of the Texas delegation for the current session, Rep. Bob Casey of Houston, expressed a view shared by several: "I'm not enthusiastic for the 4-year proposal, although running all the time as required by the 2-year term does run into a lot of expense and is time consuming. I would probably vote to submit the issue to the states as a proposed constitutional amendment. Possibly a 3-year term would be a good compromise."

The President's own congressman, Rep. J. J. (Jake) Pickle of Austin, also would go for a 3-year term.

"The criticism that the 2-year term is not realistic is a good and valid one," he said.

"You no more than finish one campaign than you have to start another. I do believe that the members of the House should stay close to the people. I wish we could have a 3-year term."

Rep. Henry Gonzalez of San Antonio, the new vice chairman of the Texas delegation, said: "I believe, since Congress has tended to be in longer and longer sessions, that a 4-year term would be better. Originally a 2-year term was thought best suited to keep a representative in close touch with the people, but time has changed this concept."

Rep. Bob Page of Waco, strong for retaining the 2-year term, said: "Our founding forefathers devised this means of keeping one of our legislative bodies close to the people. In England members of Parliament are elected for 5-year terms, but when the government fails to get a majority on an issue they may have to go back before the electors immediately to determine the will of the people."

Rep. Jim Wright of Fort Worth voiced this opinion: "Certainly a 4-year term would be more convenient for the lawmakers, but the system was not originally constructed to serve the convenience of the congressmen but rather the will of the public.

"I am inclined to feel that those who drafted the Constitution were wise in providing that half the national legislature should be continually fresh from the public and thus continually responsive to the public mood and responsible to the public need."

The House always has served as a stepping stone to the Senate, where terms are for six years.

About half the present senators once served in the House. With this in mind, Rep. Ray Roberts of McKinney said: "I think a 4-year term would be a good thing for the House, but I don't think the Senate is going to let us have it. That would make it possible for a representative in an off-election year to run for the Senate and still retain his House seat."

"I personally am willing to face the voters of my district every two years," he said.

Shaw Suggests Seating Solution

Dear Editor,

The seating problems at the football and basketball games will continue to grow worse as the university grows unless some sensible solution is found and effected.

As it is now, one needs to start looking for a place to sit "only" two hours before the game or special attraction begins. As Tech approaches University of Texas in size, how long before the event do you think students will begin filling the seats? Should I ask my date to go both to a picnic (in the stands of course) and the game?

I have this suggestion to offer the college. The students could get tickets for reserved seats to each game during the week before each home tilt. To avoid long lines at the ticket booths, several stands could be set up around the campus. No one stand should have all good or all bad tickets, and the best seats should not always be offered first but rather at random during the week so that no one would know when and where the best tickets were offered.

This plan will naturally provoke those who have nothing better to do than just sit and wait. However, this same plan will stop the detestable seat saving, allow those who must work late to have an assured seat, avoid sitting in the cold and/or rain, and permit many students to eat dinner before the game.

If this plan is not acceptable, perhaps the administration could form a committee to improve the present situation. If this did happen, we students should not let it turn out to be one of those "what happened to" committees such as the Tech Name Change Committee, Book Store Profit Committee, Traffic Improvement Committee, Dorm Food Committee and other such ill-fated committees of the past.

No matter what action is ultimately taken, now is the time to initiate suggestions which will make for more enjoyable entertainment next year.

Sincerely yours,
J. Andy Shaw

Tech-Ex Writes About Censure

Dear Editor,

I'm enclosing a copy of a letter I just mailed to Tech's Board of Directors.

The "enclosed reason" mentioned in the first paragraph refers to a page from the American Association of University Professors Bulletin, listing "Censured Administrations." Texas Tech appears on this list, in the company of such august, progressive institutions as Alcorn Agricultural and Mechanical College, Grove City College, University of South Florida, and Alabama State (all for various violations of academic freedom).

I'm sure, of course, that my frustrated outburst will result in rolling heads, crumbling towers and a general spread of Progress, Reform, and Excellence throughout Tech-land—but just to make sure, you might want to tuck all this away in a filler-space somewhere deep in the Daily T's pages . . . unless, of course, freedom of the press has also gone out the window down there.

Sincerely,
Nolan Porterfield
Cape Girardeau, Mo.

Gentlemen:

Enclosed is one of the reasons why I bitterly regret having expended five years of my time, several thousand dollars of my money, and a great deal of energy and emotion at Texas "Tech."

The other reason is that nobody—particularly the Board of Directors—seems to give a damn. No one really cares except those of us who love Tech in spite of its silly double-t, its arrogant provincialism, its AAUP censure and its absurd name. Which is why I always claim East Overshoe State Agricultural and Bakers University as my alma mater. That way I don't have to answer the inevitable question: "How did you ever get an English degree at a trade school like Texas Tech—isn't that the Poor Boy's A&M?"

Sincerely,
Nolan Porterfield

Students Criticize Tech Registration

Dear Editor,

We would like to express our appreciation in regard to your article in the Toreador of Jan. 27, 1966. Registration procedures at this college are at best outdated.

We have many gripes as everyone else does, I am sure; but we realize that you are not the one to whom we should complain. It is comforting to know that at least one person in a position of some authority has more to say than, "I'm sorry but we just can't help you."

An Open Letter:

To All Raider Fans . . .

The coach of the distinguished University of Texas basketball team, whose dashing dribblers have come up this season with the brilliant record of three losses and one win, has finally, thank goodness, discovered the real reason for this rather shaky record.

The fault lies not in his "court jesters," but in our Court Jestlers, and our fans, and our audiences. His boys, while playing at "The" University (whatever that might be), have managed to so stimulate their fans that, during the dribblers' performances on the hardwood, the gym in Austin is a veritable incarnation of Emily Post's book on etiquette.

So serene, so sensitive, so peaceful have Coach Bradley's boys become, that he hates to bring them to a game in West Texas, where folks happen to enjoy a good basketball game, and don't mind showing it.

As a matter of fact, said the UT coach, the Texas Tech fans are so barbaric, so rowdy, that his team will probably lose again. Not, mind you, due to their inability to play basketball . . . no, because we influence the team, and even the officials, with our adamant display of school spirit.

Well, Coach Bradley, we'll make you a deal. This Saturday night, we Texas Tech fans will do our best (or possibly our worst) to act like UT fans. But we'll try: we won't make very much noise; we won't protest a bad call by the official; we won't yell "Roo," "Roo," too loud; we won't disturb one of your boys when he attempts a free throw; and we might even clap for your players if they should possibly sink a basket.

Yes sir, we'll make you all these deals. But there's one deal, one promise, we won't make. We still can't promise that after the game you'll be happy on the trip back to Austin. Because the Red Raiders can beat the Mossyhorns anytime, anywhere, any place—regardless of the surroundings.

But we'll go on and make you the rest of these deals, and see if Bouncing Bevo can either put up or—well, we all know how that old saying goes.

So, good luck, Coach . . . And hook 'em Raiders.

Delegation...

Rep. Walter Rogers of Pampa opposed the 4-year proposal, saying: "It's very bad. It strikes at the very roots of representative government."

Other comments:
Rep. Clark Fisher of San Angelo: "I'm not enthused about it, although I'd probably vote to submit it to the people."

Rep. John Young of Corpus Christi: "I have mixed feelings about a 4-year term. These are not strong ones. I'm not tearing my shirt either way."

Sen. Ralph Yarborough, without committing himself said the proposal would take careful consideration.

Sen. John Tower, only Republican in the Texas delegation, said the 2-year term should be kept because: "A House election only in presidential election years would become totally subservient to the executive."

M&M MAGIC—Tech's "M" squad accounted for a large part of the scoring in Tuesday's win over TCU. Junior Guard Bobby Measells (right) led all scorers with 24 points, including two free shots that put the game on ice with 44 seconds left. Dub Malaise, (left) the court quarterback and usual scoring leader, canned only 16 points, but they were enough to give him the new school career scoring record. The Froggie trying to cope with Measells' dribbling is Carey Sloan (25). A vain attempt to stop Malaise's layup is made by by Wayne Kreis (20). (Staff Photos)

Court Says Redistrict Plan Legal

HOUSTON (P)—A special three judge federal court Wednesday upheld the use of the new redistricting plan for the Texas House of Representatives in 1966 elections but said the Legislature will have to rewrite sections pertaining to 11 flitorial districts by Aug. 1, 1967.

The court held the 1965 redistricting act as constitutional except for the 11 flitorial districts that were ruled as unconstitutional and invalidated.

Date Postponed

The effective date of the decree invalidating the 11 districts was postponed, however, until Aug. 1, 1967 in order to enable the Texas Legislature to enact substitute legislation.

In the event the legislature fails to act the order spelled out how the flitorial districts would be handled in future elections beyond the 1966 election.

The ruling cleared the way for the 1966 election procedures to move into full swing. The deadlines for the candidates to file is Feb. 7.

A new redistricting plan for the state Senate was not involved in the court challenge that led to Wednesday's ruling.

Shares Representative

A flitorial district is one in which a populous county with one or more representatives with one another representative with one or more less populous counties.

As an example Smith County (Tyler) was to have had one representative of its own and share a flitorial representative with Rusk County.

Pope To Renew Peace Attempt

VATICAN CITY (P)—Pope Paul VI is "determined to go to the limit to help resolve the Vietnamese situation" and is considering dramatic new steps, a well-placed Vatican source said Wednesday.

He may make a new trip outside Italy, possibly to Geneva or anywhere else he felt his intervention might help to end the war, this source and others agreed. They made no mention of a possible trip to Viet Nam.

The Pope also might make another public appeal to leaders involved in the conflict.

The Vatican weekly L'Osservatore della Domenica said the Pope "is not resigning" from an attempt to bring peace to Viet Nam.
