the arrest of 15 of the 16 suspects named in 31 indictments handed down by a grand jury earlier in the day.

Police continued to search for the remaining suspect, who had not been located by late Tuesday

The arrests are the culmination of a year-long operation involving undercover task force officers making drug purchases from local dealers. The operation was coordinated by the West Central Texas Interlocal Crime Task Force and the Coleman County Sheriff's Department,

The charges range from misdemeanor delivery of marijuana to felony delivery of cocaine, which carries a maximum penalty of five to 99 years or life in prison, according to Task Force Commander Frank Cleveland.

"It's critical to try and arrest as many of the suspects simultaneously as possible because once the word spreads, the suspects have a tendency to scatter — and some may leave town - making it much harder for the officers to affect the arrests," Cleveland

According to Coleman County Sheriff Wade Turner, the arrests will have a "significant impact" on drug trade in the county.

We were aware the particular people arrested in this case were active in the area, but in a small county like this it's real hard for who the officer is," he said. "The undercover operation worked like a charm."

The most exciting and wonderful thing happened recently. I opened the mail to find that Mrs. Howard (Juanice) Norris had made a very generous contribution to the library building fund. How can we truly express appreciation for such a boost to the fund and to those who are working to build it? Thank you, friend, Juanice.

The weather forecast for this week is for cold and unpleasant weather. Personally, I secretly welcome the change. Public activities usually slow down. Weather can be an excuse to stay at home and read a good book!

A least a year ago, Jim bought two books that I really want to read. A Collection of Lord Peter Wimsey Stories by Dorothy L. Sayers and A Collection of Stories by Agatha Christie. Both of these English mystery writers are worldwide favorites. The T.V. series on PBS, also English, are among my favorites. There are some Agatha Christie stories in our local library and the librarians can order any others from the Big Country

Our library does not have a video system, but you can buy these videos. Also available are Christie's Adventures of Poirot.

If you like mystery on the light side, there is a new Miss Melville out. The author, Evelyn Smith is a real New Yorker and her character is very American. Miss Melville Rides a Tiger once again helps her government. There are secret agents, drug dealers, and undercover operations.

A real life mystery - solved - is written up in Eichmann in My Hands. Peter Z. Molkin had once promised his mother that he would do something to avenge the death of his sister, Fruma. She was one of an entire village of Jewish men, women and children killed by the Nazis. The man responsible was Eichmann. Fifteen years after World War II a team of Israeli agents finally located this man. Because the group may have violated some international laws the government censored the story. Only once did the author break the silence - to tell his dying mother.

The author has studied the origin of proverbs most of his life - 40 years. They collected 250,000 and found duplications so the book has 20,000 items. Most of these can not be traced to the origin, only the earliest use. Benjamin Franklin copied all but 20 of his collection, Shakespeare and Geoffrey Chaucer were early authors of proverbs.

Western fans will be happy to know that Elmer Kelton writing as Tom Early has written the 4th of his Sons of Texas-The Proud series. Many compare this to L'Amour's Sackett family. Kelton brings the Lewis clan from Tennessee to Texas in the early 1800's adventure before Texas was free of Mexico.

The ten year census and the constitutional requirement to redistrictafter each census creates frustration in the political arena among business. We will cease to be comthe political players. Under certain circumstances lifelong friendships are done away with, and worlds of hard feelings are created among the legislators. When two legislators suddenly find they are living in the same district, and will be forced to run against each other at election time, all productivity ceases in that arm of government for the duration."

Also, another redistricting problem continues to grow, this being that as the state gains in population by numbers, the gain is practically all in the urban areas of the state, which basically means that most of the losses of representation in the legislature are in rural Texas with urban Texas gaining those members. This gives the urban areas an ever-growing, more disproportionate Share of legislative tributed by the Texas Conservative membership.

It now appears that even though the outlook of the State Senate re- our offices and we will be please to districting effort is still anyone's guess, the House plan is well in place.

representing District 73, which will only include Brown and Coleman Counties of the present 65th District. I would like to point out he will not be a candidate for reone very important factor at this time, which may have gotten lost in the redistricting exercise, and that is that the present member will continue to represent his present district until the new legislator is sworn into office. In this case, I still represent the 65th District, and will proudly continue to be your representative until January, 1993. I want my constituency to feel free to call on me, even after the January, 1993 date, if you feel that I can be of assistance.

Becoming involved in the inner workings of government is an extremely easy task in-this legislative process, if you make an effort, and show interest in the issues. One of my greatest challenges, at present, is heath care, not only in Texas, but over the United States, as well Having been named a member of the Governor's new Health Care Task Force will hopefully give me an opportunity to have a meaningful role in one of Texas' greatest challenges.

Further, an area of major concern to me is the economic impact on the U.S. economy being brought about by the "animal right's and environmental" extremist movements. I strongly support the protection of the environment, and feel that this should be an item of major concern to everyone. However, common sense, and the power of States will be completely out of the Appraisal District. agricultural and manufacturing petitors in the world market place, which is already precariously near ployment picture in the U.S., which is already in dire circumtherefore, we the citizens are ultimately the losers. I firmly believe that the environment can be protected without becoming over reactive and that agriculture and industry can prosper at the same time. People with a common sense approach must become the players, not spectators, in the matters of environmental protection. I have recently written a paper on this subiect, which has been printed and dis-Coalition. If you wish to read this paper, please call, or write one of provide you with a copy.

In the final minutes of the 3rd Special Called Session, which Under the House plan I will be ended late in the afternoon, Wednesday, January 8th. Speaker Gib Lewis announced, in a personal privilege speech to the House, that election. There had been some speculation as to whether he would, or would not run again, for a long period of time. His announcement opened the door for all the many hopefuls, who now wish to replace him as Speaker of the Texas House. The Speaker politics is hot and heavy, with all the hopefuls, and their personal supporters, twisting arms of the members for their vote. I feel that this presents a wonderful opportunity to choose a Speaker is a rural west Texan, and will give new hope to rural interests.

The public education finance problem istestill hung up in the Court, but the Court's decision ustry, MHMR problems, and the urgency of correcting the taxing error of the non-profit charity bingo operators, could well make another special session a reality in late winter, or early spring. There is certainly no shortage of challenges in today's society, nor has there ever been at any point in our history. Let me note that if the Courts approve the redistricting plan, the election date will be March 10 - if not- we will probably be re-scheduled for April 11th.

We now have extended the office hours of our 65th District Office in Coleman to a full work day. Office

Another County Candidate

The field of county candidates has increased by three and another race has developed. Hurby Hubbard has joined Gaylen Pickett and incumbent Vernon Slate in the race for County Commissioner, Precinct Three. In Precinct one where Willard Allen of RR1, Santa Anna, and incumbent Jack Strickland of Burkett had already announced, Casey Delleney, an employee of Stempel Mfg. in Coleman, has tossed his hat in the ring (No picture for Mr. Delleney).

Incumbent Rondoe Horton of Santa Anna has picked up an opponent in the race for Constable. Jerry Crosby, an owner of 3K's Barbecue in Coleman, last week decided he would make a run for it.

Coleman Museum Recreates WWII Days

By WILLIAM TAYLOR San Angelo Standard-Times

COLEMAN - It's not a typical museum. There are no curators, exhibits or even a fee to get in. But there is history.

Instead of holding a collection of ancient artifacts, the Coleman

Warbird Museum features a dozen working airplanes, mostly of World War II vintage.

"The museum here is the planes, and we restore them, repair them and get them back to flying status," said Randy Long, one of the museum's mechanics and pilots. "Some of the planes we sell, and some of them we keep. They all get flown as regularly as possible.

The planes are housed in four hangars at the Coleman Municipal Airport and are owned by Coleman Warbird Museum Inc., a company owned and run by Kenny Day, president, and Bill Laws, vice president and secre-

Day and Laws both spend time traveling to find more planes to restore, and both were out of town during a recent visit by the Standard-Times.

"The warbirds, those are their interests — specifically World War II planes," Day's wife, Judy, explained, adding that her hus-band's dream had always been to return to Coleman where his grandfather was a World War II pilot instructor at what is now the Coleman Municipal Airport.

In those days pilots at the airport trained in PT-series aircraft. "PT" stands for primary trainer and was the first type of airplane the new military pilots would learn to fly, Long explained.

After they completed their training in Coleman they would go to another airstrip and train in 'BT" (meaning basic trainer) planes and eventually graduate to "AT" (advance trainer) aircraft before going on to fly actual with Annie Lou Vaughn.

Funds given to Mrs. Vaughn. secretary-treasurer of the cemetery association, were from George and Goldie Haynes in memory of Jim and Mattie Linebary, Elizabeth Starr and Francis Stearns Fleming. Warren and Margaret Barton gave in memory of Russie James and Mildred Ruggles.

Roberta and Pat McShan Sr. and Pat Jr., Shannon, Erica and Chase McShan of Brownwood were out Sunday at the late Russie James' place tending to chores, hunting skunks and cleaning up around the place. Also visiting at the cemetery since it was such a pretty day.

And about skunks, I have a few you folks are welcome to. Seems there are more this year than I have ever seen in my lifetime and we can lay that to the environmentalists too, along with a few other things.

Sunday dinner guests with Edna Laughlin were Darla Kay and Donnie Barnum and two children, Charlotte Lee and two children, and Doyle Laughlin, joining them in the afternoon were Billy Roy and Mildred Laughlin and Mrs. Daisy McClatchy.

The training aircraft often had guns, but not with as much firepower as the actual combat planes, he said. Most of the planes the museum keeps are of the trainer variety, because those are easier to maintain and less expensive to operate, Long said.

combat planes, he added.

The collection includes planes of the PT, BT and AT variety. Its AT series craft include an AT6. which was used to train fighter pilots, and an AT11, in which pilots. bombardier crews trained.

The bombing trainer has a clear nose much like a real bomber and the AT6 is now used for racing, Long said.

Other planes at the museum include two Chinese-made YAK 18As from the 1960s, a Finishbuilt jet trainer called a Fouga and some U.S. trainers from the Korean War period. There's also a Piaggio Royal Gull - nick-named by Long as "the Boat,"

The values of the individual planes often exceed $100,000

because it's an amphibious air-each. The museum currently is restoring a Douglas A26 Invader, a combat fighter plane from World War II, and plans to sell it when it's finished.

"You've got to sell some to help keep the rest of them going, Long explained.

Because the museum is not set up in a typical display format, it doesn't attract a high number of visitors, but its planes are seen on a regular basis at air shows around the country.

Long explained that the museum visits 12 or 15 air shows each year, mostly during the summer.

"We might take five or six planes to one air show," he said. "Our biggest problem is finding people to fly them all there.
