In Our Opinion

By W. T. HAYS

PASSING THE BUCK is the old Army game, they say, but the old Army can't hold a candle to people in general.

The youngsters blame the oldsters and the oldsters blame the youngsters, the parents blame the teachers and the teacher the parents and on and on it goes to the politicians blaming the news media and vice-versa, and there is no end.

When it comes down to the nitty gritty, we are all to blame to some degree. We are all partially right and all partially wrong, but we can't actually place the blame for our ills on any one group or thing. It just isn't so.

Crises and problems are not new to America. We can look back with pride and take comfort in the fact that this country has endured crises of one kind or another for nearly 200 years. Why? Because it was founded on strong basic principles, and like fine old silver, the Constitution does not deteriorate with age, and with some rededication, determination and elbow grease it will polish out to a fine shine again.

It is not so much new approaches that we need as a return to values and noble ideals of our founding fathers.

But one thing is sure — we can't sit idly by and let George do it for us. It is strictly "do-it-yourself" project.

The liberals can't do it for us; the conservatives can't; the Democrats can't; the Republicans can't; the bureaucrats can't; the churches can't; and the schools can't.

Only we, ourselves, acting as individuals, and in concert, can re-establish the basic values which we seem to have lost.

The road back begins with the Golden Rule, which we must apply with equality and as a matter of personal choice. We must restore self-discipline, and obey the law with sincerity and vigor before we see a restoration of order. We must return the responsibility of governmental services to the level closest to the people and we will witness the decline of bureaucracy and relief from the enormous cost of big government.

When we return to the concept that a man's worth should be based on his personal achievements and his individual conduct, then we will have restored the dignity of man in its truest sense.

We must insure equal opportunity instead of guaranteed success, encouraging personal initiatives to gain the unlimited possibilities for any man.

That is the cure for our ills. Who is to blame?

ASC News...

by Joe K. Taylor

Farmers who have contributed to stabilizing markets for food and fiber and to the conservation of soil and water resources by taking part in the 1970 wheat, feed grain, and cotton programs are receiving their program payments earlier this year than ever before.

The first batch of payments will be made beginning July 1. Additional payments will continue to be made as rapidly as farmers certify compliance with program requirements and as fast as individual farm records can be processed and checks returned to ASC county offices for distribution to farmers.

Most payments should be completed by August 1, if the farmers who signed up will complete the necessary certification indicating that they have complied with all of the program provisions.

Farm program payments help maintain a balance between supply and demand. Both farmers and consumers benefit from this balance.

Agricultural productivity almost doubled in the past 20 years, but farmers' markets take only about a third of this increase. This means we need new markets. Farm programs help us hold down farm production and maintain farm income until new markets are developed and old ones expanded.

Huge surpluses must be avoided. They are costly in tax dollars and are wasteful of food and fiber.

Farm programs help farmers make adjustments in their individual farming operations that in the long run will result in more farm income from the marketplace and less from the public treasury.

Since farmers are $50-billion a year purchasers of goods and services produced in our cities and rural towns, the workers and business firms in cities and towns benefit from farm programs, too.

Farm programs also make important contributions to conservation of natural resources and help fight pollution. Acres that are diverted out of crop production under farm programs are put to conserving uses such as the growing of grass. Such practices conserve soil and water, provide habitat for wildlife and agricultural chemicals or wasteproductions, and reduce air pollution caused by blowing dust.

When a farmer takes land out of production and puts it to a soil and water conserving use, he gives up the value of the production he normally would have received as income. At the same time, the farmer pays taxes on land removed from production even though that land produces no crops. Program payments are designed to compensate him for these voluntary contributions toward a more stable farm economy and a better environment.

In recent years, the U. S. Department of Agriculture had advanced partial payments to farmers during the spring sign-up period for the feed grain program only. The balance of the feed grain payment, and cotton and wheat payments were generally made starting in late July and continuing through August and September, or later.

Because of budget restraints partial payments could not be made this year. However, the Department made a commitment to farmers that full payments would be made as early as possible. That commitment is now being fulfilled.

STOCK CATFISH APPLICATIONS DUE AUGUST 1

The August 1 application deadline for channel catfish and hybrid sunfish for stock purposes is drawing near, the Texas Parks and Wildlife Department reminds.

Each year, the Department distributes more than three million fingerling channel catfish for stocking throughout the state.

The deadline for large-mouth black bass, which spawn much earlier than catfish, was April 1.

Application forms may be obtained at the Department's Austin headquarters or in the various regional offices.

The deliveries ordinarily are made during October and November.

One hatchery superintendent indicated this year's crop of incubator catfish is going to be a good one. "We're in good shape right now," said James C. Searcy of the Eagle Mountain Lake hatchery.

He said the incubators are racked up, the brooders have been returned to the holding ponds and about 430,000 young catfish are growing well.

Searcy said this year might possibly be the best for catfish raising at his hatchery, and the demand for the fingerlings will be met.
