Mountain Echoes

By LEONA BRUCE

Definition of a home-town newspaper: A publication everybody reads to see if the editor got the news correctly.

An interesting young couple passed through Santa Anna last Friday. They were traveling by bicycle from Oregon to Austin, Texas, with their bedrolls, small tent and other equipment on their racks. Their experiences make a good story, crossing the mountains, a windstorm at Dalhart which blew their tent some distance, and the unaccustomed hot weather. In no apparent hurry, they asked about a good place to eat barbecue in Brownwood where they planned to spend the night. This is the modern way to find adventure.

We were encouraged by the rain on Monday morning. One thing we can be sure of, in the driest times: A drouth is always ended by a rain.

bk
Thus endeth my career as a newspaper columnist. I have written eight books and published six of them, and countless articles for newspapers and historical magazines. This three weeks of putting out a column have been a small challenge to me, and I will think of the apt and interesting things I could have said, but didn't. As the old-time radio speakers used to say, thanks for listening!

Vandalism Doesn't Stop Wedding

Mary Helen Hunter, granddaughter of Mrs. Benice Hunter of Santa Anna, walked calmly and radiantly down the aisle to her recent wedding, appearing to the guests that nothing had gone wrong with the plans.

Two hours before the ceremony, Mary Helen and her family had arrived at the church and parked in the portico. They went inside to see that all was well, leaving her elaborate lace gown carefully packaged in the car. In a few moments they returned to the car to find that someone had lifted up the tissue and poured a cup of coke and ice down the front of the gown. Mary Helen rushed to the home of her sister, Ann Monnig and spent the two hours sponging and blow-drying her new bridal gown. Then she rushed back to the church, barely in time, and nobody, including the groom, noticed a spot or knew there had been a problem.

Mr. and Mrs. Simmons expressed their thanks to the fire department for extinguishing the blaze so quickly.

The Queen Anne collar and bodice of her gown were appliqued with motifs of Alencon lace beaded with pearls. The long fitted sleeves of her gown had insertions of lace beaded with pearls and were finished with points over her hands. The full circular chiffon skirt fell from an Empire waistline and extended in back to form her cathedral length train. The hemline and train of her gown were finished with a wide scalloped border of hand-clipped re-embroidered Alencon lace. Her veil of bridal illusion was edged in matching lace and was attached to a camelot cap of lace beaded with pearls. The bride wore a pearl necklace that was worn by her Mother at her wedding.

New Program For Brucellosis Control Explained

A new multi-area plan for brucellosis control in Texas is now in effect with new regulations for moving cattle, explains Roger Blackburn, county agent with the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, Texas A&M University System.

Blackburn said the new program divides the state into two sections. The Class A area includes about 130 counties in the western part of the state, which is relatively free of brucellosis. The Class B area—which lies east of Class A—consists of counties which have historically had more problems with the disease, he said.

Brucellosis, or Bangs disease, is a highly contagious disease which affects cattle and other animals, as well as humans. In people, it is called undulant fever.

Blackburn said that in cattle the disease may cause abortions, weaker calves, lower milk production and sterility. Failure to control the disease could result in more restrictions concerning interstate movement of Texas cattle.

Under the new regulations, he explained that all breeding cattle—male and female—18 months or older will be eligible for testing. Female dairy cattle officially calving vaccinated between three and six months of age would not be tested until they are 20 months old. Female beef cattle vaccinated between three and 10 months of age would not be tested until they reach 24 months of age.

Extension Service Offers Communities Budget Aid

As Texas communities struggle to provide essential services like sewer and water systems, the question is always the same: "What's it going to cost?"

Such communities now have the opportunity to determine these costs without spending thousands of dollars in consulting fees.

By using budgeting assistance from the Texas Agricultural Extension Service, local leaders can determine the most cost-efficient methods of providing such services as fire protection, sewer systems, solid waste disposal, health clinics, water systems, ambulance services and transportation for the elderly.

How much will an ambulance service in our rural area cost? Which is more economical for us, a green box dumpster garbage collection system or a house-to-house system? How should we route our school buses in order to save money and yet provide efficient service?

"We don't make these decisions for community leaders, but provide them with budget facts and possible alternatives," points out Dr. James I. Mallett, Extension Service state leader in community development. "From that information they can make a decision, not by guess or estimate or politics, but by hard, solid data."

"The tide has turned and Americans are beginning to move back to the rural areas," contends Mallett. "Rural development efforts directed toward creation of rural job opportunities have been quite successful, and now many areas which experienced a population decline from 1950 to 1970 are beginning to grow."

These new residents are bringing to their rural homes a demand for the type of highly developed community services they learned to expect in the cities.

"Association with these new residents and exposure to travel and the communications media have made even long-term rural residents desirous of the same type of public services enjoyed by urban residents," notes the Extension officer. "However, these increased demands are coming at an inopportune time. There may be more people in the area but there's not more property, and property tax money is a key source of revenue for local governments."

Faced with inflation and increased cost of technological advances occurring in equipment and management systems used to provide community services, local leaders want to know the most cost efficient way to provide these services.

"In addition to preparing cost budgets, the Extension Service can aid local communities in determining point-of-origin locations and cost-efficient routing systems for such services as garbage collection and school bus pick-up," notes Mallett.

If a community has two fire trucks and five possible housing locations, where is the best place to house the truck? If an ambulance serves three towns in a demand area, which town will become its headquarters?

"Such community service questions are complex and frustrating. The decisions involve economics, politics, and state and federal requirements, and the Extension Service can lend a helping hand," says Mallett.

By contacting their county Extension agent, local leaders can find help without paying thousands of dollars in private consulting fees.

We Shall Not Kill

Thou shalt not kill. Ex. 20:13.

All acts of injustice that tend to shorten life; the spirit of hatred and revenge, or the indulgence of any passion that leads to injurious acts toward others, or causes us even to wish them harm (for "whoso hateth his brother is a murderer"); a selfish neglect of caring for the needy or suffering; all self-indulgence or unnecessary deprivation or excessive labor that tends to inure health,—all these are, to a greater or less degree, violations of the sixth commandment.

Some sacrifice physical and moral obligations, thinking to find happiness, and they lose both soul and body. Others will seek their happiness in indulgence of an unnatural appetite, and consider the indulgence of taste more desirable than health and life. Many suffer themselves to be enchained by sensual passions, and will sacrifice physical strength, intellect, and moral powers, to the gratification of lust. They will bring themselves to untimely graves, and in the Judgement will be charged with self-murder.

The spirit of hatred and revenge originated with Satan; and it led him to put to death the Son of God. Whoever cherishes malice or unkindness is cherishing the same spirit; and its fruit will be unto death. In the revengeful though the evil deed lies enfolded, as the plant in the seed.

The law of God takes note of the jealousy, envy, hatred, malignity, revenge, lust, and ambition that surge through the soul, but have not found expression in outward action, because the opportunity, not the will, has been wanting. And these sinful emotions will be brought into the account in the day when "God shall bring every work into judgement, with every secret thing.

Christ is righteousness, sanctification, and redemption to those who believe in Him... He set before us a perfect example of holy obedience to God's law.

Years Ago In The News

The following stories are from the August, 1 and 8, 1924 issues of the News:

Fred Battle is walking around this week with a bruised foot, making a long step and a short one, as the result of dropping a bottle on his foot Saturday. However, it was not the kind of bottle people usually get in mind when the bottle subject is raised; but instead, it was a 5-gallon water bottle used for drinking water at Burton Lingo Company office.

The grim reaper, death, again visited in this city last Saturday and claimed the spirit of Mrs. J.B. Keagans.

Mrs. Keagans was 70 years of age, last January, and had lived in Coleman County for many years. It was the editor's (J.J. Gregg) pleasure to occupy a room in the Keagans home three years ago, and we learned to appreciate her friendship during our stay in the humble home of her and her good husband.

The remains of Mrs. Keagans were carried to Coleman Tuesday for burial after an appropriate funeral service conducted at the family residence here.

Campfire Girls To Organize Here

An effort is being made at this time to give the 7, 8, and 9th grade girls a scouting program in the Campfire Girls Discoverer group.

The Campfire Girls have been in Santa Anna for two years now, however, the Discoverer Group has not gotten started due to lack of girls interest and lack of leadership.

We now have a leader and few girls going into the 7th grade who are interested in staying with the Campfire Girl program. We'd like to invite other girls interested in joining the group to contact Pat Wright, 1008 Avenue B, 8-3655.

These girls will have the opportunity to go camping, hiking, and learn about the outdoors and also domestic things, such as cooking, sewing, and other crafts.

Meeting times will be set up at a later date and will be scheduled at a time of convenience for the girls of this age group taking other commitments into consideration.

SDA COOKING SCHOOL PARTICIPANTS

SDA Children Enjoy Cooking School

Immediately after the vacation Bible School the Seventh-day Adventist Church, Mrs. Lily Cabansag conducted a cooking and nutrition school for children of the primary and junior ages. Thirty one boys and girls enjoyed assisting with the cooking and especially the sampling of the food they cooked.

The children were taught the nutritional values of various foods, how to prepare them and to serve them. There will probably be more classes later.

During the five days Mrs. Cabansag was helped in the work by member from the Bible School as well as from the hospital and nursing center.

31 Enrolled In Health School

Ranger Park Hospital was host to 31 community children who enrolled in our first Vacation Health School. The school was under the direction of Lily Cabansag, assisted by Rose Moxley and Evalyn Young.

Games, stories and visual aids such as films, posters, transparencies and a take apart model that the children named "Mr. Body," were used in helping to discover the joys of properly caring for our body and learning good health habits. Each day we witnessed preparation of healthful food from the four food groups with samples to try following classes. Some days the children actively participated as in making "Viking boats", "banana popsicles", or "bugs on a log."

We thank each one who took part and those who helped make our school a success. We are looking forward to seeing many more participate next year.
