Barry visits under the handbag was Marguerite Reed, student at T.C.W., pictured in the Sunday photograph section of the Fort Worth Star Telegram. But it wasn't serious, she was just the "victim" for a Red Cross class which the students are taking.

RAY THOMAS may have to leave for unknown parts when his part in a book is found out by his fellow classmates. Seems RAY faked a telegram reading "Will you and Weaver and Bostick come to Fort Worth for two days. All expenses and entertainment paid. Will wire transportation to be here twenty-seventh and twenty-eighth. Must know by twenty-fourth" and signed with the label "Bostick." It all came about from the boys pictures having appeared in the papers as learning how to knit. Seems RAY took his friends for quite a ride on the joke. Don't know whether they had their suit cases packed or not, but they were ready to go.

Mrs. LLOYD BROOKS took off Monday for Odessa to visit for a week before returning home.

They tell me the super gardeners, ED GABRIEL, STONEY HENRY and DOUG ORME are really going to raise something in their garden plot. They have planted onions for one thing and all you have to do is bring the salt, they'll supply onions. And another thing, they say they are ready at all times for the constructive criticism from their friends who come to gaze with awe at their efforts—but destructive criticism will not be tolerated they vow.

By the way, look over that bookcase and see if you can't find some books to contribute to the soldiers libraries. Ten to one you'll find about half the books you haven't even looked at for ages.

'Work Or Fight' Law Planned To Keep Up Production

Power Needed To Put End To Work Stoppage

WASHINGTON, Feb. 25 (AP)—Drastic "work or fight" legislation may soon be sought by the administration to give the war labor board a strong hand in its task of eliminating all stoppages in arms production.

An informed source predicted today this request to congress was likely, and indications were it would command strong support, especially since President Roosevelt called on Americans in his Monday night radio address not to stop work a single day.

Proposals for such legislation were said to have originated with officials charged with responsibility for all-out war production.

Income Tax ABC'S— Uncle Sam Only Wants What's Due

(This is the first of six articles on how to protect your pocketbook when making out your income tax report.)

By ALEXANDER R. GEORGE, Wide World Features Writer

WASHINGTON—About 5,000,000 new members will be inducted—like it or not—into the federal income tax club this year.

The government plays no Santa Claus role in this income tax business, but it wants to make things as easy as possible for these new taxpayers. The same goes for 7,500,000 old contributors and 8,500,000 other persons who file returns but escape paying taxes because of legitimate deductions.

Uncle Sam expects you to report all of your income, but he also wants you to take every permissible deduction and exemption. You can be on the level with your government and fair to yourself too.

The big A in the ABC's of income tax returns is to remember that every single person whose gross income amounted to $750 or more, and every married person whose gross income was $1,500 or more in 1941 must file a return. Don't wait for the government to send you a return form. The forms may be obtained from collectors of internal revenue in the larger cities and towns.

The first, and probably the most important, money-saving step is to consider carefully whether it will be dollar-wise to make out a return on the older, more complete form 1040 or on the new, simplified form 1040A.

You may use either form if your gross income is $3,000 or less and is from salary, wages, other compensation for personal services, rent or royalties.

For a majority of small-income taxpayers, the use of one form or the other will mean only a difference of a dollar or two. Thousands, however, will save a tidy sum if they figure out which form is more advantageous.

In any case, don't delay too long in making out your return. You will want to take all the deductions possible in this year of heavily increased taxation. You may save money as well as avoid worry and confusion by doing the job when you have plenty of time to do it thoroughly and accurately.

(Next: Differences Between the Two Forms.)

LAMESA, Feb. 25.—Baptists of district No. 8 closed out their annual district convention here Tuesday by naming the Rev. Vernon Shaw, Snyder, president, and selecting the East Fourth Baptist church in Big Spring as the meeting place for 1943.

More than 300 messengers from the various churches of West Texas were in attendance during the convention. Closing sermon of the convention was brought by the Rev. Jesse Tevittington, San Antonio, state evangelist who is leading in a meeting at the East Fourth church in Big Spring.

Heads of the four departments selected at the party were Irby Cox, Big Spring, training union; the Rev. R. Elmer Dunham, Big Spring, Sunday school; G. C. Murray, Midland, Brotherhood; and Mrs. J. M. WANT LONGER TIRE LIFE? When switching tires, do you remember the spare? If you'll let us switch your tires, working the spare in where it can best be used, each tire out of the five you have will be on the road only four-fifths as much as usual. Not result: Longer life from the same full set.

GOOD BRAKES MEAN SAFETY PLUS. Brakes ought to be kept in proper adjustment for safety reasons alone. Beyond that, brakes that are "out" can also result in unnecessarily increased tire wear. For best results, let Buick men adjust your Buick brakes to Buick factory specifications.

YOUR whole car lasts longer when it is conditioned as a unit—especially when trained Buick specialists do the job.

So we write your spring conditioning ticket to fit your car's needs—not to make up a ready-made "package" according to average requirements.

The cost is no higher than for a comparably good job anywhere else. It's actually lower in the long run, because it pays to have a job done right.

Drop in for a FREE check-up by our authorized factory-trained mechanics and let us detail the service your car should have this spring.

Pastor Surprises Even Himself In KO-ing Lem Franklin In 8th

CLEVELAND, Feb. 25 (AP)—Bob Pastor, who twice sampled Joe Louis' dynamite and lived, is itching for a third try at the heavy-weight champion after proving that he, too, can knock them flat. Tricky Robert surprised even himself by sending heavily-favored Lem Franklin flat on his face, for keeps, last night in the eighth stanza of a scrap booked for ten. Many observers had reckoned Pastor might win by outboxing the Chicago slugger, but the manner of the triumph surprised all of the 15,278 customers who laid down $52,467 to give Promotor Bob Brickman a record Cleveland indoor gate.

As a result, there was little doubt today the New Yorker would catch himself a third chance against the man he respectfully calls "Mr. Joe." Nobody gives Pastor much chance against Uncle Sam's No. 1 fighting private, but the guessers already reckoned Mike Jacobs would line things up for this summer.

For Economy Reasons—New York U. Drops Football

NEW YORK, Feb. 25 (AP)—New York University, fifth college in the United States to have a football team, has dropped the gridiron sport for reasons of economy.

NYU's football teams had varied success with the Violets' peak coming in the late 1920's and early thirties under the coaching of Chick Meahan. Then such stars as Ken Strong and Bob Pastor made the school a gridiron giant.

Embarrassed by the publicity of his football successes, the school announced a de-emphasizing program in which subsidization and recruiting were out when Meahan resigned in 1931. Howard Cann, captain of the 1935 squad, returned to tutor his alma mater.

In 1934, Dr. Mal Stevens, late of Yale, took charge and yesterday's action terminated his $10,000 a year contract which was to have run through 1944.

WT-NM League Meeting Set For Sunday

The door isn't closed yet on the Big Spring affiliation with the West Texas-New Mexico baseball league for 1945, but it's going to be slammed pretty soon.

Reports from the Associated Press said Wednesday that a league meeting has been called for 10 a. m. Sunday at Clovis, New Mexico, and it was presumed that franchise lineups will have to be completed by then.

Player contracts must be mailed by Monday, and the task of designing a league schedule probably will be undertaken at the Sunday meeting.

Meanwhile, there were still evidences of an effort to keep Big Spring in the loop, through purchase of the "old" Lamesa franchise. That holding, property of a group of Lamesans, has become more or less useless for home purposes, since the town has joined forces to bring in the "Tink Rovers"—Jodie Tate franchise for this year.

Dick Ratliff, catching mainstay on the Bomber squad last year and now operator of a filling station here, has taken in the initiative in sounding out local sentiment, and has said that some local men are interested in dealing for the Lamesa franchise. Delay in definite action has been to determine the amount of local support which might be expected during the summer.

Ratliff said a meeting of baseball supporters may be called this week, and that more definite information on this would be issued later.

Cowboys Will Look To Sophs For '42 Team

ABILENE, Feb. 25—Coach Warren Woodson of the Hardin-Simmons Cowboys will look to his sophomores to fill gaps in the gridiron ranks caused by graduation and enlistments when spring football practice begins in the H-SU corral on March 5.

Co-champions in the Border conference in 1941, the Ranchers will have to rebuild, both in the backfield and forward wall, to hope to repeat.

Schedule will be heavy with early games with Baylor and Southern Methodist in the Southwest conference, and five conference games, with Texas Mines, Arizona State of Tempe, West Texas State, Texas Tech and the University of Arizona.

Promising sophomores in the backfield are topped by Rudolph Mobley, Paducah speed merchant, Johnny Allsup, Matador signal caller, and Parramos Sellers, 200-pound Abilene fullback, won over Texas Tech and West Texas State yearlings in games under Coach Moon Mullins last fall.

Cosch Mullins will help Coach Woodson drill the variety backs this spring, with Clyde (Bulldog) Turner, all-pro center with the Chicago Bears, coaching the line. It will be Bulldog's second spring term back at his alma mater to help tune up the line play for the Woodson version of the modal T formation.

Harold Prescott, bespectacled captain and left end, from Phoenix, Ariz., will get sophomore help up front, too. Jimmy Lancaster and Walter Hedrick, Houston ends; Herman Raphael and Rudolph Sasser, tackles; Jack Elliott, J. C. Hillie, Ralph Marmolejo and Bill Thorn, guards, and J. N. Cleveland, Sinton, start the spring with bright prospects. The squad of 40 spring aspirants will include 10 lettermen.

Editorial— Public Isn't Complacent— We're Just Awaiting Orders

You hear and read a lot about the "complacency" of the American people as an attitude toward the war. It may exist in some quarters, but we believe that the people, as a whole, are ready to make whatever sacrifice is needed to assure the ultimate and complete defeat of the forces of brutality.

We have been too over-confident, it is true; but there have occurred enough rude awakenings by now to convince the most foolhardy that America is in a real war, a war for keeps. The fall of Singapore was convincing proof of Japanese strength; the continued loss of shipping demonstrates the menace of warfare right at our shores. There is nothing, any longer, to be complacent about.

We wonder if the trouble is not that the people are as yet a bit bewildered over their part in the war. They have responded in gratifying fashion to most appeals put up to them; and have met with only a minimum of grumbling the regulations which have been imposed upon their way of life. Witness the countless thousands who are contributing time and effort to Red Cross activities, to various other agencies connected with war relief, soldier aid and civilian morale; witness the outpouring of money for defense bonds and stamps; witness the prompt response to any appeal in the name of defense or the war effort.

The rationing of tires and the freezing of car sales hit the people of this country as few government edicts could have; because our whole national economy has been built around the automotive industry and the use of auto transportation in business and private life. Yet people have met this sudden conversion of a way of living with good grace and even with cooperation. It demonstrates that when they are told a sacrifice is necessary, they are ready to make it. We need only to be told what to do. It is our opinion that the rationing of other products and items essential to the war effort should be promptly ordered, even if a shortage of such items is remote. Let us not wait until the absolute lack exists. The people can take it; they can cut themselves down on woolsens, if need be; on tin; on newspapers and magazines, on any product that is not an essential to living and breathing.

We believe the people are ready, willing and able. They are beyond complacency, but they still are not mobilized. They await only authoritative guidance.

Hollywood Sights and Sounds— Spy Pictures Leave Dark Cellars, Enter Ballrooms

By ROBBIN COONS

HOLLYWOOD — Alfred Hitchcock had a new toy, and he was enjoying it.

Outwardly, it was just a movie set. Ballroom stuff. Ballroom in a New York mansion of the marble stairway, potted palm era, surviving in this strange and hurly-burly today. Dancers. Dress extras in their finest silks, velvets, satins—and early morning yawns too.

And Robert Cummings and Priscilla Lane, coming cautiously but unromantically down a staircase, conversing furtively before Cummings steps into the ballroom, accosts a couple standing near. He says: "Pardon me, sir, you'll think I'm crazy—but this place is swarming with spies and saboteurs!"

The old gentleman, Cyril Ring, regarding him tolerantly, his expression saying, "I do think you're crazy"—for after all this is the home of a leader of society, the guests are prominent in social, industrial, financial circles, and the affair is a charity ball—for war relief.

Ballroom, dancers, Cummings, Lane, Ring, the situation—what a shiny toy for Alfred Hitchcock! He beamed all over, which is quite a spot of beaming considering his gross tonnage.

"Quite a change," he said between takes, "from the usual musty, dark cellar of mystery and menace. I think it's different." He indicated the bright chandeliers, the gaiety, the richness—the casual sedateness of wealth and position proceeding underneath it all, he assures me, the beam overflowing his second chin.

It was his first experiment with suspense under the bright lights of gaiety. With practically no encouragement, he licked his plotting chops and told all. "They're prisoners of the saboteurs—at this party. They can move around freely, but they can't get out. Footmen guard the doors. They can appeal to any of the guests—you just saw them appeal to me—but they don't know who is loyal, who is in the gang. It is all brightly lighted, in the open. Finally Cummings decides to denounce the saboteurs from the middle of the dance floor. Then he looks up—at an overlooking window a man levels an automatic at him. He speaks—an appeal for charity funds. He is still in the trap...."

Alfred Hitchcock was as excited about these wheels-within-wheels of "Saboteurs" as a kid with his first electric train. He had me that way too. What's that? Why Hitchcock pictures are that way.

Dorothy Thompson Says— British Ability For Peaceful Change Makes Nation Powerful

By DOROTHY THOMPSON

When Winston Churchill sent Sir Stafford Cripps to Moscow, he picked one of the best brains in British political life—although its owner's views are far removed from Mr. Churchill's own. Sir Stafford is a socialist and an anti-imperialist. Still, he did not receive him for some time. But he was stubborn in his opinion and consistent in his reports; Germany would make war on Russia. And he did not think the Russian army would be a pushover.

Now, following Singapore, Cripps becomes the second most important man in the cabinet. There is this to be said for the British system in contradiction to ours: Politics are not frozen. Mr. Churchill has been forced to make a change in his cabinet by the representatives of the nation. In this country there is no way by which the people, through Congress, or through the press and other instruments for influencing public opinion, can effect changes in the Administration. They can only elect another President after four years.

Under a system like ours it is therefore extremely important that the Administration should be sensitive and responsive to public opinion. For otherwise the most well-meant and constructive public criticism encounters frustration and frustration deteriorates into bitterness. In England, the people know they can bring about changes. Therefore criticism is not sabotage. Here, the critic is likely to ask himself two questions: Can I say this without it having results? I do not desire? Or, what is the use, anyway?

The new British cabinet is an amazing demonstration of what national unity really means.

Mr. Churchill, who is a Tory, has made second in command a man of the extreme left and the nation applauds. Why does the nation applaud? It applauds first, because Sir Stafford has brains and the nation knows it. It applauds second, because the British people know that in this war the enemy is on the right, not on the left, a simple truth that does credit to the British political instinct. And Churchill also knows where the enemy is—externally and internally. The enemy, not of Churchill, not of the Tory party, but of Britain, in the midst of war.

Mr. Churchill is not afraid of British leftists because he knows they want Britain to win. And how amazing—the Tory Churchill wants even a left-oriented Britain to win. He would rather see Sir Stafford Cripps and the left wing of the Labor Party in Downing Street than see Hitler there.

We could learn something from it. As I move about the country I find some people want the U. S. to win provided winning doesn't promote the New Deal. Others want America to win provided the Republicans don't get any credit. And still others want America to win and turn into a fascist state in the process. Their conception of victory is victory for them—victory for their side in the internal political struggle. Otherwise they want no victory. It is reminiscent of France.

The French upper middle classes did not like the Popular Front Government. So what did they do? They sabotaged France. They sent their capita' abroad; they engineered a sit-down capital strike; they cut the very foundations of the state. And the left, in its turn, did the same.

The British upper classes don't like Sir Stafford Cripps, I imagine, and neither do they like Ramsay MacDonald. But it is not in the British mind to destroy Britain for the sake of destroying a government. Therefore there is opposition in England but not sabotage. And there is another thing about Britain—expressed in Tennyson's great line, "The old order changeth yielding place to new, and God fulfills himself in many ways lest one good custom should corrupt the world."

Basically the most conservative of nations, there is that in Britain which always knows when to change. That capacity for change together with patience has resulted in the fact that for three hundred years Britain has known no drastic and bloody internal upheavals—in which she is unique among the nations of the world. If one watches the transition of the last two years—from Chamberlain through Churchill to Cripps—the evolution is fantastic. Yet, it is not the same England!

The deep civility of the British mind reveals itself in the fact that people are never judged wholly by their ideas, but by all the factors that make a personality—for instance by whether they are honest men. I haven't a doubt that Churchill, if he were to speak intimately of Cripps would say, "Cripps? Very intelligent man; has a hobby, he's a socialist." That Sir Stafford's hobby might considerably change the material way of life of some of Churchill's friends might annoy Mr. Churchill (or it might not) but he would know how to get on in that Britain—since it would still be British, peopled and ruled by British men. It's like that—the British are not afraid of each other—and since they aren't afraid of each other, they aren't afraid of anything.

For a nation like a person can face any eventuality with courage if its integrity is intact, if it can absorb its own internal experiences without shock or loss of equilibrium. Throughout history this has been Britain's strength—her power to change without breaking the continuity of the traditions which bind men together in communal memories, in a communal civilization, and in a patriotism based on love.

DANGEROUS BAGGAGE

BY ELEANOR ATTERBURY

Chapter 27
Prisoner

For several moments, the two men stood at the light listening to the sound of the Ladybird's motors drawing close and ever closer. Sharon, plucked to the seat behind him by the new fears that crowded into her mind now, could only wonder what kind of devilish plan they were concocting.

There was no question but that, in a few minutes, the Ladybird would pass them. By the sound she would be so near that, but for the fog, each could have identified the other easily.

Tom turned to Sharon. All the scoffing rallery of the past few moments was gone from his voice now. He spoke coldly, almost threateningly. And as if she were a perfect stranger—and a convicted criminal!

"Do not forget that you are my prisoner. You are forbidden to make any attempt to contact the enemy. If you act in any way so as to endanger the life of my crew or myself, or to give information to the enemy, I shall proceed with my duty as I see it. You are on your honor—is that understood?"

Sharon, nodded, her voice blocked by the sharp lump in her throat.

"Good. Then, until you oblige me to do otherwise, I see no reason for denying you the freedom of this boat. Should my trust be misplaced," he said grimly, "any attempt to contact the enemy, this is war, don't forget. I can take no chances. One move on your part to—"

Sharon's temper rose to the challenge. "Must you talk like the villain of a dime novel?" she demanded furiously. "I have ordinary intelligence, believe it or not. And I understand you perfectly. You are merely trying to say that if I see a chance to do my duty as I see it, you would like steps to put me out of your way."

"Exactly," he said dryly. "Nothing fatal, you understand," with a ghost of his old smile, "just uncomfortable."

"I appreciate your consideration," sheathingly.

"Good. I'm glad we understand each other."

Martens turned from his post near the rail. "They will pass us off our starboard in a few minutes, sir."

needed be afraid to go down. And, dryly, "don't waste any energy trying to get loose. Houdini himself couldn't have gotten out of that pair of brasses."

She heard him go, then, closing the door sharply behind him, grating the key in the lock. A prisoner again—and this time it was no fake!

Exhausted, she sagged back into the bunk. Maybe, if she closed her eyes, this whole horrible business would turn out to be a ghastly nightmare. But, a moment later, when she opened her eyes again, it was still pitch dark, there was still the soft slapping of the water against the boat.

She really tried to relax, to save her energy for the next moment that it would be needed sorely. But each new sound brought her bolt upright, listening. Footsteps above her, a command, a deep-voice reply. Then the sound of the engine starting again. Once more the trim little cruiser moved on.

For what seemed hours, she had no clue whatever as to what went on above her. Trapped here in this dark hole, her arms and legs getting stiff and cramped from the awkward position, she felt stifled, ready to let go the hysteria that threatened.

The narrow boat rolled more now and gradually she recognized that they were leaving the quiet smoothness of the bay for the deep swells of the ocean! Swells that became increasingly rough as they pushed on. Slapping against the bow, shaking the whole length of the boat.

When she thought she could not bear it another moment, Sharon heard footsteps cross the deck above her, descend the companionway. A key turned in the lock and the door opened to admit a feeble beam of light.

"The Boss says I can untie you now, miss," it was Martens.

Switching on a small ship's lamp, he pulled keys from his pocket, unfastened the handcuffs. Then, as he released the gag, he warned:

"No more of your tricks, sister. The Boss was easy on you this time. And you might have done some real damage, you know."

"Naturally. That's what I hoped to do," she said with lips that were dry, almost numb.

passed the narrow cabin briskly until circulation flooded back again. Four bunks, the cabin boasted, two to a side. Two huge lockers, a table and four chairs. A door opening into—she stepped inside—a tiny galley. And everything simple, plain but ship-shape. And comfortable enough. For a prison, she might have done worse, she thought wryly and went back to her bunk.

She could hear the gale outside now. And the smashing blows of the waves breaking over the boat. What, she wondered wearily, if 'om and Martens and whatever other worthies he had aboard this boat, found themselves unequal to one of the Pacific's really bad storms?

The boat lifted, shuddered violently, then lunged forward as if to give point to her thoughts. Sharon pressed her hands against her throbbing temples, found that her cheeks were wet with tears. And now she made no effort to hold them back. So worried about Dennis, so whipped by the excitement of the past few hours, so aware now of the serious danger she was in herself, she sobbed despairingly. And there was nothing—absolutely nothing she could do to alter the situation.

Burying her face in the thick blanket she let go long wailing sobs that wrenched her whole body. Until, her angry despair spent, she lay, hiccupping like a tired child, one hand under her flushed cheek. If only she could love Tom instead of hate him, admire him instead of fear him. If only the job he was doing so well, merited that well-doing! If only—her own sense of humor lifted a tired head—if only she would stop telling herself fairy tales and think of an intelligent plan of escape.

Yet, how could she think of escape when she had no idea where they were going, when they would arrive, what was to be done with her at any time! Every turn of the motor was carrying her farther and farther from friends and help.

Then her mind turned up a new hope. They were following the Ladybird. Presumably Mr. Goodwin, maybe Dennis, were aboard. There would be a showdown somewhere. He would be in exactly the right position to do them the most good. A warning of some kind—some chance would surely present itself.

The storm lent at the little boat, lifting it high, then dashing it down again. Right now, she told herself wryly, the storm itself had taken command. It was going to be up to Tom and his seamanship if they survived this night at all!
