County boy drowns

A 10-year old boy drowned near Coleman early Sunday evening after he slipped out of a flotation device on an area lake.

Oscar Garcia Jimenez of Coleman was pronounced dead about 7:30 p.m. by Emory Rider, a justice of the peace for Coleman County.

The boy was floating in a deep cove on the north side of Lake Scarborough, about 7½ miles north of Coleman off U. S. Highway 283. He was using an animal-shaped float, said Steve Vail, a Coleman County state game warden.

"It (flotation device) is not really a Coast Guard-approved item," Vail said. "There were some witnesses who saw him fall off the thing and go down."

Three men dived and searched the 15-20 foot water 30 to 45 minutes before finding the body, Vail said. The witnesses attempted to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation, but they could not revive the boy, Vail said.

"It's a real deep area there," the warden said. "His mother said he couldn't swim at all... He never surfaced again."

Rep delays visit

The Social Security representative for this area will not be in Santa Anna this month, as usually planned. He will resume his normal schedule Wednesday, August 1, when he will be at the Housing Authority Office from 10 a.m. until noon.

Early News issue planned

Due to the July 4 holiday, we will be publishing next week's issue on Tuesday, July 3, instead of the regular Thursday date.

For that reason, our deadline will be set for 9 a.m. Monday morning for next week's issue. All news must be in the office at that time in order to be printed in the July 3 issue.

Workers beautify city

In an effort to beautify the city of Santa Anna, workers have begun projects around the downtown area.

Clearing out dead shrubbery and brush, planting new foliage in shadow boxes, painting and hoeing weeds are among jobs being done by one woman and two young men hired by the City.

Business owners and residents are urged to join in the clean-up campaign by caring for their yards and store appearance.

Second officer to be hired

In a recent City Council meeting, members voted to authorize the hiring of a second police officer for the City. This is planned to be effective August 2.

In police report: Assaults investigated, arrest made

Two assaults were reported over the weekend, according to Chief of Police Russ Ellis. He said charges were filed, then dropped in one incident, and not filed in the second incident.

animal control officer position that has been vacant for several months.

Anyone interested in the position can contact Mr. Ellis about it, he said.

Cheerleaders attend camp in Abilene

The cheerleaders from Santa Anna High School were among approximately 300 participants in the 1984 Big Country Cheerleader Camp held on the campus of Hardin-Simmons University in Abilene June 18-22.

The five-day camp was conducted by Southwest Camps of Cisco, with Mr. Eric Ritchie as camp director. Instructional staff and program were supplied by the National Cheerleader Association.

The cheerleaders were taught new cheers, stunts, chants, and spirit ideas from a seven-member NCA staff headed up by Patricia Fuerer, a professional cheerleading instructor from the NCA's national headquarters in Dallas.

The June 18-22 session of the camp was the second of two sessions, with the first being held June 11-15.

Off the cuff

by Jan Maren Henderson

This issue of The News will be my last as editor. I am off to find a house or apartment in Snyder, where I will be teaching journalism in the high school beginning this fall.

I'm excited about the move, and am familiar enough with Snyder as a town that I am not really afraid of the new environment. As for the school, it is larger than those at which I have taught in the past, and that is at the same time a bit scary and very challenging.

I've re-established some old friendships here and developed many new ones, and I honestly hope those old and new friends will keep in touch. Of course, my family is here and this being my home town, I will be back for frequent visits.

For my last feature in this newspaper, I have visited the Pearce Veterinary Clinic, where a small goat dairy exists in the hopes of enlarging someday.

The Pearce's, including five year old Anna and baby Robert, are all involved in the care and milking of the goats, which began with Anna's allergy to cow's milk as a baby. I hope readers will read and enjoy the feature that appears in this issue, and I hope some who have never tasted goat's milk will drop by and purchase a sample to try out.

Anna told me she is the fastest milker in the family. She is certainly adept for her five experienced years, having shown up a certain weekly newspaper editor in the skill of milking goats. Mrs. Pearce sat me down opposite Anna, and we were supposed to milk one of the goats together, but Anna did better than I did. She actually got milk. I got nothing, but red in the face.

The Texas Senate passed a bill last week that would require motorists transporting children up to the age of 4 to protect the children by using infant safety seats or seatbelts.

Now the bill has to go to the House special legislative session for approval, and Governor Mark White has already promised to sign it into law if it is approved there. The penalty for violation of the law would be a fine of $25 to $50.

The bill, I'm sure, brings moans and groans from the lips of many a parent who has not established the habit of using the infant safety seats.

We all agree that the bill is a good one, since injuries and deaths of children number into the hundreds, many of which would have been prevented by using the safety devices. But many of us, as parents and grandparents, have given in to the cries of children seeking escape from the seats, and it seems once you allow a child to ride outside the seat, you've established a pattern.

Ask me, I know. I have fallen prey to the dangerous and, I will admit, stupid habit of allowing my child to ride unrestrained. I plead guilty and wince.

I have heard many parents say that if you start the child out in the seat, he or she will become accustomed to it and will never know the difference. Some of us know this is not true. My child, and the children of many parents I know, has rebelled from the car seat since she was old enough to sit up. She is a live wire and always has been, and to force her to sit in that seat is to subject myself and everyone in the car to piercing wails and screams from departure to arrival. That's better than having a kid injured or killed in an accident, I'll admit, but it's also enough to cause an accident in itself.

I don't want to make excuses for an action that is dangerous, however.

If the bill passes, and I have no doubt that it will, I will again drag out my child's torture device and strap her into it. I may do it anyway, but I may also have to start smoking to deal with the stress.

If you see us after that, Rachel will be sitting in a car seat, wiggling and squirming, red in the face and screaming to beat the band. And I will be driving along, teeth clenched, eyes beady, pulling at my hair, distressed and a nervous wreck. And it is very likely that our family and friends will not be riding with us.

30 Years ago

The following excerpts were taken from the June 28, 1953 issue of The Santa Anna News:

A part of the equipment is expected to arrive sometime next week for installation in the Santa Anna Tile Co., building. Two of the company's employees have already moved here and at present are taking care of minor details of the plant. Mr. and Mrs. Brian deGraffenried arrived about a month ago. They have one son, Bert, 18 months old. Mrs. DeGraffenried is the daughter of former Santa Anna School Superintendent, Bert Speed, who was here about 1918 and was one of the first football coaches the town had. They are making their home in the Mrs. Bob Douglas home on South 1st Street. Mr. and Mrs. R. M. (Bob) Fielder, Jr., are making their home in the Thomas Myron Hays home on West Wallis Avenue. They have one son, four weeks old, Bruce Martin. Mr. Fielder will be office and personnel manager of the company. Another family, the Bob Trinkleins, of Austin, plan to move here about the middle of July.

Ten members of the local Boy Scout troop are attending a weeks camping and outing at Camp Tonkawa, near Buffalo Gap, this week. The boys are accompanied by Dick Bass, as their unit leader. The boys attending are Bobbie Ransburger, Buddy Wylie, Larry Donham, Bascom Lowry, Emmitt Stiles, Billy Wayne Singleton, Jimmy Crews, Maxie Lee Price, Kent Green and Kenneth Harris.

Fire of undetermined origin destroyed the Rev. Harry C. Wigger's garage last Wednesday afternoon. Rev. Wigger said that outside the loss of the garage, he sustained about a $200 loss of other items he had stored in the garage.

Witnesses of the fire had nothing but praise for the Santa Anna Fire Department. With the direction the wind was blowing, this could have been a very disastrous fire, as several houses were in immediate danger. Quick action on the part of the fire department saved everything but the interior of the garage.

Ernest Bland, owner and operator of the Bland Grocery, this week moved into the old S. A. Niell home on east Bowie Avenue, after purchasing it last week. The Bland home was completely destroyed recently by fire.

GOD BLESS AMERICA

In the Ft. Worth-Dallas metroplex, there are many people from all over the world. Some of them have been here a long time due to business, education, etc.

Some of these people are now naturalized citizens of the U.S.A. The requirements are difficult for them, but they have worked and studied because the freedom of America is worth the effort.

The naturalized citizens are usually more patriotic and demonstrative of their love for this country than the native born citizens!

This is an election year and a Presidential election year at that. How many of you all will make the effort to vote?

July 4 is coming soon. It is a wonderful time to pause from our hectic lifestyle and reflect on what this great, troubled country means to us. May I ask a special favor? Share your thoughts and reflections with your children. Let them grow up with an understanding of the GOOD and the BAD (that needs all our help in improving).

America means different things to each generation. Older people recall the two World Wars fought for our freedom, the Great Depression, the Cold War, etc. Most people under forty years of age only know the benefits from this land.

Helen Steiner Rice wrote a beautiful poem called GOD BLESS AMERICA: "America the beautiful,

May it always stay that way,
But to keep the Old Glory flying
There's a price that we must pay.

For everything worth having Demands work and sacrifice,
And freedom is a gift from God
That commands the highest price.

For all our wealth and progress
Are as worthless as can be Without the Faith that made us great
And kept our country free.

Nor can our nation hope to live
Unto itself alone,
For the problems of our neighbors
Must today become our own.

And while it's hard to understand
The complexities of war,
Each one of us must realize
That we are fighting for

The principles of freedom
And the decency of man,
And as a Christian nation
We're committed to God's plan.

And as the land of liberty
And a great-God fearing nation
We must protect our honor
And fulfill our obligation.

Son in these times of crisis
Let us offer no resistance
In giving help to those who need
Our strength and our assistance.

And the stars and stripes forever
Will remain a symbol of
A rich and mighty nation
Built on Faith and Truth and Love.

Letter to the editor

Last week's OFF THE CUFF brought in several letters of nostalgia. We seemed to have struck a chord in the hearts of some who can remember the "old days" in Santa Anna, and we are happy to print the letters for more reader enjoyment.

Dear Editor;

I read with great interest your "Off the Cuff" with today's issue, June 21, because of Joe Haynes remarks about my father, Lee L. Shield. I remember vividly watching the men build the dam and ripping it to keep it from washing away. I, too, was born in 1897, over the old rock Dry Goods Store which papa owned (among 18 other businesses!). That dam was Santa Anna's first water supply.

Previous to that, our water supply was a well in the middle of the street square, by papa's livery stable and what later became Joe Mathew's garage. I have a picture of the well taken by a Mr. Chambers - the only photographer then in Santa Anna.

Among the crowd in the picture were Stafford Baxter, Uncle Rome Shield, my brothers, Leon and Jo and the Hubert Band boys, my mother's brothers. They were the organizers of the first Mountain City Band: Frank, Harry and Raymond Hubert. There was a few years ago still standing behind Grandpa Hubert's house on the side of the mountain, a gazebo where they held Sunday concerts. It is behind the house on Mountain Street that has the garage flush to the street. My mother later died in that house.

I can't imagine why Papa had a "big six-shooter" on at that time since Santa Anna was a law-abiding town by then.

Papa's first store, after moving from Trickham, was in the gap of the mountain. Later, when the railroad came, he moved to near the depot and built a wooden store. When his business began to grow, he built the rock store with rock quarried by Mr. Perry. It was Mr. Perry who carved the rock urns above the store that has been moved to Salado, Texas. It was fascinating to watch Mr. Perry work with those rocks behind what is now the Ford Barnes house.

It was in a cave (now demolished) that Juanita Hunter, Judy Mitchell and I used to cook mulagatauney stew and have picnics.

Santa Anna was an ideal place to grow up in. Burgess Sealy, Nettie Griffin and I often talk about it, since we were raised next door to each other. Burgess has made an enviable record for his life and so has Nettie. She is the most erudite person I know.

Reminiscing about Santa Anna can bring a lot of nostalgia in our lives.

Thank you for the article!
Sincerely,
Camille Shield Wallace

Dear Jan,

I am sorry you are leaving but perhaps you won't burn bridges. The Santa Anna News has been great!

This script you might use. I know there aren't too many as old as I but many will remember such.

I am not a writer but I do have a good memory, although I could not get myself organized and get them on paper.

No offense to anyone. I love my old home town and its people after 55 years there.

At some point, dirt roads went along the railroad in Santa Anna.

The Depot was a favorite place to see the trains go by and marvel at the power of the Iron Horse.

The Baptists built a new church with meetings held in the summer under the tabernacle which was on ground where the grade school building now occupies. Horse drawn wagons and buggies brought people to worship. There were few cars.

The mountain has been a landmark and the sand pit furnished employment for some and money for owners. I recall one fatal accident up there.

The hospital was founded by Dr. T. Richard Sealy and was something for the town to be proud of. In due time it served a wide area.

Other Doctors I recall were Dr. Hays, Holland, Tyson, Strozier and Lovelady.

Our dentist was Dr. L. O. Garrett over the bank.

The drug stores were operated by Phillips and Hunter.

Mr. Sparks had a small dairy. Jim Robin dressed a beef often, and peddled it over town. Housewives appreciated that service.

Grocers were Roundtree, Marshall and sons, Kelly's, Hunter, Mercantile Discernin, Boggus, and Roscoe Hosch. Joe Harvey delivered for all stores.

The town water supt. was Mr. Scott. The town sanitation supt. was a Mr. McMerdoe.

Mr. Hicks and daughter, Mrs. Routh, had a cafe.

Near the cafe, a Mr. Hill had a barber shop. On to Main Street, Miss Mide had a ladies hat shop. Mrs. Harrod had the hotel upstairs, so was the Opera House.

The mercantile was Adams and Childers, and the Donham Cafe was in the block with C. K. Hunter Drug Store. Some I have forgotten in this block.

Joe Matthews and Bill Ford owned garages. The Johnsons owned the telephone system. It was over the National Bank.

On Main Street were many small businesses, a few I can name, barber shops, variety store, offices for the cotton buyers, I. O. Shield I remember. The Post Office was moved on Main also.

There were bales of cotton coming in to the Simpson and Turner gins frequently.

D. R. Hill had a store in this block.

On the north side of Main I remember the Theatre and State Bank, with Parker Bond, Leman Brown on hand.

Across the street east was and is First National Bank with B. Weaver, U. L. Grady, Clinton Lowe. By chance I have some old papers regarding the sale of the lot for this bank. They are dated 1902-1906.

Ragsdale Bakery, Loyd Burris' Men's Store, Phillips Drug, Mercantile and Kelly's furnished that block.

The Mobil station is the old location for a frame building where Dr. Tyson officed awhile. Next door was a Leather Shoe Shop operated by a Mr. Close then Jack Wilson Cafe.

The corner occupied by Ira Pump served Mr. Jim and Roscoe for a while in groceries. Next was Don Ewing Shoe Shop, Evans and West with a gas station, Jones Marshal Shop, Blacksmiths, Ed Jones Produce and Potter Produce, back to the railroad.

The old cemetery road went between Dutch Campbell and Dan Blake winding over the rocky land until Farm Road 1176 went south, whereby the silent city is a beautiful place to view.

Bread not so simple

Centuries ago people learned to pound grains, add a little water and bake the resulting dough to make a simple bread. But the "staff of life" found in today's supermarkets is no longer so simple.

Commercially baked breads offer many texture, flavor and nutrient choices, says nutritionist Mary K. Sweeten. This variety makes it important for consumers to read beyond the label to the ingredient and nutrition information, says Sweeten, a specialist with the Texas A & M University Agricultural Extension Service.

For example, health-conscious consumers often reach for breads that claim to have "natural whole grain goodness." However, the nutrition labels on some of these breads often reveal that they contain some whole wheat and whole rye flour, but unenriched, bleached white flour is the primary ingredient, she says.

The protein content of these breads may be boosted with wheat gluten, soy flour and whey solids. Molasses is often added as a sweetener and the molasses or caramel coloring helps achieve a darker "whole grain" appearance, notes the specialist.

"These breads are not necessarily inferior to whole wheat breads," says Sweeten, "but the shopper should not be misled by claims or appearances." Whole wheat bread must contain only whole wheat flour.

Other consumers select breads which claim on the label to have fewer calories. Some lower-calorie breads are created by adding powdered cellulose, which has the capacity to absorb water. Increasing the amount of water does not add any calories, she explains.

Calories are also reduced simply by slicing a standard loaf of bread thinner, says the specialist. Such breads may be labeled "thin-sliced" or "fewer calories per slice because it is sliced thinner." To be labeled "reduced calorie" according to Food and Drug Administration regulations, a bread or any other food must contain one-third fewer calories than a similar product, reports Sweeten.

Many consumers select a particular brand of bread because it claims to have added fiber, observes the nutritionist.

The fiber value of wheat is actually contained in the bran, or outer layers of a grain of wheat. Some bran removed from milled flour is added back to wheat breads. But the nutritional significance of this added bran varies, advises the specialist.

Very small amounts of bran or finely ground bran actually affect the appearance and flavor of a slice of bread more than its fiber value, she notes.

Until methods for determining the fiber content of foods are standardized, says Sweeten, voluntary labeling information will remain confusing and sometimes misleading.

But consumers can be assured of getting adequate amounts of fiber anyway if they will eat a variety of fruits, vegetables, and whole grain products, she adds.

Vasquez - Serrano wed

Alicia Kay Vasquez, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Ramon Vasquez of Brownwood, became the bride of Guy M. Serrano, son of Mr. and Mrs. Fred D. Serrano of Houston, at 2:30 p.m. on Saturday, June 16.

St. Mary's Catholic Church was the scene of the wedding with Father Francis R. Vanhee officiating.

The altar, centered with a unity candle, was decorated with white baskets of white gladioli and carnations arranged with baby's breath and blue ribbon bows. The altar setting was flanked on either side by brass candelabrum, and the pews for family members and the couple's attendants were marked with large blue and white bows.

Traditional wedding music and selections, chosen by the bride and groom, were provided by Venessa Tellez and Marie Sapenter. Paulette Ship sang "The Lord's Prayer," "Love," and "Truly," accompanied by Venessa and Marie.

The bride, given in marriage by her parents, was escorted to the altar by her father. She wore the wedding dress that her mother wore 27 years ago. The white satin dress, overlaid with lace, was fashioned with long tapered lace sleeves and a stand-up collar. The long skirt, with lace ruffles down the center, extended into a long train.

The bride wore a bracelet worn by her paternal grandmother, the late Mrs. Venino Vasquez of Santa Anna. Her fingertip-length veil of silk illusion fell from a crown of orange blossoms, silk flowers and crystal beads. She carried a matching bouquet.

Ushers were Ricky Farias of Midland and Ramon Vasquez of Santa

Mrs. Guy Serrano

Anna, cousins of the bride, Skipper Johnson of Denton, and Richard Ramirez of Houston, cousin of the groom.

Candlelighter was Leonel Villarreal, cousin of the bride. Flower girls were Laura Vasquez of Santa Anna and Brenda Garcia of Brownwood, cousins of the bride, and Heidi Vasquez of Granbury, niece of the bride. David Farias of Midland and Chris Garcia of Brownwood, cousins of the bride, served as ring bearers.

Train bearers were Val Garcia and Laura Villarreal, cousins of the bride. Altar boys included James Garcia and Marc Farias, cousin of the bride.

Attending the bride's book were Becky and Cynthia Ramirez, cousin of the groom.

Felicia Farias of Midland attended her cousin as maid of honor. She wore a long white gown of lace over polyester enhanced with stain ribbon trim.

The bridesmaids were Ann Barrera of Arlington, Connie Hinojosa of Brownwood, Tracy Turner, Evelyn Villalpando and Lori Woods, all of Dallas, Erma Garcia of Del Rio, cousin of the bride, Phyllis Ramirez, cousin of the groom, and Mary Angelone, both of Houston, Keitha Crumpler of McAllen, and Lisa and Teresa Rolfe of Santa Anna, cousins of the bride.

Their blue gowns were identical to that of the maid of honor. They all carried a long stemmed blue and white rose.

For her daughter's wedding, Mrs. Vasquez chose a formal gown of blue and white lace. The groom's mother was attired in a baby blue formal gown. Her corsages were fashioned of blue and white silk camellias. The bride's grandmother wore a street-length turquoise dress of polyester and chiffon lace with puff sleeves. Her corsage was of blue silk roses.

Jeff Serrano of Dallas was his brother's best man. Groomsman were Eugene Acuna of Abilene and Val Garcia of Brownwood, cousins of the bride, Tam Wasson of Dallas, Tim

The other attendants wore light blue tuxedos, trimmed with royal blue, with matching tie and vest. Their boutonnières were made up of blue and white rose buds.

Fathers of the bride couple were attired in navy blue suits, with boutonnières of camellia buds. After the wedding, a reception was held in St. Mary's Parish Hall. House

Small family goat dairy hopes to grow

When Anna Pearce was born five years ago, it was discovered she had an allergy to cow's milk, so her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Pearce, bought a Nubian goat. And that was the beginning of what has turned out to be a family hobby, a source of milk for the family, and a little added income.

The Pearce family lives on Farm Rd. 1176, just inside the city limits of Santa Anna. Behind their house they keep about a dozen goats, three of which are does presently giving milk, which the family uses at home and can sell to people who come to the door asking to purchase goat's milk.

They are not a registered Grade A dairy because they do not own a pasteurizer. It is for that reason that the Pearce's cannot sell their goat's milk to a milk truck or to the public at large. They can, however, sell the milk to people who ask for it, and they sell it for $3 a gallon, which compares to $6 and $7 per gallon in large cities, said Mrs. Pearce.

"The demand for goat's milk in large cities exceeds the supply, so they can get more for it," said Mrs. Pearce, who is a local veterinarian.

The family prefers their registered Nubians to other breeds of goats because of their personalities.

"They're very affectionate," said Mrs. Pearce, "though they're a bit noisier. They really talk to you." And the family talks back to the goats, too.

The goats the Pearce farm are like pets to the family. Each has a name, among them Peaches, Sherry, Jack, and Charlie, and each is addressed affectionately in passing.

"Sometimes I actually think they know what we're saying to them," said Mrs. Pearce. "Or we fool ourselves into believing they do."

Anna Pearce, 5, and Erica, 9, help their parents with the care of the goats, and also show the goats in shows all over Texas.

Anna is proud to show the ribbons and awards she has won showing goats, including one trophy for showmanship. She said she taught herself to show by watching other people and by listening to veteran showmen explain the techniques.

The Pearce's milk their small herd of does in stanchions, feeding as they milk.

"The stanchion is not really necessary," said Mrs. Pearce, "it is just easier on our backs to have the goats up off the floor."

The milking is done by hand because of the small size of the herd, and because, according to Mrs. Pearce, "it takes just as long to clean machines as it does to go ahead and milk they do."

Their facility is not regulated by authorities like those of the cow dairies because of the lack of registered certification of the dairy. However, the Pearce's do try to maintain the same cleanliness and standards that would otherwise be required.

"We use a dishwasher to keep all utensils, jars, and supplies absolutely sterile," said Mrs. Pearce.

Like cows, the goats are milked twice daily, here at 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. It takes about four minutes to milk one goat, which will produce one gallon per day at peak production. At the end of lactation, the goats taper off to less than half a gallon per day.

A good goat will give quality milk for seven to nine years, according to Mrs. Pearce, and many goats continue into their twelfth and fifteenth years.

When milking the older goats, Mrs. Pearce said, the Pearce's get so much milk they don't know what to do with it.

"That's when we start making cheese and yogurt," she added.

"We don't make butter because goat's milk doesn't separate into cream like cow's milk does, and it is too hard to make butter."

After milking and feeding, the Pearce's tote the milk into their home, where they weigh and filter it, measure out amounts for the kid goats, and refrigerate the remaining portions for home use and sale to people who come to them to ask for the milk.

About cow's milk, Mrs. Pearce says some of the family can drink it, but the younger children have been raised on goat's milk, and on goats as family pets.

Anna Pearce, a charmer standing among a herd of kid goats or toting a heavy bucket of feed, later poured a large glass of milk to the brim, and said, "I like goat's milk."

And so did this reporter, upon trying it for the first time.

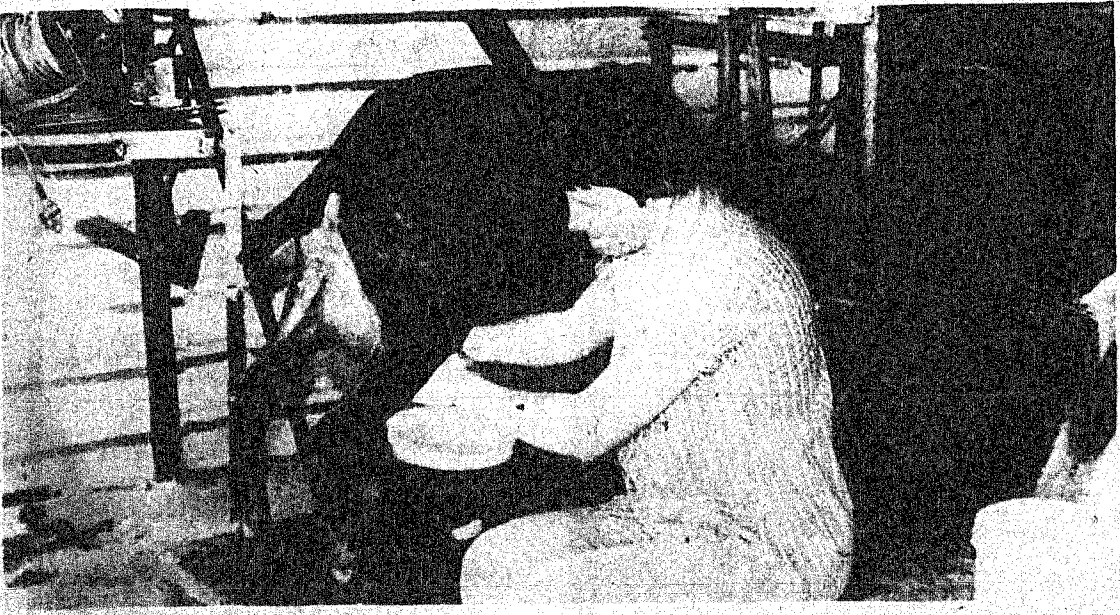

MILKING GOATS is fun for Anna Pearce, age five, who is proud to say she is the "fastest milker" in her family, and who assists her parents and sister in the care of their goats.

FEEDING THE KIDS by bottle takes all the balance young Anna can muster as the baby goats jump at the bottles and eat heartily.

"YOU'RE AWFULLY NOSY," is what this nanny first goat-dairy assignment seems to be saying to a camera-happy editor on her

TAKING A TURN at milking the goats is Mrs. John Pearce, who says her family has enjoyed goat's milk since the birth of Anna, who has an allergy to cow's milk.

A NANNY chews patiently as she is fed in a stanchion and milked at the same time.

WEIGHING AND CHARTING each goat's production on a baby scale is part of the regiment of running the small goat dairy.

Munchausen disease caused by neglect

The 52 year old man who arrived in the hospital emergency room was complaining of 'crushing' chest pain.

He said he had had five heart attacks, and he knew this was another because it felt the same. He demanded morphine for the pain. After being given a small amount, he reported some relief.

Still, the well-developed man's healthy appearance prompted hospital personnel to continue questioning him about the pain. The patient finally said, "I don't have to take this," dressed, and left the hospital. The hospital later learned that the same patient had paid a similar visit to another hospital.

The Texas Medical Association says the man suffered from Munchausen's Syndrome, a psychiatric disorder in which the person wanders from hospital to hospital pretending to be ill. In 1983, a medical journal reported the case of another man who by age 52 had entered hospitals for fake illnesses 423 times during a 30-day period.

Persons with the disorder - named after an 18th century German baron known for his tall tales about his military life - are experts at simulating illness. They will do almost anything to be admitted to a hospital, including simulating fever and coughing up blood. Self-inflicted wounds are another means.

Once in, these patients are willing to undergo painful and even dangerous medical tests and surgery. A number of Munchausen patients have several scars from unnecessary operations, a condition sometimes referred to as "gridiron abdomen."

Munchausen's Syndrome usually begins in early adult life, although cases can arise in adolescents and children. The patients commonly come from a background of parental abuse, neglect or abandonment. Usually, the person has been hospitalized at least once for genuine illness or injury in childhood or early adolescence, and that's where the cycle can begin.
