The New Look

Pictured above is the Santa Anna High School Band wearing the new uniforms bought during the 91-92 school year. The uniforms were ordered in August of 1991, received in December of 1991, and worn for the first time, as shown in this picture, at the U.I.L. Concert and Sightreading Contest on April 14, 1992.

The first major public performance using these new uniforms should be at the first football game of the 1992 season, here at home with Santa Anna vs. Bangs on September 4, 1992. The uniforms are the same for marching and concert bands with the addition of gloves, hats, and plumes for marching season.

Local Man Helps In Tedious Job Of Re-Programming Military Computer System

Some assignments are too technical for mere souls like this writer to understand. Such is the one that Chief Warrant Officer Two Patrick Hosch finished recently in Virginia.

Hosch, a member of the Texas Army National Guard, served as a Functional Soldier Representative on the Government Software Development Team located at the Boeing Software Development Center, Vienna, Virginia, along with seven other members of the National Guard and Army Reserve from varying states. His job was to act as an adviser in the development of software which would be able to link across the country into the largest individual computer network in the country. A network that would tie together all National Guard units and Army Reserve units in the U.S., using military terms rather than computer jargon.

Hosch says that Desert Storm made the military realize that such a system was needed for this day and age. The old system no longer was able to get the job done in a satisfactory time. "For instance", he said, "with the new system, when completed, something can be typed in at Coleman, released to all channels and make people do things in a very timely manner and be verified by an 'electronic signature' or password."

"Incidentally," said Hosch, "Randy Casey, another Santa Anna native, now a resident of Austin, is an executive officer of the computer management agency for the Texas National Guard."

The massive data base will contain complete information on each individual personnel file and will store so much information and allow computer affirmations quickly so as to some day "bring the military into the 20th Century, and ideally into an almost paperless society," Hosch said.

Hosch is grateful to have been a part of the project and, as he puts it, "I feel honored to have been just one small country boy among many big boys," working on the massive endeavor. He emphasized that his job was not being a computer expert, but that of military advisor for some 150 Boeing programmers. Although Hosch's work there is completed, at least for the time being, the entire overhaul is expected to take at least a couple of years.

During the almost four months he served on the project, Hosch was able to do lots of sightseeing in and around the Washington, D.C. area. He also met with Congressman Stenholm and with liaison people from the staffs of Senators Gramm and Bentson.

For his outstanding work on the advisory team, Hosch received several awards, including the National Guard Minuteman Award presented by John B. Conaway, Lt. Gen, USAF; Army Commendation Medal, recommended by the Adj. Gen. of Texas; an award from the Program Manager of the Reserve

Santa Anna Native On First Relief Flight to Sarajevo

SARAJEVO--Doug Moore, a native of Santa Anna, was on the first U. S. Air Force aircraft bringing relief supplies to this war-torn city that remains under siege.

Moore escorted a cadre of news media representatives on a C-130 Hercules aircraft from Rhein-Main Air Base, Germany, that landed here at midday Friday July 3 in the midst of extremely tight security. The aircraft carried two forklifts, generators and approximately 1,200 pounds of food, all of which was donated by the citizens of the European Community.

United Nations High Commission for Refugees personnel needed the forklifts to unload food and supplies being flown into the Sarajevo airport by aircraft from several nations. A UN official estimated 700 tons of food are needed daily to feed the city's 300,000 residents.

Moore deployed to an information bureau at Rhein-Main, where news media representatives are being given information about an airlift that may rival the Berlin Airlift. He is deputy chief of media relations for the U. S. Air Forces in Europe headquarters at Ramstein Air Base, Germany.

Because the United States is participating in an international humanitarian effort, along with other nations, the precise number and timing of flights is controlled by the UN. The U. S. Air Force aircraft fly from Rhein-Main to Zagreb, where they are loaded with cargo or have loads they are carrying inspected by UN officials.

From Zagreb, the C-130's fly directly to Sarajevo and, after off-loading, they return home. A typical mission lasts between 9 and 12 hours.

The U.S. portion of the airlift is called Operation Provide Promise.

"It was a great feeling to know that I witnessed America's contribution to multinational relief effort," Moore said. "The situation here is desperate and I'm proud to be part of the organization that was chosen to represent America."

Doug Moore is a civilian employee of the United State Air Force. He was born in Santa Anna

It is our pleasure to announce that Julie Carpenter of San Angelo, will be entertaining at Coleman County Electric Cooperative's 54th Annual Membership Meeting on July 24 at the Ballinger High School Auditorium.

Julie is well-known for her exciting performance style. Red Steagall introduced 14-year old Julie at the National Cowboy symposium by saying: "This fiddle is a very moving instrument. And the young lady that is fixin' to play it for you moves that bow like nobody I've ever seen and moves the audience with her music like nobody I've ever seen."

From Six Flags Over Texas to the Ernest Tubb Midnight Jamboree, audiences across the country have taken Julie to their hearts. Her youthful-next-door appearance allows her to surprise the audience with her advanced musicianship and her unexpectedly mature style. She mixes charisma and a strong stage presence with feeling and near-perfect technical skills.

As the PBS documentary put it when televising Julie winning the national fiddle championship: "Julie Ann Carpenter is such a delightful young lady to watch. She has such excitement! At one time people worried that traditional music was dying out, but it is not dying out, as is evidenced by this per-

Mrs. Marie Wristen returned home from Mt. Pleasant where she went to watch her grandson, Phillip play in the district tournament as he was on the Mt. Pleasant All-Stars PeeWee team. The team came in second. Phillips pitched Monday night striking out eight batters and allowed 1 hit in 3 innings against Red River. Wednesday, he pitched all 5 innings against Clarksville striking out 8 and allowed just 4 hits. They lost the sub-district championship to Texarkana West on the last night of playing. They sure played good. He was on a terrific team and great coaches.

He is the son of Ted and Suzette Wristen and brother of Amy, former Santa Anna people. While there, Dick, Karen, Dana and Ryan Smith came by to visit on their way to Arkansas. They are also formerly of Santa Anna.

It sure was a trip full of excitement.

Library Notes
Check It Out

Alice Anna Spillman

Mr. and Mrs. Homer (and Betty) Richter brought the most beautiful gift to the library last week. There were thirteen outstanding books for children. Frankly I wonder where they found these books because quality children's books are so difficult to locate. These will be on the shelves for our next reading club day.

Zackery Raffles by Dennis Kyte has beautiful illustrations. Zackery is a mouse soldier but must pass three tests. The last one deals with the dark. This story will comfort any child who has the same fear.

The Ballad of Wilber the Moose by John Stadler is a very funny western written for children. Pigs are an important part of the story.

Jolly Roger by Calin McNaughton. A little boy in England rode off and joined the pirates. His mother makes prisoners of them all. The fun begins and everyone learns a good lesson.

Poor Gertie by Larry Bogard. Gertie's mother is soon to be evicted from their apartment home. Gertie dreams of how to stop the landlord. There is a rather surprising outcome. A Little Child's Book of Stories by Ada M. Skinner is the beautiful book that would make a family heirloom. These are short stories and are divided into three sections: a happy child at home, a happy child out of doors, a child at grandmothers and winter-time reading.

If you are reading to a child and we all should try to do this, start with this book.

What words could ever tell the Richters how much their gift is appreciated? Thank you isn't grand enough!

Boys and girls who are in the reading program have so many fine books to choose from this year. We do not limit them to two books. Please help members get to the library. They should read at least an hour each week.

It is wonderful to watch a child become a real reader. Alicia Ellis was at the library over two hours the other afternoon and she almost made herself ill searching the shelves then reading, searching, reading, etc. She probably will always remember the experience and will love reading for life. Why don't some of you other parents try the same experience with your child.

Special thanks are due to Mrs. Mae Wallace and Mrs. Myrtle Chapman. They stayed at the library a couple of mornings so that some bible school workers could be free. We appreciate their help. Mrs. Cam Slagle took another morning and Charee Holman took an afternoon. Thanks to all volunteers we could not have a library without their help.

formance by Julie Carpenter."

Julie has recorded two fiddle albums and a video in Nashville, Tennessee, accompanied by Roy Acuff's Smokey Mountain Boys. Her latest album, "Fiddlin' Up a Storm", has just been released and is available on cassette and on compact disc. It contains a nicely paced selection of 17 songs, showing Julie's competent, dynamic fiddling at bluegrass, western swing, waltzes, gospel and other good old traditional numbers.

Thoughts From Our Pastors

First United Methodist Church

The Lord is Good

"The Lord is good, a strong hold in the day of trouble; he knows those who take refuge in him." Nahum 1:7

The phrase, "The Lord is good," often appears in Scripture. It is also found in some of the most unlikely places throughout the Old Testament. Here in the prophecy of the fall of a great city, the writer cannot overlook this essential quality of the great Jehovah God. Even in the midst of destruction, "The Lord is good." In our own troubled day, it is comforting to be able to rely on One who never changes, who "is the same yesterday, today and forever!" If we place our trust in Him, we can find no better stronghold, no stronger foundation. Who else can we trust in the world around us?

Someone has wisely said, "Just as you cannot outrun God when you dodge His will, in the same way it is impossible to outrun His care when you are in His will."

The refreshment table was covered with an ivory cloth with a hunter green runner down the center. An arrangement of ivory and mauve silk flowers centered the table. Fruit juice was served from a crystal bowl and coffee from a crystal and silver carafe. Assorted fruit and nut breads, cookies and fresh fruit were served from crystal appointments.

Hostesses for the party were Janet Neff, Ruby Hosch, Bobby Benton, Sybil Huggins, Oma Dean Homer, Udell Copeland, Sandra Guthrie and Barbara Kingsbery. Assisting with the serving were Nikki Donham, cousin of the honoree and Stefanie Fitzpatrick of Austin.

40th Annual Bullock Reunion Held In S-Anna

The fortieth annual Bullock Reunion was held Saturday and Sunday, July 4th and 5th.

The group met Saturday afternoon at 6 p.m. at the Highrise Recreation Room in Santa Anna for sandwiches, chips and drinks. The group enjoyed singing and visiting.

Sunday morning everyone met at the Coleman Park for a devotional at 10:30 a.m. Songs were sung by Becky Comstock, Helen Bullock, Tina Buford and Dean and Susan Williamson. These were enjoyed by all present. Dean Williamson was in charge of the devotional. This was a very inspirational message. Following the devotional time, a delicious meal of brisket, sausage, beans, potato salad and all kinds of other dishes was served to the group.

A short business meeting followed the meal with officers staying as they are for another year. The group was saddened as Milford Bullock, president of the reunion, had fallen and fractured his hip, so was unable to attend this year.

All reported a great reunion, with approximately 65 attending. Guests were present from Houston, Odessa, Midlothian, Ft. Worth, Palo Pinto, Denver City, Cleburne, San Angelo, New Braunfels, Big Spring, Lubbock, Palestine, Lewisville, Carthage, McLean, Henderson in Texas and also several from Coleman County.

Appraisal District Discusses Taxing Procedure for Hospital District

Members of the Coleman County Appraisal District Board met in Coleman Monday, July 13, for the regular session at the District office.

In addition to routine items on the agenda, Chief Appraiser Bill Jones presented the monthly tax collection report that showed collections in June to be just over $97,000.00. This is below the same figure last year. Total tax collection for the eight entities since last October totals 3.3 million dollars, slightly lower than the prior year. Collections average almost 90 percent of the total assessed for the year, and 95 percent with collection of delinquent taxes from prior years.

A budget comparison showed the District to be well within the budget for the first six months of the fiscal year.

The group discussed the taxing procedures for the new Coleman County Hospital District, and voted to assess and collect taxes for the

The Texas Department of Transportation will hold a public meeting on July 21 at 7 p.m. in the Voss Community Center in Coleman County. The meeting will discuss the reconstruction of Farm to Market Road 503 from U. S. Highway 67 at Valera to FM Road 1929, located five miles south of Voss.

Roy Wright, assistant area engineer in Brown County, said all property owners along the 15 mile stretch are encouraged to attend the meeting. The meeting will address the impact of the widening project, and its effect on such things as archaeological and historical sites, he said. "We want to know what the public knows," Wright said. A Picture Could Be Worth a Thousand Words or a Big Dollar Fine

Dear Commissioner Nabers,

Recently, I applied for a job in another city. I sent my application to the company, and I progressed through several telephone interviews. One of the interviewers told me that I was a "shoo-in" for the position. I was confident that I would be offered the job until the employer asked me to send a picture of myself. I declined to send a photograph because I did not think that my appearance had anything to do with how I would perform as an employee. However, shortly after I failed to send the picture, I received a letter stating that my qualifications didn't meet the company's requirements. I know that I lost the job opportunity because I refused to send my photograph. Is this legal?

J.E.
The Woodlands

Dear J.E.,

The employer you were dealing with should definitely have more fear of discrimination laws. Asking for a photograph as a hiring prerequisite is not wise. It is illegal to discriminate against any applicant or employee based on race, national origin, religion, sex, color, or age (40 and over). Making a final employment decision based on a photograph or an applicant's appearance can indicate discrimination based on one or more of the protected classes mentioned above. Additionally, the Americans With Disabilities Act provides further protection for applicants with disabilities.

Employers should base hiring decisions solely on a person's qualifications. Any employer who ignores a qualified job candidate based solely on appearance is breaking the law, and hurting his business by possibly overlooking the best person for the job. To find out more about discrimination laws, contact the Texas Commission on Human Rights at 512-837-8534.

Dear Commissioner Nabers,

What happens if a holiday falls on a weekend? Should employees be paid for the day even if they wouldn't be working anyway?

S.K.
Port Arthur

Dear S.K.,

First of all, let me point out that there are no official holidays that all Texas employers must observe. Paid holidays are considered a benefit. Since Texas does not currently have any laws requiring employers to provide benefits for their employees, employers may choose to handle a holiday any way that they see fit.

To avoid confusion, it is wise for employers to develop written company policies that detail what employees can expect regarding holidays. This policy should cover issues such as which, if any, holidays will be observed, which employees will be eligible for holiday pay (full-time v. part-time), and any exceptions to the holiday pay policy. Additionally, company policy should cover whether part-time employees will receive the same holiday pay as full-time employees.

Employers who would like assistance in formulating and writing company policy can contact my office for a free guide to writing policy handbooks. To obtain the guide, write to Company Policy Handbook, c/o Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers, 638 TEC Building, 101 E. 15th Street, Austin, Texas, 78778-0001.

Commissioner Mary Scott Nabers is the Texas Employment Commissioner who represents all employers. Address questions to: TEXAS BUSINESS TODAY, 638 TEC Building, Austin, Texas, 78778.

A Little Lady, A Big Legend

Although she stood less than 5 feet tall and weighed less than 100 pounds, sharpshooter Annie Oakley played a huge role in the American "Wild West" era of the late 1800s.

Known to the public as "The Girl of the Western Plains," Annie was born Phoebe Ann Moses in Patterson, Ohio, on Aug. 13, 1860. One of eight children, Annie discovered her talent for marksmanship when she picked up her father's cap-and-ball rifle at age 10. She soon began selling the wild game she hunted, and according to legend, paid off the mortgage on the family farm with her earnings.

At 15, Annie visited a Cincinnati shooting club, where she challenged and beat professional marksman Frank Butler. They were married in 1876 and began touring soon after. That is when Annie is believed to have changed her name to "Oakley," after a Cincinnati suburb.

In 1884, Butler became Annie's manager, and a year later, she joined "Buffalo Bill's Wild West" show. Annie toured with the show for nearly 17 years, entertaining audiences in the United States, Canada and Europe with her stunt shooting. She could, for example, shoot a playing card in half or hit a dime in mid-air from a distance of 90 feet.

After retiring from the "Wild West" show in 1902, Annie taught trapshooting at resorts and demonstrated her marksmanship at army camps during World War I. She died in 1926, but lives on both in legend and in the musical based on her life "Annie Get Your Gun." ■

Rhone Named President Of Hospital Tax District Board

The recently appointed board of directors of the Coleman County hospital tax district met last Friday afternoon at the hospital to organize and elect officers. Don Rhone was elected president of the board and Clyde D. Allen, vice president. Interim administrator of Coleman County Medical Center, John Martyn, will serve as secretary of the new group.

The new board met with the four-man interim board appointed by Holiday Hills which has been operating the hospital since the last owners attempted to close the facility. The Holiday Hill board will continue to direct the operations of the hospital until all paper work can be completed, transferring the operation to the tax board, and affecting a lease on the building. According to Mr. Rhone, the building is owned by the Overall-Morris Foundation which is administered by the United Methodist Church.

There was some discussion about securing a permanent administrator, and some recommendations on this matter have been received from the Texas Hospital Association. Steve Autry of Coleman has been retained as attorney for the new tax district to see it through all the legalities of the transfer. He is also a member of the four-man Holiday Hill Board. He discussed present and future operation of the medical center and arrangements to be worked out with the Overall-Morris Memorial Hospital board of directors.

Collier Watson, CPA, made a presentation to the board in regard to monthly financial statements and progress reports.

Members of the new board of directors for Coleman County Medical Center, appointed by the Commissioners Court, are Don Rhone, Clyde D. Allen, Danny Kellar, Virginia Jamison, Janet Johnson, James Barr and Bruce Pittard. The board will serve until May of 1993 when members will be elected to staggered terms of office by the voters of Coleman County.

Texas Conservative Coalition Plans Public Hearing in Abilene July 23

A public hearing is scheduled for Thursday, July 23, at 4 p.m. on the Hardin-Simmons University campus. The hearing is sponsored by the Texas Conservative Coalition (TCC), a bi-partisan group of 51 state legislators who work toward public policy which enhances limited government, free enterprise, individual liberties and traditional family values. The five cohosts for the hearing are Senator Bill Sims and Representatives Bill Hunter, Layton Black of Goldthwaite, Charles Fennell of Holliday and Bob Turner of Voss.

Hearing topics are state finances, to include debt management or elimination, tax restructuring and state spending limits; welfare reform; to include welfare, learnfare and the availability of affordable health care; and private property rights, to include environmental restrictions and groundwater regulation.

"Anyone who has an interest in one or all of these issues should attend," said Rep. Bob Hunter, R-Abilene, TCC member and co-host for the event. "Even if you don't have something to say, the hearing will be an excellent educational experience. It is not often that state legislators come to Abilene to discuss major state issues and ask for input from local citizens."

The Coalition is holding a series of five public hearings across Texas during the summer. Other sites include Austin, Conroe, Laredo and Lubbock.

Conservative lawmakers have been criticized in the past for opposing legislation without providing alternatives. Through these hearings, the Coalition hopes to provide its members with a background the workable solutions to major state issues. The information gleaned through this series of public hearings will be used in developing a legislative agenda for the Coalition during the 73rd Legislature, which convenes in January of 1993.

"More than anything else, we want to hear from Texans on these issues," said Sen. Bill Sims, D-San Angelo, a member of TCC's Board of Directors. "Environmental restrictions, welfare programs and health care are and will continue to be major expense items in the state budget. We need to know what citizens think about these issues."

Sims explained that no all 51 members of the Coalition will attend the hearing, but that a report of the proceedings of each hearing will be prepared for the group's members.

"Citizens seldom have an occasion to speak to elected officials and know they will be heard," Sims said. "At this meeting, the people in the Big Country will have that opportunity and know that we will listen."

The public meeting will be held at Hardin-Simmons University in the multi-purpose room of the Johnson School of Business Building, located at 2200 Hickory Street in Abilene.

Social Security Chief, Congress Intent On Stopping Misleading Advertisers

Misleading advertisers are preying on an unwary public by using Social Security as a "come on" for profitmaking and fundraising ventures, according to Social Security Commissioner Gwendolyn S. King in testimony before a joint hearing of two House Ways and Means subcommittees-Social Security and Oversight.

The hearing focused on the means of improving compliance with current law, and discussed the need for strengthening existing legislation to bring a halt to fraudulent solicitations.

"We have the opportunity," Commissioner King said, "to bring into the light those who engage in money-raising practices that can, at best, be described as deceptive and misleading."

"There is no program so critical to the financial well-being of so many people as Social Security. It's the vital role that Social Security plays in people's lives that makes it such an attractive asset to direct mail operators and telephone solicitors who look to make a quick and substantial financial killing—a profit that comes at the expense of those who can least afford it."

Commissioner King explained that some advertisers deceive the public by suggesting that the future of Social Security is in jeopardy. Their direct marketing efforts mislead people, especially senior citizens, into thinking that they must respond with a contribution or membership fee to avoid losing their Social Security benefits or Medicare coverage.

A more common misleading advertising practice is the offer of Social Security "document services" for a fee. For example, some advertisers offer to get Social Security numbers for newborns, to notify Social Security of name changes for brides, or to obtain an earnings and benefit estimate statement for fees ranging from $10 to $50 or more. But all of these services can be obtained for free by calling Social Security's toll-free number 1-800-772-1213, between 7 a.m. and 7 p.m. any business day.

King explained that these so-called service providers contribute nothing but an extra step to the process, and also noted that the agency has additional concerns about what marketers do with the confidential information intended for use only by the Social Security Administration.

The Social Security chief also testified that there is a growing problem with direct mail campaigns from insurance vendors. These vendors use Social Security as a "come on" to encourage people to respond. "Important Social Security Information," and then briefly give some information about Social Security before launching into a pitch for some type of insurance, sweepstakes or other merchandise.

The Social Security Administration is taking a hard line to combat misleading advertising practices and to protect the public from fraud and deceit. Commissioner King testified that "SSA is combating these deceptive practices with every weapon we have available to us."

She noted that her agency is intensifying its public information activities to help make people more aware of the services that the Social Security Administration offers at no charge.

"Furthermore," she said, "we are working with national consumer organizations, senior and minority advocacy groups and state and federal enforcement groups to seek possible solutions to this growing problem."

for about 7 percent of births each year in Texas, but comprise more than 59 percent of infant deaths.

"Why would anyone put an unborn child at risk by smoking while she's pregnant? It's a crime," said Dr. David R. Smith, Commissioner of Health. "The baby is not even born yet and already that child's chances for survival are reduced because of its mother smoking habit," he added.

Even "light" smokers risk their unborn babies' health. Pregnant patients who smoke less than a pack a day increase their risk of having a low birthweight baby by 53 percent. Pregnant patients who smoke a pack or more a day more than double their risk (113 percent) of having a low birthweight baby.

"A clear dose-response relationship exist," Todd said. "The more the woman smokes during pregnancy, the lower the baby's birthweight is likely to be. Maternal smoking retards fetal growth, causing an average reduction in birthweight of 200 grams."

Studies have shown a 25-50 percent higher rate of fetal and infant deaths among women who smoke during pregnancy compared with those who do not.

According to Todd, however, women who stop smoking before becoming pregnant have infants of the same birthweight as those born to women who have never smoked. The same benefit occurs to women who successfully quit smoking in the first 3 or 4 months of pregnancy.

According to Dr. Smith the message to all women who are pregnant or planning a family is quite clear: "Don't smoke."

To accomplish great things, we must not only act but also dream, not only plan but also believe.

The Seeds of Togetherness

I have been worried lately that, with our busy schedules, my family does not spend enough time together.

Our daughter Julie, 12, is always off with one of her friends. And even Emily, our 5-year-old, has begun disappearing next door or down the street with some new-found playmates.

"Don't plan anything for Saturday," I announced. "We're going to spend the day together."

Julie and her father looked puzzled.

"Great!" said Emily. "We must be going to McDonald's!"

Finding an activity that each of us could enjoy was not a simple task. My husband likes to fly kites, but Emily was cool to the idea of spending the day in a field looking up.

Julie loves to go bike-riding, but her Dad and I have been resigned to vehicles with four wheels for some time now.

We all finally agreed on an activity that would be productive and meaningful: gardening. Together, we decided, we would plant a vegetable garden and raise our own produce.

Enthused, Julie and Emily began arguing over what we should plant.

"I love tomatoes," said Julie. "Blah!" responded Emily. "How about potato chips?"

Finally, we decided on a small patch of cucumbers, tomatoes, carrots, peppers and herbs — and a mound full of seeds guaranteed to produce a jack-o-lantern by Halloween.

Jim went to work with a borrowed tiller. It soon became clear that our soil was rich in iron: cans, bolts, screws and wire, that is — enough to start our own junkyard.

"Get out of the way!" I screamed at Emily, fearing she'd be struck by a flying rock. Julie, however, was not in any danger. She was in her room fixing her hair.

Later, Julie did grace us with her presence long enough to add a couple pairs of peat moss and lime to the patch. She left, however, when we brought out the manure.

Finally, it was time to plant. "Just leave me alone while I think!" I snapped, trying to figure out how to arrange the seedlings.

"Emily, get off the dirt!" Jim hollered.

"Julie, get out here!" we shouted in unison.

Somehow the seeds and seedlings got planted without serious injury — to them or to us. But, at times, I felt this togetherness idea was as rocky as the garden.

I changed my mind, though, when I overheard Julie telling one of her friends about the great day she had planting the family garden. And I had to smile when she detailed our plans for another day together — canning all those vegetables it would produce. ■

Babies' Low Birthweights Attributed to Smoking During Pregnancy

Women who smoke during pregnancy are nearly twice as likely to have low birthweight babies than are women who don't smoke, according to the Texas Department of Health's (TDH) Office of Smoking and Health.

A baby is considered of low birthweight if born weighing 2,500 grams (5.5 pounds) or less.

Information gathered through new and more detailed birth certificates by the TDH Bureau of Vital Statistics shows that of the women who smoked during pregnancy, 11.3 percent had babies with low birth-weights, while only 6.1 percent of non-smoking women delivered low birthweight babies.

According to Ron Todd, coordinator of the Office of Smoking and Health, "Smoking is probably the most important modifiable cause of poor pregnancy outcome among women in the U.S. Recent estimates suggest that the elimination of smoking during pregnancy could prevent 5 percent of perinatal death, about 20 percent of low birthweight births and about 8 percent of premature births.

Dickson Takes on Tobacco Companies With Bill To Recover Taxpayer Dollars

AUSTIN—Seeking to ease the financial burden on Texas taxpayers for treating the effects of smoking, Senator Temple Dickson announced new legislation today holding tobacco companies accountable for public costs of medical treatment furnished to victims of lung cancer, heart disease and respiratory illnesses caused by smoking and being otherwise exposed to smoking.

Dickson, chairman of the Senate Economic Development Committee, said the bill establishes legal grounds for the state, counties and other units of government to recover expenses for treating tobacco-related illnesses. He said millions of dollars in state Medicaid payments are spent each year for the treatment of lung cancer and other smoking-related diseases.

"The effects from smoking tobacco are exacting a terrible toll on the health of Texans and on the state treasury," Dickson said at a press conference. "Powerful lobbyists help the tobacco companies not only escape responsibility for the millions of dollars in health costs but to also receive subsidies from the government to grow and sell the product."

"This legislation will begin to loosen the grip of the tobacco industry's forces on our state and provide a means for the state and local government to recover the costs of treating tobacco illnesses."

Dickson, who is himself undergoing treatment for lung cancer which doctors tell him was caused by smoking, said that if he is a member of the Senate when it next convenes he will introduce the legislation. If not, he said he will urge passage of the bill as a private citizen. Dickson said he already has furnished the Governor and Lt. Governor with the bill and has recommended it to them. He said he feels that he will have the support of the two state leaders.

"The tobacco companies know now and they have known for 50 years of the dangers of their product and it is high time for them to start paying for part of the damage they cause," Dickson said.

"The cost to the Texas taxpayer in Medicaid benefits for lung cancer alone is nearly $10 million. When you add up the cost to counties, cities and hospitals for lung cancer, emphysema and other illnesses caused by tobacco products, the taxpayer is out over $100 million. And when we look at the cost to those with health insurance and to all of us in Texas, we are speaking of over $3-billion.

"The cigarette industry kills 40,000 Americans a year and it is only the start of justice that the industry begins to bear at least a portion of the cost of the carnage from which it so handsomely profits," Dickson said.

He said his staff has been working with statewide health organizations, consumer and anti-smoking groups and local government associations on the legislation. "I believe that they will lend their support to this initial, precedent-setting step to release the grasp of the tobacco industry on Texan's lives and tax dollars."

Do You Know Your Vitamins?

How knowledgeable are you when it comes to vitamins? Just for fun, see if you can answer these questions:

TRUE or FALSE?

- 1. There are more than 100 known vitamins.
2. B-complex vitamins have similar functions.
3. Natural vitamins work better than synthetic vitamins.
4. Since vitamins are good for you, more are even better.

Here are the answers:

- 1. False. There are only 13 known vitamins, and each one makes important contributions to the body. They are vitamins A, D, E, K and C plus the B vitamins—B6, B12, thiamin, riboflavin, niacin, folic acid, biotin and pantothenic acid.
2. True. B-complex vitamins break down protein, carbohydrates and fat and are necessary for almost every reaction in every cell of your body. They are essential for normal growth and development of skin, hair, blood cells and tissue. They also assist in the normal functioning of brain and nerve tissue and the immune system.
3. False. Both natural and synthetic vitamins perform the same tasks in the body in the same way. The body does not distinguish between "nature-made" and "man-made." However, food also offers other nutrients not available from pills.
4. False. The fact that some vitamins are good for you does not necessarily mean that more are better. In fact, an excessive amount of any one nutrient can affect the balance and effectiveness of other nutrients. And extremely high amounts of some vitamins can be harmful in certain situations. That's why it's wise to talk to a health professional before taking vitamin pill supplements.

Gunkler concludes that a registered dietitian can help you with any questions or concerns you may have about nutrition.

Antlers became a burden to Irish elk

Imagine encountering an elk in the Rockies with a rack of antlers spanning 12 feet - tip to tip - and weighing 320 pounds!

Scientists say such an animal roamed the earth about a million years ago.

"Taxonomists refer to the fossil remains as the Irish elk," explained Mickey Hunt, manager of the International Wildlife Park in Grand Prairie, Tex. "The sheer weight of the antlers probably contributed to the animal's demise."

Texas Trivia

Barber shops once doubled as bathhouses in Texas. Before cities required every residence to have running water and indoor plumbing, barbers sold baths along with shaves and haircuts. As late as the mid-1930s, almost every Texas town had at least one tonsorial parlor that also offered a hot tub and a towel for a quarter. Business was so brisk on Saturdays that advance reservations were required.
