Where has the summer gone? It doesn't seem possible that summer is almost gone and school will be starting here in Santa Anna next Monday! Most of those passing through the school doors will be "old pros" but for some it will be an entirely new experience and can be a very traumatic time.

A few years ago, Erma Bombeck shared in her column an article sent to her by a reader. It could be entitled, confessions of a child entering school for the first time who according to adults, "has nothing to worry about."

My name is Donald and I don't know anything.

I have new underwear, a new sweater, a loose tooth, and I didn't sleep last night. I am worried.

What if the school bus jerks after I get on and I lose my balance and my pants rip and everyone laughs?

What if I have to go to the bathroom before we get to school?

What if a bell rings and everyone goes through the door and a man yells, "Where do you belong?" and I don't know.

What if my shoelaces come untied and someone says, "Your shoelaces are untied. We'll all watch while you tie it?"

What if the trays in the cafeteria are too tall for me to reach?

What if the thermos lid on my soup is on too tight and when I try to open it, it breaks?

What if my loose tooth wants to come out when we're supposed to have our heads down and be quiet?

What if the teacher tells the class to go to the bathroom and I can't go?

What if I get hot and want to take my sweater off and someone steals it?

What if I splash water on my name tag and my name disappears and no one will know who I am?

What if they send us out to play and all the swings are taken? What do I do?

What if the wind blows all the important papers out of my hands that I'm supposed to take home to Mom.

What if they mispronounce my name and everyone laughs?

What if my teacher doesn't make D's like my Mom taught me?

What if I spend the whole day without a friend?

What if the teacher gives a seat to everyone else first and I'm left over?

What if the windows of the bus steam over and I can't tell when we get to my stop?

I'm just a little kid but maybe I'm smarter than I think I am.

At least I know better than to tell a five-year-old with a loose tooth who has never been out of the yard by himself before that he has "nothing to worry about."

Homecoming 1992

With school starting, can Homecoming be far behind?

The Santa Anna Ex-Student Association Homecoming is slated for October 9 and 10.

There will be the usual parade on Friday afternoon, a football game against Miles Friday night and various class get-togethers. The Coffee Reception will be held Saturday morning as will the business meeting.

Entertainment Chairman Mary Ford Field will be letting us know her plans for the hospitality room.

Who Are They?

Who are these young ladies of yesteryear? That's what Ford Holt, would like to know. Can anyone out there tell us who the young ladies are? Holt found the picture among the belongings of his late brother, Roger Holt. It is thought that the picture was taken near the old Santa Anna High School, sometimes called the "college", which stood where the armory is now located. At the right seems to be a water tower that Holt remembers. The house at the right in the background is recognizable as one that still stands.

School Board Doesn't Anticipate Raising Tax Rate

The Santa Anna School Board met two times last week, once for a training workshop and another for a budget workshop.

Tuesday evening, Aug. 4, the group met for a TASB (Texas Association of School Boards) training workshop in preparation for adoption of a policy manual.

In the only business on the evening's agenda, the board accepted the resignation of teacher/coach Ricky Smith who had been with the district for one year.

The board met again Thursday night, Aug. 6, for a budget workshop in preparation for presenting and adopting an operating budget in the amount of $1,900,000 for the 1992-93 school year.

They also considered applications for the position of teacher/coach left vacant by the resignation of Ricky Smith. Ray Findley, who has previously coached at Coleman, Childress and Bangs, was hired to fill that position. The Findleys have been residents of Santa Anna for about a year. Mrs. Findley is the former Jean Robinett, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Robert Robinett.

A public hearing will be held at 7:00 p.m. Thursday, August 27, in the administration building of Santa Anna schools. The purpose of the hearing will be for review and approval of the 1992-93 budget and to set a tax rate for the 1992 collection year. The current tax rate is $.36 (cents) per $100 valuation. Of that 36¢, 12¢ is for bonded indebtedness and 24¢ for maintenance and operation.

Good news for taxpayers is that according to Superintendent Jim McPherson, the board does not anticipate having to raise the local school tax rate.

The regular monthly meeting for the school board will be held at 7:00 p.m., Tuesday, August 18. The agenda for that meeting is not yet complete.

School Starts Monday Morning at 8 a.m.

Santa Anna school doors will open Monday morning at 8 a.m. for the first day of the 1992-93 school year.

Elementary, Junior High and High School will all begin each day at 8 a.m. All grades will dismiss each day at 3:15 p.m. Parents of younger children should take note of this dismissal time since in previous years grades K-3 were dismissed earlier. Buses will run at 3:20 p.m. each afternoon.

Come Eat Watermelon, Meet The Mountaineers

The Athletic Booster Club will hold a watermelon feast and "Meet the Mountaineers" event Friday evening Aug. 14, starting at 7:00 at Mountaineer Stadium.

Everyone is invited and encouraged to be present to have a good time sharing the feast and meeting this year's Mountaineer football team and coaches.

Lets get this season started off with enthusiasm from the fans!

Don't Let The Green Grass Fool You!

According to Clint Day, President of the Volunteer Fire Department, the fire department continues to remind us that even though vegetation looks green, underneath it is dry and susceptible to igniting. People should be especially careful about throwing lighted cigarettes down and burning trash.

The Fire Department has fought several fires in the past weeks that seemed to be started as the result of burning trash.

Day stated that donations toward the Department's Associate

Membership fund drive has been down this year as compared to recent years and funds are beginning to get low. Fighting fires is a costly business and the Santa Anna Volunteer Fire Department always welcomes contributions.

Another rash of fires as seen recently, or a major breakdown of equipment could put the Fire Department in the position of having to borrow money to operate until their next membership drive begins, a situation that only adds to the burden that the volunteer fire fighters already carry.

Its Football Time!

And pictured here is Josh Lemond receiving some TLC from Coach John Smith and trainer Candl Daniel for a jammed finger on the first morning of workouts for this season. Smith reports that 33 young men were on hand Monday working out for the Mountaineer team. He says he saw lots of enthusiasm even though it is the "dreaded period", working out in shorts. The Mountaineers will get into pads and start contact work on Friday. Their first scrimmage will be at 6:00 p.m. at 6:00 p.m. Early on Friday of next week. First game of the season will be here Sept. 4 against Bangs.

Library Notes Check It Out

Alice Anna Spillman

Memorials to the library are an outstanding way to remember friends and family. It not only recognizes those for whom we care, it helps keep the library; a blessing for others.

Recently these memorials have been received:

For Mr. John David Harper from Alma Gaddy of Denison, Texas and a friend.

Mr. Harper had the most wonderfully eclectic reading tastes.

For Mr. Irving Dean who truly loved reading and books from a friend.

For Mr. Robert (Bob) Pearce from Mrs. Gale Allen Brock and a friend.

Mr. Pearce was from a family who encourages reading from generation to generation.

For Mr. J. E. Williams from a friend.

Mr. Williams spent many hours at the library.

For Mrs. Fannie Gilbert from Mrs. Gale Allen Brock.

Mrs. Gilbert have encouragement and comfort to many.

A notice will be placed in the library and notes will be sent to the families of these friends.

Robert Pearce, grandson of Mr. Bob Pearce recently gave the library a special new children's book. It will be used one week for children story hour. This new generation of the family wants to share the joy of reading too.

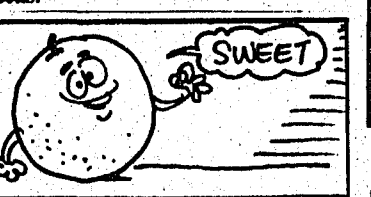

Several boys and girls have been in this week for more books. Do remember to bring the children for Reading Time on Thursday at 10:00 a.m. Some of us read almost every book in the library when we were children. Wouldn't it be wonderful if some of the boys and girls would do that this year or the next.

Nell Myers found a small bookcase for paperbacks. We finally have most of these off the floor! You can look at them more easily.

Do you like biographies and autobiographies? We have many in paperback and some hard bound ones. Recent paperbacks are of Roger Staubach, Enough Time to Win. Kirk Douglas The Ragged Dicks. Minding the Store (Weiman Marcus) by Stanley Marcus and Howard Cosell I Never Played the Game! Abilene sent Bios of Lawrence Welk and Burt Lancaster in large print. There are many more at my house. Look soon for world famous politicians and military men.

Have you read The Leadership Secrets of Attila the Hun by Wess Roberts PhD? One of our patrons ordered this because Ross Perot said it was one of his favorites. The name Attila brought to mind wild, cruel men. But did you know he grew up in Roman homes? His ideas of leadership came from these early associations. Those who would be leaders should read the book and perhaps select some of the ideas.

The bigger the navel, the sweeter the orange.

A musical is sponsored by the Park Board on the third Friday of each month, with all bands in the area welcome to participate. The musical is held at the armory and begins at 7:00. No admission charge. Concessions available.

Smooth Stones

"Peace I leave with you; my peace I give to you; not as the world give do I give to you. Let not your hearts be troubled, neither let them be afraid."

John 14:28

When someone says "Desert Storm," I think of sand. But I've learned more about the area and there's a vital spiritual lesson to be learned from it.

In the desert, the sand blows over the stones and pebbles in the area. The sand and wind are the same ingredients of a sand blaster. Day after day and night after night the wearing down of the stones continues without much of a pause. The stones are smooth and shiny even though they are hard and once were sharp and jagged. One of the men from Desert Storm showed me some of these stones that he had picked up while he was there. As you hold them in your hand the smoothness feels good and the brightness catches your eye.

Life may buffet us with billows of sand and wind but these only serve to polish and refine us. They give us the opportunity to prove the genuineness of the Savior's comforting, healing words, "Lo, I am with you always, to the close of the age" (Matt. 28:20).

State Capital

HIGHLIGHTS

By Lyndell Williams
TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN - Texas legislative politics took yet another cockeyed turn last week when (take your pick):

■ Texas Secretary of State John Hannah ordered that Texas Senate elections be held Nov. 3 under different boundaries than those used for the March primaries.

■ A federal appeals court ruled it could not stop Texas from collecting a state property tax passed by legislators last year, but declared illegal by the Texas Supreme Court.

■ Legislative leaders announced Texas will have a $529 million budget surplus at the end of this month, but it the surplus has already been spent.

GOP to fight Hannah

Texas Republicans vowed to fight Hannah in federal court and accused him of plotting with top state officials, all Democrats, to elect more Democrats in November.

State GOP chairman Fred Meyer said Hannah met all week with Gov. Ann Richards, Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and Attorney General Dan Morales to discuss throwing out federal-drawn election boundaries.

Earlier, Bullock had sent senators a memo advising that Hannah could void the primaries and install new districts with new candidates chosen by Democrat and Republican committees.

Meyer said Richards, Bullock, Morales and Hannah were "hatching a plot to overthrow democracy in Texas."

"In their frantic efforts to save the Democratic Party, they are willing to sacrifice the democratic process," he said.

Lawsuit Anticipated

The legal struggle to redistrict the state began last year when the Democrat-dominated Texas Senate took too long to draw new maps, so federal officials did it for them. Primary elections this spring were held in districts based on that plan, despite Morales' lawsuits to stop them.

Although the U.S., Supreme Court has upheld the federal judges' plan, Morales three weeks ago got a lower Washington panel of judges to say a plan finally passed by the Legislature was more fair to minorities.

Despite cries of foul from the GOP, which had brought the suit that led to the court-ordered plan, Hannah said he had no choice. He noted that a three-judge federal court in Austin imposed its map in a temporary order that applied only to the primaries.

Hannah also quoted from a Jan. 10 opinion from the Austin court:

"This court in no way intends to limit the efforts of the Legislature in adopting acceptable permanent redistricting plans at any time it sees fit."

Meyer and the GOP are expected to sue to void Hannah's action on the basis that the federal plan is the only legal plan that can be used in November's election.

Illegal Tax Okayed

Meanwhile, Gov. Richards said she will call the Legislature into special session after the November election to remedy the illegal state property tax.

Richards, though much relieved when a federal appeals court said it could not stop state government from collecting the tax, still does not have a consensus substitute plan.

The state's attorneys told the court that if the tax collection is stopped, then Texas schools will close for the lack of money.

Surplus Already Spent

Texas Comptroller John Sharp said the state will have a $529 million surplus at the end of this month, thanks to the lottery and a new business income tax.

But Texas House Ways and Means chairman James Hury, D-Galveston, said the surplus has already been spent, referring to commitments that must be paid for in the next biennium.

Sharp also had harsh words for the Texas High Speed Rail Authority after charges of mismanagement and questionable spending surfaced.

"If a bullet train is ever built in Texas, I hope it runs better than the High Speed Rail Authority," he said.

Reyes Backs Republican

Another footnote in the Houston congressional primary that refuses to die:

Democratic runoff loser Ben Reyes said he will support Republican Clark Kent Ervin over the winner, state Sen. Gene Green, a Democrat.

The district was intentionally drawn for Hispanics to win, and Reyes said Ervin, a black businessman, will help Hispanics more than Green, an Anglo.

"Reyes lost and he can't accept it," retorted Green.

Marines Occupy Strip

More than 1,000 U.S. Marines are occupying a strip of desert along the Mexican border to stop drug smugglers.

Supported by surveillance planes and helicopters, the Marines are patrolling up to 90 miles deep into the U.S. searching the isolated territory for smugglers.

Although armed, they take no action, but make about 12 reports daily to law enforcement agencies.

Other Highlights

■ Former Gov. Mark White, after clashing with Ross Perot in a legal squabble over White's financially-troubled Beaumont radio station, stepped down as a partner of Keck, Mahin & Cate's Houston office. White said he was forming his own firm.

■ The Texas Department of Transportation announced its first woman district engineer. Maribel Jaso was named district engineer of the 13-county Abilene district.

JUNIOR HIGH LANGUAGE ARTS 7th and 8th GRADE:

"Be cool with a new unit"

In the dog days of summer it is nearly impossible to survive in Texas without the aid of an air conditioner. Since we experience summer-like heat during five months of the year, A.C. units are major consumers of kilowatts in our homes and can take a big chunk out of your summer budget.

In fact, the Texas Energy Extension Service says many Texas residents spend 20 to 25 percent of their annual home energy costs on air conditioning. In the typical Corpus Christi climate, an A.C. unit can run 2000 hours annually. That's almost three months of non-stop air conditioning. So, purchasing the right air conditioning unit for your home is important to your pocketbook.

You may have seen the number rating system on appliances in your local store. Use these numbers in your comparison shopping, they can help guide you to purchasing a better unit. The higher the EER (Energy Efficiency Rating), the more efficient the unit.

For example, if a San Antonio resident switches from an old unit with an EER rating of 7 to a newer unit with an EER rating of 11 the annual savings will be approximately $238. This savings is based on the purchase of a three ton unit, which is about the size for an 1500 square foot home.

Many cities and electric companies are offering rebates for upgrading to more efficient air conditioning systems. Most rebate programs have minimum requirements for efficiency ratings before you can receive any payments for an upgrade. Contact your local electricity provider to find out if you are eligible for rebates.

In west Texas, where the humidity level is lower, evaporative coolers can be a less expensive alternative to electric air conditioning units. Heat pumps, systems that both heat and cool your home, are also becoming more popular for

New Regulations Cover Trapping of Feral (Wild) Swine

Hunters enjoying their sport on ranch leases often shoot feral (wild) swine as a secondary target to deer and other seasonal game. These feral hogs are actually domestic hogs that have escaped or were released, but with each generation, the hogs develop more traits needed for survival in the wild. Hunting these hogs has become so popular, some ranchers hire trappers to catch and transport the animals from other sites to keep their ranches stocked.

In late July, the Texas Animal Health Commission (TAHC) put in effect new rules to help reduce the risk of feral swine spreading disease to domestic livestock or to humans. The TAHC is concerned about two diseases: the bacterial disease, brucellosis, and pseudorabies, a virus. Intensive national eradication programs are underway to wipe out these two diseases.

Brucellosis causes reproductive problems in infected swine and can be passed by the boar to sows. The disease also can be transmitted to humans through blood contact, a situation that can occur easily during butchering.

Pseudorabies poses no threat to humans, but swine can transmit it to other animals. Infected cattle, dogs, cats and other animals die but do not spread the disease. Infected adult swine typically develop only flu-like symptoms, but young pigs under a month old can have severe respiratory and digestive symptoms and may die within three or four days after contracting the disease. A survey of slaughter plant blood samples about a year ago indicated about a third of feral swine tested positive for pseudorabies.

The TAHC's new regulations are intended to prevent the spread of these diseases. Feral swine trapped on a premise are to be tested negative for brucellosis and pseudorabies within 30 days before they are moved to a game preserve or site where they will be maintained for hunting. An accredited veterinarian must draw the blood samples for the tests, at the owner's expense.

The tests prior to movement are not required if the swine are taken directly to a slaughter facility or to a livestock market for sale to slaughter. At the livestock market, the feral swine must be held in isolation, under quarantine, and be moved only to slaughter accompanied by a permit issued by the TAHC livestock market inspector.

In some cases, trappers prefer to domesticate the feral swine, keeping them for breeding and feeding purposes. To accomplish this, the TAHC requires that the feral swine be confined away from any infected or free-roaming swine for at least 60 days. An accredited veterinarian is to test the animals for both brucellosis and pseudorabies, at the owner's expense.

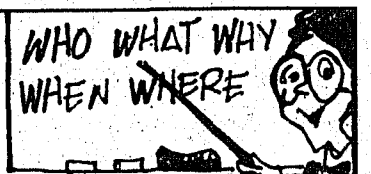

TAHC officials urge trappers and producers to practice preventive disease management by keeping wild swine away from domestic hogs during the 60-day confinement period. Otherwise, feral swine that are incubating infection could spread disease among the herd. Once these hogs complete their confinement period and are tested negative for swine brucellosis and pseudorabies, they may be sold or moved as domestic swine.

The Angles For Summer Angling

Summertime and the living is easy; unfortunately, the fishing may not be. As most of us take our vacations, so, it seems, do the fish. Angling peaks in the early spring and later in the fall. The months of midsummer can be tough for the angler to get an angle on.

The problem is that most anglers continue to use spring tactics to tempt summertime fish. As temperatures and the apogee of the summer sun both rise, fish retire to the cooler, darker depths, seeking more comfortable temperatures and less light penetration of the water.

All species of game and pan fish have a preferred temperature range. The cold-water trout species suffers above 70 degrees Fahrenheit; the warm-water fish — walleye, bass, crappie, and other sunfish — can tolerate warmer temperatures. Find out what water temperature your target-species like and use a temperature/oxygen meter to find their "comfort zone."

Dissolved oxygen levels also are important — fish have to breathe too. Often, the deeper, colder water also will be low in oxygen. This will concentrate the fish into a narrow band of water that serves both temperature and oxygen needs. The use of a sonar "fish locator" helps the angler zero in on these suspended schools of fish.

Most game fish dislike intense light. The high angle of the midday summer sun puts the spotlight on exposed shallows, and the fish don't like it. Pristine mountain lakes with gin-clear water are a particular problem. The clearer the water, the deeper light can penetrate. Daytime tactics for such lakes often involve very deep-running lures, "bottom bumping" with lead-head jugs, and deep trolling.

Fish seek shade. Overhanging trees, floating mats of aquatic vegetation, the shady side of boat docks, bridge abutments, and piers — anything that casts a shadow on the water — may hold a fish. Even stream anglers should keep this in mind and fish the "shade line" whenever possible.

The reason behind the traditional early morning approach to angling is that the low angle rays of the morning sun do not penetrate as deeply into the water. Fishing also tends to pick up in the late evening for the same reason. Night fishing is an effective tactic for the hottest months. Where legal, some use hanging or floating lights, which attract bugs, which attract small baitfish, which attract ... well, you get the picture.

Cloudy and rainy days are good for summer "fisherfolk." The clouds block the sunlight, and the rain helps cool the water. A fresher also provides food, such as insects, worms, crawfish, salamanders, and small baitfish, washed in from feeder streams. It also mucks up the water, further reducing light penetration. The "mud line" from a feeder stream after a recent rainstorm can be a great place to cast bait. Just remember the lightning hazard while pursuing the "rainstorm pattern," and take cover if electricity threatens.

Summertime angling can be successful for the angler who understands the situation and is prepared to think like a fish. ■
