Studying Indian Culture

Elementary school librarian Kay Gray is shown here teaching some students an Indian dance. The activity is in relationship to the study she presents each year on American Indian culture. Mrs. Gray told the children about many aspects of Indian culture and had a display set up of books relating to the subject. The display is left up for a month to six weeks and encourages students to learn about the subject by reading. She periodically presents special studies for the K-6th grade students, always with displays on exhibit. Special seasons of the year such as Halloween, Thanksgiving, and Christmas present opportunities for her displays and studies. Favorites, also, are the subjects of oceans and sea life, and dinosaurs. A display planned for later in the year is one on Texas history which will include books about local history. Below is a picture of the very interesting display Mrs. Gray had for the Indian series.

Sheriff's Dept. Warns "Beware Bogus Calls"

The Sheriff's Office has recently received calls concerning telephone soliciting in the area involving a connection with the Sheriff's office.

Jo Jones says that the caller or callers are selling ads stating they are connected with the local Sheriff's office. In addition, a task force has been asking for donations recently in dealing with drug abuse. Neither of these projects... selling ads and asking for donations has anything to do with the Coleman County Sheriff's Dept.

If there are any questions about phone calls concerning these two matters, persons are urged to call the Sheriff's office at 625-3506.

Santa Anna Mountain No Ordinary Pile Of Dirt In Texas

EDITOR'S NOTE: This article, an excerpt from "Henry's Journal", is taken from the July 16, 1992 edition of THE VICTORIA ADVOCATE and brought to our attention by Modora Gilmore.

By Henry Wolff Jr.
Biggest pile of dirt I had ever seen.

There it was, off in the distance as we traveled U.S. 67-84 west toward Santa Anna, on our way to West Texas from the Waco area where I had never seen anything to compare with what I like to think of today as my first mountain.

I have no idea just exactly where a hill leaves off and a mountain begins, but when I saw Santa Anna Mountain, I immediately knew it wasn't a hill, even at 4 or 5 years of age there was no doubt in my mind that this was something more, even though it might not compare to anything like the big mountains out in far West Texas.

To a little kid straining to see over the dashboard of the old Chevrolet, it was still something to see and is one of the few memories that I have of that trip west to what we'd been told was God's Country, and I won't say that we had been lied to, but except for Santa Anna Mountain there wasn't a whole lot out there to impress a kid.

Don't know exactly why, but I was reminded of that trip here recently while driving in an entirely different direction south from Austin to Victoria where I'd gone to meet the Tonkawa Indian chief, Virginia Combrink, at the airport.

As we drove south toward Victoria, where she was to participate in the 100th anniversary celebration for the old Victoria County Courthouse I noticed she kept looking out the window and finally mentioned something about how she had expected the country to be flat.

Although she had been to Texas a couple of times before, and the hilly Austin area in particular, she somehow had that impression of South Texas, just as many people do of West Texas and, in fact, Texas as a whole.

I suspect a lot of that has to do with the way our state has been characterized in the movies and in television series such as "Dallas," where it always seems it's a land where you can see forever.

Can't think of many films ever showing the Hill Country or the big mountains in far West Texas, and when they do, the mountains and hills are usually so far in the background you can't see them good, even though when they do the mountains and hills are usually so far in the background you can't see them good, even though we have mountains to compare with just about any state and hills that seem to roll on forever. It's just we have that image of being flat, and I know all about the flatlands, since it was out around Ballinger and Rowena where we settled after that trip west in the early '40s.

Yet, you wouldn't have to go far to find some pretty good hills, in most directions, including back toward Santa Anna where I was so impressed in seeing my first mountain.

It was a beautiful sight back then, before mining pretty well messed up the mountain view as I remember it - something to do with making glass -- but I will always remember it as it was then.

It was there where years before, travelers going west had used the mountain as a landmark and Indians and Rangers alike found it suitable for a lookout post. The mountain pass served as a gateway to West Texas and a community grew there to be known as Gap, later Santa Anna when a post office was established in 1879.

Just why I thought of the Santa Anna Mountain as we passed through the rolling hills near Plum Creek, where the Tonkawa Indian scouts in 1840 helped the Texans in battling the Comanches, I have no idea. For some reason it just struck me that Texas has an image of being a lot flatter than it is.

Thought so myself until I saw Santa Anna Mountain.

Library Notes

Alice Anna Spillman

Word had come that the military surplus had shelves and books for sale at very reasonable prices. David and Betty Key and Jim and I went with Derriel and Polly Warnock to check this out. Since the library is a city function, they would qualify to buy at the disposal center. Unfortunately someone got there on Thursday and bought the best available. The only item we bought was a coffee table. With a little cleaning it will look good with the sofa and chair Mr. and Mrs. B. D. Brock have given us.

We did get to the half price bookstores and bought a few for the library, mostly western paperbacks.

If anyone knows where we can buy good used books at less than half price—let us hear from you.

Betty's sister, Lila Jordan, not only gave us a lovely place to stay, but was our guide. Many thanks. She had a sack of books from Dr. Adrianna Linton. Doctor Linton has given us books before. Age Hortense Calisher is a novel about an older couple and their love. There are very few books about older couples. Everything to Live For Susan White-Bowden is a mother's story of her teenage boys suicide. She tries to answer why? It is an effort to help parents prevent this happening. "I pray that this book makes others stop and think about their lives and relationships with their children, and teens, with their parents." There is also a book about cosmetic surgery for women. If you are considering any of this type surgery—read this book to see exactly what will happen and any possible complications. This was written in 1988 so doesn't give any of the controversy concerning implants.

Last week, the library was working on books for the school. The English-Grammer classes write research papers and need outside references. The interlibrary lending system can supply some of these. Librarians check them in and then out again. Pack and return to the lending libraries. The community should be thankful that this service is available.

Come pick a good book. We saw most of ours on the shelves of the bookstores and ours are free!

Independent or Not

Whether you are considered an employee or an independent contractor determines not only how you pay your taxes, but also what kind and how much.

Generally, an employee is under the control of an employer about when, where and how to work. An independent contractor, on the other hand, is responsible to an employer only for the successful completion of the job. The independent contractor, rather than the employer, controls or directs the method and means of accomplishing the job. Publication 937, Business Reporting, lists 20 factors used to determine if you are an employee. If you want the Internal Revenue Service to determine your status, fill out Form SS-8, "Determination of Employee Work Status for Purposes of Federal Employment Taxes and Income Tax Withholding," and send it to your IRS District Director.

Both Publication 937 and Form SS-8 may be ordered by calling 1-800-829-3676.

How To Get Hispanic Girls In College? Enlist Mom's Help

Mothers and their middle school daughters in the same class? Yes, if they are among the 225 families enrolled in the Hispanic Mother-Daughter Programs at four institutions in The University of Texas System.

Dr. Reyes says cultural biases are a factor. Most come from families in which there are no college graduates to serve as role models. Traditional Hispanic families often discourage girls from aspiring to non-traditional goals and professions requiring college degrees.

However, there are indications that this is changing. A recent study by the National Council of La Raza found that a majority of Hispanic girls in secondary school are no longer looking only at marriage and children for security.

Solid evidence that the mother-daughter partnership works came out of the first such pilot project established in 1985 at Arizona State University, the model for the Texas effort.

Of the Arizona program's initial 25 mother-daughter teams, 18 of the girls graduated from high school, two are attending college and one has earned her degree. It also produced an unexpected by-product among the mothers. Two returned to college and others went back to high school to get their diplomas.

A fifth UT System institution, UT El Paso, has had a similar program that now is in its seventh year. It focuses on sixth grade girls selected from three local school districts.

The UT Dallas Mother-Daughter Program began with 50 students, added 50 more last fall and will eventually involve 150. Already the Dallas program has inspired five of the 50 mothers who spoke only Spanish to enroll for courses in English.

In Austin, the Mother-Daughter Program has attracted so much interest that the local Junior League is sponsoring a similar plan aimed at reaching middle school sixth-grade girls.

A $610,000 grant from the AT&T Foundation is funding the plan at the UT System components. When the present program ends with the close of schools for the 1993-94 term, the results will be carefully evaluated.

Jo Anne O'Donnell, the associate dean who started the pilot program at Arizona State eight years ago, is confident that it will be effective in Texas. At least one mother participating in the Austin program agrees. Patricia Delgado, a partner in the experiment with her 12-year-old daughter, Margaret, told the Austin American-Statesman: "The program is good, and I

Urban Forestry Council Plans Organization Meeting Jan. 29

By: Marty Gibbs, CEA-AG
 The Rolling Plains Regional Urban Forestry Council meets in Midland on January 29, 1993. Its purpose is to promote the protection, development and proper maintenance of city trees. Public education is needed through workshops, meetings and tours to create more awareness of the importance of trees in urban landscapes.

The region is made up of 49 counties with Abilene, Midland, Odessa and San Angelo as the largest cities. It is one of 13 regions in Texas based on major vegetation type, land area, population and urban centers.

Nick Harrison, urban forester with the Texas Forest Service, a part of the Texas A&M University System, is secretary of the council. He is located in Abilene. Other officers include Fred Aycock, president from Abilene, Chuck Swallow, president-elect from Midland and Pete Krause, treasurer from Abilene.

Council meetings are open to the public and held quarterly throughout the region. The next council meeting is Friday, January 29 in the Conference Room in the basement of City Hall in Midland at 10 a.m. until noon.

Wheat Management Strategies Meeting Scheduled Jan. 28

By Marty Gibbs, CEA-AG
 Wheat production in Coleman County has not been easy in the 1992-93 season. Dry conditions delayed planting and cool temperatures slowed the growth of wheat after emergence. As spring approaches, temperatures will increase and with adequate soil moisture we will have optimum conditions for wheat growth.

A Wheat Management Strategies meeting will be held on Thursday, January 28, 1993 beginning at 5:30 p.m. at the Coleman County Seed and Feed located on Gross Street and North Neches in Coleman.

Dr. Billy Warrick, Extension Agronomist from San Angelo will discuss Fertilizer Recommendation and Grazing potential based on stages of plant growth as well as a look at Wheat Rust Control. Dr. Tom Fuchs, Extension Entomologist, will also be on hand to discuss Pest Management.

All private applicators license holders are encouraged to attend: 1-1/2 hours of Continuing Education Units (CEUs) will be given.

Have You Ever Wondered—How writing was originated?

The answer is in a new two-volume book, "Before Writing: From Counting to Cuneiform," published by the University of Texas Press. There were eleven present Sunday morning at Church for Sunday school, some were sick I understand but hope all of you are better soon. I have always heard if you don't like Texas weather, hang around awhile, it will change. How about the wind Saturday night? Wasn't that something. On Monday and Tuesday I recorded seventy-five-one hundredths of an inch of rain for that we are thankful.

HIGHLIGHTS

TEXAS PRESS ASSOCIATION

AUSTIN — To meet a court-imposed deadline of June 1, state lawmakers apparently have cast aside partisan politics and are working with less gridlock to reform public school finance.

If true, it couldn't come at a better time. The Legislature has flunked four attempts to distribute state funds equally among public school districts.

Lt. Gov. Bob Bullock and Senate Education chairman Bill Ratliff, R-Mount Pleasant, last week unveiled the latest model for reform, which Bullock called "failproof."

By "failproof," Bullock means this plan will prevent an Austin state district judge from closing all public schools in June, but there's another dimension to that word.

It also means Democrats and Republicans will come together in a two-thirds majority necessary to place a constitutional amendment on the May ballot for voter approval.

Republican-Democrat Plan
Gov. Ann Richards' special session in November failed miserably because of political gridlock; and some blamed it on partisan squabbling, but that's not entirely true. There simply was no consensus to begin with, not even among Democrats.

Bullock, a shrewd Democrat, got the message; he picked Ratliff, a highly respected Republican, to chair the key committee. Now it's a bi-partisan plan from the start, something that rank-and-file legislators might buy.

Put simply, Ratliff's bill calls for a constitutional amendment to legalize county education districts. The CEDs, some multi-county in size, will levy a tax and share it with all public schools in the CED.

If voters reject the amendment, then voters in each CED will also vote on whether to authorize the CED property tax.

If both proposals are nixed by voters in a particular county, that CED will spend no more than $3,470 per student.

Laney Okays House Reform
Meanwhile, House Speaker Pete Laney continued to receive plaudits from members on both sides of the aisle for endorsing sweeping changes in the way the House of Representatives conducts business.

Laney, D-Hale Center, stunned some colleagues by agreeing to changes in House rules that even his critics say will open the chamber to more public scrutiny and fewer legislative logjams.

The proposed changes include new parliamentary rules to ease the crush of bills in the final three days of a legislative session and to ensure that the powerful Calendars Committee conducts business in the open.

"Only Richard Nixon could have gone to (Communist) China; only Pete Laney could have reformed the Texas House," said Rep. Glen Maxey, D-Austin.

No More 3-day Bills?

In previous sessions, more than half the bills passed by the House were passed in the final three days, because of parliamentary deadlines. Under the proposed rules, deadlines would kick in 17 days before the end of a 140-day regular session.

Laney has agreed that the Calendars Committee, where bills traditionally were killed or allowed to languish in private, must vote publicly on each bill within 30 days of receiving it.

Other provisions of the reform measure, which the House considered late last week, include:

■ The speaker will appoint only half, instead of all, of the members of the Appropriations Committee, including its chairman and vice chairman. Seniority will determine the other members.

■ Non-local bills must get final House approval 17 days before the end of the session. Final passage of Senate bills must take place in the House at least six days before the end of the session.

■ Only conference committee reports and Senate amendments may be considered on the fourth and fifth days before the end of a session.

On the second and third days before the session's end, the House will limit itself to conference committee reports.

'Revolving Door' Bill
State Sen. David Sibley, R-Waco, has accepted the state prison board's request to halt the revolving-door policy for employees of Texas' parole agency.

Sibley said his office is drafting a bill that would prohibit agency employees from representing convicts in parole hearings for two years after the employees leave the agency. The Texas Board of Criminal Justice unanimously endorsed passage of a "revolving door" bill recently.

The decision came shortly after federal officials in Waco charged former parole board chairman James Granberry with lying under oath about the extent of his parole consulting activities.

"We're concerned about someone using the good ol' boy network, and that's what this bill is designed to stop," Sibley said.

Other Highlights

■ With drastic budget cuts facing lawmakers and essential services at risk, State Comptroller John Sharp will begin this week disclosing 192 recommendations designed to reduce the state budget by more than $3 billion. "What we are recommending is better than kicking a bunch of old folks out of nursing homes," he said.

■ Responding to educators who support a state income tax to ease budget problems, Lt. Gov. Bullock said: "An income tax is about as likely as the Red Sea opening up and engulfing Texas."

Whon News

By Mrs. Tom Rutherford

I talked with Tommy Stansberry our neighbor who was injured in a pickup accident recently. He reports he is feeling well considering he can't get out and do his work and is not in very much pain anytime. Going to the doctor and was told he seemed to be doing well. Just take time. A dear friend, Allen Hubert is with him but he went to San Saba for the weekend and will return Monday. He reports friends are feeding him well and are very good to stop by and see about his needs. He does well but as reported, a slow recovery from broken bones.

Mr. Don Fitzpatrick of Abilene was here with his father, Mr. Graham Fitzpatrick on Saturday. They enjoyed a nice day together.

I accompanied Mrs. Hilary Rutherford of Coleman and her daughter, Mrs. Bobby Boatright and girls, Denea and Paige of Brownwood Saturday afternoon to a bridal shower for Kem Hardy at May, Texas. The bride-to-be of Todd Rutherford at the First Baptist Church in May on February 6 at 6 p.m. A large crowd attended and a very nice shower. The young couple will make their home in Brownwood where both are employed.

I really appreciated Mike Pritchard of Santa Anna stopping by Saturday morning. Sorry Mike has not been feeling so well for a few weeks. He pulled some muscles near his ribs. Thanks again Mike for a brief visit.

Mr. James Avant of Coleman and

Mr. Douglas Avant of Brady were with their mother, Mrs. Pearl Avant in Santa Anna the past Tuesday. Mrs. Avant has not been feeling so well but glad to report she is feeling much better.

Mr. Roy Emmerson of Dumas visited with Loyd Rutherford Saturday afternoon accompanied by a friend, Mr. Joe Elder who brought Roy to Bangs for a visit for a while.

We are not happy to report the burning of what we call the Joe Lovelady house in our area. Seems no one knows but apparently the house was set afire. Just an old house that has been located near Home Creek near the Lovelady Crossing. The house was an old house and had been vacant for a long time but I understand there was some hay in the house. I have memories of the house being there for years. It's old!!!

Mr. and Mrs. Jacky and Cheryl Bullion of Granbury was with her father, Mr. Graham Fitzpatrick on Sunday. They enjoyed a nice day together.

My son, Loyd Rutherford was with me on Sunday and also came and assisted helping me feed cows during the rain during the week.

My son in law, Mr. Bob Smith of Abilene came by and was with me Thursday night. He is assisting his son Barry operate a feed store in San Angelo.

I enjoyed a nice telephone visit with my son Thomas Ray in New Hampshire on Saturday night.
